AND he answered me, and sayd : Measuring measure thou the time in it-self : and it shal be when thou seest, after a certaine part of the signes which are spoken of before shal passe, 2. then shalt thou vnderstand, that the same is the time wherin the Highest wil beginne to visite the world that was made by him. 3. And when there shal be sene in the world mouing of places, and trouble of peoples, 4. then shalt thou vnderstand, that of these spake the Highest from the dayes that were before thee, from the beginning. 5. For as al that is made in the world hath a beginning, and also a consummation, and the consummation is manifest: 6. so also the times of the Highest haue the beginning manifest in wonders and powers, and the consummations in worke and also in signes. 7. And it shal be, euery one that shal be saued, and that can escape by his works, and by fayth, in which you haue belieued, 8. shal be leaft out of the foresayd dangers, and shal see my saluation in my land, and in my costs, because I haue sanctified my self from the world. 9. And then shal they be in miserie, that now haue abused my wayes: and they that haue reiected them in contempt, shal abide in torment. 10. For they that knew not me, hauing obtained benefits when they liued: 11. and they that loathed my law, when they yet had libertie, 12. and when as yet place of penance was open to them vnderstood not, but despised: they must after death in torment know it. 13. Thou therefore be not yet curious, how the impious shal be tormented: but inquire how the iust shal be saued, and whose the world is, and for whom the world is, & when. 14. And I answered, and sayd: 15. I haue spoken heertofore, and now I say, and hereatter wil say: that they are moe which perish then that shal be saued: 16. as a floud is multiptied aboue, more then a droppe. 17. And he answered me, and say: Like as the field so also the seeds: and as the flowers, such also the colours: and as the workeman, such also the worke, and such as the husbandman, such is the husbandrie: because it was the time of the world. 18. And now when I was preparing for them, for these that now are before the world was made, wherin they should dwel: and no man gaynsayd me. 19. For then euery man, and now the creatour in this world prepared, and haruest not taying, and law vnsearchable their manners are corrupted. 20. And I considered the world, and behold there was danger because of the cogitations that came in it. 21. And I saw, and spaked it very much:

and I kept vnto my self a grape kernel of a cluster, and a plant of a great tribe. 22. Let the multitude therefore perish, which was borne without cause, and let my kernel be kept, and my plant: because I finished it with much labour. 23. And thou if thou adde yet seuen other dayes, but thou shalt not fast in them, 24. thou shalt goe into a field of flowers, where no house is built: and thou shalt eat only of the flowers of the field, and flesh thou shalt not taste, and wine thou shalt not drinke, but only flowers. 25. Pray to the Highest without intermission, and I wil come, and wil speake with thee. 26. And I went forth, as he sayd to me, into a field which is called Ardath, and I sate there among the flowers. And I did eat of the herbes of the field, and the meate of them made me full. 27. And it came to passe after seuen dayes, and I sate downe vpon the grasse, and my hart was troubled agayne as before. 28. And my mouth was opened, and I beganne to speake before the Highest, and sayd: 29. O Lord thou shewing thy selfe to vs, wast shewed to our fathers in the desert, which is not troden, and vnfruitful, when they came out of Egypt: and saying thou saydst: 30. Thou Israel heare me, and seed of Iacob attend to my words. 31. For behold, I sowe my law in you, and it shal bring forth fruit in you, and you shal be glorified in it for euer. 32. For our fathers receiuing the law obserued it not, and kept not my ordinances, and the fruit of the law did not appeare: for it could not because it was thine. 33. For they that receiued it, perished, not keeping that which had been sowed in them. 34. And behold it is the custome, that when the earth hath receiued seede, or the sea a shippe, or some vessel meate or drinke: when that shal be destroyed wherin it was sowne, or into the which it was cast: 35. that which was sowne, or cast in, or the things that were receiued, are destroyed withal, and the things receiued now tarye not with vs: but it is not so done to vs. 36. We indeed that receiued the law, sinning haue perished, and our hart that receiued it: 37. For the law hath not perished, but hath remained in his labour. 38. And when I spake these things in my hart, I looked backe with myne eyes, and saw a woman on the right side, and behold she mourned, and wept with a loud voice, and was sorrowful in minde exceedingly, and her garments rent, and ashes vpon her head. 39. And I left the cogitations, wherin I was thinking, and I turned to her and sayd to her: 40. Why weepest thou? and why art thou sorie in minde. And she sayd to me: 41. Suffer me my Lord, that I may lament my selfe, and adde sorrow: because I am of a very pensieue mind, and am humbled exceedingly. 42. And I sayd to her: What ayleth thee: tel me. And she sayd to me: 43. I thy seruant haue been barren, and haue not borne childe, hauing a husband thirty yeares. 44. For I euerie howre, and euerie day, and these thirty yeares doe beseeche the Highest night and day. 45. And it came to passe, after thirtie yeares God heard me thy handmayd, and saw my humilitie, and attended to my tribulation, and gaue me a sonne: and I was very joyful vpon him , and my husband, and al my citizens, and we did glorifie the Strong exceedingly. 46. And I nourished him with much labour. 47. And it came to passe when he was growen , and came to take a wife, I made a feast day.

The state of Ierusalem is perfigured by a woman mourning , 25. and afterwards reioycing.

AND it came to passe, when my sonne was entred into his inner chamber, he fel downe, and dyed: 2. and we al ouerthrew the lights, and al my citizens rose vp to comfort me, and I was quiet vntil the other day at night. 3. And it came to passe, when al were quiet to comfort me, that I might be quiet: and I arose in the night, and fled: and came as thou seest into this field. 4. And I meane now not to returne into the citie, but to stay here: and neither to eate, nor drinke, but without intermission to mourne, and to fast vntil I dye. 5. And I left the talke wherin I was, and with anger answered her, and sayd: 6. Thou foole aboue al woman, seest thou not our mourning, & what things chance to vs? 7. Because Sion our mother is sorrowful with al sorrow, and humbled, and mourneth most bitterly. 8. And now wheras we al mourne, and are sadde: wheras we are sorrowful, & art thou sorrowful for one sonne? 9. For aske the earth, and it wil tel thee: that it is she, that ought to lament the fal of so manie things that spring vpon it. 10. And of her were al borne from the beginning, and others that come: and behold, almost al walke into perdition, and the multitude of them cometh to destruction. 11. And who then ought to mourne more, but she that hath lost so great a multitude, rather then thou which art sorie for one? 12. And if thou say vnto me, that my mourning is not lyke the earths: because I haue lost the fruit of my wombe, which I bare with sorrowes, and brought forth with paynes: 13. but the earth according to the manner of the earth, and the present multitude in it hath departed as it came: and I saye to thee, 14. as thou hast brought forth with payne, so the earth also giueth her fruit for man from the beginning to him that made her. 15. Now therefore keep in with thy sorrow, and beare stoutly the chances that haue befallen thee. 16. For if thou iustifie the end of God, thou shalt in time both receiue his counsell, and also in such things thou shalt be prayfed. 17. Goe in therefore into the citie to thy busband. And she sayd to me: 18. I wil not doe it, neither wil I enter into the citte, but here wil I dye. 19. And I added yet to speake to her, and sayd: 20. Doe not this word, but consent to him that counseleth thee. For how manie are the chances of Sion? Take comfort for the sorrow of Ierusalem. 21. For thou seest that our sanctification is made desert, and our altar is throwen downe, and our temple is destroyed, 22. and our psalter is humbled, and hymne is silent, and our exultation is dissolued, and the light of our candlestick is extinguished, and the arke of our testament is taken for spoile, and our holie things are contaminated, and the name that is inuocated vpon vs is almost prophaned: and our children haue suffred contumelie, and our Priests are burnt, and our Leuites are gone into captiuitie, and our virgins are defloured, and our wiues haue suffered rape, and our iust men are violently taken, and our litle ones are lost, and our yong men are in bondage, and our valiants are made impotent: 23. and that which is greatest of al, the seale of Sion, because she is vnscaled of her glorie: For she is also deliuered into the hands of them that hate vs. 24. Thou therefore shake off thy great heauines, and lay away from thee the multitude of sorrowes, that the Strong may be propitious to thee agayne, and the Highest wil giue thee rest, rest from thy labours. 25. And it came to passe, when I spake to her, her face did shine suddenly, and her shape, and her visage was made glistering, so that I was afrayde exceedingly at her, and thought what this thing should be. 26. And behold, suddenly she put forth a great sound of a voyce full of feare, that the earth was moued at the womans sound. And I saw: 27. and behold, the woman did no more appeare vnto me, but a citie was built, & a place was throwed of great foundations: and I was afrayd, and crying with a loude voyce I sayd: 28. Where is Vriel the Angel, that from the beginning came to me? for he made me come in multitude in excesse of this minde, & my end is made into corruption, & my prayer into reproch. 29. And when I was speaking these things, behold he came to me, and sawe me. 30. And behold I was layd as dead, and my vnderstanding was alienated, and he held my right hand, and strengthened me and set me vpon my feet, and sayd to me: 31. What ayleth thee? and why is thy vnderstanding, and the sense of thy hart troubled, and why art thou troubled? And I sayd: 32. Because thou hast forsaken me, and I indeed haue done according to thy words, and went out into the field: and behold, I haue seen, and doe see that which I cannot vtter. And he sayd to me: 33. Stand like a man, and I wil moue thee. And I sayd: 34. Speake thou my Lord in me, forsake me not, that I die not in vaine: 35. because I haue seen things that I knew not, and I doe heare things that I know not. 36. Or is my sense deceiued, and doth my soule dreame? 37. Now therefore I beseech thee, that thou shew vnto thy seruant concerning this trance. And he answered me, and sayd: 38. Heare me, and I wil teach thee, and wil tel thee of what things thou art afrayd: because the Highest hath reuealed vnto thee manie mysteries. 39. He hath seen thy right way, that without intermission thou was sorrowful for thy people, and didst mourne exceedingly for Sion. 40. This therefore is the vnderstanding of the vision which appeared to thee a litle before. 41. The woman whom thou sawest mourning, thou beganst to comfort her. 42. And now thou seest not the forme of the woman, but there appeared to thee a citie to be built. 43. And because she tolde thee of the fal of her sonne, this is the interpretation. 44. This woman which thou sawest, she is Sion, and wheras she told thee of her, whom now also thou shalt see, as a citie builded. 45. And wheras she told thee, that she was barren thirtie yeares: for the which there were thirtie yeares, when there was not yet oblation offered in it. 46. And it came to passe after thirtie yeares, Salomon built the citie, and offered oblations: then it was, when the barren bare a childe. 47. And that which she sayd vnto thee, that she nourished him with labour, this was the habitation in Ierusalem. 48. And wheras she sayd to thee, that my sonne comming into the bryde chamber dyed, and that a fal chanced vnto him, this was the ruine of Ierusalem that is made. 49. And behold, thou hast seen the similitude of her: and because she lamented her sonne, thou beganst to comfort her: and of these things that haue chanced, these were to be opened to thee. 50. And now the Highest seeth that thou wast sorie from the hart: and because with thy whole hart thou sufferest for her, he hath shewed thee the clearnes of her glorie, and the fayrenes of her beautie. 51. For therfore did he say to thee, that thou shouldest tarie in a field where house is not built. 52. For I knew that the Highest began to shew thee these things: 53. therfore I sayd vnto thee, that thou shouldest goe into a field, where is no foundation of building. 54. For the worke of mans building could not be borne in the place, where the citie of the Highest began to be shewed. 55. Thou therfore feare not, neither let thy hart dread: but goe in, and see the beautie, and greatnes of the building, as much as the sight of thyne eyes is capable to see: 56. and afterward thou shalt heare as much, as the hearing of thyne eares is capable to heare. 57. For thou art blessed aboue manie, and art called with the Highest as few. 58. And to morrow night thou shalt tarie here: 59. and the Highest wil shew thee those visions of the things on high, which the Highest wil doe to them that inhabite vpon the earth in the later dayes. 60. And I slept that night, and the other next, as he had sayd to me.

CHAP. XI.

An eagle appeareth to Esdras comming forth of the sea, with three heads, and twelue wings: sometimes one reigning in the world, sometimes an other, but euerie one vanishest away. 36. A lion also appeareth comming forth of the wood, to suppress the eagle.

AND I saw a dreame, and behold an eagle came vp out of the sea: which had twelue wings of fethers, and three heads. 2. And I saw, & behold she spred her wings into al the earth, and al the winds of heauen blew vpon her, and were gathered together. 3. And I saw, and of her fethers sprang contrarie fethers, and they became litle wings, and smale. 4. For her heads were at rest, and the midle head was greater then the other heads, but she rested with them. 5. And I saw and behold the eagle flew with her wings, and reigned ouer the earth, and ouer them that dwel in it. 6. And I saw that al things vnder heauen were suiect to her, and no man gaynesayd her, no not one of the creature that is vpon the earth. 7. And I saw, and behold the eagle rose vp vpon her talons, and made a voice with her wings, saying: 8. Watch not al together, sleep euerie one in his place, & watch according to time. But let the heads be preferued to the last. 10. And I saw, and behold the voice came not out of her heades, but from the middes of her bodie. 11. And I numbered her contrarie wings, and behold they were eight. 12. And I saw, and behold on the right side rose one wing, and reigned ouer al the earth. 13. And it came to passe, when it reigned, an end came to it, and the place therof appeared not: and the next rose vp, and reigned, that held much time. 14. And it came to passe, when it reigned, and the end of it also came, that it appeared not as the former. 15. And behold, a voice was sent forth to it, saying: 16. Heare thou that hast held the earth of long time. Thus I tel thee before thou beginne not to appeare. 17. None after thee thal hold thy time, no nor the halfe therof. 18. And the third lifted vp it selfe, and held the principallitie: as also the former: and that also appeared not. 19. And so it chanced to al the other by one and by one to haue the principallitie, and againe to appeare no-where. 20. And I saw, and behold in time the rest of the wings were sent vp on the right side, that they also might hold the principallitie: and of them there were that held it, but yet forthwith they appeared not. 21. For some also of them stode vp, but they held not the principallitie. 22. And I saw after these things, and behold the twelue wings, and two litle wings appeared not: 23. and nothing remayned in the bodie of the eagle but two heads resting, & six litle wings. 24. And I saw, and behold from the six litle wings two were diuided, and they remained vnder the head, that is on the right side. For foure taried in their place. 25. And I saw, and behold the vnderwings thought to set vp themselues, and to hold the principalities. 26. And I saw, and behold one was set vp, but forthwith it appeared not. 27. And they that were second did sooner vanish away then the former. 28. And I saw, and behold the two that remayned, thought with themselues that they also would reigne: 29. and when they were thinking thereon, behold one of the resting heads, which was the midde one awaked, for this was greater then the other two heads. 30. And I saw that the two heads were complete with themselues. 31. And behold the head with them that were with him turned, and did eate the two vnderwings that thought to reigne. 32. And this head terrified al the earth, & ruled in it ouer them that inhabite the earth with much labour, and he that held the dominion of the whole world about al the wings that were. 33. And I saw after these things, and behold the middle head sodenly appeared not, as did the wings. 34. And there remained two heads, which reigned also themselues ouer the earth, and ouer them that dwelt therein. 35. And I saw, and behold the head on the right side deuoured that which was on the left. 36. And I heard a voice saying to me, Looke against thee, and consider what thou seest. 37. And I saw, and behold as a lion raised out of the wood roaring: and I saw that he sent out a mans voice to the eagle. And he speake saying. 38. Heare thou, and I wil speake to thee, and the Highest wil say to thee: 39. Is it not thou that hast ouercome of the foure beasts, which I made to reigne in my world, and that by them the end of their times might come? 40. And the fourth comming ouercame al the beasts that were past, and by might held the world with much feare, and al the world with most wicked labour, and he inhabited the whole earth so long time with deceit. 41. And thou hast iudged the earth not with truth. 42. For thou hast afflicted the meeke, and hast troubled them that were quiet, and hast loued lyers, and hast destroyed their habitations that did fructifie, & hast ouerthrowen their wals that did not hurt thee. 43. And thy contumelie is ascended euen to the Highest, and thy pride to the Strong. 44. And the Highest hath looked vpon the proud times: and behold they are ended, and the abominations therof are accomplished. 45. Therefore thou eagle appeare no more, and thy horrible wings and thy litle wings most wicked, and thy heads malignant, and thy talons most wicked, and al thy bodie wayne, 46. that al the earth may be refreshed, and may returne deliuered from thy violence, and may hope for his iudgement and mercie that made it.

C H A P. XII.

The eagle vanisheth away, 5. Esdras prayeth, 10. and the former visions are declared to him.

AND it came to passe, whiles the lyon spake these words to the eagle: I saw, 2. and behold the head that had overcome, and those foure wings appeared not which passed to him, and were set vp to reigne: and their reigne was smal, and ful of tumult. 3. And I saw, and behold they appeared not, & al the bodie of the eagle was burnt, and the earth was afrayd exceedingly, & I by the tumult & traunce of minde, and for great feare awaked, and sayd to my spirit: 4. Behold thou hast giuen me this, in that that thou searcest the wayes of the Highest. 5. Behold yet I am wearie in minde, and in my spirit I am very feeble, and there is not so much as a litle strength in me for the great feare, that I was afrayd of this night. 6. Now therefore I wil pray the Highest, that he strengthen me euen to the end. 7. And I sayd: Lord Dominatour, if I haue found grace before thine eyes, and if I am iustified before thee aboute manie, and if in deede my prayer be ascended before thy face, 8. strengthen me; and shew vnto me thy seruant the interpretation, and distinction of this horrible vision, that thou mayst comfort my soule most fully. 9. For thou hast counted me worthie to shew vnto me the later times. And he sayd to me: 10. This is the interpretation of this vision. 11. The eagle which thou sawest coming vp from the sea, this is the Kingdom which was seen in a vision to Daniel thy brother. 12. But it was not interpreted to him, therefore I doe now interprete it to thee. 13. Behold the dayes come, and there shal rise a Kingdom vpon the earth, and the feare shal be more terrible then of al the Kingdoms that were before it. 14. And there shal twelue Kings reigne in it, one after an other. 15. For the second shal beginne to reigne, and he shal continew more time then the rest of the twelue. 16. This is the interpretation of the twelue wings which thou sawest. 17. And the voice that spake which thou heardst not coming forth of her heads, but from the middes of her bodie, 18. this is the interpretation, that after the time of that Kingdom shal rise no smal contentions, and it shal be in danger to fal: and it shal not fal then, but shal be constituted againe according to the beginning therof. 19. And wheras thou sawest eight vnderwings cleauing to the wings therof, 20. this is the interpretation: eight Kings shal arise in it, whose times shal be light, and yeares switt, and two of them shal perish. 21. But when the middest time approcheth, foure shal be kept til a time, when the time therof shal beginne to approch to be ended, yet two shal be kept to the

end. 22. And wheras thou sawest three heads resting, 23. this is the interpretation: in her last dayes the Highest wil rayse vp three Kingdoms, and wil cal backe manie things into them, and they shal rule ouer the earth, 24. and them that dwel in it, with much labour about al them that were before them. For this cause they are called the heads of the eagle. 25. For these shal be they that shal recapitulate her impieties, and that shal accomplish her last things. 26. And wheras thou sawest a greater head not appearing, this in the interpretation therof: that one of them shal dye vpon his bed, and yet with torments. 27. For the two that shal remayne, the sword shal eat them. 28. For the sword of one shal deuoure him that is with him: but yet this also at the last shal fal by the sword. 29. And wheras thou sawest two vnderwings passing ouer the head that is on the right side, 30. this is the interpretation: these are they whom the Highest hath kept to their end, this is a smal Kingdom, and ful of trouble. 31. As thou sawest the lyon also, whom thou sawest awaking out of the wood, and roaring, and speaking to the eagle, and rebuking her, and her iniustices by al his words as thou hast heard: 32. this is the wynde which the Highest hath kept vnto the end for them, and their impieties: and he shal rebuke them, and shal cast in their spoyles before them. 33. For he shal set them in iudgement aliue: and it shal be, when he hath reproofed them, then shal be chastise them. 34. For the rest of my people he shal deliuer with miserie, them that are saued vpon my borders, and he shal make them ioyful til the end shal come, the day of iudgement, wherof I haue spoken to thee from the beginning. 35. This is the dreame which thou sawest, and these be the interpretations. 36. Thou therefore only hast been worthie to know this secret of the Highest. 37. Write therefore in a Book al these things which thou hast seen, and put them in a hidden place: 38. and thou shalt teach them the wise men of thy people, whose harts thou knowest able to take, & to keepe these secrets. 39. But doe thou stay here yet other seuen dayes, that there may be shewed thee whatsoeuer shal seeme good to the Highest to shew thee. 40. And he departed from me. And it came to passe, when al the people had heard that the seuen dayes were past, and I had not returned into the citie, and al gathered themselves together from the least vnto the greatest: and came to me, and spake to me saying: 41. What haue we sinned to thee, or what haue we done vniustly against thee, that leauing vs thou hast sitten in this place? 42. For thou alone art remainyng to vs of al peoples, as a cluster of grapes of the vineyard, and as a candle in a darke place, and as an hauen and shippe saued from the tempest. 43. Or are not the euils that chance, sufficient for vs? 44. If then thou shalt forsake vs, how much better had it been to vs, if we also had been burnt with the burning of Sion: 45. For we are not better then they that dyed there. And they wept with a loud voice. And I answered them, & sayd: 46. Be of good chere Israel, & be not sorowful thou house of Iacob. 47. For there is remembrance of you before the Highest, and the Strong hath not forgotten you in tentation. 48. For I haue not forsaken you, neither did I depart from you: but I came into this place, to pray for the desolation of Sion, and to seeke mercie for the low estate of your sanctification. 49. And now goe every one of you into his house, and I wil come to you after these dayes. 50. And the people departed, as I sayd to them, into the citie: 51. but I sate in the field seuen dayes, as he commanded me: and I did eate of the flowers of the field only, of the herbes was my meate made in those dayes.

CHAP. XIII.

A vision of a winde (as it first seemed, but) indeed, v. 3. of a man: 5. strong against the enemies: 21. with the interpretation.

ND it came to passe after seuen dayes, and I dreamed a dreame in the night. 1. And behold there rose a winde from the sea, that troubled al the waues therof. 3. And I saw, and behold that man grew strong with thousands of heauen: and when he turned his countenance to consider, al things trembled that were seen vnder him: 4. & wherfoeuer voyce proceeded out of his mouth, al that heard his voyces began to burne, as the earth is quiet when it teeleth the fire. 5. And I saw after these, and behold a multitude of men was gathered together, of whom there was no number, from the foure winds of heauen, to fight against the man that was come vp out of the sea. 6. And I saw, and behold he had grauen to himself a great mountaine, and he flew vpon it. 7. And I sought to see the countrie, or the place whence the mountaine was grauen, and I could not. 8. And after these things I saw, and beheld al that were gathered to him, to ouerthrowe him, feared exceedingly, yet they were bold to fight. 9. And behold as he saw the violence of the multitude that came, he lifted not vp his hand, nor held sword, nor anie warlyke instrument, but only as I saw, 10. that he sent forth out of his mouth as it were a blaste of fire, and from his lippes a spirit of flame, & from his tongue he sent forth sparkles and tempests, & al things were mingled together with this blast of fire, and spirit of flame, and multitude of tempests. 11. And it fel with violence vpon the multitude, that was prepared to fight, and burned them al, that suddenly there was nothing sene of an invincible multitude, but only dust, and the saour of smoke: and I saw, and was afrayd. 12. And after these things I saw the man himself descending from the mountaine, and calling to him an other peaceable multitude, 13. and there came to him the countenance of manie men, some

reioycing, and some sorrowing: and some bond, some bringing of them that were offered. And I was sicke for much feare, & awaked, and sayd. 14. Thou from the beginning hast shewed thy seruant these meruelous things, and hast counted me worthie that thou wouldest receiue my petition. 15. And now shew me yet the interpretation of this dreame. 16. For as I thinke in my iudgement, woe to them that were left in those dayes: and much more woe to them that were not left. 17. For they that were not left, were sorrowful. 18. I vnderstand now what things are layde vp in the later dayes, and they shal happen to them, yea and to them that are left. 19. For therefore they came into great dangers, and manie necessities, as these dreames doe shew. 20. But yet it is easier, aduenturing to come into it, then to passe, as a cloud from the world, and now to see the things that happen in the later time. And he answered me, and sayd: 21. Both the interpretation of the vision I wil tel thee: and also concerning the things that thou hast spoken I wil open to thee. 22. Wheras thou speakest of them that were left this is the interpretation. 23. He that taketh away danger at that time, he hath garded himself. They that haue fallen into danger, these are they that haue works and fayth in the Strongest. 24. Know therefore that they are more blessed which are left, then they that are dead. 25. These are the interpretations of the vision, wheras thou sawest a man comming from the hart of the sea, 26. the same is he whom the Highest preferueth much time, which by himself shal deliuer his creature: and he shal dispose them that are left. 27. And wheras thou sawest proceed out of his mouth, as it were winde, and fire, and tempest: 28. and wheras he held no sword, nor warlike instrument: for his violence destroyed the multitude that came to ouerthrow him: this is the interpretation. 29. Behold the dayes come, when the Highest shal begin to deliuer them, that are vpon the earth: 30. and he shal come in excesse of minde vpon them that inhabit the earth. 31. And one shal thinke to ouerthrow an other: one citie an other citie, one place an other place, and nation against nation, and Kingdom against Kingdom. 32. And it shal be, when these things shal come to passe, and the signes shal happen, which I shewed thee before: and then shal my sonne be reuealed, whom thou sawest, as a man comming vp. 33. And it shal be when all nations shal heare his voice: and euery one in his countrie shal leaue their watre, that they haue toward each other: 34. and an innumerable multitude shal be gathered in one, as willing to come to ouerthrow him. 35. But he shal stand vpon the top of mount Sion. 36. And Sion shal come, and it shal be newed, to al prepared and builded, as thou sawest the mountaine to be grauen without hands. 37. And the same my sonne shal reprove the things that the Gentils haue inuented, these their impieties which came nere to the tempest, because of their euil cogitaciōs, and torments wherewith they shal begin to be tormented. 38. Which were likned to the flame, and he shal destroy them without labour by the law that was likened to the fyre. 39. And wheras thou sawest him gathering vnto him an other peaceable multitude. 40. These are the ten tribes, which were made captiue out of their land in the dayes of Osee the King, whom Salinanasar the King of the Assyrians led captiue: and he transported them beyond the riuer, and they were transported into an other land. 41. But they gaue themselues this counsel, to forsake the multitude of nations, and to goe forth into a farther countrie, where mankind neuer inhabited. 42. Or there to obserue their ordinances, which they had not kept in their countrie. 43. And they entred in by the narrow entrances of the riuer Euphrates. 44. For the Higheft then wrought them signes, and stayed the vaines of the riuer til they passed. 45. For by that countrie was a great way to goe, of one year and a half: for the countrie is called Arfareth. 46. Then did they inhabite there til in the later time: and now againe when they beginne to come, 47. againe the Higheft shal stay the vaines of the riuer, that they may passe: for these thou sawest a multitude with peace. 48. But they also that were least of the people, these are they that be within my border. 49. It shal come to passe therefore, when he shal beginne to destroy the multitude of these nations, that are gathered, he shal protect them that haue ouercome the people: 50. and then shal he shew them very manie wonders. 51. And I sayd: Lord dominatour, shew me this, why I saw a man comming vp from the hart of the sea, and he sayd to me: 52. As thou canst not either search these things, or know what things are in the depth of the sea: so can not any man vpon the earth see my sonne, or them that are with him, but in the time of a day. 53. This is the interpretation of the dreame which thou sawest, and for the which thou only art here illuminated. 54. For thou hast least thine owne law, and hast been occupied about my law, and hast sought it. 55. For thou hast disposed thy life in wisdom, and thine vnderstanding thou hast called mother: 56. and for this I haue shewed thee riches with the Higheft. For it shal be after other three dayes, I wil speake other things to thee, and I wil expound to thee weightie and meruelous things. 57. And I went forth, and passed into the field, much glorifying and praising the Higheft for the meruelous things that he did by time. 58. And because he gouerneth it, and the things that are brought in times, and I sate there three dayes.

God appeareth in a bush, 6. reuealing some things to be published, and some things to be hid. 10. As the world waxeth old, al things become worse. 27. The people of Israel are vngrateful. 32. Al shal be iudged in the Resurrection according to their deeds.

AND it came to passe the third day, and I sate vnder an oke. 2. And behold a voice came forth against me out of a bush, and sayd: Esdras, Esdras: and I sayd: Loe here I am Lord. And I arose vpon my feet. And he sayd to me: 3. Reuealing I was reuealed vpon the bush, and spake to Moyfes, when the people serued in Ægypt, 4. and I sent him, and brought my people out of Ægypt, and brought him vpon mount Sina, and held him with me manie dayes. 5. And I told him manie meruelous things, and shewed him the secrets of times, and the end: and I commanded him, saying: 6. These words thou shalt publith abroad, and these thou shalt hyde. 7. And now to thee I say: 8. The signes which I haue shewed, and the dreames which thou hast seen, and the interpretations which thou hast seen, lay the vp in thy hart. 9. For thou shalt be receiued of al, thou shalt be conuerted the residue with thy counsel, and with the like to thee, til the times be finished. 10. Because the world hath lost his youth, & the times draw neere to waxe old. 11. For the world is diuided by twelue partes, and the tenth part, and half of the tenth part are passed: 12. and there remaineth hereafter the half of the tenth part. 13. Now therfore dispose thy house, and correct thy people, & comfort the humble of them, & forsake now corruption, 14. and put from thee mortal cogitations, & cast from thee humane burdens, and doe from thee now infirme nature, & lay at one side cogitations most troublesome to thee, and make speedie transmigration from these times. 15. for the euils which thou hast seen to haue chanced now, worse then these wil they doe againe: 16. for looke how much the world shal become weake by age, so much shal euils be multiplied vpon the inhabitants. 17. For truth hath remoued it self farther off, and lying hath approched, for now the vision which thou sawest hastneth to come. 18. And I answered, and sayd before thee O Lord: 19. For behold I wil goe, as thou hast commanded me, & wil rebuke the people that now is. But them that shal yet be borne, who shal admonish? 20. The world therfore is set in darknes, and they that dwel in it without light. 21. Because thy law is burnt, therfore no mā knoweth the works that haue been done by thee, or that shal begin. 22. For if I haue found grace with thee, send the Holie Ghost to me, & I wil write al that hath been done in the world from the beginning, the things that were written in thy law, that men may finde the pathe: and they that wil liue in the later times, may liue. 23. And he answered me, and sayd: Goe gather together the people, and thou shalt say to them, that they seeke thee not for fourtie dayes. 24. And doe thou prepare thee manie tables of boxe, and take with thee Sarcia, Dabria, Salemia, Echanus, and Afiel, these five which are readie to write swiftly. 25. And come hither, and I wil light in thy hart a candle of vnderstanding, which shall not be put out til the things be finished, which thou shalt begine to write. 26. And then some things thou shalt open to the perfect, some thou shalt deliuer secretly to the wyse. For to-morrow this houre thou shalt begine to write. 27. And I went as he commanded me, and gathered together al the people, and sayd: 28. Heare Israel these words: 29. Our fathers were pilgrimes from the beginning in Ægypt, and were deliuered from thence. 30. And they receiued the law of life, which they kept not, which you also after them haue transgressed: 31. and the land was giuen you by lot, and the land of Sion, and your fathers, and you haue done iniquitie, and haue not kept the wayes which the Highest commanded you. 32. And wheras he is a iust iudge, he hath taken from you in time that which he had giuen. 33. And now you are here, and your brethren are among you. 34. If then you wil rule ouer your sense, & instruct your hart, you shall be preserued aliue, and after death shall obtaine mercie. 35. For the iudgement shall come after death, when we shall returne to lyfe againe: and then the names of the iust shall appeare, and the deeds of the impious shall be shewed. 36. Let no man therefore come to me now, nor aske for me vntil fourtie dayes. 37. And I tooke the five men, as he commanded me, and we went forth into the field, and taried there. 38. And I was come to the morrow, and behold a voice called me, saying: Esdras open thy mouth, and drinke that which I wil giue thee to drinke. 39. And I opened my mouth, and behold a ful cup was brought me, this was ful as it were with water: but the colour therof like as fire. 40. And I tooke it, and dranke, and when I had druken of it, my hart was tormented with vnderstanding, and wisdom grew into my brest. For my spirit was kept by memorie. 41. And my mouth was opened, and was shut no more. 42. The Highest gaue vnderstanding vnto the five men, and they wrote excesses of the night which were spoken, which they knew not. 43. And at night they did eate breade, but I spake by day, and by night held not my peace. 44. And there were written in the fourtie dayes two hundred foure Books. 45. And it came to passe when they had ended the fourtie daies, the Highest spake, saying: 46. The former things which thou hast written, se abroad, and let the worthie and vnworthie reade: but the last fouentic Books thou shalt keep, that thou mayest deliuer them to the wyse of thy people. 47. For in these is the vaine of vnderstanding, and the fountaine of wisdom, and the streame of knowledge. and I did soe.

CHAP. XV.

*Esdra is bid to denounce, that assuredly manie evils wil come to the world.
9. God wil protect his people, the wicked shal be punished, and lament their final miseries, God reuenging for the good.*

BEHOLD speake into the eares of my people the words of prophecie, which I shal put into thy mouth, sayth our Lord: 2. and see that they be written in paper, because they be faithful and true. 3. Be not afraid of the cogitations against thee, neither let the incredulities trouble thee of them that speake. 4. Because euerie incredulous person shal dye in his incredulitie. 5. Behold I bring in, sayth our Lord, vpon the whole earth euils, sword, and famine, and death, and destruction. 6. Because iniquitie hath fully polluted ouer al the earth, and their hurtful workes are accomplished. 7. Therefore sayth our Lord: 8. I wil not now keepe silence of their impieties which they doe irreligiously, neither wil I beare with those things, which they practise vniustly. Behold the innocent and iust bloud crieth to me, & the soules of the iust crie continually. 9. Reuenging I wil reuenge them, sayth our Lord, and I wil take al innocent bloud out of them vnto me. 10. Behold my people is led to slaughter as a flock, I wil no more suffer it to dwel in the land of Ægypt. 11. But I wil bring them forth in a mightie hand and valiant arme, and wil strike with plague as before, & wil corrupt al the land thereof. 12. Ægypt shal mourne, & the foundations thereof beaten with plague, and with the chastisement which God wil bring vpon it. 13. The husbandmen that til the ground shal moutne, because their seedes shal perish by blasting, and haile, and by a terrible starre. 14. Woe to the world and them that dwel therein. 15. Because the sword is at hand and the destruction of them, and nation shal rise vp against nation to fight, and sword in their hands. 16. For there shal be instabilitie to men, and growing one against an other they shal not care for their King, & the Princes of the way of their doings, in their might. 17. For a man shal desire to goe into the citie and can not. 18. Because of their prides the cities shal be troubled, the houses raised, the men shal feare. 19. Man shal not pitie his neighbour, to make their houses nothing worth in the sword, to spoyle their goods for famine of bread, & much tribulation. 20. Behold I cal together, sayth God, al the Kings of the earth to feare me, that are from the Orient, and from the South, from the East, and from Libanus, to be turned vpon themselves, & to render the things that they haue giuen them. 21. As they doe vntil this day to myne elect, so wil I doe, and render in their bosome. Thus sayth our Lord God: 22. My righthand shal not spare sinners, neither shal the sword cease vpon them that shede innocent bloud vpon the earth. 23. Fire came forth from his wrath, and hath deuoured the foundations of the earth, and sinners as it were straw set on fire. 24. Woe to them that sinne, and obserue not my commandments, sayth our Lord. 25. I wil not spare them: depart ô children from the power. Defile not my sanctification: 26. because the Lord knoweth al that sinne against him; therefore hath he deliuered them into death and into slaughter. 27. For now are euils come vpon the world, and you shal tarric in them. For God wil not deliuer you, because you haue sinned against him. 28. Behold an horrible vision, and the face of it from the east. 29. And the nations of dragons of Arabians shal comeforth in manie chariots, and as a wiude the number of them is caried vpon the earth, so that now al doe feare and tremble, that shal heare them. 30. The Carmonians madde for anger, and they shal goe forth as wild boares out of the wood, and they shal come with great power, and shal stand in fight with them, and they shal waste the portion of the land of the Assirians. 31. And after these things the dragons shal preuaile mindful of their natiuitie, & conspiring shal turne themselues in great force to pursue them. 32. These shal be troubled and hold their peace at their force, and shal turne their feet into flight. 33. And from the territorie of the Assirians the besiegers shal besiege them, and shal consume one of them, and there shal be feare and trembling in their armie, and contentiou against their Kings. 34. Behold clouds from the east, and from the north vnto the south, and their face very horrible, ful of wrath and storme. 35. And they shal beate one against an other, & they shal beate downe manie starres, and their starre vpon the earth, and bloud shal be from the sword vnto the bellie. 36. And mans dung vnto the camels litter, and there shal be much feare, and trembling vpon the earth. 37. And they shal shake that shal see that wrath, & tremble shal take them: and after these things there shal manie showers be moued: 38. from the south, and the north: and an other portion from the west. 39. And the winds from the east shal preuaile vpon it, and shal shut it vp, and the clouds which he raised in wrath, and the starre to make terrour to the east winde, and the west shal be destroyed. 40. And there shal be exalt great and mightie clouds ful of wrath, and a starre to terrifie al the earth, and the inhabitants therof, and they shal powre in vpon euerie high and eminent place a terrible starre, 41. fire, and haile, & flying swords, and manie waters, so that al fields also shal be filled, and al riuers with the fulnes of manie waters. 42. And they shal throw downe cities, and wals, and mountaines, and hilles, and the trees of the woods, and the grasse of the medowes, and their corne. 43. And they shal passe constant vnto Babylon, and shal raise her.

44. They shal come together against her , and shal compaite her , and shal power out the starre , and al wrath vpon her , and the dust and smoke shal goe vp euen into heauen, and round about shal lament her. 45. And they that shal remaine vnder her , shal serue them that terrified her. 46. And thou Asia agreeing into the hope of Babylon , and the glorie of her person , 47. woe be to thee thou wretch , because thou art like to her , and hast adorned thy daughters in fornication , to please & glorie in thy louers , which haue desired al wayes to fornicate with thee. 48. Thou hast imitated the olious in al her workes , and in her inuentions : therefore sayth God: 49. I wil send in euils vpon thee , widowhood , pouertie , and famine , and sword , and pestilence , to destroy thy houses by violation , and death , and glorie of thy vertue. 50. As a flower shal be withered , when the heate shal rise that is sent forth vpon thee , 51. thou shalt be weakned as a litle poore soule plagued and chastised of women , that the mightie and the louers may not receiue thee. 52. Wil I be zealous against thee sayth our Lord , 53. vnles thou hadst slayne myne elect at al times , exalting the slaughter of the hands , and saying vpon their death , when thou was drunken. 54. Adorne the beautie of my countenance. 55. The reward of thy fornication is in thy bosome , therefore thou shalt receiue recompence. 56. As thou shalt doe to my elect , sayth our Lord , so shal God doe to thee , and shal deliuer thee vnto euil. 57. And thy children shal dye for famine: and thou shalt fal by the sword , and thy cities shal be destroyed , and al thyne shal fal in the field by the sword. 58. And they that are in the mountaines shal perish with famine , and shal eat their owne flesh , and drinke bloud , for the famine of bread and thirst of waters. 59. Vnhappie by the seas shalt thou come , and againe thou shalt receiue euils. 60. And in the passage they shal beate against the idle citie , and shal destroy some portion of thy land , and shal deface part of thy glorie , againe returning to Babylon ouerthrowen. 61. And being thrown downe thou shalt be to them for stubble , and they shal be to thee fire: 62. and deuoure thee , and thy cities , thy land , and thy mountaynes , al thy woods and fruitfull trees they wil burne with fire. 63. Thy children they shal lead captiue , and shal haue thy goods for a praye , and the glorie of thy face they shal destroy.

CHAP. XVI.

Al are admonished, that extreme calamities shal fal vpon this world, 36. the penitent returning to iustice shal escape, 5. and as al things were made by Gods omnipotent powre at his wil, so al things shal serue to the reward of the blessed, and punishment of the wisked.

WOE to thee Babylon and Asia, woe to thee Ægypt, and Syria. 2. Gird yourselues with sackclothes and shirtes of haire, and mourne for your children, and be sorie: because your destruction is at hand. 3. The sword is sent in vpon you, and who is he that can turne it away? 4. Fire is sent in vpon you, and who is he that can quench it? 5. Euils are sent in vpon you, and who is he that can repel them? 6. Shal anie man repel the lion being hungrie in the woode, or quench the fire in stubble, forthwith when it beginneth to burne? 7. Shal anie man repel the arrow shot of a strong archer? 8. Our strong Lord sendeth in euils, & who is he that can repel them? 9. Fire came forth from his wrath, and who is he that can quench it? 10. He wil lighten, who shal not feare, he wil thunder, and who shal not be afrayde? 11. Our Lord wil threaten, and who shal not vtterly be destroyed before his face? 12. The earth hath trembled, and the foundations thereof, the sea tosseth vp waues from the depth, and the flouds of it shal be destroyed, and the fishes thereof at the face of our Lord, and at the glorie of his powre: 13. because his right hand is strong which bendeth the bow, his arrowes be sharpe that are shot of him, they shal not misse, when they shal begin to be shot into the ends of the earth. 14. Behold euils are sent, and they shal not returne til they come vpon the earth. 15. The fire is kindled and it shal not be quenched, til it consume the foundations of the earth. 16. For as the arrow that of a strong archer returneth not, so shal not the euils returne backe, that shal be sent vpon the earth. 17. Woe is me: woe is me: who shal deliuer me in those dayes? 18. The beginning of sorrowes and much mourning, the beginning of famine and much destruction. The beginning of warres and the potestates shal feare, the beginning of euils and al shal tremble. 19. In these what shal I doe, when the euils shal come? 20. Behold famine, and plague, & tribulation, and distresse are sent al as scourges for amendment, 21. and in al these they wil not conuert themselues from their iniquities, neither wil they be alwayes mindful of the scourges. 22. Behold, there shal be good cheape victuals vpon the earth, so that they may thinke that peace is directly coming toward them, & then shall evils spring vpon the earth, sword, famine, and great confusion. 23. For by famine manie that inhabit the earth shall dye, and the sword shall destroy the rest that remained alieue of the famine, 24. and the dead shall be cast forth as dung, and there shall be none to comfort them. For the earth shall be left desert, and the cities thereof shall be throwen downe. 25. There shall not be left a man to till the ground and to sow it. 26. The trees shall yeald fruits, and who shall gather them? 27. The grape shall become ripe, and who shall tread it? For there shall be great desolation to places. 28. For a man shall desire to see a man, or to heare his voyce. 29. For there shall be left ten of a citie, and two of the field that haue hid themselues in thicke woods, and cliffes of rockes. 30. As there are left in the oliuet, and on euerie tree, three or foure oliues. 31. Or as in a vineyard when it is gathered there are grapes left by them, that diligently search the vineyard: 32. so shall there be left in those dayes three or foure, by them that search their houses in the sword. 33. And the earth shall be left desolate, and the fields thereof shall waxe old, and the wayes thereof, and all the pathes thereof shall bring forth thornes, because no man shall passe by it. 34. Virgins shall mourne hauing no bridegromes, woman shall mourne hauing no husbands, their daughters shall mourne hauing no helpe: 35. their bridegromes shall be consumed in battel, and their husbands be destroyed in famine. 36. But heare these things, and know them ye seruants of our Lord. 37. Behold the word of our Lord, receiue it: belieue not the Gods of whom our Lord speaketh. 38. Behold the euils approach, and slacke not. 39. As a woman with child when she bringeth forth her child in the ninth month, the houre of her deliuerance approaching, two or three howres before, paines come about her wombe, and the infants comming out of her wombe, they wil not tarric one moment. 40. So the euils shall not slacke to come forth vpon the earth, and the world shall lament, and sorowes shall hold it round about. 41. Heare the word, my people: prepare your selues vnto the fight, & in the euils so be ye as strangers of the earth. 42. He that selleth as if he should flye, & he that buyeth as he that should loose it. 43. He that playeth the marchant, as he that should take no fruit: and he that buildeth as he that should not inhabite. 44. He that soweth, as he that shall not reape: so he also that pruneth a vineyard, as if he should not haue the vintage. 45. They that marie so as if they should not get children, and they that marie not, so as it were widowes. 46. Wherefore they that labour, labour without cause: 47. for forencers shall reape their fruits, and shall violently take their goods, and ouerthrow their houses, and lead their children captiue, because in captiuitie, and famine they beget their children. 48. And they that play the marchants by robrie, the longer they adorne their cities and houses, and their possessions and persons: 49. so much the more wil I be zealous toward them, vpon their sinnes, sayth our Lord. 50. As a whore enuieth an honest and very good woman : 51. so shal iustice hate impietie whe she adorneth herselfe , and accuseth her to her face , when he shal come that may defend him that searcheth out al vpon the earth. 52. Therefore be not made like to her , nor to her works. 53. For yet a little while and iniquitie shal be taken away from the earth , and iustice shal reigne ouer you. 54. Let not the sinner say he hath not sinned : because he shal burne coales of fire vpon his head , that sayth I haue not sinned before our Lord God and his glorie. 55. Behold our Lord shal know al the works of men , and their inuentions , and their cogitations , and their harts. 56. For he sayd : Let the earth be made , and it was made : let the heauen be made , and it was made. 57. And by his worde the starres were made , and he knoweth the number of the starres. 58. Who searcheth the depth and the treasures thereof : who hath measured the sea , and capacitie thereof. 59. Who hath shut vp the sea in the middest of waters , and hath hanged the earth vpon the waters with his word. 60. Who hath spred heauen as it were a vault , ouer the waters he hath founded it. 61. Who hath put fountaines of waters in the desett , and lakes vpon the tops of mountaines , to sendforth riuers from the high rocke to watter the earth. 62. Who made man and put his hart in the middes of the bodie , and gaue him spirit , life , and vnderstanding. 63. And the inspiration of God omnipotent that made al things , and searcheth al hid things , in the secrets of the earth. 64. He knoweth your inuention , and what you thinke in your harts sinning , and willing to hide your sinnes. 65. Wherefore our Lord in searching hath searched al your works , and he wil put you al to open shame , 66. and you shal be confounded when your sinnes shal come forth before men , and the iniquities shal be they , that shal stand accusers in that day. 67. What wil you doe ? or how shal you hide your sinnes before God and his Angels ? 68. Behold God is the Iudge , feare him. Cease from your sinnes , and now forget your iniquities to doe them anie more , and God wil bring you out , and deliuer you from a tribulation. 69. For behold the heate of a great multitude is kindled ouer you , and they shal take certaine of you by violence , and shal make the slaine to be meate for idols. 70. And they that shal consent vnto them , shal be to them in derision , and in reproch , and in conculcation. 71. For there shal be place against places , and against the next cities great insurrection vpon them that feare our Lord. 72. They shal be as it were made spearing no bodie , to spoyle and waste yet them that feare our Lord. 73. because they shal waste and spoyle the goods , and shal cast them out of their houses. 74. Then shal appeare the probation of mine elect ; as geld that is proued by the fire. 75. Heare my beloued , sayth our Lord : Behold the dayes of tribulation are come : and out of them I wil deliuer you. 76. Doe not feare , nor stagger , because God is your guide. 77. And he that keepeth my

THE READER TREATING OF
THESE THREE POINTS: OF THE TRANSLATION OF HOLY SCRIPTURES INTO THE vulgar tongues, and namely into English: of the causes vvhy this nevv Testament is translated according to the auncient vulgar Latin text: & of the maner of translating the same.

THE holy Bible long since translated by vs into English, and the old Testament lying by vs for lacke of good meanes to publish the vvhole in such sort as a vvorke of so great charge and importance requireth: vve haue yet through Gods goodnes at length fully finished for thee (most Christian reader) all the NEVV TESTAMENT, vvhich is the principal, most profitable & comfortable peece of holy vvritte: and, as vvell for all other institution of life and doctrine, as specially for deciding the doubtes of these daies, more propre and pregnant then the other part not yet printed.

Vvvhich translation vve doe not for all that publish, vpon erroneous opinion of necessitie, that the holy Scriptures should alvvayes be in our mother tonge. or that they ought, or vvere ordained by God, to be read indifferently of all, or could be easily vnderstood of euery one that readeth or heareth them in a knowven language: or that they vvere not often through mans malice or infirmitie, pernicious and much hurtful to many: or that vve generally and absolutely deemed it more conuenient in it self, & more agreable to Gods word and honour or edification of the faithful, to haue them turned into vulgar tongues, then to be kept & studied only in the Ecclesiastical learned languages: Not for these nor any such like causes doe vve translate this sacred booke, but vpon special consideration of the present time, state, and condition of our countrie, vnto vvhich, diuers things are either necessarie, or profitable and medicinable novv, that othervvise in the peace of the Church vvere neither much requisite, nor perchance vvholly tolerable.

Translation of the Scriptures into the vulgar tongues, not absolutely necessarie or profitable, but according to the time.

popular, and their factious leaders, on the other, is a high point of prudence. These later, partly of simplicitie, partly of curiositie, and specially of pride and disobedience, haue made claime in this case for the common people, vvith plausible pretences many, but good reasons none at all. The other, * to vvhom Christ hath giuen charge of our soules, the dispensing of Gods mysteries and treasures (among vvich holy Scripture is no smale store) and the feeding his familie in season vvith foode fit for euery sort, haue neither of old nor of late, euer vvholly condemned all vulgar versions of Scripture, nor haue at any time generally forbidden the faithful to reade the same: yet they haue not by publike authoritie prescribed, commaunded, or authentically euer recommended any such interpretation to be indifferently vsed of all men.

The Armenians say they haue the Psalter and some other peeces translated by S. Chrysostom into their language, vvhen he vvvas banished among them: and George the Patriarch, in vvriting his life, signifieth no lesse. The Slauians affirme they haue the Scriptures in their vulgar tongue, turned by S. Hierom, and some vvould gather so much by his ovvne vvordes in his epistle to Sophronius, but the place in deede proueth it not. Vulpilas surely gaue the Scriptures to the Gothes in their ovvne tonge, and that before he vvvas an Arrian. It is almost three hundred yeres, since Iames Archbisshop of Genoua is said to haue translated the Bible into Italian. More then two hundred yeres agoe, in the daies of Charles the fifth, the Frenche king, vvvas it put forth faithfully in Frenche, the sooner to shake out of the deceiued peoples hâdes, the false heretical translations of a secte called Vvaldenses. In our ovvne countrie, notwithstanding the Latin tonge vvvas euer (to vsse Venerable Bedes vvordes) common to all the prouinces of the same for meditation or studie of Scriptures, and no vulgar translation commonly vsed or occupied of the multitude, yet they vvvere extant in English euen before the troubles that Vvicleffe and his folovvers raised in our Church, as appeareth, as well by some peeces yet remaining, as by a prouincial Constitution of Thomas Arundel Archbisshop of Canturburie, in a Council holden at Oxford. vvhere straitte prouision vvvas made, that no heretical version set forth by Vvicleffe, or his adherentes, should be suffered, nor any other in or after his time be published or permitted to be readde, being not approued and allowved by the Diocesan before: alleaging S. Hierom for the difficultie and danger of interpreting the holy Scripture out of one tonge into an other, though by learned and Catholike men. So also it is there insinuated, that neither the Translations set forth before that Heretikes time, nor other aftervvvard being approued by the lawvful Ordinaries, were euer in our countrie wholly forbidden, though they were not (to say the truth) in quiet and better times (much lesse vvhen the people vvvere prone to alteration, heresie, or noueltie) either hastily admitted, or ordinarily readde of the vulgar, but vsed onely, or specially, of some deuout religious and contemplatiues persons, in reuerence, secrecie, and silence, for their spiritual comforte.

The like Catholike and vulgar translations in many countries, since Luthers time.

Now since Luthers reuolt also, diuers learned Catholikes, for the more speedy abolishing of a number of false and impious translations put forth by sundry sectes, and for the better preseruation or reclaime of many good soules endangered thereby, haue published the Bible in the seueral languages of: almost all the principall prouinces of the Latin Church: no other bookes in the world being so pernicious as hereticall translations of the Scriptures, poisoning the people vnder colour of diuine authoritie, & not many other remedies being being more soueraine against the same (if it be vsed in order, discretion, and humilitie) then the true, faithful, and sincere interpretation opposed therevnto.

Vvhich causeth the holy Church not to forbid vtterly any Catholike translation, though she allow not the publishing or reading of any absolutely and without exception, or limitation: knowing by her diuine and most sincere wisdom, how, where, when, and to whom these her Maisters and Spouses giftes are to be bestowed to the most good of the faithful: and therefore neither generally permitteth that which must needs doe hurt to the vnworthy, nor absolutely condemneth that which may doe much good to the worthy. Vvherevpon, the order which many a wise man wished for before, was taken by the Deputies of the late famous Council of Trent in this behalfe, and confirmed by supreme authoritie, that the holy Scriptures, though truely and Catholically translated into vulgar tonges, yet may not be indifferently readde of all men, nor of any other then such as haue expresse licence therevnto of their lawful Ordinaries, with good testimonie from their Curates or Confessors, that they be humble, discrete and deuout persons, and like to take much good, and no harme thereby. Vvhich prescript, though in these daies of ours it can not be so precisely obserued, as in other times & places where there is more due respecte of the Churches authoritie, rule, and discipline: yet we trust all wise and godly persons will vse the matter in the meane while, with such moderation, meekenes, and subiection of hart, as the handling of so sacred a booke, the sincere senses of Gods truth therein, & the holy Canons, Councils, reason, and religion do require.

Ind. lib. prohibic. regula 4.

Vvherein, though for due preseruation of this diuine worke from abuse and prophanation, and for the better bridling of the intolerable insolencie of proude, curious, & contentious wittes, the gouernours of the Church guided by Gods Spirit, as euer before, so also vpon more experience of the maladie of this time then before, haue taken more exacte order both for the readers and translatours in these later ages, then of old: yet we must not imagia that in the primitiue Church, either euery one that vnderstoode the learned tonges wherein the Scriptures were written, or other languages into which they were translated, might without reprehension, readde, reason, dispute, turne and toss the Scriptures: or that our forefathers suffered euery schole-maister, scholer, or Grammarian that had a litle Greeke or Latin, straight to take in hand the holy Testament: or that the translated Bibles into the vulgar tonges, were in the handes of euery husbandman, artificer, prentice, boies, girles, mistresse, maide, man: that they were sung, plaied, alleaged, of euery tinker, tauerner, rimer, minstrel: that they were for table talke, for alebenches, for boates and barges, and for euery prophane person and companie. No, in those better times men were neither so ill, nor so curious of them selues, so to abuse the blessed booke of Christ: neither was there any such easy meanes before printing was inuented, to disperse the copies into the handes of euery man, as now there is.

The Churches order & determination concerning the reading of Catholike translations of the Bible in vulgar tongues.

The holy Scriptures neuer readde of all persons indifferently, at their pleasure.

They were then in Libraries, Monasteries, Colleges, Churches, in Bishops, Priests, and some other deuout principal Lye mens houses and handes: who vsed them with feare and reuerence, and specially such partes as pertained to good life and maners, not meddling, but in pulpit and schooles (and that moderately) with the hard and high mysteries and piaces of greater difficultie. The poore ploughman, could then in labouring the ground, sing the hymnes and psalmes either in known or vnknown languages, as they heard them in the holy Church, though they could neither reade nor know the sense, meaning, and mysteries of the same. Such holy persons of both sexes, to whom S. Hierom in diuers Epistles to them, commendeth the reading and meditation of holy Scriptures, were diligent to searche all the godly histories & imitable examples of chastitie, humilitie, obedience, clemencie, pouertie, penance, renouncing the world: they noted specially the places that did breede the hatred of sinne, feare of Gods iudgement, delight in spiritual cogitations: they referred them selues in all hard places, to the iudgement of the auncient fathers and their maisters in religion, neuer presuming to contend, controule, teach or talke of their owne sense and phantasie, in deepe questions of diuinitie. Then the Virgins, did meditate vpon the places and examples of chastitie, modestie and demurenesse: the married, on coniugal faith and continencie: the parents, how to bring vp their children in faith and feare of God: the Prince, how to rule: the subiect, how to obey: the Priest, how to teach: the people, how to learne.

The fathers sharply reprehend as an abuse, that al indifferently should reade, expound, and talke of the Scriptures.

Then the scholer taught not his maister, the sheepe controuled not the Pastor, the yong student set not the Doctor to schoole, not reprobued their fathers of error & ignorance. Or if any were in those better daies (as in al times of heresie such must needes be) that had itching eares, tikling tonges and wittes, curious and contentious disputers, hearers, and talkers rather then doers of Gods word: such the Fathers did euer sharply reprehend, counting them vnworthy and vnprofitable readers of the holy Scriptures. S. Hierom in his Epistle to Paulinus, after declaration that no handy craft is so base, nor liberall science so easy, that can be had without a maister (which S. Augustine also affirmeth, De uilitate cred. cap. 7.) nor that men presume in any occupation to teach that they neuer learned, Only (saith he) the art of Scripture is that which euery man challengeth: this the chatting old wife, this the doting old man, this the bragging sophister, this on euery hand, men presume to teach before they learne it. Againe, Some wish poise of lofty wordes deuise of scripture matters among women: other some (phy vpon it) learne of women, what to teach men, and lest that be not ynough, by facilitie of tong, or rather audacitie, teach that to others, which they vnderstand neuer a whit them selues. to say nothing of such as be of my facultie: who stepping from secular learning to holy scriptures, and able to tickle the eares of the multitude wish a smorbe tale, thinke all they speake, to be the Law of God. This he wrote then, when this maladie of arrogancie and presumption in diuine matters, vvas nothing so outragious as now it is.

Hiero. ep. 103 c. 6.

S. Gregorie Nazianzene made an oration of the moderation that vvas to be vsed in these matters: where he saith, that some in his time thought them selues to haue all the wisdom in the world, when they could once repeat two or three wordes, and them ill couched together, out of Scriptures. but he there diuinely discourseth of the orders and differences of degrees: how in Christes myllicall body, some are ordeined to learne, some to teach: that all are not Apostles, all Doctors, all interpreters, all of tonges and knowledge, not all learned in Scriptures & diuinitie: that the people went not vp to talke with God in the mountaine, but Moyfes, Aaron, & Eleazar: nor they neither, but by the difference of their callings: that they that rebel against this ordinance, are guilty of the conspiracie of Corè & his cõplices: that in Scripture there is both milke for babes, and meate for men, to be dispensed, not according to euery ones greedines greedines of appetit or vvilfulnes, but as is most meete for eche ones necessitie and capacitie: that as it is a shame for a Bishop or Priest to be vnlearned in Gods mysteries, so for the common people it is often times profitable to saluation, not to be curious, but to folovv their Passors in sinceritie & simplicitie: vvhereof excellently saith S. Augustine, Fidei simplicitate & sinceritate lactati, nutriamur in Christo: & cum parui sumus, maiorum cibos non appetamus. that is, Being fed vvith the simplicitie and sinceritie of faith, as it vvere vvith milke, so let vs be nourished in Christ: and vvhen vve are litle ones, let vs not couet the meates of the elder sort. Vvho * in an other place testifieth, that the vvord of God can not be preached nor certaine mysteries vttered to all men alike, but are to be deliuered according to the capacitie of the hearers: as he proueth both * by S. Pauls example, vvho gaue not to euery sort strong meate, but milke to many, as being not spiritual, but carnal and not capable: and * by our lordes also, vvho spake to some plainly, and to others in parables, & affirmed that he had many things to vtter vvhich the hearers vvere not able to beare.

Hovv much more may vve gather, that all things that be vvritten, are not for the capacitie and diet of euery of the simple readers, but that very many mysteries of holy vvritte, be very far about their reach, & may and ought to be (by as great reason) deliuered them in measure & meane most meete for them? vvhich in deede can hardly be done, vvhen the vvhole booke of the Bible lieth before euery man in his mother tonge, to make choise of vvhat he list. For vvhich cause the said Gregorie Nazianzen vvisheth the Christians had as good a lavv as the Hebrues of old had: vvho (as S. Hierom also vvitnesseth) tooke order among them selues that none should read the Cantica Canticorum nor certaine other pieces of hardest Scriptures, till they vvere thirtie yeres of age.

The Scriptures must be deliuered in measure and discre-tion, according to eche mans neede and capacitie.

The Ievves lavv for not reading certaine bookes of holy Scripture until a time.

And truly there is no cause vvhy men should be more loth to be ordered and moderated in this point by Gods Church and their Pastors, then they are in the vse of holy Sacraments: for vvhich as Christ hath appointed Priestes and ministers, at vvhose handes vve must receiue them, and not be our owne caruers: so hath he giuen * vs doctores, prophetes, expouiders, interpreters, teachers and preachers, to take the lavv and our faith at their mouthes: because our faith and religion commeth not to vs properly or principally by reading of Scriptures, but (as the Apostle saith) by hearing of the preachers lavvfully sent: though reading in order and humilitie, much confirmeth and aduanceth the same. Therefore this holy booke of the Scriptures, is called of S. Ambrose, Liber sacerdotalis, the booke of priestes, at vvhose handes and disposition vve must take and vse it. Li. 2. ad Grat.

The vvise vvill not here regard vvhat some vvilful people do mutter, that the Scriptures are made for all men, and that it is of enuie that the Priestes do keepe the holy booke from them. Vvwhich suggestion commeth of the same serpent * that seduced our first parents, vvho perswaded them, that God had forbidden them that tree: of knowvledge, lest they should be as cunning as him self, and like vnto the Highest. No, no, the church doth it to keepe them from blind ignorant presumption, and from that vvhich the Apostle calleth falsi nominis scientiam knowvledge falsely so called: and not to embarre them from the true knowvledge, of Christ: She vvould haue all vvise, but vsque ad sobrietatem, vnto sobrietie, as the Apostle speaketh: if he knowveth the Scriptures be ordained for euery state, as meates, elements, fire, vvater, candle, kniues, svvord, & the like: vvhich which are as needful (most of them) for children as old folkes, for the simple as the vvise: but yet vvould marre all, if they vvere at the guiding of other then vvise men, or vvere in the handes of euery one, for whose preferuation they be profitable. She forbiddeth not the reading of them in any language, enuieth no mans commoditie, but giueth order hovv to doe it to edification, and not destruction: hovv to doe it without calling the holy to dogges, or pearles to bogges: (See S. She vvould haue the pre- sumptuous Heretike, notwithstanding he alleage them neuer so fait, flying as it vvcre through the whole Bible, and coting the Psalmes, Prophets, Gospels, Epistles, neuer so readily for his purpose, as Vincentius Lirinensis faith such mens fashion is: yet she vvould according to Tertullians rule, haue such mere vsurers quite discharged of all occupying and possession of the holy Testa- ment, which is her old and onely right and inheritance, and belongeth not to Heretikes at all, vvhom Origen calleth Scripturarii fures, theeues of the Scriptures. She vvould haue the vnvvorthy repelled, the curious repressed, the simple mea- sured, the learned humbled, and all sortes so to vse them or absteine from them, as is most conuenient for euery ones saluation: with this general admonition, that none can vnderstand the meaning of God in the Scriptures* except Christ open their sense, and make them partakers of his holy Spirit in the vnitie of his mystical bodie: and for the rest, she committeth it to the Pastor of euery pro- uince and people, according to the difference of time, place, and persons, how and in vvhat sort the reading of the Scriptures is more or lesse to be procured or permitted.

Gregorie Nazianzen witnesseth) that the Scriptures & all holy lections of diuine things vvcre lothsome vnto them: vvhereby their holy Bishop was forced* in many of his sermons to crie out against their extreme negligence and contempt of Gods vvord, declaring, that not onely Eremites and Religious (as they alleaged for their excuse) but secular men of all sortes might reade the Scriptures, and often haue more neede thereof in respect of them selues, then the other that liue in more puritie and contemplation: further insinuating, that though diuers thinges be high and hard therein, yet many godly histories, liues, examples, & precepts of life and doctrine be plaine: and finally, that vvhen the Gentiles vvcre so cunning and diligent to impugne their faith, it vvcre not good for Christians to be so simple or negligent in the defense thereof. as (in truth) it is more requisite for a Catholike man in these daies vvhen our Aduer- saries be industrious to empeache our beleefe, to be skilful in Scriptures, then at other times vvhen the Church had no such enemies.

 But the case novv is more lamentable: for the Protestants and such as S. Paul calleth ambulantes in astutia, vvalking in deceifulnes, haue so abused the people 2 Cor. 4 and many other in the vvorld, not vvivise, that by their false translations they haue in steede of Gods Law and Testament, & for Christes vvritten vvill and vvord, giuen them tncir ovvne vvicked vvriting and phantasies, most shamefully in all their vertions Latin, English, and other tonges, corrupting both the letter and sense by false translation, adding, detracting, altering, transposing, pointing, and all other guileful meanes: specially vvhere it serueth for the advantage of their priuate opinions. for vvhich, they are bold also, partly to disauthorise quite, partly to make doubtful, diuers vvhole bookes allowed for Canonical Scripture by the vniuersal Church of God this thousand yeres and vpward: to alter al the authentical and Ecclesiastical vvordes vsed litchence our Christianitic, into nevv prophane nouelties of speeches agreable to their doctrine: to change the titles of vvorkes, to put out the names of the authors, * to charge the very Euangelist vvith following vntrue translation, * BONA AN not. in c. 1. Lu. v. 7 & to adde vvhole sentences proper to their sect, into their psalmes in meter, * euen * See the tenth article of their Creeda in meter. into the very Creede in rime. al vvhich the poore deceiued people say and sing as though they vvere Gods ovvne vvord, being in deede through such sacrilegious treacherie, made the Diuels vvord

At this their dealing is noted (as occasion serueth) in the Annotations vpon this Testament: and more at large in a booke lately made purposely of that matter, called A DISCOVERY

To say nothing of their intolerable liberty and licence to change the accustomed callings of God, Angel, men, places, & things vsed by the Apostles and all antiquitie, in Greeke, Latin, and all other languages of Christian Nations, into nevv names, sometimes falsely, and alvvaies ridiculously and for ostentation taken of the Hebrues: to frame and fine the phrases of holy Scriptures after the forme of prophane vvriters, sticking not, for the same to supply, adde, alter or diminish as freely as if they translated Liuie, Virgil, or Terence.  vvordes. Ad Pammach. epistola 101. ca. 2 in princip. Vve must, saith S. Augustine, speake according to a set rule, lest licence of vvordes breede some vvicked opinion concerning the things contained vnder the vvordes. De ciuitate lib. 10. cap. 12. Vvhereof our holy forefathers and auncient Doctours had such a religious care, that they vvould not change the very barbarismes or incongruities of speach vvhich by long vse had preuailed in the old readings or recitings of Scriptures. as, Neque nubent neque nubentur, in Tertullian li. 4. in Marcion. Mat. 12. in S. Hilarie in c. 22 Mat. and in al the fathers. Qui me confusus fuerit, confundat & ego eum, in S. Cyprian ep. 63 nu. 7. Talis enim nobis decebat sacerdos (vvhich vvvas an elder translation then the vulgar Latin that novv is) in S. Ambrose c. 3 de fuga seculi. and S. Hierom him self, vvho othervvise corrected the Latin translation that vvvas vsed before his time, yet keepeth religiously (as him self professeth Prasat. in 4 Euang. ad Damasum) these and the like speaches, Nonne vos magis pluris estis illis? and, filius hominis non venit ministrari, sed ministrare: and, Neque nubent, neque nubentur: in his commentaries vpon these places. and, Non capit Propheta perire extra Hierusalem, in his commentaries in c. 2. Ioel. sub finem. And S. Augustine, vvho is most religious in al these phrases, counteth it a special pride and infirmitie in those that haue a litle learning in tonges, & none in things, that they easily take offense of the simple speaches or solecismes in the Scriptures. de doctrina Christi. li. 2. cap. 13. See also the same holy father li. 3 de doct. Christi. c. 3. and tract. 2 in Euang. Ioan. But of the maner of our translation more anon.

Of the ANNOTATIONS, vvwhy they vvvere made, & vvwhat matter they containe.

Now, though the text thus truely translated, might sufficiently, in the sight of the learned and al indifferent men, both controule the aduertaries corruptions, and proue that the holy Scripture vvhercof they haue made so great vauntes, make nothing for their nevv opinions, but vvholly for the Catholike Churches beleefe and doctrine, in all the pointes of difference betvvixt vs: yet knowing that the good and simple may easily be seduced by some fevv obstinate persons of perdition (vvwhom vve see giuen ouer into a reprobate sense, to whom the Gospel, vvhich in it self is the odour of life to saluation, is made the odour of death to damnation, ouer vvwhose eies for sinne & disobedience God suffereth a veile or couer to lie, vvwhile they read the nevv Testamēt, euen as the Apostle saith the Iewes haue til this day, in reading of the old, that as the one sort can not finde Christ in the Scriptures, reade they neuer so much, so the other can not finde the Catholike Church nor her doctrine there neither) and finding by experience this saying of S. Augustine to be most true, If the prejudice of any erroneous persuasion preoccupate the mind, vvwhatsoeuer the Scripture hath to the contrarie, men take it for a figuratiue speach: for these causes, and somevvhat to help the faithful reader in the difficulties of diuers places, vve haue also set forth reasonable large ANNOTATIONS, thereby to shew the studious reader in most places pertaining to the controuersies of this time, both the heretical corruptions and false deductions, & also the Apostolike tradition, the expositions of the holy fathers, the decrees of the Catholike Church and most auncient Councels: vvwhich meanes vvwhosoever trusteth not, for the sense of holy Scriptures, but had rather folow his priuate iudgemēt or the arrogāt spirit of these Sectaries, he shal vvworthily through his owne vvwilfulnes be deceiued. beseeching all men to looke vvwith diligence, sinceritie, and indifferencie, into the case that concerneth no lesse then euery ones eternal saluation or damnation.

Vvvhich if he doe, vve doubt not but he shal to his great contentment, finde the holy Scriptures most clerely and inuincibly to proue the articles of Catholike like doctrine against our aduersaries, vvhich perhaps he had thought before this diligent search, either not to be consonant to Gods vvord, or at least not conteined in the same, and finally he shal proue this saying of S. Augustine to be most true. Multi sensus &c. Many senses of holy Scriptures lie hidden, and are knowne to some few of greater vnderstanding: neither are they at any time auouched more commodiously and acceptably then at such times, when the care to answer heretikes doth force men there vnto. For then, euen they that be negligent in matters of studie and learning, shaking of sluggishnes, are stirred vp to diligent hearing, that the Aduersaries may be refilled. Again, how many senses of holy Scriptures, concerning Christes Godhead, haue been auouched against Photinus: how many, of his Manhod, against Manicheus: how many, of the Trinitie, against Sabellius: how many, of the vnitie in Trinitie, against the Arrians, Eunomians, Macedonians: how many, of the Catholike Church dispersed throughout the vvhole vvorld, and of the mixture of good and bad in the same vntil the end of the vvorld, against the Donatistes and Luciferians and other of the like errour: how many against al other heretikes, vvvhich it vvore to long to rehearse? Of vvvhich senses and expositions of holy Scripture the approved authors and auouchers, should otherwise either not be knowen at al, or not so vvell knowen, as the contradictions of proud heretikes haue made them.

text.

NOVV TO GIVE thee also intelligence in particular, most gentle Reader, of such thinges as it behoueth thee specially to knowv concerning our Translation: Vve translate the old vulgar Latin text, not the common Greeke text, for these causes.

1. It is so auncient, that it vvvas vsed in the Church of God aboute 1300 yeres agoe, as appeareth by the fathers of those times. It is most auncient.
2. It is that (by the common receiued opinion and by al probabilitie) vvvhich S. Hierom aftervvvard corrected according to the Greeke, by the appointment of Damasus then Pope, as he maketh mention in his preface before the foure Euangelistes, vnto the said Damasus: and in Catalogo in fine, and ep. 102. Corrected by S. Hierom.
3. Consequently it is the same vvvhich S. Augustine so commendeth and allowveth in an Epistle to S. Hierom. Commended by S. Augustine.
4. It is that, vvvhich for the most part euer since hath been vsed in the Churches seruiue, expounded in sermons, alleaged and interpreted in the Commentaries and vvritings of the auncient fathers of the Latin Church. Vsed and expounded by the fathers.
5. The holy Council of Trent, for these and many other important considerations, hath declared and defined this onely of al other latin translations, to be authentical, and so onely to be vsed and taken in publike lessons, disputations, preachings, and expositions, and that no man presume vpon any pretence to reiect or refuse the same. Only authentical, by the holy Council of Trent.
6. It is the grauest, sincerest, of greatest maiestie, least partialitie, as being vvwithout al respect of controuersies and contentions, specially these of our Most graue, least partial.

time, as appeareth by those places vvhich Erasmus and others at this day translate much more to the aduantage of the Catholike cause.

Precise in following the Greeke.

7. It is so exact and precise according to the Greeke, both the phrasē and the word, that delicate Heretikes therefore reprehend it of rudenes. And that it followeth the Greeke far more exactly then the Protestants translations, beside infinite other places, we appeale to these. Tit. 3. 14. Curent bonis operibus praeesse. προϊστασθαι. Engl. bib. 1577, to mainteine good vvorkes. and Hebr. 10. 20. Viam nobis inuiauunt, ενευαινον. English Bib. be prepared. So in these vvordes, Iustificaciones, Traditiones, Idola &c. In al vvhich they come not neere the Greeke, but auoid it of purpose.

Preferred by Beza him self.

8. The Aduersaries them selues, namely Beza, preferre it before al the rest. In praefat. no. Test. an. 1596. And againe he saith, that the old Interpreter translated very religiously. Annot. in 1. Luc. v. 1.

Al the rest misliked of the Sectaries them selues, eche reprehending an other.

9. In the rest, there is such diuerfitic and dissension, and no end of reprehending one an other, and translating euery man according to his fantasie, that * Luther said, If the vvorld should stand any long time, vve must receiue againe (vvhich he thought absurd) the Decrees of Councils, for preseruing the vnitie of faith, because of so diuers interpretations of the Scripture. And Beza (in the place about mentioned) noteth the itching ambition of his fellow-translators, that had much rather disagree and dissent from the best, then seeme them selues to haue said or vvritten nothing. And Bezas translation it self, being so esteemed in our countrie, that the Geneva * English Testaments be translated according to the same, yet sometime goeth so vvide from the Greeke, and from the meaning of the holy Ghost, that them selues which protest to translate it, dare not follow it. For example, Luc. 3. 36. They haue put these wordes, The sonne of Caiman, vvhich he vvittingly and vvilfully left out: and Mat. 1. 14. they say, Vvith the vvomen, agreeably to the vulgar Latin: where he saith, Cum vxoribus, vvith their vvives.

* Cochla. c. 11 de Cano. no. Scrip. auctoritate.

The new Test. printed the year 1580. in the title.

It is truer then the vulgar Greeke text it self.

10. It is not onely better then al other Latin translations, but then the Greeke text it self, in those places vvhere they disagree. ...

The auncient fathers for prooffe thereof, and the Aduersaries them selues.

The prooffe hereof is euident, because most of the auncient Heretikes were Grecians, & therefore the Scriptures in Greeke were more corrupted by them, as the auncient fathers often complaine. Tertullian noteth the Greeke text which is at this day (1 Cor. 15. 47) to be an old corruption of Marcion the Heretike, and the truth to be as in our vulgar latin, Secundus homo de caelo caelestis, The second man from heauen heauenly. So reade other * auncient fathers, and Erasmus thinketh it must needs be so, and Caluin him self follovveth it Instit. li. 2. c. 13. parag. 2. Againe S. Hierom noteth that the Greeke text (1 Cor. 7. 33) which is at this day, is not the Apostolical veritie or the true text of the Apostle: but that vvhich is in the vulgar Latin, Qui cum vxore est, sollicitus est quae sunt mundi. quomodo placeat vxori, & diuisus est. He that is vvith a vvife, is careful of vvorldly things, how he may please his vvife, and is denided or distracted. The Ecclesiastical historie called the Tripartite, noteth the Greeke text that now is (1 Io. 4. 3) to be an old corruption of the auncient Greeke copies, by the Nestorian Heretikes, & the true reading to be as in our vulgar Latin, Omnis spiritus qui soluit I E S V M, ex Deo non est. Euery spirit that dissolueth I E S V S, is not of God: and Beza confesseth that Socrates in his Ecclesiastical historie readeth so in the Greeke, παν πνευμα ε λυα τον ιησου χριστον &c.

But the prooffe is more pregnant out of the Aduersaries them selues. They forsake the Greeke text as corrupted, and translate according to the vulgar Latin, tin, namely Beza and his scholars the English translatours of the Bible, in these places. Hebr. chap. 9, vers. 1. saying, The first covenant, for that which is in the Greeke. The first tabernacle. vvhether they put, covenant, not as of the text, but in an other letter, as to be vnderstood, according to the vulgar Latin, vvhich most sincerely leaueh it cut altogether, saying, Habuit quidem & prius iustificaciones &c. The former also in deede had iustificacions &c. Againe, Ro. 11, vers. 21. They translate not according to the Greeke text, Tempori seruientes, seruing the time, vvhich Beza saith must needs be a corruption: but according to the vulgar Latin, Domino seruientes, seruing our Lord. Againe, Apoc. 11, vers. 2. they translate not the Greeke text, Atrium quod intra templum est, the court vvhich is within the teme: but cleane contrarie, according to the vulgar Latin, vvhich Beza saith is the true reading, Atrium quod est foris templum, the court vvhich is without the temple. Onely in this last place, one English Bible of the yere 1562, folovveth the errour of the Greeke. Againe, 2 Tim. 2. vers. 14. they adde, but, more then is in the Greeke, to make the sense comodious and easie, according as it is in the vulgar Latin. Againe, Ia. 5, 12. they leaue the Greeke, and folovv the vulgar Latin, saying, lest you fall into condemnation. I doubt not (saith Beza) but this is the true and sincere reading, and I suspect the corruption in the Greeke came thus &c. It vv ere infinite to set dovvne al such places, vvhether the Aduersaries (specially Beza) folovv the old vulgar Latin and the Greeke copie agreable therevnto, condemning the Greeke text that novv is, of corruption.

The Calvinistes them selues oftentimes take the Greeke as corrupt, and translate according to the ancient vulgar latin text.

See No. Test. Grae. Rob. Stephani in folio, and Crispini.

Againe, Erasmus the best translatour of al the later, by Bezas iudgement, saith, that the Greeke sometime hath superfluities corruptly added to the text of holy Scripture. as Mat. 6. to the end of the Pater noster, these vvordes, Because thine is the kingdom the power, and the glorie, for ever more. Vvhich he calleth, nugas, trifles rashly added to our Lords praier, and reprehendeth Valla for blaming the old vulgar Latin because it hath it not. likewise Ro. 11, 6. these vvordes in the Greeke, and not in the vulgar latin: But if of vvorkes, it is not novv grace: otherwise the vvorke is no more a vvorke. and Mar. 10, 29. these vvordes, or vvise, and such like. Yea the Greeke text in these superfluities condemneth it self, and justifieth the vulgar Latin exceedingly: as being marked through out in a number of places, that such and such vvordes or sentences are superfluous. in al which places our vulgar Latin hath no such thing, but is agreable to the Greeke vvhich remaineth after the superfluities be taken avway. For example, that before mentioned in the end of the Pater noster, hath a marke of superfluitie in the Greeke text thus. and Mar. 6, 11 these vvordes, Amen I say to you, it shal be more tolerable for the land of Sodom and Gomorrbe in the day of iudgement, then for that citie. and Mar. 10, 22. these vvordes, And be baptized vvhith the baptisme that I am baptized vvhith? Vvhich is also superfluously repeated againe vers. 23. and such like places exceeding many: which being noted superfluous in the Greeke, and being not in the vulgar Latin, proue the Latin in those places to be better, truer and more sincere then the Greeke.

Superfluities in the Greeke, vvhich Erasmus calleth trifling and rash additions.

Vvherevpon vve conclude of these premisses, that it is no derogation to the vulgar Latin text, which we translate, to disagree from the Greeke text, whereas it may not withstanding be not onely as good, but also better. and this the Aduersarie him self, their greatest and latest translatour of the Greeke, doth auouch against Erasmus in behalfe of the old vulgar Latin translation, in these notorious vvordes. How vvvorithely and vvithout cause (saith he) doth Erasmus blame the old Interpreter as dissenting from the Greeke? he dissented, I graunt, from those Greeke copies vvhich he had gotten: but vve haue found, not in one place, that the same in-

interpretation which he blameth, is grounded upon the authoritie of other Greeke copies, & those most auncient. Yea in some number of places we haue obserued, that the reading or the Latin text of the old Interpreter, though it agree not sometime with our Greeke copies yet it is much more conuenient, for that it seemeth he foloweth some better and truer copie. Thus far Beza. In vvch vvordes he vnvvittingly, but most truly, iustifieth and defendeth the old vulgar Translation against him self and al other cauillers, that accuse the same, because it is not alwaies agreable to the Greeke text: Vvhereas it vvvas translated out of other Greeke copies (partly extant, partly not extant at this day) either as good and as auncient, or better and more auncient, such as S. Augustine speaketh of, calling them doctiores & diligentiores, the more learned and diligent Greeke copies, vvwherevnto the latin translations that faile in any place, must needs yield. Li. 2. de doct. Christ. c. 15.

Vvhen the Fathers say, that the Latin text must yield to the Greeke, & be corrected by it, they meane the true and vncorrupted Greeke text.

And if it were not to long to exemplifie and proue this, which would require a treatise by it self, we could shew by many and most cleere examples through out the new Testament, these sundrie meanes of iustifying the old translation.

The vulgar Latin Translation, is many waies iustified by most auncient Greeke copies, & the Fathers.

First, if it agree with the Greeke text (as commonly it doth, and in the greatest places cōcerning the controuersies of our time, it doth most certainly) so far the Aduersaries haue not to complaine: vnles they wil complaine of the Greeke also, as they doe Ia. 4. v. 2. and 1 Pet. 3. v. 21. where the vulgar Latin foloweth exactly the Greeke text, saying, Occiditis: and Quod vos similia formae, &c. But Beza in both places correcteth the Greeke text also as false.

2 If it disagree here and there from the Greeke text, it agreeth with an other Greeke copie set in the margent, whereof see examples in the foresaid Greeke Testaments of Robert Steuens and Crispin through out. namely 2 Pet. 1. 10. Satagite vt per bona opera certam vestram vocationem faciatis. διὰ τῶν ἀγαθῶν ἔργων. and Marc. 8. v. 7. Et ipsos benedixit ἐν λαγύσας αὐτῶν.

3 If these marginal Greeke copies be thought lesse authentical then the Greeke text, the Aduersaries them selues tel vs the cōtrarie, vvho in their translations often folow the marginal copies, and forsake the Greeke text. as in the examples aboue mentioned Ro. 11. Apoc. 11. 2 Tim. 2. Luc. 5. &c. it is euident.

4 If al Erasmus Greeke copies haue not that which is in the vulgar Latin, Beza had copies which haue it, and those most auncient (as he saith) & better. And if al Bezas copies faile in this point and wil not helpe vs, Gagneie the Frenche kings preacher, and he that might commaund in al the kings libraries, he found Greeke copies that haue iust according to the vulgar Latin: & that in such place as would seeme otherwise lesse probable. as Iac. 3. vers. 5. Ecce quantus ignis quam magnam siluam incendit! Behold how much fire vvhath a great vvood it kindleth! A man would thinke it must be rather as in the Greeke text, A litle fire vvhath a great vvood it kindleth! But an approued auncient Greeke copie alleaged by Gagneie, hath as it is in the vulgar Latin. And if Gagneis copies also faile sometime, there Beza and Crispin supply Greeke copies fully agreable to the vulgar Latin, as ep. Iuda vers. 5. Scientes semel omnia, quoniam Iesus & c. and vers. 19. Segregant semetipsos. likewise 2 Ephes 2. Quod elegeris vos primitias: ἀπαρχάς in some Greeke copies. Gagn. & 2 Cor. 9. Vestra emulatio, ὁ ὑμῶν ἰσχύς. so hath one Greeke copie. Beza.

Codex vaticanus. ἰσχύς πῦρ πᾶσα, ὅτι ἰσχύς. ἰσχύς

5 If al their copies be not sufficient, the auncient Greeke fathers had copies and expounded them, agreable to our vulgar Latin, as 1 Tim. 6. 10. Prophanas vocum nouitates. So readeth S. Chrystom and expoundeth it against Heretical & erroneous nouelties. Yet now we know no Greeke copie that readeth so.

6. Vvhere there is no such signe or token of any auncient Greeke copie in the fathers, yet these later Interpreters tel vs, that the old Interpreter did follow some other Greeke copie. as Marc. 7, 3. Nisi crebro lauerint. Erasmus thinketh that he did read in the Greeke ἄνωγν, often: and Beza and others commend his coniecture, yea and the English Bibles are so translated. vvhereas nowv it is ἄνωγν vvhich signifieth the length of the arme vp to the elbowv. And vvho vvould not thinke that the Euangelist should say, The Pharisees vvash often, because othervvise they eate not, rather then thus, Vnles they vvash vp to the elbowv, they eate not?

Hierom in this last place readeth, Sic cum volo manere, li. 1. ad. i. Iouin. it is according to no Greeke copie nowv extant. And if vet there be some doubt, that the readings of some Greeke or Latin fathers, differing from the vulgar Latin, be a checke or condemnation to the same: let Beza, that is, let the Aduersarie him self, tel vs his opinion in this case also. Vvhoſoever, saith he, shal take vpon him to correct these things (speaking of the vulgar Latin translation) out of the auncient fathers writings, either Greeke or Latin, vnles he doe it very circumspectly and aduiseably, he shal surely corrupt al rather then amend it, because it is not to be thought, that as often as they cited any place, they did alvvayes looke into the booke, or number euery vvord. As if he should say, Vve may not by and by thinke that the vulgar Latin is faultie and to be corrected, vvhen vve read othervvise in the fathers either Greeke or Latin, because they did not alvvayes exactly cite the vvordes, but folovved some commodious and godly sense thereof.

The few and small faultes negligently crept into the vulgar Latin translation.

Thus then vve see that by al meanes the old vulgar Latin translation is approved good, and better then the Greeke text it self, and that there is no cause vwhy it should giue place to any other text, copies, or readings. Marie if there be any faultes evidently crept in by those that heretofore wrote or copied out the Scriptures (as there be some) them vve graunt no lesse, then vve vwould graunt faultes novv a daies committed by the Printer, and they are exactly noted of Catholike vvriters, namely in al Plantins Bibles set forth by the Diuines of Louan: and the holy Council of Trent vvilleteth that the vulgar Latin text ^{seff. 4.} be in such pointes thoroughly mended, & so to be most authentical. Such faultes are these, In fide, for, in fine: Prascientiam, for, prascentiam: Suscipiens, for, Suspiciens: and such like very rare. vvwhich are euident corruptions made by the copistes, or grovven by the similitude of vvordes. These being taken avvay, vvwhich are no part of those corruptions and differences before talked of, vve translate that text vvwhich is most sincere, and in our opinion and as vve haue proued, incorrupt. The Aduersaries contrarie, translate that text, vvwhich them selues confesse both by their vvritings and doings, to be corrupt in a number of places, & more corrupt then our vulgar Latin, as is before declared.

The Caluinists confessing the Greeke to be most corrupt, yet translate that only, and hold that only for authentical Scripture.

And if vve vwould here stand to recite the places in the Greeke vvwhich Beza pronounceth to be corrupted, vve should make the Reader to vvonder, howv they can either so plead othervvise for the Greeke text, as though there vvcre no other truth of the nev vTestament but that: or howv they translate onely that (to deface, as they thinke, the old vulgar Latin) vvwhich them selues so shamfully disgrace, more then the vulgar Latin, inuventing corruptions vvwhere none are, nor can be, in such vniuersal consent of al both Greeke and Latin copies. For example, Mat. 10. The first Simon, Vvho is called Peter. I thinke (saith Beza) this vvord πρωτος, first, hath been added to the text of some that vwould establish Peters Primacie. Againe Luc. 22. The Chalice, that is shed for you. It is most likely (saith he) that these vvordes being sometime but a marginal note, came by corruption out of the margent into the text. Againe Act. 7. Figures vvwhich they made, to adore them. It may be suspected (saith he) that these vvordes, as many other, haue crept by corruption into the text out of the margent. And 1 Cor. 15. He thinketh the Apostle said not vincis, victorie, as it is in al Greeke copies, but vances, consension. And Act. 13. he calleth it a manifest errour, that in the Greeke it is, 400 yeres, for, 300. And Act. 7. v. 16. he reckeneth vvp a vvhole catalogue of corruptions. namely Marc. 12. v. 42. ἰσὶν κρημνιστος, Vvwhich is a farthing: and Act. 8. v. 26. ἀβραάμ, This is deserr. and Act. 7. v. 16 the name of Abraham, & such like. Al vvwhich he thinketh to haue been added or altered into the Greeke text by corruption.

^{In Annot. No. Test. an. 1556.}

But among other places, he laboureth exceedingly to proue a great corruption Act. 7. v. 14. vvwhere it is said (according to the Septuaginta, that is, the Greeke text of the old Testament) that Iacob vvvent dovvn into Egypt vvwith 75 soules. And Luc. 3. v. 36. he thinketh these vvordes τιῦ καϊνᾶν, Vvwhich vvvas of Cainan, to be so false, that he leaueth them cleane out in * both his editions of the nev vTestament: saying, that he is bold so to doe, by the authoritie of Moytes. Vvwhereby he vvil lignifie, that it is not in the Hebrue text of Moytes or of the old Testament, and therefore it is false in the Greeke of the nev vTestament. Vvwhich consequence of theirs (for it is common among them and comment, must of cerneth al Scriptures) if it vvcre true, al places of the Greeke text of the nev vTestament, cited out of the old according to the Septuaginta, and not according ding to the Hebrue (vvhich they know are very many) should be false. and so by tying them selues onely to the Hebrue in the old Testamēt, they are forced to forsake the Greeke of the newv: or if they vvil mainteine the Greeke of the newv, they must forsake sometime the Hebrue in the old. but this argument shal be forced against them els vvhere.

They standing precisely vpon the Hebrue of the old, and Greeke text of the nev vTestament, must of force denie the one of them.

By this litle, the Reader may see vvhath gay patrones they are of the Greeke text, and how litle cause they haue in their owne iudgements to translate it, or vaunt of it, as in derogation of the vulgar Latin translation, & how easily we might answer them in a word, why we translate not the Greeke: forsooth because it is so infinitely corrupted. But the truth is, we do by no meanes graūt it so corrupted as they say, though in comparifon we know it lesse sincere & incorrupt then the vulgar Latin, and for that cause and others before alleaged we preferre the said Latin, and haue translated it.

They say the Greeke is more corrupt then vve vvil graunt them.

If yet there remaine one thing which perhaps they wil say, when they can not answer our reasons aforesaid: to wit, that we preferre the vulgar Latin before the Greeke text, because the Greeke maketh more against vs: we protest that as for other causes we preferre the Latin, so in this respect of making for vs or against vs, we allow the Greeke as much as the Latin, yea in fundrie places more then the Latin, being assured that they haue not one, and that we haue many aduantages in the Greeke more then in the Latin, as by the Annotations of this new Testament shal evidently appeare: namely in al such places where they dare not translate the Greeke, because it is for vs & against them. as when they translate, δικτυώματα, ordinances, and not, iustifications, and that of purpose as Beza confesseth Luc. 1, 6. παραδίδας, ordinances or instructions, and not traditions, in the better part. 2 Thess. 2, 15. προϋβίβλους, Elders, and not Priests: βίβλα, images rather then idols. and especially when S. Luke in the Greeke so maketh for vs (the vulgar Latin being indifferent for them and vs) that Beza faith it is a corruption crept out of the margent into the text. Vvhat neede these absurd diuises and false dealings with the Greeke text, if it made for them more then for vs, yea if it made not for vs against them? But that the Greeke maketh more for vs, see 1 Cor. 7. In the Latin, Defraude not one another, but for a time, that you giue your selues to prayer. in the Greeke, to fasting and prayer. Act. 10, 30. in the Latin Cornelius faith, from the fourth day past vntil this houre I was praying in my house, and behold a man &c. in the Greeke, I was fasting, and praying. 1 Io. 5, 18. in the Latin, Vve know that every one which is borne of God, sinneth not. but the generation of God preserueth him &c. in the Greeke, but he that is borne of God preserueth himself. Apoc. 22, 14. in the Latin, Blessed are they that wash their garmets in the blood of the lambe &c. in the Greeke, Blessed are they that doe his commaundements. Rom. 8, 38. Certus sum &c. I am sure that neither death nor life, nor other creature is able to separate vs from the charitie of God. as though he vvere assured, or we might and should assure our selues of our predestination. in the Greeke, πίπισμαι, I am probably persuaded that neither death nor life &c. In the Euangelists about the Sacrifice and B. Sacrament, in the Latin thus: This is my blood that shal be shed for you: and in S. Paul, This is my body which shal be betrayed or deliuered for you: both being referred to the time to come and to the sacrifice on the crosse. in the Greeke, This is my blood which is shed for you: and, my body which is broken for you: both being referred to that present time when Christ gaue his body and blood at his supper, then sheading the one and breaking the other, that is, sacrificing it sacramentally and mystically. Loe these and the like our aduantages in the Greeke, more then in the Latin.

We preferre not the vulgar Latin text, as making more for vs.

The Greeke text maketh for vs more then the vulgar Latin.

The Protestants condemning the old vulgar translation as making for vs, condemne them
selues.

But is the vulgar translation for al this Papistical, & therefore do we follow it? (for so some of them call it, and say it is * the worst of al other.) If it be, the Greeke (as you see) is more, and so both Greeke and Latin and consequently the holy Scripture of the new Testament is Papistical. Againe if the vulgar Latin be Papistical, Papistrice is very auncient, and the Church of God for so many hundred yeres wherein it hath vsed and allowed this translation, hath been Papistical. But wherein is it Papistical? forsooth in these phrases and speeches, Pœnitentiam agite. Sacramentum hoc magnum est. AVE GRATIA PLENA. Talibus hostiis promeretur Deus. and such like. Firil, doth not the Greeke say the same? see the Annotations vpon these places. Secondly, could he translate these things Papistically or partially, or rather prophetically, so long before they were in controuersie? thirdly, doth he not say for, pœnitentiam agite, in an other place, pœnitementi: and doth he not translate other mysteries, by the vvord, Sacramentum, as Apoc. 17; Sacramentum mulieris: and as he translateth one vvord, Gratia plena, so doth he not translate the very like vvord, plenus vlceribus; vvhich them selues do follow also? is this also Papistrice? Vhen he said Heb. 10. 29. Quanto deteriora merebitur supplicia &c. and they like it vvell enough: might he not haue said according to the same Greeke vvord, Vigilate vt mereamini fugere ista omnia & stare ante filium hominis. Luc. 21. 36. and, Qui merebuntur saculum illud & resurrectionem ex mortuis &c. Luc. 20. 35. and, Tribulationes quas sustinetis, vt mereamini regnum Dei, pro quo et patimini. 2 Thess. 1. 5. Might he not (we say) if he had partially affected the vvord merite, haue vsed it in al these places, according to his and * your owne translation of the same Greeke vvord Hebr. 10. 29? Vvhich he doth not, but in al these places saith simply, Vt digni habeamini, and, Qui digni habeantur. And how can it be iudged Papistical or partial, when he saith, Talibus hostiis promeretur Deus, Heb. 13? Vvas Primasius also S. Augustines scholer, a Papist, for vsing this text, and al the rest, that haue done the like? Vvas S. Cyprian a Papist, for vsing so often this speech, promereri Dominum iustis operibus, pœnitentia, &c? or is there any difference, but that S. Cyprian vseth it as a deponent more latinly, the other as a passiue lesse finely? Vvas it Papistrice, to say Senior for Presbyter, Ministrantibus for sacrificantibus or liturgiam celebrantibus, simulacbris for idolis, fides tuate saluum fecit sometime for sanum fecit? Or shal we thinke he was a Calvinist for translating thus, as they thinke he was a Papist, when any vvord soundeth for vs?

It is void of al
partialitie.

The Papistrice thereof (as they terme it) is in the very sentences of the Holy Ghost, more then in the translatiō.

Againe, was he a Papist in these kinde of vvordes onely, and was he not in whole sentences? as, Tibi dabo clauas, &c. Quicquid solueris in terra, erit solutum & in cœlis. and, Quorum remisieris peccata, remittuntur eis. and, Tunc redet vnique secundum opera sua and, Nunquid poterit fides saluare eum? Ex operibus iustificatur homo & non ex fide tantum. and, Nubere volunt, damnationem habentes, quia primam fidem irritam fecerunt. and, Mandata eius graua non sunt. and, Aspexit in remunerationem. Are al these and such like, Papistical translations, because they are most plaine for the Catholike faith which they call Papistrice? Are they not vvord for vvord as in the Greeke, and the very vvordes of the holy Ghost? And if in these there be no accusatiō of Papistical partiality, vvhich in the other? Lastly, are the auncient fathers, General Councils, the Churches of al the west part, that vse al these speeches & phrases now so many hundred yeres, are they al Papistical? Be it so, and let vs in the name of God follow them, speake as they spake, translate as they translated, interpret as they interpreted, because we beleue as they beleued. And thus far for defense of the old vulgar Latin translation, and why we translated it before al others: Now of the maner of translating the same.

IN THIS OVR TRANSLATION, because we wish it to be most sincere, as becometh a Catholike translation, and haue endeoured so to make it: we are very precise & religious in following our copie, the old vulgar approved Latin: not onely in sense, which we hope we alwaies doe, but sometime in the very wordes also and phraes, which may seeme to the vulgar Reader & to common English eares not yet acquainted therewith, rudenesse, or ignorance: but to the discrete Reader that deepeiy weigheth and considereth the importance of sacred wordes and speaches, and how easily the voluntarie Translatour may misse the true sense of the Holy Ghost, we doubt not but our consideration and doing therein, shal seeme reasonable and necessarie: yea and that all sortes of Catholike Readers wil in short time thinke that familiar, which at the first may seeme strange, & wil esteeme it more, when they shal * other wise be taught to vnderstand it, then if it were the common knowen English.

The maner of this translation, and what hath been obserued therein.

* See the last Table at the end of the booke.

For example, vve translate often thus, Amen. amen, I say vnto you. Vvhich as yet seemeth strange. but after a while it wil be as familiar, as Amen in the end of all praieres and Psalmes. and euen as when we end with, Amen, it soundeth far better then, so be it: so in the beginning, Amen Amen, must needs by vs and custom sound far better, then, Verily verily. Vvhich in deede doth not expresse the asseueration and assurance signified in this Hebrue word. besides that it is the solemne and vsual word of our Sauour *to expresse a vehement asseueration, Certaine wordes not English nor as yet familiar in the English tongue.

See annot. 1o. 6. 8. v. 34. & Apoc. c. 19. v. 4.

and therefore is not changed, neither in the Syriake nor Greeke, nor vulgar Latin Testament, but is preserued and vsed of the Euangelistes and Apostles them selues. euen as Christ spake it, propter sanctiorem auctoritatem, as S. Augustine saith of this and of Alleluia, for the more holy and sacred auctoritie thereof, li. 2. Doct. Christi. c. 11. And therefore do we keepe the word Alleluia. Apoc. 19. as it is both in Greeke and Latin yea and in all the English translations, though in their booke of common praier they translate it, Praise ye the Lord. Againe, if Hosanna, Raca, Belial, and such like be yet vntranslated in the English bibles,

Amen.

Alleluia.

No. Test. an. 1580. Bib. an. 1577.

why may not we say, Corbana, and Parascene: specially when they Englishing this later thus, the preparation of the Sabbooth, put three wordes more into the text, then the Greeke word doth signifie. Mat. 27, 62. And others saying thus, After the day of preparing, make a cold translation and short of the sense: as if they should translate, Sabbooth, the resting. for, * Parascene is as solemne a word for the Sabbooth eue, as Sabbooth is for the Iewes seuenth day. and now among Christians much more solemner, taken for Good-friday onely. These wordes then we thought it far better to keepe in the text, and to tel their signification in the margent or in a table for that purpose, then to disgrace bothe the text & them with translating them. Such are also these wordes, The Pasche. The feast of

Pasche.

Bib. 1577. Mat. 26. 17.

Azymes. The bread of Proposition. Vvhich they translate The Pasceouer, The feast of sweet bread, The shevv bread. But if Pentecost Act. 2 be yet vntranslated in their bibles, and seemeth not strange: why should not Pasche and Azymes so remaine also, being solemne feastes, as Pentecost was: or why should they English one rather then the other? specially whereas Pasceouer at the first was as strange, as Pasche may seeme now, and perhaps as many now vnderstand Pasche, as Pasceouer. and as for Azymes, when they English it, the feast of sweet bread, it is a false interpretation of the word, & nothing expresseth that which belongeth to the feast, concerning vnleauened bread. And as for their terme of shevv bread, it is very strange and ridiculous. Againe, if Profelyte be a receiued word in the English bibles Mat. 23. Act. 2: why may not we be bold to say, Neophyte. 1 Tim. 3? specially when they translating it into English, do falsely expresse the signifi-

THE PREFACE

cation of the word thus, a yong scholer. Vvhereas it is a peculiar word to signify them that were lately baptized, as Catechumenus, signifieth the newly instructed in faith not yet baptized, who is also a yong scholer rather than the other, and many that haue been old scholers, may be Neophytes by differing baptisme. And if Phylacteries be allowed for English Mat. 23, we hope that Didragmes also, Prepuce, Paraclete, and such like, wil easily grow to be currant and familiar. And in good sooth there is in al these such necessitie, that they can not conueniently be translated. as when S. Paul saith, concisio, non circumcisio: Phil. 3. how can we but folow his very wordes and allusion? And how is it possible to expresse Euangelizo, but as vve do, Euangelize? for Euangelium being the Gospel, what is, Euangelizo or so Euangelize, but to shew the glad tydings of the Gospel, of the time of grace, of al Christs benefites? Al which signification is lost, by translating as the English bibles do, I bring you good tydings. Luc. 2. 10. Therefore we say Depositum, 1 Tim. 6. and, He exinanised him self, Philip. 2. and, You haue restorished, Philip. 4. and, to exhaust, Hebr. 9. 28. because vve can not possibly attaine to expresse these vvordes fully in English, and vve thinke much better, that the reader staying at the difficultie of them, I should take an occasion to looke in the table folovving, or othervvise to aske the full meaning of them, then by putting some vsual English vvordes that expresse them not, so to deceiue the reader. Sometime also vve doe it for an other cause. as vven we say, The aduent of our Lord, and, Imposing of handes. because one is a solemne time, the other a solemne action in the Catholike Church: to signify to the people, that these and such like names come out of the very Latin text of the Scripture. So did Penance, doing penance, Chalice, Priest, Deacon, Traditions, altar, host, and the like (vvhich vve exactly keepe as Catholike termes) procede euen from the very vvordes of Scripture.

Catholike termes proceeding from the very text of Scripture.

Moreouer, we presume not in hard places to mollifie the speeches or phrases, but religiously keepe them vvord for vvord, and point for point, for feare of missing, or restraining the sense of the holy Ghost to our phantasie. as Eph. 6.

Certaine hard speeches and phrases.

Against the spirituals of vvickednes in the celestials. and, Vvhat to me and thee woman? 10. 2.

whereof see the Annotation vpon this place. and 1 Pet. 2. As infants euen now borne, reasonable, milke vvithout guile desire ye. Vve do so place, reasonable, of purpose, that it may be indifferēt both to infants going before, as in our Latin text: or to milke that folovveth after, as in other Latin copies and in the Greeke.

The Protestants presumptuous boldnes and libertie in translating.

10. 3 vve translate, The spirit breatheth vvhere he vvil &c. leauing it indifferent to signify either the holy Ghost, or vvinde: vvhich the Protestants translating, vvinde, take avvay the other sense more common and vsual in the auncient fathers. Vve translate Luc. 8. 23. They vvere filled, not adding of our ovvne, vvith vvater, to mollifie the sentence, as the Protestants doe. and c. 22. This is the chalice, the new Testament &c. not, This chalice is the new Testament. likevvise, Mar. 13. Those daies shal be such tribulation &c. not as the Aduersaries, In those daies, both our text and theirs being othervvise. likevvise Iac. 4. 6. And giueth greater grace, leauing it indifferent to the Scripture, or to the holy Ghost, both going before. Vvhereas the Aduersaries to to boldly & presumptuously adde, saying, The Scripture giueth, taking avvay the other sense, which is far more probable. likevvise Hebr. 12. 21 vve translate, So terrible vvvas it vvhich vvvas seen, Moyses said &c. neither doth Greeke or Latin permit vs to adde, that Moyses said, as the Protestants presume to doe. So vve say, Men brethren, A vviddow vvoman, A vvoman a sister, Iames of Alphaum, and the like. Sometime also we folow of purpose the Scriptures phrase, as, The bel of fire, according to Greeke and

Latin. vvch we might say perhaps, the fry bel, by the Hebrue phraſe in ſuch ſpeeches, but not, bel fire, as commonly it is tranſlated. Likevvife Luc. 4, 36. Vvhat vvord is this, that in povver and authoritic he cōmaundeth the vncleane ſpirits? as alſo, Luc. 2. Let vs paſſe ouer, and ſee the vvord that is done. Vvhere we might ſay, thing, by the Hebrue phraſe, but there is a certaine maieltie and more ſignification in theſe ſpeeches, and therfore both Greeke & Latin keepe them, although it is no more the Greeke or Latin phraſe, then it is the Engliſh. And vvhy ſhould vve be ſquamish at nev vvordes or phraſes in the Scripture, vvch are neceſſarie: vvhen vve do eaſily admit and ſolovv nev vvordes coynd in court and in courtly or other ſecular vvritings?

Vve adde the Greeke in the margent for diuers cauſes. Sometime vvhen the ſenſe is hard, that the learned reader may conſider of it and ſee if he can helpe him ſelf better then by our tranſlation. as Luc. 11. Nolite extollis. μὴ μάλιστα οὐδὲ and againe, Quod ſuper eſt date eleemoſynam. τὰ ἐπιπλεονάζοντα. Sometime to take away the ambiguitye of the Latin or Engliſh, as Luc. 11. Et domus ſupra domum cader. Vvch we muſt needes Engliſh, and houſe vpon houſe, ſhal fall. by the Greeke, the ſenſe is not, one houſe ſhal fal vpon an other. but, if one houſe riſe vpon it ſelf, that is, againſt it ſelf, it ſhal periſh, according as he ſpeaketh of a kingdom deuided againſt it ſelf, in the wordes before. And Act. 14. Sacerdos Iouis qui erat. in the Greeke, qui, is referred to Iupiter. Sometime to ſatiſhe the reader, that might otherwiſe conceiue the tranſlation to be falſe. as Philip. 4. v. 6. But in euery thing by prayer, &c. ἐν παντὶ προσιυχῆ. not, in al praier, as in the Latin it may ſeeme. Sometime when the Latin neither doth, nor can, reache to the ſignification of the Greeke word, we adde the Greeke alſo as more ſignificant. Illi ſoli ſeruiet, him only ſhalt thou ſerue, λατρεύουσιν. And Act. 6. Nicolas a ſtranger of Antioche, προσηλυτός. and, Ro. 9. The ſeruite, ἡ λατρεία. and Eph. 1. to perſiſte, inſtaurare omnia in Chriſto, κατακαταλαύσασθαι. And, Vvherein he hath gratified vs, ἐχαρίσασιν. & Eph. 6. Put on the armour, παραπολίω. and a number the like. Sometime, when the Greeke hath two ſenſes, and the Latin but one, we adde the Greeke. 2. Cor. 1. By the exhortation vvherevvith vve alſo are exhorted. the Greeke ſignifieth alſo conſolation &c. and 2 Cor. 10. But hauing hope of your faith increaſing, to be &c. vvhere the Greeke may alſo ſignifie, as or vven your faith increaſeth. Sometime for aduantage of the Catholike cauſe, when the Greeke maketh for vs more then the Latin. as, Seniores, πρεσβυτέρους. Vt digni habeamini. ἵνα ἀξιώσῃτε. Qui effundetur, τὸ ἐκχυμένον, 1 Cor. 11. Præcepta, παραδείσεις. & Io. 21. τὸ μαρτυρῆσαι, Paſce & rege. And ſometime to ſhew the falſe tranſlation of the Heretike. as when Beza ſaith, Hoc poculum in meo ſanguine qui τὸ ποτήριον ἐν τῷ ἐμῷ αἵματι τὸ ἐκχυμένον. Luc. 22, & Quē oportet celo cōtineri. ὃν δεῖ ἐν οὐρανῷ ἀρκεῖσθαι, Act. 3. Thus we vie the Greeke diuers waies, & eſteeme of it as it is worthie, & take al cōmodities thereof for the better vnderſtāding of the Latin, vvch being a tranſlation, can not al waies attaine to the ful ſenſe of the principal tonge, as vve ſee in al tranſlations..

The Greeke added often in the margent for many cauſes.

The Latin text ſometime noted in the margent.

Item vve adde the Latin vvord ſometime in the margent, vvhen either vve can not fully expreſſe it. (as Act. 8. They tooke order for Steuens funeral, Cura uerunt Stephanum. and, Al take not this vvord, Non omnes capiunt.) or vvhen the reader might thinke, it can not be as vve tranſlate. as, Luc. 8. A ſtorme of winde deſcended into the lake, and they vvore filled, & complebantur. and Io. 5. vvhen Ieſus knevv that he had novv a long time, quia iam multum tempus haberes. meaning, in his infirmitie,

This precise folovving of our Latin text, in neither adding nor diminiſhing, is the cauſe vvhy we ſay not in the title of bookes, in the firſt page, S. Matthey, S. Paul: because it is so neither in Greeke nor Latin. though in the topes of the leaves folovving, where vve may be bolder, we adde, S. Matthew &c. to satisfie the reader. Much vnlike to the Protestants our Aduersaries, vvhich make no scruple to leaue out the name of Paul in the title of the Epistle to the Hebrues, though it be in euery Greeke booke vvhich they translate. And their most authorized English Bibles leaue out (Catholike) in the title of S. Iames Epistle and the rest, vvhich vvere famously knowen in the primitive Church by the name of Catholica Epistola. Euseb. hist. Eccl. li. 2 c. 22.

Bib. an. 1579. 1580. an. 1577 1562.

An other reading in the margin:

Item vve giue the Reader in places of some importance, an other reading in the margin, specially vvhhen the Greeke is agreeable to the same. as Io. 4. transiet de morte ad vitam. Other Latin copies haue, transiit, and so it is in the Greeke.

The pointing sometime altered.

Vve binde not our selues to the pointes of any one copie, print, or edition of the vulgar Latin, in places of no controuersie, but folovv the pointing most agreeable to the Greeke and to the fathers commentaries. As Col. 1, 10. Ambulantes dignè Deo, per omnia placentes. Vvalking vvorthy of God, in al things pleasing. ἄξιως τοῦ κυρίου εἰς πάντας ἀποσκουαυ. Eph. 1, 17. Vve point thus, Deus Dominus nostri Iesu Christi, pater gloriae. as in the Greeke, and S. Chrysoptom, & S. Hierom both in text and commentaries. Vvhich the Catholike reader specially must marke, lest he finde fault, vvhhen he seeth our translation disagree in such places from the pointing of his Latin Testament.

The margin reading sometime preferred before the text.

Vve translate sometime the word that is in the Latin margin, and not that in the text, when by the Greeke or the fathers we see it is a manifest fault of the vvriters heretofore, that mistooke one word for an other. As, In sine, not, in side, 1. Pet. 3. v. 8. praesentiam, not, praescientiam, 2 Pet. 1. v. 16. Heb. 13. latuerunt, not, placuerunt.

Thus we haue endeouored by al meanes to satisfie the indifferent reader, and to helpe his vnderstanding euery way, both in the text, and by Annotations: and vvithal to deale most sincerely before God and man, in translating and expounding the most sacred text of the holy Testament. Fare vvell good Reader, and if we profit the any vvhit by our poore paines let vs for Gods sake be partakers of thy deuout prayers, & together vvith humble and contrite hart call vpon our Sauour Christ to cease these troubles & stormes of his dereist spouse: in the meane time comforting our selues vvith this saying of S. Augustine: That Heretikes, vvhen they receiue power corporally to afflict the Church, doe exercise her patience: but vvhen they oppugne her onely by their euil doctrine or opinions, then they exercise her vvisedom. De ciuit. Dei li. 18. ca. 51.

The numbers in the inner margent, or els vvhvhere, ioyned to the citations of Scripture, if they be vvvritten thus, Gen. 4, 16. the first is the chapter, the second is the verse. If thus, Gen. 4. 16. both are the Chapters. If thus, Gen. 4, 16. 17. 18. the first is the chapter, al the rest, the verses. If thus, Gen. 4, 16. 5, 7. it signifieth, chap. 4. vers. 16. and chap. 5. vers. 7.

1 The infallible authoritie and excellencie of them aboue al other writings.

THe excellencie of the Canonical authoritie of the old and new Testament, is distinguished from the bookes of later writers: which being confirmed in the Apostles times, by the successions of Bishops, and propagations of Churches, is placed as it were in a certaine throne on high, wherevnto euery faithful & godly vnderstanding muist be subiect and obedient. There, if any thing moue or trouble thee as absurd, thou maicst not say, The author of this booke held not the truth: but, either the copie is faultie, or the Translatour erred, or thou vnderstandest not. But in the workes of them that wrote after ward, which are contained in infinite bookes, but are in no case equal to that most sacred authoritie of CANONICAL SCRIPTURES: in which soeuer of them is found euen the same truth, yet the authoritie is far vnequal.

2 The discerning of Canonical from not Canonical, and of their infallible truth, and sentie, cometh vnto vs, only by the credite vve giue vnto the CATHOLIKE CHVRCH: through vvhose comendation vve belecue both the Gospel and Christ him self. Vwhereas the Sectaries measure the matter by their fantasies and opinion.

S. Augustine cont. Epist. fundamenti cap. 5.

I for my part, vvould not belecue the Gospel, vnles the authoritie of the CATHOLIKE CHVRCH moued me. They therefore whom I obeyed saying, Beleeue the Gospel: vvhy should I not belecue them saying, Beleeue not * Manichæus? Choosè vvwhether thou vvilt. if thou wilt say, Beleeue the Catholikes: loe they vvarne me that I giue no credite vnto you: and therefore beleecuing them, I must needes not belecue thee. If thou say, Beleeue not the Catholikes: it is not the right vvay, by the Gospel to driue me to the faith of Manichæus, because I beleued ued the Gospel it self by the preaching of Catholikes.

Againe li. de vtilit. credend. cap. 14.

I see that concerning Christ him self, I haue beleueed none, but the confirmed and assured opinion of peoples and nations: and that these peoples haue on euery side possessed the mysteries of the CATHOLIKES CHVRCH. Vvhy should I not therfore most diligently require, specially among them, what Christ commaunded, by vvhose authoritie I vvas moued to beleuee, that Christ did commaund some profitable thing? Vvilt thou (ó Heretike) tel me better vvhat he said? vvhom I vvould not thinke to haue been at al, or to be, if I must beleuee, because thou saiest it. Vvhat grosse madnes is this, to say, Beleeue the Catholikes, that Christ is to be beleueed: and learne of vs, vvhat he said.

Thou seeest then in this matter what force the authoritie of the CATHOLIKES CHVRCH hath, vvhich euen from the most grounded and founded seates of the Apostles, is establihed vntil this day, by the line of Bishops succeding one an other, & by the consent of so many peoples. Vvhereas thou saiest, This is Scripture, or, this is such an Apostles, that is not: because this foundeth for me, and the other against me. Thou then art the rule of truth. vvhatsoever is against thee, is not true.

- 3 No heretikes haue right to the Scriptures, but are vsurpers: the Catholike Church being the true ovvner and faithiul keeper of them. Heretikes abuse them, corrupt them, and viterly seeke to abolishe them, though they pretend the contrarie.

Tertullian li. De præscriptionibus, bringeth in the CATHOLIKES CHVRCH speaking thus to all Heretikes.

Vvho are you; vvhen, and from vvhence came you? vvhat doe you in my possession, that are none of mine? by vvhat right (Marcion) doest thou cut dovvne my wood? vvho gaue the licence (ó Valentine) to turne the course of my fountaines? by vvhat authoritie (Apelles) doest thou remoue my boundes? and * you the rest, vvhy do yovv sovve and feede for these companions at your pleasure? It is my possession, I possesse it of old, I haue assured origins thereof, euen from those authors vvwhose the thing vvas. I am the heire of the Apostles. As they provided by their testament, as they comitted it to my credite, as they adiured me, so doe I hold it. You surely they disherited alvvayes and haue cast you of, as forainers, as enemies.

Againe in the same booke.

Encountering vvith such by Scriptures, auaileth nothing, but to ouerturne a mans stomake or his braine. This heresie receiueth not certaine Scriptures: and if it do receiue some, yet by adding and taking avvay, it peruerteth the same to serue their purpose: and if it receiue any, it doth not receiue them vvholly: and if after a sort it receiue them vvholly, neuertheles by diuising diuers expositions, it turneth them cleane an other vvay &c.

- 4 Yet do they vaunt them selues of Scriptures exceedingly, but they are neuer the more to be trusted for that.

S. Hierom aduersus Luciferianos in fine.

Let them not flatter them selues, if they icceme in their ovvne conceits to affirme that vvhich they say, out of the chapters of Scripture: vvhercas the Diuel also spake some thinges out of the Scriptures, and the Scriptures consist not in the reading, but in the vnderstanding.

Vincentius Livinensis li. cone. prophanas hæresum Nouationes.

Here perhaps some man may aske, whether heretikes also vse not the testimonies of diuine Scripture. Yes in deede do they, and that vehemently. For thou shalt see them flie through euery one of the sacred bookes of the Law, through Moyses, the bookes of the kings, the Psalmes, the Apostles, the Gospels, the Prophets. For, whether among their owne fellowes, or strangers: whether priuatly, or publikely: whether in talke, or in their bookes: whether in bankets, or in the streates: they (I say) alludge nothing of their owne, which they endeouour not to shadow vvith the wordes of Scripture also. Read the vvorkes of Paulus Samosatenus, of Priscillian, of Eunomian, of Iouinian,* of the other plagues & peltilences: thou shalt finde an infinite heape of examples, no page in a manner omitted or voide, which is not painted and coloured with the sentences of the new or old testament. But they are so much the more to be taken heede of, & to be feared, the more secretly they lurke vnder the shadowes of Gods diuine law. For they knowv their stinkes vvould not easily please any man almost, if they were breathed out nakedly & simply them selues alone, & therefore they sprinkle them as it vvere vvith certaine pretious spices of the heauenly vvord: to the end that he vvhich would easely despise the error of man, may not easely contemne the oracles of God. So that they doe like vnto them, vvhich vvhen they vvil prepare certaine bitter potions for children, do first anoint the brimmes of the cup vvith honie, that the vnwarie age, vvhen it shal first feele the svvetnes, may not feare the bitternes.

* Of Caluin, of Iuel, of the rest.

§ The cause vvhy, the Scriptures being perfit, yet vve vse other Ecclesiastical vvritings and tradition.

Vincentius Livinensis in his golden booke before cited, aduersus prophanas hæresum Nouationes.

Here some man perhaps may aske, for asmuch as the Canon of the Scriptures is perfit, and in all pointes very sufficient in it self, vvhat neede is there, to ioyne therevnto the authoritic of the* Ecclesiastical vnderstanding? for this cause surely, for that all take not the holy Scripture in one and the same sense, because of the deepenes thereof. but the speaches thereof, some interpret one vvay, & some an other vvay, so that there may almost as many senses be picked out of it, as there be men. for, Nouatian doth expound it one vvay, and Sabelius, an other vvay, othervvise Donatus, othervvise Arius, Eunomius, Macedonius, othervvise Photinus, Apollinaris, Priscillianus, othervvise Iouinian, Pelagius, Celestius, lastly othervvise Nestorius.* And therefore very necessarie it is, because of so great vvindinges and turninges of diuers errors, that the line of Prophetical and Apostolical interpretation, be directed according to the rule of the Ecclesiastical and Catholike sense or vnderstanding.

* So he calleth the Churches sense, and the fathers interpretations of Scriptures.

* Othervvise Wicleffe, Luther, Caluin, Puritanes.

S. Basil li. de spiritu sancto cap. 27.

Of such articles of religion as are kept and preached in the Church, some vvere taught by the vvritten vvord, other some vve haue receiued by the tradition of the Apostles, deliuered vnto vs as it vvere from hand to hand in mysterie secretly: both vvhich be of one force to Christian religion: and this no man vvil deny that hath any litle skill of the Ecclesiastical rites or customes. for if vve goe about to reiect the customes not contened in Scripture, as being of smal force, vve shal vnnvittingly and vnavvares mangle the G O S P E L it self in the principal partes thereof, yea rather, vve shal abridge the very preaching of the Gospel, and bring it to a bare name.

THE SUMME OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.

THAT which was the summe of the Old Testament, to wit, Christ and his Church, as S. Augustine saith catechizing the ignorant: the very same is the summe of the New Testament also. For (as the same S. Augustine saith againe) In the Old Testament there is the occultation of the New: and in the New Testament there is the manifestation of the Old. And in another place: In the Old doth the New lye hidden, and in the New doth the Old lye open. And thereupon our Saviour said: I am not come to breake the Law or the Prophets, but to fulfill them. For assuredly I say vnto you, til heauen and earth passe, one iote or one tittle shall not passe of the Law, till all be fulfilled. In which wordes he sheweth plainly, that the new Testament is nothing els but the fulfilling of the old.

Aug. de cat. rud. cap. 3. 4.

Mat. 5.

Therefore to come to the partes: The Gospels doe tell of Christ himselfe (of whom the Old Testamēt did foretell) and that euen from his coming into the world, vnto his going out thereof againe. The Actes of the Apostles doe tell of his Church beginning at Hierusalem the headcitie of the Iewes, and of the propagation thereof to the Gentiles and their headcitie Rome. And the Apocalypic doth prophesie of it, euen to the consummation thereof, which shal be in the end of the world. The Epistles of the Apostles do treat partly of such questions as at that time were moued, partly of good life and good order.

The Summe of the 4 Gospels.

THe Gospels doe tell historically the life of our Lord Iesus, shewing plainly, * that he is Christ or the king of the Iewes, whom vntil then, at the time of the Old Testament, they had expected: and vntil that, that they of their owne mere malice and blindnes (the iniquitie beginning of the Seniors, but at the length the multitude also consenting) would not receaue him, but euer sought his death: which for the Redemption of the world, he at length permitted them to compass, they deseruing thereby most iustely to be refused of him, and so his Kingdom or Church to be taken away from them, and giuen to the Gentils. For the gathering of which Church after him, he chooseth Trruelue, and appointeth one of them to be the cheefe of al, vntil instructions both to them and him accordingly.

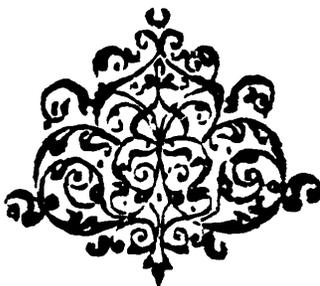

Io. 20, 31.

The storie hereof is vwritten by foure: vvhom in Exechiel and in the Apocalypse are likened to foure liuing creatures, euery one according as his booke beginneth. S. Matthevv to a Man, because he beginneth vwith the pedegree of Christ as he is man. S. Marke to a Lion, because he beginneth vwith the preaching of S. Iohn Baptist, as it were the roaring of a lion in the vwildernes. S. Luke to a Calfe, because he beginneth vwith a priest of the Old Testament (to wit, Zacharie the father of S. Iohn Baptist) vvhich Priesthood was to sacrifice calues to God. S. Iohn to an Egic, because he beginneth vwith the Diuinitie of Christ, flying so high as more is not possible.

Eze. 1. Apoc. 4.

The first three do report at large what Christ did in Galilee, after the imprisonment of S. Iohn Baptist. Wherefore S. Iohn the Euangelist writing after them all, doth omit his doings in Galilee (saue onely one, which they had not written of, the wonderful bread which he told the Capernautes he could and would giue, Io. 6.) and reporteth first, what he did while Iohn Baptist as yet was preaching and baptizing: then, after Iohns imprisoning, what he did in Iurie every yere about Easter. But of his Passion all foure do write at large.

Where it is to be noted, that from his baptizing (which is thought to haue been upon Trvelsithday, what time he was beginning to be about 30 yere old, Luk. 3.) vnto his passion, are numbred three monethes and three yeres, in which there were also 4 Easters.

The argument of S. Matthewes Gospel.

S Matthewes Gospel may be well diuided into five partes. The first parte, as touching the Infancie of our Lord Iesua: Chap. 1 and 2.

The second, of the preparation that was made to his manifestation: chap. 3. and a piece of the 4.

The third, of his manifesting of him selfe by preaching and miracles, and that in Galilee: the other piece of the 4. chap. vnto the 19.

The fourth, of his comming into Iurie, toward his Passion: chap. 19. and 20.

The fifth, of the Holy weeke of his Passion in Hierusalem: chap. 21 vnto the end of the booke.

Of S. Matthew we haue Mat. 9. Mar. 2. Lu. 5: How being before a Publican, he was called of our Lord, and made a Disciple. Then Luk. 6. Mar. 3. Mat. 10: How out of the whole number of the Disciples he was chosen to be one of the twelue Apostles. And out of them againe he was chosen (and none but he and S. Iohn) to be one of the foure Euangelistes. Among which four also, he was the first that wrote, about 8 or 10 yeres after Christes Ascension.

Hierom. adu. Iouin. and S. Greg. Nazianz. Ser. 20. de studio in pauperes, in initio.*

ANNOTATIONS

CHAP. II.

1. Behold.] Our Lordes apparition or Epiphantie to these Sages being Gentils, their Pilgrimage to him, and in them the first homage of Gentilitie done vnto him the twelfth day after his Natiuitie: and therefore is Twelfth day highly celebrated in the Catholike Church for ioy of the calling of vs Gentils. His baptisime also and first miracle are celebrated on the same day.

2. Starre.] Christs Natiuitie depended not vpon this starre, as the Priscillianists falsely surmised: but the starre vpon his Natiuitie, for the seruice wherof it was created. Grego. Ho. 10.

Pilgrimage. 2. Come to adore.] This coming so far of deuotion to visite and adore Christ in the place of his birth, was properly a Pilgrimage to his person: and Warranteth the faithful in the like kind of external worship done to holy persons, places, and things.

4. Inquired of them.] The high Priests were rightly consulted in quæstion of their law and religion, and be they neuer so ill, are often forced to say the truth by priuilege of their vocation: as here and after, they did concerning the true Meffias.

Adoratiō of the B. Sacrament. 11. Adored him.] This body (saith S. Chrysostom.) the Sages adored in the cribbe. Let vs at the least imitate them: thou seest him not now in the cribbe, but on the altar: not a woman holding him, but the Priest present, and the Holy Ghost powred out abundantly vpon the sacrifice. Ho. 24. in 1. Cor. Ho. 7. in Act. Ho. de sancto Philogonio.

11. Treasures.] These treasures are as it were the first fruites of those riches and gifts, which Psal. 71. (according to the Prophecies of Dauid and Esay) Gentilitie should offer to Christ and his Church, and now haue offered, specially from the time of Constanine the Great. As also these three kings.

Sages, being principal men of their Countrie, represent the whole state of Princes, kings, and Emperours, that were (according to the said Prophecies) to belecue in Christ, to humble them- selues to his crosse, to foster, enrich, adorne and defend his Church. Wherevpon it is also a very conuenient and agreeable tradition of antiquitie, and a receiued opinion among the faithful, * not lacking testimonies of ancient Writers, and much for the honour of our Saviour, that these three also were kings: to witte, either according to the state of those Countries, * where the Princes were were

Esther 1. Were Magi. and * Magi the greatest about the Prince: or as we read in the Scriptures, of Melchisedec king of Salem, and many other kings that dwelt within a small compass: or as * Iob three freendes are called kings. These are commonly called the three kings of Colen, because their bodies are there, translated thither from the East Countrey: their names are said to have been Gaipar, Melchior, Balasar.

11. Gifts.] These Sages were three, and their gifts three, and eche one offered euerie of the three, to expresse our faith of the Trinitie. The Gold, to signifie that he was a King: the frankincense, that he was God: the myrrhe, that he was to be buried as man. Aug. ser. 1. de Epiph.

15. Ous of Aegypt.] This place of the Prophete (and the like in the new Testament) here applied to Christ, whereas in the letter it might seeme otherwise, reacheth vs how to interpret the old Testament, and that the principal sense is of Christ and his Church.

16. Murdered.] By this example we learne how great credite we owe to the Church in Canonizing Saints, and celebrating their holy daies: by whose only warrant, without any word of Scripture, these holy Innocents have been honoured for Martyrs, and their holy day kept euer since the Apostles time, although they died not voluntarily, nor al perhaps circuncised, and some the children of Pagans. *Aug. ep. 28. Iohn Baptist by his Eremites life, by his preaching and baptisme, calleth al vnto penance, to prepare them to Christ. 10. He preacheth to the Tharijees and Sadducees, threatening 16 them (vntes they truly doe penance) reprobation here and damnation hereafter: and for saluation sendeth them to Christ and his baptisme. Which being far more excellent then Iohns, yet Christ him self among those penitents vouchsafeth to come vnto Iohns baptisme. Where he hath testimonie from heauen also.

- Eremites. 1. Desert.] Of this Word desert (in Greeke eremus) commeth the name Eremitages, and Eremites, that liue a religious and austere life in deserts and solitarie places, by the example of S. Iohn Baptist, whom the holy Doctōrs therefore call the Prince and as it were the author of such profession. S. Chryf. ho. 1 in Marcum & ho. de Io. Baptista. Hiero. ad Eustoch. de custod. virg. Isid. li. 2. c. 13 de diu off. Bernardus de excel. Io. Baptista. WhereWith the Protestants are so offended that * they say, S. Chrystostom spake rashly and vntruely. And no maruel, for whereas the Euangelist him self in this place maketh him a perfect paterne of penance and Eremitical life, for desert or wildeernes, for his rough and rude apparel, for abstaying from al delicate meates (according to our Sauours testimonie also of him Mt. 11, 8. Luc. 7, 33) they are not ashamed to peruert all With this strange commentarie, that it was a desert * full of townes and villages, his garment was * chamlet, his meate * such as the countrey gaue and the people there used: to make him thereby but a common man like to the rest, in his maner of life: cleane against Scriptures, fathers, and reason.
- See Canis. de verb. Dei corruptelis li. 1. c. 2. 3. 4.
- Penance. 2. Doē penance.) So is the Latin word for word, so readeth al antiquitie, namely S. Cyprian ep. 52 often, and S. Augustine li. 13 Confes. c. 12. and it is a very vsual speache in the New Testament, specially in the preaching of S. Iohn Baptist, * Christ him self, and * the Apostles: to signifie perfect repentance, which hath not onely confession and amendment, but contrition or sorrow for the offense, and painefull satisfaction: such as S. Cyprian speaketh of in al the foresaid epistle. But the Aduerſaries of purpose (as * namely Beza protesteth) mislike that interpretation, because it fauoureth Satisfaction for sinne, which they cannot abide. Where if they pretend the Greeke Word, we send them to these places Mat. 11, 21. Lu. 10, 13. 1 Cor. 7, 9. Where it must needs signifie, sorrowfull, paynefull, and satisfactorie repentance. We tel them also that * S. Basil a Greeke Doctōr calleth the Niniuites repentance with fasting and hearecloth and ashes, by the same Greeke Word μετάνοια. And more we wil tell them in other places.

6. Confessing their sinnes.) Iohn did prepare the way to Christ and his Sacraments, not only by his baptisme, but by inducing the people to confession of their sinnes. Which is not to acknowledge them selues in general to be sinners, but also to vtter every man his sinnes.
8. Fruite Worshie.) He preacheth satisfaction by doing worthy fruites or workes of penance, which are (as S. Hierom saith in 2. Ioel) fasting, praying, almes and the like.
10. The axe.) Here preachers are taught to dehort from doing euil for feare of Hel, and to exhort to doe good in hope of heauen: which kind of preaching our Aduer. doe condemne.
11. In Water.] Iohns baptisme did not remitte sinnes, nor was comparable to Christs Baptisme, as here it is plaine and in manie other places. Hiero. adu. Lucifer. Aug. de Bapt. cont. Donat. li. 5. c. 9. 10. 11. Yet is it an article of our Adu. that thone is no better then the other. Which they lay not to extol Iohns, but to derogate from Christs baptisme, so far, that they make it of no more value or efficacy for remission of sinnes, and grace, and iustification, then was Iohns: thereby to mainteine their manifold heresies, that Baptisme taketh not away sinnes, that a man is no cleaner nor iuster by the Sacrament of Baptisme then before, that it is not necessarie for children vnto saluation

12. Floore.) This floore is his Church militant here in earth, wherein are both good and bad (here signified by corne and chaffe) til the separation be made in the day of iudgement: contrarie to the doctrine of the Heretikes, that hold, the Church to consist onely of the good.

16. Opened.) To signifie that heauen was shut in the old law, til Christ by his Passion opened it, and so by his Ascension was the first that entered into it: contrarie to the doctrine of the Heretikes. See Hebr. 9, 8. and 11, 40.

ANNOTATIONS

CHAP. IIII.

Eremites. 1. Desert.] As Iohn the Baptist, so our Sauour by going into the desert and there liuing in contemplation euen among brute beasts, and subiect to the assaults of the Diuel for our sinnes, geueth a warrant and example to such holy men as haue liued in wilderneise for penance and contemplation, called Eremites.

The Lent-fast. 2. Fasted fourtie daies.] Elias and Moyfes (saith S. Hierom) by the fast of 40 daies were filled vvith the familiaritie of God, and our Lord him self in the Wilderneise fasted as many, to leaue vnto vs the solemne daies of fast. (that is, Lent.) Hiero. in c. 58 Esa. S. Augustine also hath the very like wordes ep. 119. And generally al the ancient fathers that by occasion or of purpose speake of the Lent-fast, make it not onely an imitation of our Sauours fast, but also an Apostolicall tradition, and of necessitie to be kept. Contemne not Lent (saith S. Ignatius) for it conceineth the imitation of our Lordes conuersation. And S. Ambrose saith plainly, that it was not ordained by men, but consecrated by God: nor inuented by any earthly cogitation, but commaunded by the heauenly Maieste. And againe, that it is sinne not to fast al the Lent. S. Hieroms wordes also be most plaine: We (saith he) fast fourtie daies, or, make one Lent in a yere, according to the tradition of the Apostles, in time conuenient. This time most conuenient is (as S. Augustine saith ep. 119) immediately before Easter, thereby to communicate vvith our Sauours Passion: and (as other vvriters do adde) thereby to come the better prepared and more worthily, to the great solemnitie of Christs Resurrection: beside many other goodly reasons in the ancient fathers vvich for breuitie we omitte. See (good Christian Reader) 12 notable sermons of S. Leo the Great de Quadragesima, of Lent: namely Ser. 6 and 9. Where he calleth it the Apostles ordinance by the doctrine of the Holy Ghost. See S. Ambrose from the 23 sermon forvard: in S. Bernard 7 sermons, and in many other fathers the like. Last of al, note well the saying of S. Augustine, vvho affirmeth thar by due obseruation thereof, the wicked be separated from the good, infidels from Christians, Heretikes from faithful Catholikes.

17. Doe penance.] That penance is necessarie also before baptisme, for such as be of age: as Johns, fo our Sauours preaching declareth, both beginning with penance.

23. Healing euery maladie.] Christ (saith S. Augustine) by miracles gat authoritie, by authoritie found credit, by credit drew together a multitude, by a multitude obteyned antiquitie, by antiquitie fortified a Religion, which not only the most fond new ryng of Heretikes vling deceitful wiles, but neither the drowtie old errour of the very Heathen with violence setting agavnt it, might in any part shake and cast downe. Aug. de vitil. cred. c. 14.

10. For iustice.) Heretikes and other malefactours sometime suffer willingly and stoutly: but they are not blessed, because they suffer not for iustice. For (sayth S. Aug.) they can not suffer for iustice, that haue deuided the Church. and, where found fayth or charitie is not, there cannot be iustice. Cont. ep. Parm. li. 1. c. 9. Ep. 50. Psal. 34. Conc. 3. And so by this scripture are excluded all false Martyrs, as S. Augustine often declareth, and S. Cypr. de Univ. Eccl. nu. 8.

False Martyrs.

11. Reuward.) In Latin and Greeke the word signifieth very wages and hire dewe for workes, and so presupposeth a meritorious deede.

- The Church visible. 15. The light.] This light of the world, and cite on a mountayne, and candel vpon a candlestick, signifie the Clergie, and the whole Church, so built vpon Christ the mountayne, that it must needs be visible, and can not be hid nor vnknown. Aug. cont. Fulg. Donat. c. 18. Li. 16. cont. Faust. c. 17. And therefore, the Church being a candle not vnder a bushel, but shining to all in the house (that is) in the world, what shall I say more (sayth S. Augustine) then that they are blind which shut their eyes agaynst the candle that is set on the candlestick? Tract. 2. in ep. 10.
17. Your light.] The good life of the Clergie edifieth much, and is Gods great honour: whereas the contrarie dishonoureth him.
20. One of these.] Behold how necessarie it is, not only to beleue, but to keepe all the commandements, euen the very least.
- True inherent iustice. 21. Your iustice.] It is our iustice, when it is geuen vs of God. Aug. in Ps. 30. Conc. 1. De Sp. & lit. c. 9. So that Christians are truly iust, and haue in them selues inherent iustice, by doing Gods commandements. Without which iustice of workes no man of age can be saued. Aug. de fid. & oper. c. 16. Whereby we see saluation, iustice, and iustification, not to come of only fayth, or imputation of Christes iustice.
- Venial finnes. 22. Hel of fyre.] Here is a playne difference of finnes, some mortal that bring to Hel, some lesse, and lesse punished, called venial.
24. Gift at the altar.] Beware of coming to the holy altar or any Sacrament out of charitie. But be first reconciled to thy brother, and much more to the Catholike Church, which is the whole brotherhod of Christian men, Heb. 13, 1.
33. Excepting the cause of fornication.] This exception is onely to shew, that for this one cause a man may put away his wife for euer: but not that he may marrie another: as it is most plaine in S. Marke and S. Luke, who leaue out this exception, saying: * Who soeuer dimisseth his wife and marieth another, committeth aduourie. See the Annot. Luc. 19, 9. But if both parties be in one and the same fault, then can neither of them not so much as diuorce or put away the other.
33. Committeth aduourie.] The knot of Mariage is a thing of so great a Sacrament, that not by separation it self of the parties it can be loosed, being not lawfull neither for the one part nor the other, to marie agayne vpon diuorce. Aug. de bo. Coniug. c. 7.
35. Not to sweare.] The Anabaptists here not folowing the Churches iudgement, but the bare letter (as other Heretikes in other cases) hold that there is no other lawfull, no not before a iudge. whereas Christ speaketh agaynst rashe and vsual swearing in common talke, when there is no cause.
39. Not to Resist euil.] Here also the Anabaptists gather of the letter, that it is not lawfull to goe to law for our right. as Luther also vpon this place held, that Christians might not resist the Turke. whereas by this, as by that which foloweth, patience only is signified and a wil to suffer more, rather then to reuenge. For neither did Christ nor S. Paule folow the letter by turning the other cheeke. Io. 18. Act. 23.

CHAPTER VI.

In this second chapter of his Sermon, he Controwleth the Pharisees iustice (that is, their almes, prayer, and fasting) for the scope and intension thereof, which was vaine glorie. 19 Their end also was to be riche, but ours must not be so much as in necessities.

TAKE good heede that you doe not your iustice before men, to be seen of them: otherwise reward you shall not haue with your father which is in heauen.

THE first worke of iustice. † Therefore when thou doest an almes-deede, sound not a trompet before thee, as the hypocrites doe in the Synagogues and in the streetes, that they may be honoured of men: Amen I say to you, they haue receiued their reward. † But when thou doest an almes-deede, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth: † that thy almes-deede may be in secrete, and thy father which seeth in secrete, vvil repay thee.

And.

- 5 † And vwhen ye pray, you shal not be as the "hypocrites, that loue to stand & pray in the Synagogs and corners of the streetes, that they may be seen of men: Amen I say to you, they haue receiued their reppard. † But thou vwhen thou shalt pray, enter into thy chamber, & hauing shut the doore, pray to thy father in secrete: and thy father vvhich seeth in secrete, vvil repay thee. † And vwhen you are praying, speake not much, as the heathen. For they thinke that in their "much-speaking they may be heard. † Be not you therefore like to them, for your father knowveth vvhat is needeful for you, before you aske him.
- Luc. 11, 2. 9 † Thus therefore shal you pray. * OVR FATHER vvhich art in heauen, sanctified be thy name. † Let thy Kingdom come. Thy vvill be done, as in heauen, in earth also. † Giue vs to day our "super substantial bread. † And forgie vs our "dettes, as we also forgie our detters. † And "leade vs not into temptation. But deliuer vs from euil. Amen. † For "if you vvil *forgie men their offenses, your heauenly father vvil forgie you also your offenses. † But if you vvil not forgie men, neither vvil your father forgie you your offenses.
- Mr. 11, 25. 13 14 15 16 † And vwhen you fast, be not as the hypocrites, sad. For they disfigure their faces, that they may appeare vnto men to fast. Amen I say to you, that they haue receiued their reppard.
- 17 † But thou vwhen thou doest fast, anoynte thy head, and vvalsh thy face: † that thou appeare not to men to fast, but to thy father vvhich is in secrete: and thy father vvhich seeth in secrete, vvil repay thee.
- Luc. 12, 33. 19 † * Heape not vp to your selues treasures on the earth; vvhere the rust & mothe do corrupt, & vvhere thecues digge through & steale. † But heape vp to your selues treasures in heauen: vvhere neither the rust nor mothe doth corrupt, and vvhere thecues do not digge through nor steale. † For vvhere thy treasure is, there is thy hart also. † † * The candel of thy body is thine eye. If thine eye be simple, thy vvhole body shal be lightsome. † But if thine eye be naught: thy vvhole body shal be darke some. If then the light that is in thee, be darkenes: the darkenes it self hovv great shal it be?
- Luc. 11, 34. 22 23 24 † No man can *serue "two masters. For either he vvil hate the one, and loue the other: or he vvil sustayne the one, and contemne the other. You cannot serue God and Mammon.
- Luc. 16, 13. 24 † Therefore I say to you, *be not "careful for your life vvhat you shal eate, neither for your body vvhat rayment you shal put on.
- Luc. 12, 22. 25

ANNOTATIONS
 CHAP. VI.

- Good Workes
 iustifie. ^{1. Iustice.} Hereby it is playne that good workes be iustice, and that man doing them doeth iustice, and is thereby iust and iustified, and not by fayth only. Al which iustice of a Christian man our Sauour here comprifeth in theie three workes, in Almes, fasting, and prayers. Aug. li. perf. iust. c. 8. So that to giue almes, is to doe iustice, and the workes of mercie are iustice. Aug. in Pf. 49. v. 5.
- Merites. ^{4. Repay.} This repaying and rewarding of good workes in heauen, often mentioned here by our Sauour, declareth that the sayd workes are meritorious, and that we may doe them in respect of that reward.
- Hypocrisie. ^{5. Hypocrites.} Hypocrisie is forbidden in al these three workes of iustice, and not the doing of them openly to the glorie of God and the profite of our neighbour and our owne saluatiō: for Christ before (c. 5.) biddeth, saying: Let your light so shine before men &c. And in al such workes S. Gregories rule is to be folowed, The Worke so to be in publike, that the intension remaine in secreete. Ho. 11. in Euang. c. 10.
- Τὸν ἰσχυρισμόν. ^{7. Much speaking.} Long prayer is not forbid, for Christ * him self spent whole nights in prayer, and he sayth, * We must pray alwayes, and * the Apostle exhorteth to pray without intermission, and the holy Church * from the beginning hath had her Canonical houres of prayer: but idle and voluntary babbling, either of the heathens to their goddes, or of Heretikes, that by long Rhetorical prayers thinke to perswade God: wheras the Collects of the Church are most breefe and most effectual. See S. Augustine ep. 121. c. 8. 9. 10.
- The B. Sacrament. ^{11. Superstantial bread.} By this bread so called here according to the Latin word and the Greeke, we aske not only al necessarie sustenance for the body, but much more al spiritual foode, namely the blessed Sacrament it self, which is Christ the true bread that came from heauen, and the bread of life vs that eate his bodie. Cypr. de orat. Do. Aug. ep. 121 c. 11. And therfore it is called here Superstantial, that is, the bread that passeth and excelleth al creatures. Hiero. in 2. Tit. in 6. Mas. Amb. li. 5. de Sacr. c. 4. Aug. ser. 28. de verb. Do. sec. Mat. 3. Germanus in Theoria.
- Venial finnes. ^{12. Dettes.} These dettes doe signifie not only mortal finnes, but also venial, as S. Augustine often teacheth: and therefore euery man, be he neuer so iust, yet because he can not liue without venial finnes, may very truly and ought to say this prayer. Aug. cont. duas ep. Pelag. li. 1. c. 10. li. 21 de Ciuit. c. 27.

In Expof. orat. Do. lac. 1. 13. Leade vs not.] S. Cyr. readeth, Ne patiaris nos induci. Suffer vs not to be led, as S. Augustine noteth li. de bo. perfec. c. 6. and so the holy Church vnderstandeth it, because God (as S. Iames sayth) tempteth no man: though for our finnes, or for our probation and crowne, he permitte vs to be tempted. Beware then of Bezaes exposition vpon this place, who (according to the Caluinists opinion) saith, that God leadeth them into tentation, into whom him self bringeth in Satan for to fill their hearts: so making God the author of sinne.

14. If you forgive.] This poynt, of forgueing our brother, when we aske forgiuenesse of God, our Sauour repeateth agayne, as a thing much to be considered: and therefore commended in the parable also of the seruant that would not forgieue his fellow seruant, Mat. 18.

Iud. 20, 26. 16. Fast.] He forbiddeth not open and publike fasts, which in the* Scriptures were commanded and proclaimed to the people of God, and the Niniuites by such fasting appeased Gods wrath: but to fast for vaine glorie and praise of men, and to be desirous by the very face and looke to be taken for a faster, that is forbidden, and that is hypocritie.

2. Esd. 9. 20. Treasures in heauen.] Treasures layd vp in heauen, must needs signifie, not sayth only, but plentiful almes and deedes of mercie and other good workes, which God keeping as in a booke, wil rewarde them accordingly: as of the contrarie the Apostle sayth, He that soweth sparingly, shal reape sparingly. 2. Cori 9. Meritorious Workes.

24. Two Masters.] Two religions, God and Baal, Christ and Caluin, Masse and Communion, the Catholike Church and Heretical Conuenticles. Let them marke this lesson of our Sauour, that thinke they may serue al masters, al times, al religions. Agayne, these two masters doe signifie, God and the World, the fleshe and the spirit, iustice and sinne.

25. Careful.] Prudent prouision is not prohibited, but to much doubtfulnes and feare of Gods prouision for vs: to whom we ought with patience to committe the rest, when we haue done sufficiently for our part.

CHAP. VII.

In this third and last Chapter of his Sermon, because we know not mens endes, he biddeth vs beware of iudging: 6 and neuerthelesse to take open dogges (so he calleth them) as they be, 7 If these Workes of iustice seeme to hard, we must pray instantly to him that giueth them. 12 In the conclusion, he giueth one short rule of al iustice. 13 and then he exhorteth with al vehemencie to the strait way both of the Catholike sayth, 21 and also of good life: because only sayth wil not suffice.

CHAP. VII.

1. Judge not.] It is no Christian part to iudge il of mens actes which be in them selues good and may procede of good meaning, or of mans inward meanings and intentions which we can not see: of which fault they must beware that are to suspitious and giuen to deeme alwayes the worst of other men. But to say, that Iudas, or an Heretike evidently known to die obstinaty in heresie, is damned, and in al other playne and manifest cases to iudge, is not forbidden.

6. Holy to dogges.] No holy Sacrament and specially that of our Sauours blessed body, must be giuen wittingly to the vnworthy, that is, to them that haue not by confession of al mortal finnes examined and proued them selues. See the Annot. 1. Cor. 11, 27, 28, 29.

8. Euery one that asketh.] Al things that we aske necessarie to saluation with humilitie, attention, continuance, and other dewe circumstances, God wil vndoubtedly graunt when it is best for vs.

This is rather their garment, common to them with al other Heretikes, to crake much of the word of the Lord, and by pretended allegations and * swete wordes of benediction, and specially by promise of knowledge, light and libertie of the Gospel, to seduce the simple and the sinful. Heretikes Wolues in sheepe-skinnes.

16. Fruites.] These are the fruities which Heretikes are known by, diuision from the whole Church, diuision among them selues, taking to them selues new names and new masters, inconstancie in doctrine, disobedience both to others and namely to spiritual officers, loue and liking of them selues, pride and intolerable vaunting of their owne knowledge aboute al the holy Doctors, corruption, falsification, and quite denying of the parts of Scriptures that specially make agaynst them, and these be common to al Heretikes lightly. Other some are more peculiar to these of our time, as Incestuous mariages of vowed persons, Spoile of Churches, Sacrilege and profanation of al holy things, and many other special poynts of doctrine, directly tending to the corruption of good life in al states. Heretikes known by their fruities.

21. Lord, Lord.] These men haue faith, otherwise they could not inuocate, Lord, Lord: Ro. 10. But here we see that to beleue is not ynough, and that not only infidelitie is sinne, as Luther teacheth. Yea Catholikes also that worke true miracles in the name of our Lord, and by neuer so great sayth, yet without the Workes of iustice shal not be faued, 1. Cor. 13. Agayne, consider here. Who they are that haue so often in their mouth, The Lord, the Lord, and how litle it shal auaille them, that set so litle by good Workes, and contemne Christian iustice. Not only faith.

A N N O T A T I O N S
C H A P. IX.

3. He blasphemeth.] When the Iewes heard Christ remitte sinnes, they charged him with blasphemie, as Heretikes now charge his priests of the new Testament, for that they remitte sinnes: to Whom he sayd, Who e sinnes you shal forgive, they are forgiven &c. Io. 20.

Men haue power to forgiue sinnes.

5. Whether is easier.] The faithlesse Iewes thought (as Heretikes now daies) that to forgive sinnes was so proper to God, that it could not be communicated vnto man: but Christ sheweth that as to worke miracles is otherwile proper to God only, and yet this power is communicated to men, so also to forgive sinnes.

6. The sonne of man in earth.] Christ had power to remit sinnes, and often executed the same, not only as he was God, but also as he was a man, because he was head of the Church and our cheefe Bishop and Priest according to his manhood, in respect wherof al power was geuen him in heauen and earth. Mat. 28, v. 18.

8. Glorified.] The faythful people did glorifie God that gaue such power to men for to remit sinnes and to doe miracles, knowing that that which God committeth to men, is not to his derogation, but to his glorie. him self only being stil the principal worker of that effect, men being only his ministers, substitutes, and working vnder him and by his commission and authoritie.

8. To men.] Not only Christ as he was man, had this power to forgive sinnes, but by him and from him the Apottles, and consequently Priests. Mat. 28. At do we e geuen me. Mat. 18. Whatsoeuer you shal looie in earth, shal be looied in heauen. Ioan. 20. Whoe sinnes you shal forgive, they are forgiven.

External Sacrifice.

13. Not sacrifice.] These are the wordes of the Prophete, who spake them euen then when sacrifices were offered by Gods commaundement: so that it maketh not agaynst sacrifice, but he saith that sacrifice only without mercie and charitie, and generally with mortal sinne, is not acceptable. The Iewes offered their sacrifices dewely, but in the meane tyme they had no pitie nor mercie on their brethren: that is it which God misliketh.

Fasting.

14. Fast often.] By the often fasting of his disciples, we may easely gather that he appointed them a prescript maner of fasting: as it is certaine he taught them a forme of prayer. Lu. 5. and 11.

17. New Wine.] By this new wine, he doth playnly here signifie fasting and the straiter kind of life: by the old bottels, them that can not away therewith.

19. Twelue yeres.] This woman a Gentil had her disease twelue yeres, and the Gouerners daughter a Iewe (which is here rayfed to life) was twelue yeres old, Luc. 8. Marke then the allegorie hereof in the Iewes and Gentils. As that woman fel sicke when the wenche was borne, so the Gentils went their owne wayes into idolatrie, when the Iewes in Abraham beleued. Agayne, as Christ here went to rayse the wenche, and by the way the woman was first healed, and then the wenche reuiued: so Christ came to the Iewes, but the Gentils beleued first and were saued, and in the end the Iewes shal beleue also. Hiero. in Mat.

Reliques and Images.

21. Touche only.] Not only Christes wordes, but his garment and touche thereof or any thing to him belonging, might doe and did miracles, force proceeding from his holy person to them. Yea this woman returning home * set vp an Image of Christ, for memorie of this benefite, and the hemme of the same Image did also miracles. This image Iulian the Apoltata threwe downe, and set vp his owne in steede thereof, which was immediatly destroyed by fyre from heauen. But the image of Christ broken in peeces by the heathen, the Christians after ward gathering the peeces together, placed it in the Church: where it was (as Sozomenus writeth) vnto his time.

28. Do you believe that I can.] We see here that to the corporal healing of these men he requirerth onely this faith, that he is able. Which faith is not sufficient to iustifie them. How then doe the Heretikes by this and the like places pleade for their onely iustifying faith? See the Annot. Mar. 5, 36.

38. Pray therefore.] Therefore doth the Church pray and fast in the Ember dayes, when holy Orders are geuen. that is, when workemen are prepared to be sent into the haruest. See Act. 13, 2.

ANNOTATIONS

CHAP. X.

1. Power.) Miracles were so necessarie to the confirmation of their doctrine beginning then to be preached, that not only Christ him self did miracles, but also he gaue to his Apostles power to doe them.

2. First Simon.) Peter the first, not in calling, but in preeminence, for (as S. Ambrose saith in 2 Cor. 12.) Andrew first folow'd our Saviour before Peter: and yet the Primacie Andrew receaued not, but Peter. Which preeminence of S. Peter aboue the other Apostles is so playnly signified in this word, First, by the iudgement euen of Heretikes, that Beza, notwithstanding he confesseth the consent of al copies both Latin and Greeke, yet is not ashamed to say that he suspecteth that this word was thrust into the text by some fauourer of Peters Primacie. Wherby we haue also that they care no more for the Greeke then for the Latin, when it maketh agaynst them: but at their pleasure say that al is corrupted.

9. Do not possesse.) Preachers may not carefully seeke after the superfluities of this life, or any thing which may be an impediment to their function. And as for necessaries, they deserue their temporal liuing at their hands for whom they labour spiritually.

12. Peace to this house.) As Christ him self vsed these wordes or this blessing often, Peace be to you, so here he biddeth his Apostles say the like to the house where they come: And so hath it been alwaies a most godly vse of Bishops* to geue their blessing where they come. Which blessing must needs be of great grace and profite, when none but worthy persons (as here we read) might take good thereof: and when it is neuer lost, but returneth to the geuer, when the other partie is not worthy of it. Among other spiritual benefites it taketh away venial finnes. Amb. in 9. Luc.
 14. Shake of the dust.) To contemne the true preachers, or not to receaue the truth preached, is a very damnable sinne.

15. More tolerable.) Hereby it is euident that there be degrees and differences of damnation in Hel fyre according to mens deserts. Aug. li. 4 de Bapt. c. 19.

18. Kings.) In the beginning Kings and Emperours persecuted the Church, that by the very death and bloud of Martyrs it should grow more miraculously. after ward when the Emperours and kings were them selues become Christians, they vsed their power for the Church, agaynst Infidels and Heretikes. Aug. ep. 42.

19. It shal be giuen.) This is verified euen at this present also, when many good Catholikes, that haue no great learning, by their answers confound the Aduersaries.

25. How much more.) No manel therefore if Heretikes call Christes Vicar Antichrist, when their forefathers the faithles Iewes called Christ him self Beelzebub.

22. Confesse me.) See how Christ esteemeth the open confessing of him, that is; of his truth in the Catholike Church, for as when Saul persecuted the Church, he sayd *him self was persecuted:
 so to confesse him, and his Church, is al one. Contrariwise, see how he abhorreth them that deny him before men. Which is not only to deny any one litle article of the Catholike sayth comended to vs by the Church: but also to allow or consent to heresie by any meanes, as by subscribing, coming to their seruice and sermons, furthering them any way agaynst Catholikes, and such like.

34. Not peace but sword.) Christ came to breake the peace of worldlings and sinners: as when the sonne beleeueth in him, and the father doth not: the wife is a Catholike, and the husband is not. For to agree together in infidelitie, heresie, or any other sinne, is a naughty peace. This being the true meaning of Christes wordes, marke that the Heretikes interpret this to mainteine their rebellions and troubles which their new gospel breedeth. Beza in no. Test. an. 1565.

37. More then.] No earthly thing, nor duty to Parents, wife, children, countrie, or to a mans owne boily and life, can be any iust excuse why a man should doe, or feyne him self to doe or beleue any thing, agaynst Christ or the vnitie and faith of his Churche.

41. In the name.] Reward for hospitality, and specially for receiuing an holy person, as Prophet, Apostle, Bishop, or Priest persecuted for Christes sake. For by receiuing of him in that respect as he is such an one, he shal be partaker of his merites, and be rewarded as for such an one. Whereas on the contrarie side, he that receiueth an Heretike into his houie and a false preacher, doth communicate with his wicked workes. Ep. 2. 10.

CHAP. XI.

John the Baptist in prison also doing his diligence, sendeth some of his disciples to Christ: that as they heard, so they might also see his miracles with their eyes. 7 Afterward Christ declareth how worthy of credite Johns testimonie was: 16 and inueigheth agaynst the Iewes, who wish neither of their manners of life could be vponne: 20 no nor wish Christes infinite miracles: 25 praying Gods vnioune in this behalfe, 27 and calling to him self al such as feele their owne burdais.

3. Art thou he.] Iohn him self doubted not, for he baptized him and gaue great testimonie of him before: Io. 1. But because his disciples knewe him not, nor esteemed of him so much as of Iohn their owne Maister, therefore did he send them vnto Christ, that by occasion of Christes answer he might the better instruct them what he was, and so make them Christes disciples, preferring them to a better Maister.

Eremitical life. 7. What want you out.] High commendation of Iohns holinesse, as wel for his fasting, rough attire, solitary life, and constancie, as for the dignitie of his function.

7. Into the desert.] The faythful people in al ages resorted of deuotion into wildernes to see men of special and rare holynes, Prophets, Eremites, Anchorites &c. to haue their prayers or ghostly counsel. See S. Hierom de vita Hilartonis.

Elias. 14. Elias.) As Elias shal be the messenger of Christes later coming, so was Iohn his messenger and Praecursor at his former coming: and therefore is he called Elias, because of his like office and like spirit. Luc. 1. Grego. ho. 7. in Euang.

15. Eating and drinking.] The wicked quarrellers of the world miscontre easely al the actes and life of good men. If they be great fasters and austere liuers, they are blasphemed and counted hypocrites: if they conuerse with other men in ordinary maner, then they be counted dissolute.

Penance. 21. Penance in sackcloth.] By this sackcloth and ashes added here and in other places, wee see euidently that Penance is not only leauing of former sinnes, and chaunge or amendement of life past, no nor bare sorrowfulness or recounting of our offences already committed, but requireth punishment and chastisement of our persons by these and such other meanes as the Scriptures do els where set forth. and therefore concerning the worde also, it is rather to be called Penance, as in our translation: then (as the Aduertaries of purpose auoyding the word) Repentance or Amendement of life: and that according to the very vsual signification of the * Greeke word in the most ancient Ecclesiastical Greeke Writers: Who for Penitentes (Which in the Primitiue Church did publike penance) say, * οἱ ἐν μετάνοιᾳ ὄντες, that is, Men that are doing penance. And concerning that part of penance which is Cōfession, the Ecclesiastical historie calleth it by the same Greeke word, and the penitents comming to confession, τοὺς μετάνοιους. Sozom. li. 7 c. 16. Socrat. li. 5 c. 19. * Dionys. Eccl. hier. c. 3. in ini-

25. Litle ones.) These litle ones doe not signifie here only the vnlearned, as though Coblers and weauers and women and girles had this reuelation, and therefore do vnderstand al Scriptures and are able to expound them: but here are signified the humble, whether they be learned or vnlearned: as when he sayth, Unless you become as litle ones, you shal not enter into the Kingdom of heauen. And so also the greatest Doctors (Who as they were most learned, so most humbled them selues to the iudgement of the Catholike Church) are these litle ones: and Heretikes, who although vnlearned, yet vaunt their knowledge and their spirit of vnderstanding aboute al ancient fathers and the whole Church, can not be of these litle and humble ones.

The commaundements possible.

30. Yoke swete.] What is this light burden and swete yoke, but his commaundements, of which S. Iohn sayth 1. Ep. 5. Hu commaundements are not heauy? cleane contrary to the Aduertaries that say, they are vnpossible to be kept.

The blindness of the Pharisees about the Sabbath he reproveth by Scriptures, by reason, and by a miracle. 14 and his death being therefore sought by them, he meekly goeth out of the way, according as Esay had prophesied of him. 22 His casting out of devils also he defendeth agaynst them, 31 and setteth forth the daunger they stand in for their horrible blasphemie. 38 And because they aske yes for a signe, he sheweth how vvorthe they shal be damned, 43 for selling how the deuill shal possesse their Nation, 46 and testifying that although he be of their bloud, yet not they for shew, bus such as keepe hu commaundements are decre vnto him.

ANNOTATIONS

CHAP. XII.

24. In Beelzebub.] The like blasphemie agaynst the Holy Ghost is, to attribute the miracles done by Saints either dead or aliue, to the Diuel.

30. Not With me.] They that are indifferent to al religions, commonly and fitly called Neuters, ioyning them selues to neither part, let them marke these wordes wel, and they shal see, that Christ accoumpted al them to be agaynst him and his Church, that are not plainely and flatly With him and it.

Neuters in religion.

30. Gathereth not With me.] He speaketh not only of his owne person, but of al to whom he hath committed the gouernement of his Church, and specially of the cheefe Pastours succeeding Peter in the gouernement of the Whole. As S. Hierom Writing to Damasius Pope of Rome, applieth these wordes vnto him, saying of al Heretikes, He that gathereth not With thee, gathereth: that is to say, He that is not With Christ, is With Antichrist.

Ep. 18.

31. The blasphemie of the Spirit.] He meaneth not that there is any sinne so great, which God wil not forgiue, or whereof a man may not repēt in this life, as some Heretikes at this day affirme: but that some heinous sinnes (as namely this blasphemie of the Iewes agaynst the euident workes of the Holy Ghost, and likewise Archeheretikes who wilfully resist the knowē truth and workes of the Holy Ghost in Gods Church) are hardly forgiuen, and feldom haue such men grace to repent. Otherwise among al the sinnes agaynst the Holy Ghost (which are commonly reckened fixe) one only shal neuer be forgiuen, that is, dying vvithout repentance wilfully, called Final impenitence. Which sinne he committeth that dieth vvith contempt of the Sacrament of Penance, obtinarily refusing absolution, by the Churches ministerie: as S. Augustine plainly declareth in these wordes. Whosoeuer he be that beleueth not mans sinnes to be remitted in Gods Church, and therefore despiseth the bountifulnes of God in so mighty a Worke, if he in that obstinas minde continue til his liues end, he is guilty of sinne agaynst the Holy Ghost, in which Holy Ghost Christ remitteth sinnes. Enchir. 83. Ep. 50 in fine.

Remission of sinnes in the Church.

32. Sonne of man.] The Iewes in their wordes sinned agaynst the sonne of man, when they reprehended those things which he did as a man, to Witte, calling him therefore, a glutton, a great drinker of wine, a freend of the Publicans, and taking offense because he kept company vvith sinners, brake the Sabbath, and such like: and this sinne might more easely be forgiuen them, because they iudged of him as they vvould haue done of any other man: but they sinned and blasphemed against the Holy Ghost (called here the finger of God whereby he wrought miracles) when of malice they attributed the evident workes of God in casting out devils, to the devil him self: and this sinne shall not be remitted, because it shall hardly be remitted, as we see by the plague of their posteritie vntil this day.

Purgatorie. 32. Nor in the World to come.] S. Augutine and other Holy Doctors gather herevpon, that some sinnes may be remitted in the next life, and consequently prouoe Purgatorie thereby. De Ciuil. Dei li. 21 c. 13. D. Gregor, Dial. li. 4 c. 39.

36. Idle Word.] If of euery idle word we must make accoumpt before God in iudgement, and yet shall not for euery such word be damned euertlastingly: then there must needs be some temporal punishment in the next life.

Al Heresies alleage Scriptures. 48. Who is my mother.] The dutiful affection toward our parents and kinsfolke is not blamed, but the inordinate loue of them to the hinderance of our seruice and duty toward God. Vpon this place some old Heretikes denied Christ to haue any mother. Aug. li. de Fid. & Symb. c. 4. Neither euer was there any heretic so absurd, but it would seeme to haue Scripture for it.

CHAP. XIII.

Speaking in parables (as the Scripture foretold of him, and as meeke vvas for the reprobate Iewes:) he sheweth by the parable of the Sowver, that in the labours of his Church, three partes of foure do perishe through the faults of the hearers. 24 and yet, by the parable of good seede and cockle (as also of the Tette) that his seruants must not for al that, neuer while the world lasteth, make any Schisme or Separation. 31 And by parables of the litle mustardseede and leauen, that notwithstanding the three parts perishing, and ouersowing of cockles, yet that fourth part of the good seede shall sprede ouer al the world. 44 And vntill, what a treasure, and pearle it is. 53 After al which, yet his owne countrie vsuil not honour him.

THE same day IESVS going out of the 1 house, sate by the sea side. † And * great 2 multitudes were gathered together vnto him, in so much that he went vp into a in the shore, † and he spake to them 3 many things in parables, saying,

Behold the towver went forth to sow. † And while he 4 soweth, some fell by the way side, and the foules of the aire did come and eate it. † Other some also fell vpon rockie pla- 5 ces, where they had not much earth: and they shot vp incontinent, because they had not deepenes of earth, † and after the 6 sunne was vp, they parched: and because they had not roote,

ANNOTATIONS

CHAP. XV.

1. Cor. 14. With their lippes.] This is to be vnderstood properly of such as haue euer God in their mouth, the Word of our Lord, the Scriptures, the Gospel, but in their hart and al their life be in deede Godles. It may be applied also to such as say their prayers without attention or elucation of mind to God, Whether he vnderstand the prayers or no, that saith them. For many a poore Christian man that vnderstandeth not the Wordes he speaketh, hath his hart neerer heauen, more feruor and deuotion, more edification to him self, more profite in spirit (as the Apostle speaketh) and lesse distractions, then not only al Heretikes Which haue no true feeling of such things, but then many learned Catholikes. And therefore it is not to be vnderstood of praying in vnknown tonges, as Hereikes sometime expound it, farre Wide from the circumstance of the place and Christes intention, speaking of the hypocritical Iewes.
2. Thef. 2, 15. 1. Cor. 11. Ad. 15. Aug. Ser. de tep. 251. Sec 1. Cor. 16, 2. b Epiph. her. 75 c Hiero. ep. 54 ad Marcel. cor. Cont.  Luc. 2. 27* Tob. 12. Iudith c. 8 Esth. 4. Luc. 10, 16  Mat. 18, 17.* 9. Commandements of men.] Such only are here called traditions, doctrines, or commandements of men, which be either repugnant to Gods lawes, as this of defrauding their parents vnder pretense of religion: or which at the least be friuolous, vnprofitable, and impertinent to pietie or true worshipe, as that other sort of so often washing hands and vessels without regard of inward puritie of hart and mind. Let no man therefore be abuted with the Protestants peruerie application of this place against the holy lawes, canons, and precepts of the Church and our spiritual Gouverneours, concerning fastes, festiuities, and other rules of discipline and due order in life and in the seruice of God. For such are not repugnant but consonant to Gods Word and al pietie, and our Lord is truly honoured, worshipped, and serued both by the making and also by the obseruing of the Churches them. * S. Paul gaue commandements both by his epistles and by word of mouth, euen in such matters wherein Christ had prescribed nothing at al, and he chargeth the faithful to obserue the same. * The Apostles and Priests at Hierusalem made lawes, and the Christians were bound to obey them. a The keeping of Sunday in steede of the Sabbath is the tradition of the Apostles, and dare the Heretikes deny the due obseruation therof to be an acceptable worshipe of God? b They prescribed the Festes of Easter, and Whitsonde and other Solemnities of Christ and his Saints, which the Protestants them selues obserue. c They appointed the Lent and Imber fastes and other, as wel to chastise the concupiscence of man, as to serue and please God thereby, as is plaine in the falling of * Anna, Tobie, Iudith, Esther, who serued and pleased God thereby. Therefore neither these nor other such Apostolike Ordinances, nor any precepts of the holy Church or of our lawfull Pastors are implied in these Phariisaical traditions here reprehended, nor to be compted or called the doctrines and commandements of men, because they are not made by mere humane power, but by Christes Warrant and authoritie, and by such as he hath placed to rule his Church, of whom he saith, * He that heareth you, heareth me: he that despiseth you, despiseth me. They are made by the Holy Ghost, ioyning with our Pastors in the regiment of the faithful, they are made by our Mother the Church, which whosoever obeith, not, * We are warned to take him as an Heathen. But on the other side, al lawes, doctrines, seruice and iniunctions of Heretikes, how soeuer pretended to be consonant to the Scriptures, be commandements of men: because both the things by them prescribed are impious, and the Authors haue neither sending nor commission from God.
11. Not that which entereth.] The Catholikes doe not abstaine from certaine meates, for that they esteeme any meate vnclane either by creation or by Iudaical obseruation: but they abstaine for chastisement of their concupiencies. Aug. li. de mor. Ec. Cath. c. 35. Difference of meates.
18. Defile a man] It is sinne only which properly defileth man, and meates of them selfe or of their owne nature doe not defile: but so farre as by accident they make a man to sinne, as the disobedience of Gods commandement or of our Superiours who forbid some meates for certaine times and causes, is a sinne. As the apple which our first parents did eate of, though of it selfe it did not defile them, yet being eaten against the precept, it did defile. So neither flesh nor fish of it selfe doth defile, but the breach of the Churches precept defileth. Catholike abstinence.

CHAP. XVI.

The obstinate Pharijees and Sadducees, as though hu foresaid miracles were not sufficient to proue him to be Christ, require to see some one from heauen. 5 Whereupon forsaking them, he warneth his disciples to beware of the leauen of their doctrine: 13 and Peter (the time now approaching for him to goe into Ierusalem to hu Passion) for confessing him to be Christ, he maketh the Rocke of hu Church, geuing fulnes of Ecclesiastical power accordingly. 21 And after, he so rebuketh him for dissuading hu Crosse and Passion. that he also affirmeth the like suffering in euery one to be necessarie to saluation.

13. Whom say men.] Christ intending here to take order for the founding, regiment, and stabilitie of his Church after his deceate, and to name the person to whom he meant to geue the general charge thereof, would before by interrogatories draw out (and namely out of that one whom he thought to make the cheefe) the profession or that high and principal Article, That he was the sonne of the liuing God. which being the ground of the Churches faith, was a necessarie qualitie and condition in him that was to be made Head of the same Church, and the perpetual keeper of the said faith and al other points thereon depending.

14. But they said.] When Christ asked the peoples opinion of him, the Apostles al indifferently made answer: but when he demaunded what them selues thought of him, then loe Peter the mouth and head of the whole fellowship answered for al. Chryf. ho. 55. in Mat.

17. Blessed art thou.] Though some other (as Nathanael Io. 1, 49) seeme to haue before beleued and professed the same thing for which Peter is here counted blessed, yet it may be plainly gathered by this place, and so S. Hilarie and others thinke, that none before this did further vtter of him, then that he was the sonne of God by adoption as other Saincts be, though more excellent then other be. For it was of congruities and Christs special appointment, that he vpon whom he intended to found his new Church, and whose faith he would make infallible, should haue the preeminence of this first profession of Christs natural diuinitie, or, that he was by nature the very sonne of God a thing so farre above the capacite of nature, reason, flesh and bloud, and so repugnant to Peters sense and sight of Christs humanitie, flesh, and infirmities, that for the beleefe and publike profession thereof he is counted blessed, as Abraham was for his faith: and hath great promises for him self and his posteritie, as the said Patriarche had for him and his seede. According as S. Basil saith, Because he excelled in faith, he receiued the building of the Church committed to him.

OF PETERS

PETER.

18. Thou art Peter.] Christ (in the first of John v. 42) foretold and appointed that this man then named Simon, should afterward be called Cephus, or Petrus, that is to say, a Rocke, not then venter the cause, but now expressing the same, videlicet (as S. Cyril writeth) For that upon him as upon a firme rocke his Church should be builded. Whereunto S. Hilarie agreing saith, O happie foundation of the Church in the imposing of thy new name. &c. And yet Christ here doth not so much call him by the name Peter or Rocke, as he doth affirme him to be a rocke: signifying by that Metaphore, both that he was designed for the foundation and ground worke of his house, which is the Church: and also that he should be of inuincible force, firmitie, durableness, and stabilitie, to sustaine al the Windes, Waues, and Stormes that might fall or beate against the same. And the Aduersaries obiecing against this, that Christ only is the Rocke or foundation, wrangle against the very expresse Scriptures and Christes owne Wordes, geuing both the name and the thing to this Apostle. And the simple may learne by S. Basils Wordes, how the case standeth. Though (saith he) Peter be a rocke, yet he is not a rocke as Christ is. For Christ is the true unmoveable rocke of him self, Peter is unmoveable by Christ the rocke. For Iesus hath communicate and impart his dignities, not voyding him self of them, but holding them to him self, bestoweth them also upon others. He is the light, and yet, 2. You are the light: he is the Priest, and yet he maketh Priests: he is the rocke, and he made a rocke.

18. And upon this rocke.] Vpon that which he said Peter was, wil he build his Church: and therefore by most euident sequels he foundeth his Church vpon Peter. And the Aduersaries wrangling against this, do against their owne conscience and knowledge: especially seeing they know and confesse that in Christes Wordes speaking in the Syriake tongue, there was no difference at al betwene Petrus and Petra: yea and that the Greeke Wordes also though differing in termination, yet signifie one thing, to wit, a rocke, or stone, as them selues also translate it. 10. 1, 42. So that they which professe to follow the Hebrew or Syriake and the Greeke, and to translate immediately out of them into Latin or English, should if they had dealt sincerely, haue thus turned Christes Wordes, Thou art a rocke, and upon this rocke: or, Thou art Peter, and upon this Peter wil I build my Church: For so Christ spake by their owne confession without any difference. Which doth expressely toppre the 2. of al their vaine euasions, that Petrus the former Word is referred to the Apostle: and petra the later Word, either to Christ only, or to Peters faith only: neither the said original tongues bearing it, nor the sequels of the Wordes, upon this, suffering any relation in the world but to that which was spoken of in the same sentence next before: neither the Wordes following which are directly addressed to Peters person, nor Christes intention by any meanes admitting it, which was not to make him self or to promise him self to be the head or foundation of the Church. For his father gaue him that dignitie, and he tooke not that honour to him self, nor sent him self, nor tooke the keyes of heauen of him self, but al of his father. he had his communion the very houre of his incarnation. And though S. Augustine sometimes referre the Word (Petra) to Christ in this sentence (which no doubt he did because the terminations in Latin are diuers, and because he examined not the nature of the original Wordes which Christ spake, nor of the Greeke, and therefore the Aduersaries which otherwise flee to the tongues, should not in this case alleage him) yet he neuer denieth but Peter also is the Rocke and head of the Church, saying that him self expounded it of Peter * in many places, and alleageth also S. Ambrose for the same in his hymne which the Church singeth. And so do we alleage the holy Council of Chalcedon, Act. 3 pag. 118. Tertullian, de praescriptis. Do. sec. 10. Origen, Ho. 5 in Exo. S. Cyprian, De unit. Ec. S. Hilarie, Can. 16 in mat. S. Ambrose, Ser. 47. 68. li. 6 ser. 49. ser. in c. 9. Lucas. S. Gregorie, Li. 4 ep. 32 ind. 13. 29 de Sanctis. and others: euery one of them saying expressely that the Church was founded and builded vpon Peter. For though sometimes they say the Church to be builded on Peters faith, yet they meane not (as our Aduersaries do vnlearnedly take them) that it should be builded vpon faith either separated from the man, or in any other man: but vpon faith as in him who here confessed that faith.

18. Rocke.] The Aduersaries hearing also the Fathers sometimes say, that Peter had these promises and prerogatiues, as bearing the person of al the Apostles or of the whole Church, deny absurdly that him self in person had these prerogatiues. As though Peter had been the proctor only of the Church or of the Apostles, confessing the faith and receiuing these things in other mens names. Where the holy Doctors meane only, that these prerogatiues were not geuen to him for his owne vse, but for the good of the whole Church, and to be imparted to euery vocation according to the measure of their callings: and that these great priuileges geuen to Peter should not decay or die with his person, but be perpetual in the Church in his successors. Therefore S. Hierom to Damatus taketh this Rocke not to be Peters person only, but his successors and his Chaire. I (saith he) following no cheefe or principal but Christ, ioyned myself to the communion of Peters chaire, vpon that rocke I know the Church was builded. And of that same Apostolike Chaire S. August. saith, That same is the Rocke which the proud gates of Hel do not overcome. And S. Leo, Our Lord would the Sacrament or mysterie of this gift so to pertaine vnto the office of al the Apostles, that he placed it principally in blessed S. Peter the cheefe of al the Apostles, that from him as from a certaine head he might poure out his gifts, as it were through the whole body: that he might vnderstand him self to be an aliene from the diuine mysterie that should presume to reuolt from the soliditie or stedfastnes of Peter.

18. Build

18. Build my Church.] The Church or house of Christ was only promised here to be builded vpon him (which was fulfilled. Jo. 21, 15.) the foundation stone and other pillars or matter being yet in preparing, and Christ him self being not only the supereminent foundation but also the founder of the same: which is an other more excellent qualitie then was in Peter, for which he calleth it my Church: meaning specially the Church of the new Testament. Which was not perfectly formed and finished, and distincted from the Synagogue til Whitunday, though Christ gaue Peter and the rest their commissions actually before his Ascension.

18. Gates of hel.] Because the Church is resembled to a house or a citie, the aduersarie powers also be likened to a contrarie houle or towne, the gates wherof, that is to say, the fortitude or impugnation shall neuer preuaile against the citie of Christ. And so by this promise we are assured that no hereties nor other wicked attempts can preuaile against the Church builded vpon Peter, which the Fathers call Peters see and the Romane Church. Courts (saith S. Augustine, the Priests from the very See of Peter, and in that order of fathers consider vho to whom hath succeeded, that same is the rocke vvhich the proud gates of Hel do not ouercome. And in another place, that is it which hath obtained the toppe of authoritie, Heretikes in vaine barking round about it.

Psal. cons. part. Donati. De util. med. c. 17.

Cyp. epist. 73. Greg. li. 4. ep. 32. ind. 18.

19. To thee.] In saying, to thee vvil I geue, it is plaine that as he gaue the keyes to him, so he builded the Church vpon him. So saith S. Cyprian, To Peter first of al, vpon whom our Lord built the Church, and from whom he instituted and shewd the beginning of vnicie, did he geue the pouwer, that should be loosed in the heauens, vvhich he had loosed in earth. Wherby appeareth the vaine cauil of our Aduersaries, which say the Church was built vpon Peters Confession only, common to him and the rest, and not vpon his person, more then vpon the rest.

19. The keyes.) That is, The authoritie or Chaire of doctrine, knowledge, iudgement and discretion betwene true and false doctrine: the height of gouernement, the power of making lawes, of calling Councils, of the principal voice in them, of confirming them, of making Canons and hoielom decrees, of abrogating the contrarie, of ordaining Bishops and Pastors or deposing and suspending them, finally the power to dispense the goods of the Church both spiritual and temporal. Which signification of preeminent power and authoritie by the word keyes the Scripture expresseth in many places: namely speaking of Christ, I haue the keyes of death and Hel, that is, the rule. And againe, I vvil geue the key of the house of Dauid vpon his shoulder. Moreouer it signifieth that men can not come into heauen but by him, the keyes signifying also authoritie to open and shut, as it is said Apoc. 3. of Christ, Who hath the key of Dauid, he shutteth and no man openeth. By which wordes we gather that Peters authoritie is maruelous, to whom the keyes, that is, the power to open and shut heauen, is geuen. And therefore by the name of keyes is geuen that supereminent power which is called in comparison of the power graunted to other Apostles, Bishops and Pastors, plenitudo potestatis, fulnes of power. Bernard. lib. 2. de considerat. c. 8.

The dignities of the keyes.

19. Whatsoever thou shalt bind.) All kind of discipline and punishment of offenders, either spiritual (which directly is here meant) or corporal so farre as it tendeth to the execution of the spiritual charge, is comprised vnder the word, bind. Of which sort be Excommunications, Anathematismes, suspensions, degradations, and other censures and penalties or penances enioyned either in the Sacrament of Confession or in the exterior Courtes of the Church, for punishment both of other crimes, and specially of heresie and rebellion against the Church and the cheere pastors therof.

Esa. 28. Apoc. 1.

19. Loose.) To loose, is as the cause and the offenders case requireth, to loose them of any the former bandes, and to restore them to the Churches Sacraments and Communion of the faithful and execution of their function, to pardon also either al or part of the penances enioyned, or what debtes so euer man oweth to God or the Church for the satisfaction of his finnes forgiven. Which kind of releasing or loosing is called Indulgence: finally this Whatsoever, excepteth nothing that is punishable or pardonable by Christ in earth, for he hath committed his power to Peter. And so the validitie of Peters sentence in binding or loosing whatsoever, shall by Christes promise be ratified in heauen. Leo Ser. de Transfig. & Ser. 2. in anniuers. assumpt. ad Pontif. Hist. can. 1. 6. in Mart. Epist. in Anchorato prope initium. It now any temporal power can shew their warrant out of scripture for such souveraine power, as is here geuen to Peter and consequently to his successors, by these wordes, Whatsoever thou shalt binde, and by the very keyes, wherby greatest souverainie is signified in Gods Church as in his familie and houl hold, and therefore principally attributed and geuen to Christ * who in the scripture is said to haue the key of Dauid, but here communicated also vnto Peter, as the name of Rocke: if I say any temporal potestate can shew authoritie for the like souverainie, let them challenge hardly to be head not only of one particular, but of the whole vniuersal Church.

17. Workes.) He saith not, to geue every man according to his mercie (or their faith) but according to their workes. August. de verb. Apost. Ser. 35. And againe, How should our Sauour reward every one according to their workes, if there were no true will? August. lib. 2. eap. 4. s. 8. de ad. cum Falic. Manich. Good workes. Free will.

As he promised, he giueth them a sight of the glorie, vnto Which Suffering doth bring: 9 and then againe doth inculcate hu Passion. 14 A deuil also he casteth out Which his Disciples could not for their incredulitie and lacke of praying and fasting. 22 being yet in Galilee, he reuealeth more about hu Passion. 24 and the tribute that the Collectors exacted for al, he payeth for him self and Peter: declaring yet Wishal hu freedom both by Word and miracle.

2. Transfigured.] Marke in this Transfiguration many maruelous points, as, that he made not only his owne body, which then was mortal, but also the bodies of Moyfes and Elias, the one dead, the other to die, for the time as it were immortal: thereby to represent the state and glorie of his body and his Saints in heauen. By which maruelous transfiguring of his body, you may the lesse maruel that he can exhibite his body vnder the forme of bread and vvine or otherewise as he list.

Christ can exhibite his body vnder what forme he list.

3. Appeared Moyfes.] By this that Moyfes personally appeared and was present with Christ, it is plaine that the Saints departed may in person be present at the affaires of the liuing. August. de cura pro mort. c. 15. 16. For euen as Angels els where, so here the Saints also serued our Sauiour: and therefore as Angels both in the old Testament and the new, were present often at the affaires of men, so may Saints.

Saints after their death deale with and for the liuing.

9. Mount.] This nount (commonly esteemed and named of the ancient fathers Thabor) S. Peter calleth the holy Mount because of this wonderful vision, like as in the old Testament where God appeared to Moyfes in the bush and els where to others, he calleth the place of such Apparitions, holy ground. Wherby it is euident that by such Apparitions, places are sanctified, and therevpon groweth a religion and deuotion in the faithful toward such places, and namely to this Mount Thabor (called in S. Hierom Itabirium Ep. 17.) there was great Pilgrimage in the Primitiue Church, as vnto al those places which our Sauiour had sanctified with his presence and miracles,

Holy places.

Deuotion and Pilgrimage to the same.

- The holy land. and therefore to the whole land of promise, for that cause called the holy land. See S. Hiero. in Epistol. Paula. & ep. 17. & 18 ad Marcellam.
- Elias. 11. Elias [shal come.] He distinguisheth here plainly betwene Elias in person, who is yet to come before the iudgement: and betwene Elias in name, to wit, Iohn the Baptist, who is come already in the spirit and vertue of Elias. So that it is not Iohn Baptist only nor principally of whom Malachie prophesieth (as our Aduersaries say) but Elias also him self in person. Luc. 1. 17. Mal. 4. 5.
- True miracles onely in the Cath. Church. 19. Why could not Wee.] No marvel if the Exorcists of the Catholike Church which haue power to cast out diuels, yet doe it not alwaies when they wil, and many times with much a doe: whereas the Apostles hauing receiued this power "before ouer vncleane spirites, yet here cannot cast the out. But as for heretikes, they can neuer doe it, nor any other true miracle, to confirme their false faith. Mt. 10.
- Gregorius Thaumaturgus. 20. Faith as mustard seed.) This is the Catholike faith, by which onely al miracles are wrought: yet not of euery one that hath the Catholike faith, but of such as haue a great and forcible faith and withal the gift of miracles. These are able as here wee see by Chriltes warrant not only to doe other wonderful miracles here signified by this one, but also this very same, that is, to moue mountaines in deede, as S. Paul also presupposeth, and S. Hierom affirmeth, and Ecclesiastical histories namely telleth of Gregorius Neocætarientis, that he moued a mountaine to make roome for the foundation of a Church, called therefore and for other his wonderful miracles, Thaumaturgus. And yet faithlesse Heretikes laugh at al such things and beleue them not. 1. Cor. 13. Hiero. in vita S. Hilariou. Niceph. li. 6. c. 17.
- Prayer and Fasting. 21. Prayer and fasting.) The force of fasting and praying: whereby also we may see that the holy Church in Exorcismes doeth according to the Scriptures, when shee vieth beside the name of I E S V S, many prayers and much fasting to driue out Deuils. because these also are here required beside faith. Greg. Nisif. de vit. Greg. gory.
- The privileges and exemptions of the Clergie. 26. The Children free.) Though Christ to auoid scandal, payed tribute, yet in deede he sheweth that both him self ought to be free from such payments (as being the kings sonne, as wel by his eternal birth of God the Father, as temporal of Dauid) and also his Apostles, as being of his familie, and in them their successors the whole Clergie, who are called in Scripture the lotte and portion of our Lord. Which exemption and priuilege being grounded vpon the very law of nature it self, and therefore practised euen among the Heathen (Gen. 42. 27.) good Christian Princes haue confirmed and ratified by their lawes in the honour of Christ, whose ministers they are, and as it were the kings sonnes, as S. Hierom declareth playnly in these wordes, We for his honour pay not tributes, and as the Kings sonnes, are free from such payments. Hiero. vpon this place.

1. Who is the greater.] The occasion of this question and of their contention for Superioritie among the rest of their infirmitie which they had before the comming of the Holy Ghost, was (as certaine holy Doctors write) vpon emulation toward Peter, whom only they saw preferred before the rest in the payment of the tribute, by these wordes of our Sauour, Geue it them for me and thee. Chryf. ho. 59. Hiero. in Mat. Vpon this place. C. 17. v. 27.

7. Scandals.] The simple be most annoyed by taking scandal of their preachers, Priests, and elders il life: and great damnation is to the guides of the people whether they be temporal or spiritual, but specially to the spiritual, if by their il example and slaunders life the people be scadalized.

8. Hand, foote, eye.] By these partes of the body so necessarie and profitable for a man, is signified, that whatsoeuer is neereft and deereft to vs, Wife, children, frendes, riches, al are to be contemned and forsaken for to saue our soule.

10. Their Angels.] A great dignitie and a maruelous benefite that euery one hath from his Natiuitie

Natiuitie an Angel for his custodie and Patronage against the wicked before the face of God. Protection of Hiero. upon this place. And the thing is so plaine, that Caluin dare not deny it, and yet he wil needes Angels doubt of it, lib. 1. Inst. c. 14. sect. 7.

17. Not heare the Church.] Not only Heretikes, but any other obstinate offender that wil not be judged nor ruled by the Church, may be excommunicated, and so made as an Heathen or Publican was to the Iewes, by the discipline of the same, casting him out of the fellowship of Catholics. Which Excommunication is a greater punishment then if he were executed by sword, fire, and wild beastes. Aug. cont. Adu. leg. li. 7. c. 17. And againe he saith, Man is more sharply and pitefully bound by the Churches Keies, then with any yron or adamantine manicles or fetters in the world. August. ibidem.

17. Heathen.] Heretikes therefore because they wil not heare the Church, be no better nor no other wise to be esteemed of Catholics, then heathen men and Publicans were esteemed among the Iewes.

18. You shal binde.] As before he gaue this power of binding and loosing ouer the whole, first of al and principally to Peter, vpon whom he builded his Church: so here not only to Peter, and in him to his successors, but also to the other Apostles, and in them to their successors, euery one in their charge. Hieron. lib. 1. c. 74. aduers. Iouin. and Epist. ad Heliod. Cyprian. de vniuers. Eccl. nu. 1.

18. Shal loose.] Our Lord geueth no lesse right and authoritie to the Church to loose, then to binde, as S. Ambroise writeth against the Nouatians, who confessed that the Priests had power to binde, but not to loose.

20. In the middes of them.] Not al assemblies may challenge the presence of Christ, but only such as be gathered together in the vinity of the Church. and therefore no conuenticles of Heretikes directly gathering against the Church, are warranted by this place. Cyprian. de vniuers. Eccl. nu. 7. 8.

22. Seuentie times (saen.) There must be no end of forgeuing them that be penitent, either in the Sacrament by absolution, or one man an other their offences.

CHAP. XIX.

He answereth the tempting Pharisees, that the ease of a man with his wife shalbe (as in the first institution it was) utterly indissoluble, though for one cause he may be divorced. 10 And thereupon to his Disciples he highly commendeth single life for heaven. 15 He wil haue children come vnto him. 16 He sheweth what is to be done to enter into life euerlasting: 20 What also, for a rich man to be perfect: 27 As also what passing reuerend they shal haue which follow that his counsel of perfection: 29 yea though it be but in some one peece.

To shew how through Gods grace the Iewes shalbe ouerrunne of the Gentils, although they beginne after, he bringeth a parable of men Working soner and later in the vineyard, but the later rewarded in the end euen as the first. 17 He revealeth more to his Disciples touching his passion: 20 Bidding the ambitious rrvv sisters to thinke rather of suffering With him: 24 And teaching vs (in the rest of his Disciples) not to be greeued at our Ecclesiastical Superiors, considering they are (as he was him self) so toile for our Saluation. 29 Then going out of Iericho, he getteth sight vnto rrvv blind.

It signifieth also that God calleth countries to the faith, some soner, some later: and particular men to be his seruants, some yonger, some elder, of diuerse ages.

Diuerfitie of glorie in heauen.

23. To Whom is u prepared.] The kingdom of heauen is prepared for them that are Worthy of it and deserue it by their Wel doing, as in holy Scripture it is very often, That God wil repay euery man according to his Workes. and, Come ye blessed, possesse the kingdom prepared for you. Why? because I Was hungrie, and you gaue me meate: thirstie, and you gaue me drinke: &c. Therefore doeth Christ say here, It is not mine to giue. because he is iust and Wil not giue it to euery man without respect of their deserts: yea nor alike to euery one, but diuersly according to greater or lesser merits. as here S. Chryso. maketh it plaine, when our Sauour telleth them, that although they suffer martyrdom for his sake, yet he hath not to giue them the two cheefe places. *See S. Hiero. Upon this place, and li. 2 adu. 2. You shal finde.] Christ by diuine power both knewe where these beasts were, being absent, and commaunded them for his vse, being an other mans, and sodenly made the colt fitte to be ridden on, neuer broken before.
7. The asse and the colt.] This asse vnder yoke signifieth the Iewes vnder the Law and vnder God their Lord, as it were his old and ancient people: the yong colt now first ridden on by Christ, signifieth the Gentiles, wilde hitherto and not broken, now to be called to the faith and to receiue our Sauours yoke. And therefore the three last Euangelists writing specially to the Gentils, make mention of the colt only.
8. Garments in the Way.] These offices of honour done to our Sauour extraordinarily, were very acceptable: and for a memory hereof the holy Church maketh a solemne Procession euery yere vpon this day, specially in our Countrie when it was Catholike, with the B. Sacrament neuerly caried, as it were Christ vpon the asse, and strawing of rushes and floures, bearing of Palmes, setting vp boughes, spreading and hanging vp the richest clothes, the quire and queristers singing as here the children and the people. al done in a very goodly ceremonie to the honour of Christ and the memorie of his triumphe vpon this day. The like seruice and the like duties done to him in al other solemne Processions of the B. Sacrament, and otherwise, be vndoubtedly no lesse grateful.
9. Hosanna.] These very wordes of ioyful crie and triumphant voice of gratulation to our Sauour, holy Church vseth alwaies in the Preface of the Masse, as it were the voice of the Priest and al the people (who then specially are attent and deuout) immediatly before the Consecration and Eleuation, as it were expecting, and reioycing at his comming.
11. House of prayer.] Note here that he calleth external sacrifice (out of the Prophete Esay) prayer. For he speaketh of the Temple, which was builded properly and principally for sacrifice.
16. Mouth of infants.] Yong childrens prayers proceeding from the instinct of Gods spirit, be acceptable: and so the voices of the like, or of other simple folke now in the Church, though them selues vnderstand not particularly what they say, be maruelous grateful to Christ.
22. Beleeuing.] In respect of our owne vnworthinesse, and of the thing not alwaies expedient for vs, we may wel doubt when we pray, whether we shal obtaine or no: but on Gods part we must beleeue, that is, we must haue no diffidence or mistrust either of his power or of his wil, if we be worthy, and the thing expedient. And therefore S. Marke hath thus, Haue ye faith of God.
23. In what power.] The Heretikes presumptuously thinke them selues in this point like to Christ, because they are asked, in what power they come, and who sent them: but when they haue answered this question as fully as Christ did here by that which he insinuateth of Johns testimonie for his authority, they shalbe heard, and til then they shal be stil taken for those of whom God speaketh by the Prophete, They ranne, and I sent them not.
28. The first.] The first sonne here is the people of the Gentils, because Gentility was before there was a peculiar and chosen people of the Iewes, and therefore the Iewes here as the later, are signified by the other sonne.

CHAP. XXII.

Yet by one other parable he foresheWeth the most deserved reprobation of the earthly and persecuting Iewes, and the gracious vocation of the Gentils in their place. 15 Then he defeateth the snare of the Pharisees and Herodians about paying tribute to Caesar. 23 He answereth also the inuention of the Sadducees against the Resurrection: 24 and a question that the Pharisees aske to pose him: turning and posing them againe, because they imagined that Christ should be no more then a man: 26 and so he putteth al the busy Sectes to silence.

11. A man

The Church consisteth of good and bad.

11. A man not actyred. It profiteth not much to be within the Church and to be a Catholike, except a man be of good life, for such an one shall be damned, because with faith he hath not good workes: as is evident by the example of this man, who was within, and at the feast as the rest, but lacked the garment of charitie and good workes. And by this man are represented all the bad that are called. and therefore they also are in the Church, as this man was at the feast: but because he was called, and yet none of the elect, it is evident that the Church doth not consist of the elect only, contrarie to our Aduerſaries.

Neither must temporal Princes exact, nor their Subjects give vnto them, Ecclesiastical iurisdiction.

21. To Cæſar. Temporal duties and payments exacted by worldly Princes must be payed, so that God be not defrauded of his more soueraine dutie. And therefore Princes haue to take heed, how they exact: and others, how they geue to Cæſar, that is, to their Prince, the things that are dewe to God, that is, to his Ecclesiastical ministers. Wherevpon S. Athanasius reciteth these goodly wordes out of an epistle of the ancient and famous Cōfessor Hosius Cordubensis to Cōstantius the Arian Emperour: Cease I beseeche thee, and remember that thou art mortal, feare the day of iudgement, intermedle not with Ecclesiastical matters, neither doe thou commaund vs in this kinde, but rather learne them of vs, to thee God hath committed the Empire, to vs he hath committed the things that belong to the Church: and as he that with malicious eyes carpeth thine Empire, gainesayeth the ordinance of God: so doe thou also beware, lest in drawing vnto thee Ecclesiastical matters, thou be made guilty of a great crime. It is written, Geue ye the things that are Cæſars, to Cæſar: and the things that are Gods, to God. Therefore neither is it lawfull for vs in earth to hold the Empire, neither haile thou (O Emperour) power ouer incense and sacred things. Atham. Ep. ad Solit. vitā agentes. And S. Ambrose to Valentinian the Emperour (who by the ill counsel of his mother iustina an Arian, required of S. Ambrose to haue one Church in Millan deputed to the Arian Heretikes) saith: we pay that which is Cæſars, to Cæſar: and that which is Gods, to God. Tribute is Cæſars, it is not denied: the Church is Gods, it may not verely be yielded to Cæſar: because the Temple of God can not be Cæſars right. Which no man can deny but it is spoken with the honour of the Emperour. for what is more honorable then that the Emperour be said to be the sonne of the Church? For a good Emperour is within the Church, not about the Church. Ambr. lib. 1. Epist. Orat. de Basil. trad.

The Saints heare our prayers.

30. As Angels. As Christ proueth here, that in heauen they neither marry nor are married, because there they shall be as Angels: by the very same reason, is proued, that Saints may heare our prayers and helpe vs, be they neere or farre of, because the Angels do so, and in euery moment are present vwhere they list, and neede not to be neere vs, when they heare or helpe vs.

Religious single life, Angelical.

30. As Angels. Not to marry nor be married, is to be like to Angels: therefore is the state of Religious men and women and Priests, for not marrying, worthely called of the Fathers, an Angelical life. Cyp. lib. 2. de discipl. & hab. Virg. sub finem.

Not only faith.

32. Of the dead. S. Hierom by this place disproueth the Heretike Vigilantius, and in him these of our time, which to diminish the honour of Saints, call them of purpose, dead men.

40. On these two. Hereby it is evident that al dependeth not vpon faith only, but much more vpon charitie (though faith be the first) which is the loue of God and of our neighbour, which is the summe of al the law and the Prophetes: because he that hath this double charitie expressed here by these two principal commaundemets, fulfilleth and accomplisheth al that is commaunded in the Law and the Prophetes.

CHAP. XXIII.

The Scribes and Pharisees after at this, continuing still incorrigible, although he wil haue the doctrine of their Chaire obeyed, yet against their Workes (and namely their ambition) he openly inuigheth, crying to them eight Woes for their eightfold hypocrisie and blindness: 34 and so concluding with the most worthy reprobation of that persecuting generacion and their mother-citie Ierusalem with her Temple.

The See of Rome preferred in truth.

2. Chaire of Moyses.] God preferueth the truth of Christian religion in the Apostolike See of Rome, vvhich is in the new law answerable to the chaire of Moyses, notwithstanding the Bishops of the same were neuer so wicked of life: yea though some traitour as il as Iudas were Bishop thereof, it should not be prejudicial to the Church and innocent Christians, for vvhom our Lord prouiding said, Doe that vvhich they say, but doe not as they doe. August. Epist. 165.

1. What

Cōtra lit. Petii. li. 2. 6. 51. 3. Whatsoever they [shal say.] Why (saith S. Augustin) doest thou call the Apostolike Chaire the Chaire of pestilence? If for the men, Why? Did our Lord Iesū Christ for the Pharisees, any wrong to thee Chaire wherem they sate? Did he not commend that chaire of Moyses, and preferuing the honour of the chaire, reprove them? For he saith: They sitte upon the Chaire of Moyses, that which they say, doe ye. Thee things if you did wrel consider, you would not for the men whom you defame, blaspheme the See Apostolike, wherewith you doe not communicate. And againe he saith: Neither for the Pharisees (to whom you compare us not of wisdom but of malice) did our Lord commaund the Chaire of Moyses to be forsaken, in which chaire verely he figured his owne. for he warneth the people to doe that which they say, and not to doe that which they doe, and that the holiness of the Chaire be in no case forsaken, nor the unity of the flocke deuicid for the naughty Pastours.

4. Loue the first places.) He condemneth not dew places of Superiority geuen or taken of men according to their degrees, but ambitious seeking for the same, and their proude hart and wicked intention, which he saw within them, and therefore might boldly reprehend them.

5. One is your maister.) In the Catholike Church there is one Maister, Christ our Lord, and vnder him one Vicar, with whom al Catholike Doctōrs and teachers are one, becauē they teach al one thing, but in Arch-heretikes it is not so, where euery one of them is a diuerse maister, and teacheth contrarie to the other, and wil be called Rabbi and Maister, euery one of their owne Disciples: Arius a Rabbi among the Arians, Luther among the Lutherans, and among the Caluinists Caluin.

6. Masters.) Wicse and the like Heretikes of this time doe herevpon condemne degrees of Schole and titles of Doctōrs and Maisters: where they might as wel reprove S. Paul for calling him self Doctōr and Maister of the Gentiles: and for saying * that there should be alwayes Doctōrs in the Church, and whereas they bring the other words following, against Religious men who are called fathers: as wel might they by this place take away the name of carnal fathers, and blame S. Paule for calling him self the only spiritual father of the Corinthians. but in deede nothing is here forbidden but the contentious diuision and partiality of such as make them selues Ringleaders of Schismes and Sectes, as Donatus, Arius, Luther, Caluin.

7. Scribes and Pharisees.] In al these reprehensions it is much to be noted, that our Sauour for the honour of Priesthod neuer reprehended Priests by that name. Cypr. ep. 65. Whereas our Heretikes vse this name of purpose in reproche and de.pite.

8. Praying long prayers.) They are not reprehended here for the things them selues, which for the most part are good, as long prayer, making Proielytes, garnit hing the Prophetes sepulchres, &c. but for their wicked purpose and intention, as before is said of fasting, prayers, almes, Mat. 6.

9. Double more.) They that teach that it is vnough to haue only faith, doe make such Christians, as the Iewes did Proielytes, children of Hel far more then beioze. August. lib. de fide & oper. cap. 26.

10. Sanctifeth.) Note that donaries and gifts bestowed vpon Churches and altars, be sanctified by dedication to God, and by touching the altar and other holy things: as now specially the vessels of the sacrifice and Sacrament of Christes body and blood, by touching the same, and the altar it self wherevpon it is consecrated. Whereof Theophylacte writeth thus vpon this place: In the old law Christ permitteth not the gifts to be greater then the altar, but wish vs, the altar is sanctified by the gifts: for the hostes by the diuine grace are turned into our Lords body, and therefore is the altar also sanctified by them.

11. By him that dwelleth therein.) By this we see that swearing by creatures, as by the Gospel, by Saints, is al referred to the honour of God, whose Gospel it is, whose Saints they are.

12. Appeare to men.) Christ might boldly reprehend them so often and so vehemently for hypocrisie, because he knew their harts and intentions: but we that can not see within men, may not presume to call mens external good doings, hypocrisie: but iudge of men as we see and know.

13. Garnish.) Christ blameth not the Iewes for adorning the sepulchres of the Prophetes, but entwyreth them of their malice toward him, and of that which by his diuine knowledge he foresaw, that they would accomplish the wickednes of their fathers in shedding his blood, as their fathers did the blood of the Prophetes. Hilar.

4. Seduce.] The firſt and principal warning, needful for the faithful from Chriſtes Aſcenſion to the very end of the world, is, that they be not deceaued by Heretikes, which vnder the titles of true teachers and the name of Chriſt and his Goſpel, wil ſeducer many.

5. I am Chriſt.] Not only ſuch as haue named them ſelues Chriſt, as Simon, Menander, and ſuch like: but al Arch-heretikes be Chriſtes to their folowers, Luther to the Lutherans, Caluin to the Caluinists: becauſe they beleue them, rather than Chriſt ſpeaking in his Church.

12. Iniquity

12. Iniquity abound.] When Heresie and false teachers reigne in the world, namely toward the later day, wicked life aboundeth, and charity decayeth.

14. Shal be preached.] The Gospel hath been preached of late yeres, and now is, by holy Religious men of diuers Orders, in sundry great Countries which neuer heard the Gospel before, as it is thought.

15. Abomination of desolation.] This abomination of desolation foretold, was first partly fulfilled in diuerse prophanations of the Temple of Hierusalem. When the sacrifice and seruice of God was taken away. but specially it shal be fulfilled by Antichrist and his Precursors, when they shal abolish the holy Masse, which is the Sacrifice of Christes body and blood, and the only soueraine worship dewe to God in his Church: as S. Hyppolytus writeth in these wordes: The Churches shal lament with great lamentation, because there shal neither oblation be made, nor incense, nor worship grateful to God. But the sacred houies of Churches shal be like to cottages, and the pretious body and blood of Christ shal not be extant (openly in Churches) in those dayes, the Liturgie (or Masse) shal be extinguished, the Psalmodie shal cease, the reciting of the Scriptures shal not be heard. Hippol. de Antichristo. By which it is plaine that the Heretikes of these daies be the special fore-runners of Antichrist.

22. Shal be shortned.] The reigne of Antichrist shal be short, that is, three yeres and a halfe. Dan. 7. Apoc. 11. Therefore the Heretikes are blasphemous and ridiculous, that say, Christes Vicar is Antichrist, who hath sitten these 1500 yeres.

24. Great signes.] These signes and miracles shal be to the outward appearance only, for S. Paule calleth them * lying signes, to seduce them only that shal perish. Wherby we see that if Heretikes could worke feyned and forged miracles, yet we ought not to beleue them, much lesse when they can not so much as seeme to doe any.

26. In closets.] Christ hauing made the Churches authority bright and clere to the whole world, warneth the faithful to take heede of Heretikes and Schismatices, which haue their conuenticles aside in certaine odde places and obscure corners, alluring curious persons vnto them. Aug. li. 1. q. Euang. q. 38. For as for the coming together of Catholikes to serue God in secreete places, that is a necessarie thing in time of periecution, and was vsed of Christians for three hundred yeres together after Christ, * and the Apostles also and disciples came so together in Hierusalem for feare of the Iewes. And Catholikes doe the same at this day in our countrie, not drawing religion into corners from the society of the Catholike Church, but practising secreetely the same faith, that in al Christendom shineth and appeareth most gloriously.

29. Immediately.] If the later day shal immediately folow the persecution of Antichrist, which is to endure but three yeres and a halfe, as is afore said: then is it mere blasphemie to say, Gods Vicar is Antichrist, and that (by their owne limitation) these thousand yeres almost.

CHAP. XXV.

Continuing his Sermon, he bringeth two parables, of ten Virgins, and of Talents, to shew how it shalbe in Domesday With the Faithful that prepare, and that prepare not them selues. 31 Then also without parables he sheweth that such Faithful as doe Workes of mercy, shal haue for them life euerlasting: and such as doe not, euerlasting damnation.

ANNOTATIONS
CHAP. XXV.

- Good Workes necessaric. 1. Virgins.] These virgins five wise, and five foolish, signifie that in the Church militant there be good and bad: which bad shal be shut out at the later day, although they haue lampes (that is faith) as the other, because their lampes are out, that is, their faith is dead without charity and good workes to lighten them Greg. ho. 12.
- Right intencion. 1. Lampes.] These lampes lighted, be good workes, namely of mercy, and the laudable conversation which shineth before men. Aug. ep. 120, c. 33.
2. Oyle.] This oyle is the right inward intencion directing our workes to Gods glorie, and not to the praise of our selues in the light of men. Aug. ep. 120, c. 33.
27. With vsurie.] Vsurie is here taken for the lawfull gaine that a man getteth by wel employing his goods. When God geueth vs any talent or talents, he looketh for viurie, that is, for spiritual increase of the same by our diligence and industrie.
- We must vse Gods gifts. 29. Thas which he seemeth to haue.] He is said to haue Gods gifts, that vseth them, and to such an one God wil increase his gites. He that vieth them not, seemeth to haue, rather then hath them, and from him God wil withdraw thar which before he gaue.
- Good and bad in the Church. 32. Separate.] Lo here is the separation, for in the Church militant they liued both together. As for Heretikes, they went out of the Church before, and separated them selues, and therefore are not to be separated here, as being iudged already.
- Heauen is the reward of good Workes, and Hel of the contrarie. 34. Come ye, & get ye aWay.] It is no incongruity that God should say, Goe into euerlasting fire, to them that by their free wil haue repelled his mercie: and to the other, Come ye blessed of my father, take the kingdom prepared for them, that by their free wil haue receiued faith, and confessed their sinnes and done penance. Aug. li. 2 act. cum Fel. Manich. c. 8.
35. You gaue me.] Hereby We see how much almes-deedes and al workes of mercy preuaile towards life euerlasting, and to blot out former sinnes. Aug. in Pf. 49.
42. Gaue me not.] He chargeth them not here that they beleued not, but that they did not good workes. For such did beleue, but they cared not for good workes, as though by dead faith they might haue come to heauen. Aug. de fid. & op. c. 15. & ad Dulcit. q. 3. 10. 4.

ANNO TATIONS
C H A P. X X V I.

1. This wast.] Cost bestowed vpon Christes body then aliue, being to the same not necessary, seemed to the disciples lost and fruitles: so the like bestowed vpon the same body if the Sacrament, vpon altars, or Churches, seemeth to the simple lost, or lesse meritorious, then if the same were bestowed vpon the poore.

10. Good Worke.] Cost bestowed for religion, deuotion, and signification, is a meritorious worke, and often more meritorious then to geue to the poore, though both be very good, and in some case the poore are to be preferred: yea * in certaine cases of necessity, the Church wil breake the very consecrated vessels and iewels of siluer and gold, and bestow them in workes of mercy. But we may remember very wel, and our fathers knew it much better, that the poore were then best releued, when most was bestowed vpon the Church. Ambros li. 2 Off. 28.

11. Haue not.] We haue him not in visible maner as he conuersed on the earth with his disciples, needing releefe like other poore men: but we haue him after an other sort in the B. Sacrament, and with vs in the B. Sacrament. yet haue him truly and really the self same body. Therefore he saith, they should not haue him, because they should not so haue him, but after an other maner. as when he said Luce. 24 as though he were not then with them, When I Was With you.

20. Twelue.] It must needs be a great mysterie that he was to worke in the institution of the new Sacrifice by the marvelous transmutatiō of bread and wine into his body and blood. whereas he admitted none (although many present in the citie) but the twelue Apostles, vvwhich were already taught to beleue it without contradiction 1o. 6, and were to haue the administration and consecration thereof by the Order of Priesthood, vvwhich also was there geuen the to that purpose. whereas at the eating of the Paschal lambe al the familie was wont to be present.

26. He tooke bread.] Here at once is instituted, for the continuance of the external office of Christes eternal Priesthood according to the order of Melchisedec, both a Sacrifice and a Sacrament, though the Scriptures geue neither of these names to this action: and our Aduerfaries without al reason or religion accept in a sort the one, and vterly deny the other. A Sacrifice, in that it is ordeined to continue the memory of Christes death and oblation vpon the Crosse, and the application of the general vertue thereof to our particular necessities, by consecrating the feueral elemēts, not into Christes whole person as it was borne of the virgin or now is in heauen, but the bread into his body apart, as betrayed, broken, and geuen for vs: the wine into his blood apart, as shed out of his body for remission of finnes and deicaution of the new Testament, vvwhich be conditions of his person as he was in sacrifice and oblation. In vvwhich mystical and vnspēakable maner, he would haue the Church to offer and sacrifice him daily, and he in mysterie and Sacrament dyeth, though though now not only in heauen, but also in the Sacramēt, he be in deede per Concomitantiam (as the Church calleth it, that is, by sequēle of al his partes to ech other) whole, aliue, and immortal. Which point becauē our Aduerſaries vnderstand not, nor knowing the Scriptures nor the power of God, they blasphemē, and abuē the people to their damnation. It is also a Sacramēt, in that it is ordeined to be receiued into our bodies and to feede the same to reiuuēction and immortality, and to geue grace and saluation to our soules, if we worthely receiue it.

26. Blessed Our Aduerſaries for the two wordes that are in Greeke and Latin, benedixit, and, gratias agit, he blessed, he gaue thanks, vie only the later, of purpose to signifie that Christ blessed not nor conſecrated the bread and the Wine, and so by that blessing wrought any effect vpon them, but gaue thanks only to his father, as we doe in saying grace. But the truth is that the word δολογῆν. signifieth properly to bleſſe, and is referred to the thing that is blessed, as Luc. 9 of the fishes, δολογῆσεν αὐτοῖς. benedixit eis, he blessed them, and thereby wrought in them that wonderful multiplication. So the blessing of God is alwayes effectual: and therefore here also he blessed the bread, and by that blessing, with the wordes folowing, made it his body. Ambros. li. de hu qui inisi. myst. c. 9. Aug. ep. 59 ad Paulinum. Now whereas taking the cuppe it is said, he gaue thanks. We say that it is al one with blessing, and that he blessed the cuppe, as before the bread: as it is eident by these wordes of S. Paul, Calix cui benedicimus, the cuppe which we bleſſe: and therefore he calleth it, Calicem benedictionis, the cuppe of blessing, vntil the same Greeke word that is spoken of the bread. But why is it then said here, he gaue thanks? becauē we translate the wordes faithfull, as in the Greeke and the Latin, and becauē the sense is al one, as we are taught by S. Paul before alleaged, and by the fathers, which cal this geuing of thanks ouer the cuppe or ouer the bread, the blessing therof. S. Iustin. in fin. 2. Apol. Panem Eucharistisatum: S. Irenee li. 4. c. 14. Panem in quo gratia acta sunt. S. Cyprian de can. do. Calix solenni benedictione sacrasus. that is, *The bread blessed by geuing thanks vpon it. Luke putteth these wordes before he come to the consecration, whereby it seemeth that he speaketh of the wine of the Paſchal lambe, and therefore nameth it, the fruite of the vine. but if he speake of the wine which was now his blood, he nameth it not withstanding wine, as S. Paule nameth the other bread, for three causes: first becauē it was so before: as Eue is called Adams bone, and, Aarons rod deuoured their rodde: whereas they were not now rodde, but serpents. And, He tasted the water turned into wine: whereas it was now wine and not water: and such like. secondly, becauē it keepeth the formes of bread and wine, and things are called as they appeare: as when Raphael is called a yong man Job. 1. and, Three men appeared to Abraham Gen. 18. whereas they were three Angels. thirdly, becauē Christ in this Sacramēt is very true and principal bread and wine, feeding and refreshing vs in body and soule to euerlasting life.

Priestes and auncients of the people consulted together against I E S V S, that they might put him to death. † And they brought him bound 2 and deliuered him to Ponce Pilate the Presi-

† Then Iudas that betrayed him, seeing that he vvas con- 3 demned, "repenting him, returned the thirtie siluer peeces to the cheefe Priestes and auncients, † saying, I haue sinned, be- 4 traying iust blood. But they said, What is that to vs? looke thou to it. † And casting dovvne the siluer peeces in the tem- 5 ple, he departed: and vvent and "hanged him self vwith an halter. † And the cheefe Priestes hauing taken the siluer peeces, 6 said, It is not lavvful to cast them into the :: Corbana: because it is the price of blood. † And after they had consulted toge- 7 ther, they bought vwith them the potters field, to be a burying place for strangers. † For this cause that field vvas called 8 Haceldama, that is, the field of blood, euen to this present day.
† Then vvas fulfilled that vvhich vvas spoken by Ieremie the 9 Prophet, saying, And they took the thirtie peeces of siluer, the price of the priced, vvhom they did price of the children of Israel: † and they gaue them into 10 the potters field, as our Lord did appoint to me.

:: This Corbana was a place about the Temple, which receiued the peoples gifts or offerings. See Mar. 12, v. 42.

† And I E S V S stooode before the President, and the Presi- 11
dent asked him, saying, Art thou the King of the Iewes?
I E S V S saith to him, Thou sayest. † And vvhhen he vvas ac- 12 cused of the cheefe Priestes and auncients, he answered nothing. † Then Pilate saith to him, Doest thou not heare 13 hovv many testimonies they alleage against thee? † And he 14 answered him not to any vvord: so that the President did maruel exceedingly.

 ring, said to them: Whether vvil you of the tvvo to be relea-22 fed vnto you? But they said, Barabbas. † Pilate saith to them, What shal I doe then vvith I E S V S that is called Christ? They 23 say al, Let him be crucified. † The President said to them, Why vvhat euil hath he done? But they cried the more, saying, Let uailed, but rather tumult vvas tovvard: taking vvater he vvashed his hands before the people, saying, I am^o innocent of 25 the bloud of this iust man: looke you to it. † And the vvhole

 26 children. † Then he released to them Barabbas, and hauing scourged I E S V S, deliuered him vnto them for to be cruci-

Io. 19, 2.

27 † Then the Presidents souldiars taking I E S V S into the 28 Palace, gathered together vnto him the vvhole band: † * and 29 stripping him, put a scarlet cloke about him, † and plating a crowne of thornes, put it vpon his head, and a reede in his right hand. And bowing the knee before him, they mocked 30 him, saying, Haile King of the Ievves. † And spitting vpon 31 him, they tooke the reede, and smote his head. † And after they had mocked him, they tooke of the cloke from him, and put on him his ovvne garments, and led him avvay to cruci-32 fie him. † And in going they found a man of Cyréne, named 33 Simon: him they forced to take vp his crosse. † And they

 CHAP. XXVII.

3. Repenting him.] Note how speedily the plague of God falleth after sinne, and specially men must note what torment of conscience, and deiperation often foloweth the sheading of innocent blood. Horror of conscience.

5. Hung him self.] If he had rightly repented, norvvithstanding his horrible treason, he might haue obteyned mercy: but by hanging him self he tooke away al meanes of mercy and saluation, because he died finally impenitent. Desperation.

24. Innocent of his blood.] Though Pilate was much more innocent then the Iewes, and vvould haue been free from the murder of our Sauour, seeking al the meanes that he could (vvithout offending the people and the Emperours lawes) to dimisse him: Yet he is damned for being the minister of the peoples wicked wil against his owne conscience. euen as al Officers be, and specially the Iudges and Iuries vvhich execute lawes of temporal Princes against Catholike men: for al such be guilty of innocent blood, and be nothing excused by that they execute other mens Will according to the lawes, vvhich be vniust. For they should rather suffer death them selues, then put an innocent man to death. They that execute lawes against their co-science, are like to Pilate.

40. If thou be the Sonne.] Maruel not, when thou hearest our Sauour in the B. Sacrament mocked at, or seest him abused of wicked men, that he straight reuengeth not such blasphemies:
 or that he sheweth not him self there visibly and to the senses, when faithles Heretikes wil say, Let me see him, tast him, &c. for he suffered here the like on the Crosse, when he might at his Will haue come downe vvith as much ease as he rose when he was dead. Christ derided in the B. Sacrament, euen as vvpo the Crosse.

46. Why hast thou forsaken me?] Beware here of the detestable blasphemie of Calvin and the Calvinists, vvho thinking not the bodily death of Christ sufficient, say, that he was also here so forsaken and abandonede ^{at this time, &c.} that he sustained in soule and conscience the very feares and torments of the damned. And to take away the Article of his descending into Hel after his death, (vvhich was vvith triumph and not in paine,) they say that his descending was nothing els, but that his soule suffered the very paines of Hel vvpon the Crosse. Whereas in deede by these vvordes out of the Psalme, our Sauour wil signifie no more but that his paines (being now so long on the Crosse and ready to die) were very great, and therefore according to the inhumanity of his humane nature, for very anguish (as before in the garden when he was but toward his Passion) he saith he was forsaken, for two causes, first because it was the wil of God not to deliuer him, but that he should die: secondly, because his diuine nature did so repress it self for the time, that he felt no comfort thereof at al, but was left to die in extreme paines as a mere man.

Reuerent vsing of our L. Body. 19. Wrapped.] This honour and duty done to Christes body being dead, was maruelous grateful and meritorious. And this wrapping of it in cleane sindon may signifie by S. Hierom, that the Body of our Lord is to be wrapped not in gold, pretious stones, and silke, but in pure linnen. S. Hiero. in hunc locum.

THE ARGUMENT OF S. MARKES GOSPEL.

S. Marke Gospel may be well diuided into foure partes.
 The first part, of the preparation that was made to the manifestation of Christ : chap. 1. in the beginning.
 The Second, of his manifesting him selfe by Preaching and Miracles, and that in Galilee: the residue of the 1. chap. vnto the 10. chap.
 The third, of his comming into Iurie, towards his Passion : chap. 10.
 The fourth, of the Holy weeke of his Passion in Hierusalem: chap. 11. to the end of the booke.

Of S. Marke and his conuersation with the two Apostles S. Paul and S. Barnabee, we haue at large Act. 12. and 15. somewhat also Col. 4. and 2. Tim. 4. and to Philémon. Moreouer of his familiaritie with the Prince of the Apostles S. Peter, we haue 1 Pet. 5. For so it pleased our Lord, that onely two of the Euangelistes should be of his true Apostles, to wit, S. Matthew and S. Iohn. The other two, S. Marke and S. Luke, he gaue vnto vs of the Disciples of his two most principal and most glorious Apostles S. Peter and S. Paul. Whose Gospels therefore were of Antiquitie counted as the Gospels of S. Peter and S. Paul them selues. Marke the disciple and interpreter of Peter (saith S. Hierom) according to that which he heard of Peters mouth, wrote at Rome a briefe Gospel at the request of the Brethren (about 10 or 12 yeres after our Lordes Ascension.) Which when Peter had heard, he approued it, and with his authoritie did publish it to the Church to be read, as Clemens Alexandrinus writeth li. 6. hypotypof.

It is also to be noted, that in respect of S. Peter, who sent S. THE HOLY GOSPEL OF IESVS CHRIST ACCOR-DING TO MARKE.

CHAP. I.

THE FIRST part of this Gospel : of the preparatiō to christis manifesta- tion.

John (the Eremite of whom the Prophet) preaching penance, and liuing him self accordingly, baptizeth the people to prepare them to Christ, 7 telling them, that it is not he, but Christs Baptisme, in which they shal receiue the Holy Ghost. 9 IESVS there is manifested from heauen: 12 and by and by he also goeth into the wilderness. 14 Beginning in Galilee, 16 after that he hath called foure Disciples, 21 he preacheth first in Capharnaum, confirming his doctrine with beneficial Miracles, to the great admiration of al: 35 then also (but first retiring into the wilderness) in al the rest of Galilee, with like miracles.

HE beginning of the Gospel of IESVS CHRIST the sonne of God. † As it is vwritten in `Esay the Prophet', (Behold I send mine Angel before thy face, who shal prepare thy way before thee,) † A voice of one crying in the desert, Prepare ye the way of our Lord, make straight his pathes.

† * Iohn vvas in the desert baptizing, and preaching the baptisme of penance :: vnto remission of sin- nes. † And there vvent forth to him al the countrie of Ievvrie, and al they of Hierusalem: and vvere baptized of him in the riuier of Iordan, " confessing " their sinnes. † And Iohn vvas " clothed vwith camels heare, and a girdle of a skinne about his loines: and he did eate locustes and vvild honie. † And he preached, saying, There commeth a stronger then I after me: vvwhose latchet of his shoes I am not vvorthie stouping dovvne to vnloose. † I haue baptized you " vwith vvater: but he shal baptize you vvith the holy Ghost.

∴ Iohns baptis- me put them in hope only of remission of sinnes as a preparatiue to Christs Sacrament by which sinnes were in deede to be remitted. Aug. li. 3 de bapt. c. 10.

† And it came to passe: in those daies came IESVS from Nazareth of Galilee: and vvas " baptized of Iohn in Iordan. † And forthvvith comming vp out of the vvater, he savv the heauens opened, and " the Spirit as a doue descending, and remaining on him. † And a voice vvas made from heauen, Thou art my beloued sonne, in thee I am vvell pleased.

nights: and vvas tempted of Satan. and he vvas vvith

† And * after that Iohn vvas deliuered vp, I E S V S 14 came into Galilee, preaching the Gospel of the kingdom of God, † and saying, That the time is fulfilled, and the kingdom 15 of God is at hand: :: be penitent, and beleue the Gospel.

† * And passing by the sea of Galilee, he savv Simon and 16 Andrevv his brother, casting nettes into the sea (for they vve-re fishers) † and I E S V S said to them, Come after me, and 17
I vvill make you to become fishers of men. † And imme- 18

* there vvas in their Synagogue a man in an vncleane spirit:
and he cried out, † saying, What to vs and to thee I E S V S of 24 Nazareth? art thou come to destroy vs? I knowv vvho thou art, the Sainct of God. † And I E S V S threatened him, saying, 25 Hold thy peace, and goe out of the man. † And the vncleane 26 spirit tearing him, and crying out vvith a great voice, vvvent out of him. † And they marueled al, in so much that they que- 27 stioned among them selues, saying, What thing is this? vvhat is this nev v doctrine? for vvith povver he commaundeth the

5. Confessing their sinnes.] A certaine confession of sinnes: there was euen in that penance which Confession.
Iohn preached, and which was made before men were baptized. Whereby it is cleere that Iohn made a preparation to the Sacrament of Penance which after ward was instituted by Christ, as well as he did by baptizing prepare the way to Christs baptisme.

5. Their sinnes.] He doth not say that they confessed them selues to be sinners, which may be Particular condone by a general confession: but that they confessed their sinnes, which is a particular confession.

6. Closhed.] The Holy Ghost thought it worthy of speciall reporting how straitly this Pro- Iohns example phete liued, and how he abstained from delicate meates and apparel. See Mat. c. 3, of penance.

7. Wish Water.] Iohn with water only, Christ with the Holy Ghost, not only, as the Heretikes hold, that say water is not necessary, but with water and the Holy Ghost, as it is plaine Io. 3. Baptisme in 12. Desert.] Christ doing penance by long fasting, solitarinesse, and conuersing with wilde beastes, gaue example and instruction to the Church for Lent fast, and to holy Eremites of retiring them selues to the Wildernesse and prayer.

Solitarie contemplation.

35. Desert place.] Christ vsed very often to retire into solitary places, no doubt for our example, to teach vs that such places are best for prayer and contemplation, and that we should oiten retire our selues from worldly matters to solitary meditation of heauenly things.

CHA. II.

Against the Scribes and Pharisees he defendeth first his power to remitte sinnes in earth, 23 and his eating with sinners (as being the Physicion of soules, signified in those his miraculou cures vpon bodies): 18 then also he defendeth his Disciples, not hauing as yet any fastes by him prescribed vnto them, and plucking eares of corne vpon the Sabbath: signifying vnto us that he will change their ceremonies.

AND againe he entred into Capharnaum 1 after some daies, and it vvas heard that he vvas in the house, † and many came 2 together, so that there vvas no place no him for the multitude, they vncouered the rooffe vvhere he † their faith, he saith to the sicke of the palsiey, Sonne, thy sinnes are forgiuen thee. † And there vvere certaine of the 6 Scribes sitting there and thinking in their hartes, † Why doth 7 he speake so? he blasphemeth. * Who can forgiue sinnes but only God? † Which by and by I E S V S knowving in his spi- 8 rit, that they so thought vvithin them selues; saith to them, Why thinke you these things in your hartes? † Whether is 9 easier, to say to the sicke of the palsiey, Thy sinnes are forgiuen thee: or to say, Arise, take vp thy couche, and vvalke?

 † But that you may knowv that the Sonne of man hath 10 pouer in earth to forgiue sinnes (he saith to the sicke of the palsiey) † I say to thee, Arise, take vp thy couche, and goe in- 11

4. Uncovered.) Such diligence ought to be vsed to bring sinners to Christ in his Sacraments, as was vsed to procure this man and others, by Christ, the health of their bodies.

5. Sicke of the palsy.) Such as this man was in body by dissolution of his limmes, such also was he in soule by the noisome desires of the world occupying his hart; and withdrawing him from al good workes. Aug. de Pastor. c. 6 to. 9.

6. Thy sinnes.) Hereby it appeareth that Christ healed this sicke man first in his soule, before he tooke away his bodily infirmity: which may be an instruction for al men in bodily disease, first to call for the Sacraments, which be medicines of the soule. As hereby also may be gathered that many diseases come for sinne, and therefore can not be healed til the sinnes be remitted.

The Sacraments
to be called for in sicknes.

Mā hath power
to remit sinnes.

10. The Sonne of man.) As Christ proueth vnto them, that him self as man, and not as God only, hath power to remitte sinnes, by that in al their sightes he was able to doe miracles and make the sickman suddenly arise: so the Apoitles hauing power graunted them to doe miracles, though they be not God, may in like maner haue authority from God to remitte sinnes, not as God, but as Gods minitlers.

Christ remit-teth sinnes by the Priests ministerie.

10. In earth.) This power that the Sonne of man hath to remitte sinnes in earth, was neuer taken from him, but dureth still in his Sacraments, and minitlers, by Whom he remitteth sinnes in the Church, and not in heauen only. For concerning sinne, there is one court of conscience in earth, and another in heauen: and the iudgement in heauen foloweth and approueth this on earth: as is plaine by the wordes of our Sauour to Peter first, and then to al the Apoitles, Whatsoeuer you shal bind vpon earth, shal be bound in heauen: Whatsoeuer you shal loose vpon earth, shal be loosed in heauen: Wherevpon S. Hierom saith, That Priests hauing the keyes of the kingdom of heauen, iudge after a sort before the day of iudgement. And S. Chrysost. li. 3 de Sacerd. paul. post princip. more at large.

25. In necessity.) In necessity many things be done without sinne, which els might not be done: and so the very chalices and consecrated iewels and vessels of the Church in cases of necessity are by lawful authority turned to profane vses: which otherwise to alienate to a mans priuate comodiue is sacrilege.

The blind Pharisees seeking his death for doing good vpon the Sabbath, he meekely goeth out of the way: where the people that flocke vnto him, and his Miracles, are innumerable. 13 Yea to his Truelue also (hauing needs of moe workmen) he giveth power to worke Miracles. 20 He so occupieth him self for soules, that his kinne thinke him madde. 22 The Scribes of Hierusalem come so farre, and yet haue nothing but absurdly to blasfeme his casting out of Diuels, to their owne damnation. 31 That the Iewes should not (after their maner) thinke it ynough, that he is of their bloud, he teileth that such rather are decre to him, as keepe Gods commaundements.

 as though he spake in parables of purpose and to this end, that the hearers might not vnderstand, left thor of sinne, they should be conuerted: which were as much to say as that he would not haue them vnder- but mans owne in the Actes, where our Saviour and S. Paul speake thus, They haue heard heauily, and haue shut their that the speaking in parables was not the cause (for many beside the Apostles heard and vnder-stood) but them selues would not heare, and vnderstand, and be conuerted: and so were the cause of their owne wilful and obstinate infidelity. And therefore also he spake in parables, because they were not worthy to vnderstand, as the other to whom he expounded them.

9. Could bind him.] We see here that mad men which haue extraordinary strength, are many times possessed of the diuel: as there is also a deafe and a dumme diuel, and vnclene spirits, which worke their effects in men, possessing their bodies. Al which things infidels and carnal men following only nature and reason, attribute to natural causes: and the lesse faith a man hath, the lesse he beleueeth that the diuel worketh such things.

28. If I shall touch.] So the good Catholike faith, If I might but touche one of his Apostles, yea one of his Apostles napkins, yea but the shade of one of his Saints, I should be better for it. Al. 5. and 19. See S. Chryf. 10. 5 cont. Gent. in principio. in vit. Babyla. Yea S. Basil saith, He that toucheth the bone of a martyr, receiueh in some degree holiness of the grace or vertue that is therein. Basil. in ps. 115.

30. Vertue.] Vertue to heale this womans maladie, proceeded from Christ, though she touched but his coate: so when the Saints by their Relikes or garments do miracles, the grace and force thereof commeth from our Sauour, they being but the meanes or instruments of the same.

36. Only beleue.] It is our common speache, when we require one thing specially, though other things also be as necessarie, and more necessarie. As the Phylicion to his patient, Only haue a good hart: when he must also keepe a diet, and take potions, things more requisite. So Christ in this great infidelity of the Iewes, required only that they would beleue he was able to doe such a cure, such a miracle, and then he did it: otherwise it foloweth in the next Chapter, He could not do miracles there because of their incredulity. Againe, for this faith he gaue them here and in al like places health of body, which they desired. and therefore he saith not, Thy faith hath iustified thee: but, hath made the safe or whole. Againe this was the fathers faith, which could not iustifie the daughter. Whereby it is most euident, that this Scripture, and the like, are folishely abused of the Heretikes to proue that only faith iustifieth. U. 5.

41. Wenche arise.] Christs miracles, besides that they be wonders and waies to shew his power, be also significatiue: as these which he corporally raised from death, put vs in minde of his raising our soules from sinne. The Scripture maketh special mention only of three raised by our Sauour. of which three, this wenche is one, within the house: another, the Widowes sonne in Naim, now caried out to ward the graue: the third, Lazarus hauing been in the graue foure daies, and therefore stinking. Which diuersity of dead bodies, signifie diuersity of dead soules, some more desperate then other, some past al mans hope, and yet by the grace of Christ to be reuiued and reclaimed. *Aug. de verb. 3. They were scandalized.] This scandal rose partly of enuy of his equals by birth, who reputed them selues as good as he, tooke skorne to be taught of him. Wherevpon Christ saith, A Prophet is not without honour but in his owne countrie: signifying (as it is plaine in Luke) the malice and enuy of the Iewes his countrie men in refusing him (to. 1.) and that the Gentils would more esteeme of him.

5. He could not.] It is said that he could not worke miracles there, not meaning that he was not able, but that on their part there wanted apt disposition to receiue them. And therefore he would not of cogruity worke there, vvhether their incredulity vvas so great, that it vwould not haue prohted them. And for this cause he saith els where to them that wil see and enioy his miracles, Only beleene.

8. Not two coats.] He forbiddeth superfluites, and to careful prouision of bodily things, when they are about Gods seruice in gaining soules. And for the contrariety that seemeth here and in S. Mattheu, vnderstand that there he forbiddeth them to carie rod or staffe to defend them selues, here he permitteth a vvalking rod or staffe to leane and stay vpon: there he forbiddeth shoes to couer al the foote, such as we vveare: here he permitteth sandals, that is such as had soles only, which the poore commonly vware in leuery, and novv some religious men. 2. Common.] Common and vncleane is al one. For the Iewes vvwere commaunded by the Law to eate certaine kindes of meates only, and not al indifferently: and becauſe theſe vvwere ſeparated from other meates, and as it vvwere ſanctified to their vſe, they called the other common and profane: and becauſe the Law calleth thoſe cleane and theſe vncleane, thereof it is, that vncleane and common is al one. as in this Chapter often, and Act. 10.
7. Precepts of men.] Mens ordinances vvwhich be repugnant to Gods commaundements, be here condemned: as al obſeruations not edifying nor profitable to the fulfilling of Gods commaundements, be vaine and ſuperfluous: as many obſeruations of the Phariſees vvwere then, and the like traditions of Heretikes be now. for howſoever they bragge of Scriptures, al their maner of adminiſtration and miniſterie is their owne tradition and inuention vvwithout al Scripture and vv warrant of Gods vv word. But the traditions of the Apoſtles and Ancients, and al the precepts of holy Church vvwe are commaunded to keepe, as things not preſcribed by man, but by the Holy Ghoſt. Act. 15, 28. 41. 2 Theſſal. 2, 15.

And theſe Phariſees teaching children ſo to neglect their duties to their parents, did vv wickedly.
15. Nothing entering into a man.] As theſe vvwordes of our Sauour do not import, that the Iewes then might haue eaten of thoſe meates vvwhich God forbade them: no more doe they now, that vvwe Chriſtians may eate of meates vvwhich the Church forbiddeth vs. And yet both then and now al meates are cleane, and nothing entering into a man, deſileth a man. For neither they then, nor vvwe now abſteine, for that any meates are of their nature abominable, or deſile the eaters, but they for ſignification, vvwe for obedience and chafiſement of our bodies.
33. Spitting.] Not only by Chriſts vvword and vvwill, but alſo by ceremonie and by application of external creatures vvwhich be holy, miracles are vv wrought. as by Chriſts ſpittle, vvwhich vvwas not part of his perſon, being a ſuperfluity of his body, but yet moſt holy. Theophyl. in 7 Marci.

7. Blessed them.] So is it in some ancient Greeke copies, agreable to our Latin, and in S. Luke Luc. 9. 16. expressly in the common Greeke text, that he blessed the five loaves and the two fishes: which must be alwaies marked against the Heretikes, which denie this blessing to pertaine to the creatures, but feine it alwaies to be referred to God for thanks giuing. For if it were so, he would haue said grace but once for that whole refection: but he did seuerally bleise both the bread first, and afterward the fishes also, multiplying them by his said blessing (as he did mankind and other creatures Gen. 1. 22. in the beginning by blessing them) and so working effectually some change or alteration in the

8. For me and the Gospel.] By the Gospel is signified, not only the foure Euangelistes, but al Scriptures, and whatsoever Christ said that is not in Scripture: for he saith in this very place, He that shal be ashamed of my wordes, the Sonne of man wil be ashamed of him &c. Neither his owne wordes only, but whatsoever the Apostles taught in word or writing: for our Sauour saith, He that despiseth you, despiseth me. For defence of any of all these and of euery Article of the Catholike faith, we ought Luc. 5. to die, and this is to lose our life for Christ and his Gospel.

9. Gain the whole world.] Let such note this, that for feare or flattery of the world cōdescend to obey the vniuersall lawes of men touching religion, against their owne consciences: and be content for the rest of a few daies of this life, and for sauing their temporal goods, to lose their soule and not to prohibit such as be not against them: nor to giue scandal to any one of the es.

13. Elias also is come. Elias was Zelous for Gods Law, a great reprehender of sinne, and an Eremit, and shal be the Precurior of Christ in his second Aduent: So was Iohn before his first Aduent, a Zelatour, a Corrector, an Eremit; and his Precursor. Theod. in caten. Thoma super hunc locum. See S. Hierom in the life of Paul the eremite, that both Elias and Iohn Baptist vvere counted principal professors of that life.

The name of
 miracles.

38. In thy name. Miracles are vvrought sometime by the name of IESVS, whatsoeuer the men be, when it is for the prooue of a truth or for the glorie of God. In so much that Iulian the Apostata him selfe did driue away diuels vvith the signe of the Crosse: as S. Gregorie Nazianzene writeth orat. 1 in Iulian. Theodoret. li. 1 c. 3 hist. And so also Heretikes may doe miracles among the Heathen, to prooue any article of the Christian faith: but they neuer did nor euer shal vvorke any miracle to prooue any of their erroneous opinions, as to prooue that Christ is not really in the B. Sacrament.

C H A P. X.

He answereth the tempting Pharisees (and againe his disciples after ward) that the case of a man With his Wife shalbe (as in the first institution) utterly indissoluble. 13 He bleisseth children. 17 He sheweth what is to be done to get life everlasting. 21 What also for a rich man, to be perfect: 28 as also what passing reward the final have that doe so in time of persecution. 32 He revealeth more to his Disciples touching his Passion: 35 bidding the two ambitious suiters to thinke rather of suffering With him: 41 and teaching us in the rest of his Disciples, not to be greeued at our Ecclesiastical Superiours, considering they are (as he was him self) so soile for our saluation. 46 Then going out of Iericho, he giueth sight to a binde man.

ANNOTATIONS
CHAP. X.

Toleration and permission of euil.

4. Permitted.) Some things are permitted, though not approued or allowed, to auoid greater inconueniences. No man may doe euil for any caule, but he may permit other mens euils for diuerse causes: as God him self doeth, Who can doe no euil. So doth the Prince and Commonwealch permit lesser euils to eschew greater, and so may the Holy Church much more (as S. Augustine saith she doeth) being placed among much chaffe and much cockle, tolerate many things: and yet whatsoeuer is against faith and good life, she neither approueth, nor dissembleth with silence, nor committeth.

119 c. 19.

Mariage after diuorce vnlawful.

11. And marieth an other.) That which S. Mattheu vttered more obscurely, and is mistaken of some, as though he meant that for fornication a man might put away his wife and marry an other, is here by this Euangelist (as also by S. Luke) put out of doubt, generally auouching, that whoesoever putteth away his wife and marieth an other, committeth aduoutrie. Aug. li. 1 de adult. coniug. c. 11 & sequensibus.

Lu. 16, 18.

18. None is good.) None is entirely, substantially, and of him self good, but God: though by participation of Gods goodnes, men are truly also called good.

25. A rich man.) He is here called a rich man that hath his confidence (as here is expressed) in his treasure, and had rather forsake his faith and duty to God, then loie them. as al they which liue in Schisme or Heresie to saue their goods.

Their reward in this life that forsake ought for Gods sake.

30. An hundred times so much.) Sometime God doth so blesse men also in worldly benefites that haue forsaken al for him, as S. Gregorie, S. Augustine, and S. Paulinus: but the principal meaning is, * that he wil giue to such men in this life abundance of grace and spiritual comfort and contentatiō and ioy of cōciēce (as they feele which haue experience) the which spiritual giftes exceede the temporal commodities more then an hundred fold. in so much that he that hath fully forsaken but t'mal things for religion, would not forsake religion to haue al the world.

17. To God.) These men were very circumspect and wary to doe al duties to Cæsar, but of their dutie to God they had no regard. So Heretikes, to flatter temporal Princes, and by them to vphold their Herelies, doe not only inculcate mens dutie to the Prince, dissembling that which is deue to God: but also giue to the Prince more then deue, and take from God his right and dutie. But Christ allowing Cæsar his right, warneth them also of their dutie toward God. And that is it which Catholikes inculcate, Obey God, doe as he commaundeth, Serue him first, and then the Prince.

God first to be serued, and then the Prince.

19. His brother shal take.) Marke wel here, that the Law which saith, Thou shalt not marry thy brothers wife, is not such as admitteth no dispensation, as though this mariage were against nature. For here the same Law saith, that in some case, the brother not only might, but then was bound to marry his brothers wife.

Marrying the brothers wife.

22. Not knowing the Scriptures.) Who would haue thought that by this place of Scripture alleaged by Christ, the Resurrection were proued? and yet we see that Christ doth hereby deduce it, and chargeth these great Doctores and Maisters (which arrogated to them selues the knowledge of Scriptures) that it is their ignorance, that they knew not so to deduce it. No maruel then if the Holy Doctores and Catholike Church make the like deductions sometime and profes, where the Heretike doth not or wil not see so much, therefore no doubt, because he knoweth not the Scriptures, whereof he boasteth so much, nor the sense of the Holy Ghost in them. For example, when of that place, It shal not be forgien in this world nor in the world to come, ancient fathers deduce, that there are finnes remitted after this life in Purgatorie. See Mat. 12, 32.

Many truthe deduced out of scripture, which Heretikos see not.

24. The power of God.) Euen so doe Heretikes erre two waies: because they know not the Scriptures, which they interprete contrarie to the sense of the whole Church and of al the ancient fathers: and because they know not the power of God, that as he is able to raise the selfe same bodies againe, so he can make his body preient in many places: but being altogether faithlesse and not beleeuing his power, they dispute of al such matters only by reason and their owne imaginations.

14. Which being taken away (as S. Cyprian saith) no religion can remaine.

THE ARGUMENT OF S. LUKES GOSPEL.

Lukes Gospel may be diuided into five partes.

The first part is, of the Infancie both of the precurfor, and of Christ him selfe: chap. 1 and 2.

The second, of the Preparation that was made to the manifestation of Christ: chap. 3 and a piece of the 4.

The third, of Christes manifesting him selfe, by preaching and miracles, specially in Galilee: the other piece of the 4 chap.

The fourth of his comming into Iurie towards his Passion: the other piece of the 17 chap. unto the middes of the 19.

The fifth, of the Holy weeke of his Passion in Hierusalem: the other part of the 19 chap. unto the end of the booke.

S. Luke was sectator (saith S. Hierome) that is, a disciple of the Apostle Paul, and a companion of al his peregrination. And the same we see in the Actes of the Apostles: Where, from the 16 chap. S. Luke putteth him selfe in the traine of S. Paul, writing thus in the storie. Forthwith we sought to goe into Macedonia. and in like maner, in the first person, commonly through the rest of that booke. Of him and his Gospel, S. Hierom understandeth this saying of S. Paul: We haue sent with him the brother, whose praise is in the Gospel through al Churches. where also he addeth: Some suppose, so often as Paul in his Epittles. saith, According to my Gospel, that he meaneth of Lukes booke. And againe: Luke learned the Gospel not onely of the Apostle Paul, who had not been with our Lord in flesh, but of the other Apostles: which him selfe also in the beginning of his booke declareth, saying, As they deliuered to vs who them selues from the beginning saw, and were ministers of the word. It followeth in S. Hierome: Therefore he wrote the Gospel, as he had heard. but the Actes of the Apostles he compiled as he had seen. S. Paul writeth of him by name to the Colossians: Luke the Physicion saluteth you. and to Timothee: Luke alone is with me. Finally of his end thus doth S. Hierome write: He liued fourescore and foure yeres, hauing no wife. He is buried at Constantinople: to vvhich citie his bones vvith the Relikes of Andrew the Apostle were translated out of Achaia the twentieth yere of Constantinus. And of the same Translation also in another place against Vigilantius the Heretike: It grieueth him that the Relikes of the Martyrs are couered with pretious coverings, and that they are not either tied in cloutes or thrown to the dunghil. why, are we then sacrilegious, when we enter the Churches of the Apostles? Was Constantinus the Emperour sacrilegious, who translated to Constantinople the holy Relikes of Andrew, Luke, and Timothee: at which the Diuels rore, and the inhabitants of Vigilantius confesse that they feele their presence?

Againe here vve haue a familiar preface of the Author as to his frende, or to euery godly Reader (signified by Theophilus) concerning the cause and purpose and maner of his vvriting, and yet the very same is confessed Scripture, vvith the vvhole booke folovving. Maruel not then if the Author of the second booke of the Machabees * vie the like humane speaches both at the beginning and in the later end, neither do thou therefore reiect the booke for no Scripture, as our Heretikes doe: or not thinke him a sacred vvriter.
- The second booke of the Machabees. 6. Iust before God.] Against the Heretikes of this time, here it is euident that holy men be iust, not only by the estimation of men, but in deede and before God.
- True iustification by obseruing the commaundements. 6. In al the commaundements.] Three things to be noted directly against the Heretikes of our time. first, that good men doe keepe al Gods commaundements: Which (they say) are impossible to be kept. Againe, that men be iustified not by only imputation of Christes iustice, nor by faith alone, but by Walking in the commaundements. Againe, that the keeping and doing of the commaundements is properly our iustification.
- Corrupt translation of Heretikes. 6. Iustifications.] This Word is so vsual in the Scriptures (namely in the Psal. 118) to signifie the commaundements of God, because the keeping of them is iustification, and the Greeke is alwaies so fully correspondent to the same, that the Heretikes in this place (otherwise pretending to esteeme much of the Greeke) blush not to say, that they auoid this Word of purpose against the iustification of the Papiists. And therefore one vseth Tullies Word forsooth, in Latin constituta: and his scholars in their English Bibles say, Ordinances.
- The continencie of priests. 14. Ioy and exultation.] This was fulfilled, not only when he was borne, but now also through the whole Church for euer, in ioyful celebrating of his Natiuite.
- Often saying of the A V E M A R I E. 21. He departed.] In the old Law (saith S. Hierom) they that offered hostes for the people, were not only not in their houses, but were purified for the time, being separated from their wiues, and they dranke neither wine nor any strong drinke, which are wont to prouoke concupiscence. Much more the Priests of the new Law that must alwaies offer sacrifices, must alwaies be free from matrimonie. Li. 1 c. 19. adu. Iouin. and ep. 50 c. 3. See S. Ambrose in 1 Tim. 3. And therefore if there were any religion in Caluins Communion, they would at the least giue as much reuerence in this point, as they in the old Law did to their sacrifices, and to the loaves of proposition. 1 Reg. 21.
- Corrupt translation of Heretikes. 28. Haile full of grace.] Holy Church and al true Christian men doe much and often vse these Wordes brought from heauen by the Archangel, as wel to the honour of Christ and our B. Ladie, as also for that they were the wordes of the first glad tidings of Chuffs Incarnation and our Saluation by the same, and be the very abridgement and summe of the whole Goipel. In so much that the Greeke Church vieth it daily in the Masse.
- Our B. Lady vowed virginie. 28. Full of grace.] Note the excellent prerogatiues of our B. Lady, and abhorre those Heretikes which make her no better then other vulgar women, and therefore to take from her tulnes of grace, they say here, Haile freely beloued, contrarie to al significations of the Greeke Word, which is at the left, endued with grace, as S. Paul vieth it Ephes. 1. by S. Chrysostoms interpretation: or rather, ful of grace, as both * Greeke and Latin fathers haue alwaies here vnderstood it, and the Latines also read it, namely S. Ambrose thus, Wel u she only called ful of grace, vho only obtained the grace, vvhich no other vvoman deserued, to be replenished with the author of grace. And if they did as wel know the nature of these kind of Greeke Wordes, as they would seeme very skilful, they might easily obserue that they signifie tulnes, as when them selues translate the like word (Luc. 16. 20) ful of sores. Beza, ulcerosus.
- 30. I know not man.*] These wordes declare (saith S. Augustine) that she had now vowed virginie to God. For otherwise neither would she say, How shal thou be done? nor haue added, because I know not man. Yea if she had said only the first wordes, How shal thou be done? it is euident that she would not haue asked such a question, how a vvoman should beare a sonne promised her, if she had married meaning to haue carnal copulation. c. de virgin. As if he should say, if she might haue knowven a man and so haue had a childe, she vvould neuer haue asked, How shal this be done? but because that ordinarie way vvvas excluded by her vow of virginie, therefore she asketh, How? And in asking, How? she plainly declareth that she might not haue a childe by knowing man, because of her vow. See S. Grego. Nyssene de sancta Christi Natiuitate.

26. Elisabeth

36. Elisabeth thy Cousin.) By this that Elisabeth and our Lady were cousins, the one of the tribe of Leui, the other of Iuda, is gathered that Christ came of both tribes, Iuda and Leui, of the both tribes, Iudings and the priests: him self both a king and a priest, and the Anointed (to vvit) by grace spiridally, as they were with oile materially and corporally. August. 2 de Consens. Euang. c. 1.

42. Blessed art thou.) At the very hearing of our Ladies voice, the infant and she were replenished with the Holy Ghost, and she sang praises not only to Christ, but for his sake to our B. Lady, calling her blessed and her fruite blessed, as the Church doeth also by her vvordes and example in the AVE MARIE. The blessed virgin M A R I E.

43. Mother of my Lord.) Elizabeth being an exceeding iust and blessed vvoman, yet the vvorthines of Gods mother doth so far excel her and al other vvomen, as the great light the litle starres. Her excellencie.

45. Shal call me blessed.) This Prophecie is fulfilled, when the Church keepeth her Festiual daies, and when the faithful in al generations say the AVE MARIE, and other holy Antems of our Lady. And therefore the Caluinistes are not among those generations which call our Lady blessed. Her honour in al the world.

63. Iohn is his name.) Wee see that names are of signification and importance, God him self changing or giuing names in both Testaments: as, Abraham, Israel, Peter, and the principal of al others, I E S V S: and here I O H N, vvwhich signifieth, Gods grace or mercie, or, God vvill haue mercie. Mysterie and signification in names.

2. de bapt. in fine.

For he was the Precursor and Prophet of the mercie and grace that eniued by C H R I S T I E S V S. Note also that as then in Circuncision, so novv in Baptisme (vvwhich ansvvereth therevnto) names are giuen. And as vve see here and in al the old Testament, great respect was had of names: so we must beware of strange, profane, and secular names (now a daies so common) and rather according to the * Carechisme of the holy Council of Trent, take names of Saints and holy men, that may put vs in minde of their vertues. What names to be giue in Baptisme.

75. Iustice before him.) Here also we see that we may haue true iustice, not only in the sight of men, or by the imputation of God, but in deede before him and in his sight: and that the comming of Christ was to giue men such iustice. True iustice, not imputatiue.

Beza.

78. The orient.) Maruel not if Heretikes controule the old authentical translation, as though it differed from the greeke: vvwhereas here they make much a doe to cotroule not only al the greeke interpreters of the old testament, but also S. Luke him self, for the vvord $\alpha\upsilon\lambda\eta\lambda\eta$, as differing from the Hebreu. The Heretikes controule both Greeke and Latin text.

14. Men of good Wil.] The birth of Christ giueth not peace of minde or saluation but to such as be of good Will, because he worketh not our good against our Willes, but our Willes concurring. Aug. quest. ad Simplic. li. 1. q. 2. 10. 4.

Our B. Lady full of deepe contemplations.

19. (Kept al.) Our Lady though litle be spoken of her concerning such matters in the Scriptures, because she was a woman, and not admitted to teach or dispute in publike of high mysteries: yet she knew al these mysteries, and wisely noted and contemplated of al those things that were done and said about Christ, from the first houre of his Conception til the end of his life and his Ascension.

Mens ruine and damnation is of them selues.

24. To the ruine.) Therefore to the ruine of some, because they would not beleue in him, and so vvere the cause of their owne ruine, as he is els vvhere called, A stumbling stone, because many would stumble at him and so fall by their owne fault. other some he raised by his grace from sinne to iustice, and so he was the resurrection of many. The Apostle vseth the like speache, saying: We are to some the odour of life, vnto life: to others, the odour of death, vnto death. Not that their preaching was to cause death, but because they that would not beleue their preaching, wilfully incurred deadly sinne and damnation. 1 Pet. 2. 8. 2 Cor. 2. 16.

28. A vvindow.) Marke that vvindowhod is here mentioned to the commendation thereof euen in the old Testament also, and the fruite and as it were the profession thereof is here commended, to vvitte, fasting, praying, being continually in the Temple. euen as S. Paul more at large for the state of the new Testament speaketh of vvindowhod and virginitie, as being professions more apt and commodious for the seruice of God. 1 Cor. 7.

Fasting an act of religion.

27. By fastings and prayers seruing.) Seruing, in the Greeke is λατρουσα, that is, doing diuine vvorship vnto God, as by praier, so also by fasting. so that fasting is λατρία, that is, an act of religion whereby we doe vvorship God, as we doe by praier, and not vsed only to subdew our flesh, much lesse (as Heretikes would haue it) as a matter of pollicie.

Dutiful obedience to parents.

61. Subiect to them.) Al children may learne hereby, that great ought to be their subiectiō and obedience to their Parents, when Christ him self, being God, would be subiect to his parents being: but his creatures.

This Heli therefore marrying and dying vvithout issue: Iacob his brother, according to the Law married his vvife, and begat Ioseph, and so raised vp seede to his brother Heli. Peters ship.

3. One ship Simons.) It is purposely expressed that there were two shippes, and that one of them was Peters, and that Christ went into that one, and sat downe in it, and that sitting he taught out of that ship: no doubt to signifie the Church resembled by Peters ship, and that in it is the chaire of Christ, and only true preaching.

Peters fishing.

6. A great multitude of fishes.) Likewise by this significant miracle wrought about Peters fishing, is evidently shewed vvhat wonderful successe Peter should haue in conuerting men to Christ, both Iewes and Gentiles, as vvhen at one draught, that is to say, * at one Sermon he drew into his ship, which is Christes Church, a great number of men, as he did now fishes: and so continually by him self and his Successors vnto the worlds end.

Peters preeminence in fishing for mens soules.

10. Thou shalt be taking men.) That al this aforesaid did properly meane Peters traualles to come, in the couersion of the world to Christ, and his prerogative before al men therein, it is evident by Christs special promis made to him seuerally and apart in this place, that he should be made the taker of men, though to other he giueth also, as to Peters cooperators and coadiutors, the like office. Mat. 4, 19.

And we also haue obtained by him that wonderful grace. for it is said to his Disciples, Whose sinnes you shal remit, they are remitted to them. And how should not he be able to remit sinnes, who gaue others power to doe the same?
25. Leauing al folowed him.) The * profane Iulian charged Matthevv of to much lightnes, to leaue al and folovv a stranger, at one vvord, but in deede hereby is seen the maruelous efficacie of Christes vvord and internal vvorking, that in a moment can alter the hart of a man, and cause him nothing to esteeme the things most deere vnto him. Which he did not onely then in presence, but also daily doth in the Church. For so S. Antonie, S. 8. Neither this haue you read?] The Scribes and pharisees boasted most of their knowledge of the Scriptures: but our Sauour often sheweth their great ignorance. Euen so the Heretikes that novv a daies vaunt most of the Scriptures and of their vnderstanding of them, may soone be proued to vnderstand litle or nothing.

9. Sauē a soule.] Hereby it seemeth that Christ (as at other times lightly alvvaies) did not only heale this man in body, but of some correspondēt disease in his soule.

The name and dignitie of Apostles

13. Vvhom he named Apostles.] Here it is to be noted against our Aduerſaries that deceitfully measure to the simple the vvhole nature and qualitie of certaine sacred fundions, by the primi-tiue signification and compasse of the names or vvordes vvhereby they be called. vvith vvhom as a Priest is but an elder, and a Bis hop, a vvatchman or Superintendent, so an Apostle is nothing but a Legate or Messēger, and therefore (as they argue) * can make no Lawes nor prescribe or teach any thing not expresse in his mandatum. Know therefore against such deceiuers, that such things are not to be ruled by the vulgar signification of the word or calling, but by vse and application of the holy Writers, and in this point by Christs ovvne expresse imposition. And so this vvord, Apostle, is a calling of Office, gouernment, authoritie, and most high dignitie giuen by our Maister, specially to the College of the Twelue: Whom he endued about that vvord the vulgar etymologie of their name requireth, vvith pover to bind and loose, to punish and pardō, to teach and rule his Church. Out of vvnich roome and dignitie, vvnich is called in the Psalme and in the actes, a Bis hoprike, vvhen Iudas tel, Mathias vvas chosen to supply it, and vvas numbered among the rest, vvho vvere as founders or foundations of our religion, as the Apostle termeth them, Therefore to that college this name agreeth by special imposition and prerogatiue, though aftervvard it vvas by vse of the Scriptures extended to S. Paul and S. Barnabas, and sometimes to the Apostles successors: as also (by the like vse of Scriptures) to the first conuerters of countreis to the faith, or their coadiutors in that function. In vvnich sense S. Paul chalengeth to be the Corinthians Apostle, and nameth Epaphroditus the Philippians Apottle: as vve call S. Gregorie & his Disciple S. Augustin, our Apostles of England. In al vvnich taking, it euer signifieth dignitie, regiment, Paternitie, Principallitie, and Primacie in the Church of God: according to S. Paul 1. Cor. 12.
He hath placed in his Church, first in deede Apostles &c. Whereby vve may see that S. Peters dignitie vvas a vvonderful eminent Prerogatiue and Soueraintie. When he vvas the head not only of other Christian men, but the head of al Apostles, yea euen of the College, of the Twelue. And if our Aduerſaries list to haue learned any profitable lesson by the vvord Apostle, more profitably and truly they might haue gathered, that Christ called these his principal officers, Apostles, or Sent (him self also specially and aboue al other being Missus, that is, Sent, and called also Apottle in the Scriptures) to vvarne vs by the nature of the vvord, that none are true Apostles, Pastors, or Preachers, that are not specially sent and called, or that can not shew by vvnom they be sent. and that al Heretikes therefore be rather Apostates then Apostles, for that they be not sent, nor duely called, nor chosen to preach.

35 Lend, hoping nothing.) In that vve may here seeme to be moued to lend to those vvhom vve thinke not able nor like euer to repay againe, it must be holden for a counsel rather then a commaundement, except the case of necessitie. but it may be taken rather for a precept, vvherein vsurie, that is to say, the expectation not of the money lent, but of vantage for lone, is forbidden: as by other places of Scripture it is condemned, and is a thing against the Lawv of nature and nations. And greate shame and pitie it is, that it should be so much vsed or suffered among Christians, or so couered and cloked vnder the habite of other contractes, as it is.

5. Built a Synagogue. As at that time to found a Synagogue, vvas acceptable to God, and procured the praiers of the faithful people for vvhose vse it vvas made: so novv much more in the newv Testament, to build a Church, Monasterie, College, or any like vvorke for the honour and seruice of God, is grateful to him and procureth the praiers of the good people for vvhose vse such things be founded.

Exteriour si-

then common deuotion.

44 Into thy house.] An exceding approbation of the extraordinary vvorkes and signes of external deuotion, vvhich seeme to carnal men (though othervvise faithful) to be often superfluous or not acceptable. This Simon vvas perhaps of a good vvil, and therefore (as diuers others did els vvhere) inuited Christ to his house, not of curiositie or captiuousnes, as some other did: but of affectio, as it may seeme by Christs familiar talke vvith him. Not vvithstanding his duties towardes him vvere but ordinary, but the anointing, vvashing, killing, vviping of his feete in such sort as the vvoman did, vvere further signes of more then vulgar loue: such as is in deuout men or vvomen that goe on pilgrimage and kisse deuoutly the holy memories of Christ and his Saints. Vvwhich is no more but an exteriour expressing of their affection, and that they loue much, as euery vulgar christian man doth not.

Iustification attributed not to faith onely.

50 Thy faith.] The remission of her sinnes being attributed before to charitie, is novv also said to come of her faith. Vvhercby you may knowv that it commonly procedeth of both, and of hope also, though but one named. Because vvhen there be diuers causes concurring to one effect, the scriptures commonly name but one, and that especially vvhich is most proper to the purpose and time, not excluding the other. And therefore his vvorking miracles vpon any person, is attributed to the faith of them on vvhom or at vvhose desire they be done. Because he vvrought his miracles to induce al men to beleue in him, and therefore specially required faith at their hands, and namely before other things, vvwhether they did beleue that he vvas able to doe that vvhich they asked at his hands: vvithout vvhich it had ben rather a mockrie and tentation of him, then a true desire of benefite at his hands.

Hierom vvriteth) not only our Lady vvas a virgin, but by reason of her, Ioseph also: that our Sauour might be borne of a virginal matrimonie. But they are called his brethren (according to the vsual speach of the Scriptures) because they vvere his cosins, either the sonnes of Iosephs brother, or (as the more receiued opinion is) the sonnes of our Ladies sister called Marie of Iames, which Iames therefore is also called the brother of our Lord. *Hiero. cōt. ANNOTATIONS
CHAP. IX.

- The Transfiguration. 27. Til they see.) To the Apostles, that had to preach the kingdom of God and to suffer so much miserie for the same in this vvorlde, he vvil shew his glorie, and giue them a tast of his owne ioyful state and of his Saints in heauen, calling thither Moyse and Elias, that the Law and Prophets might be vvitnesse of the same. See the annotation vpon S. Matthev c. 17, 2.
- Schismauikes. 53. Face to goe to Hierusalem.) The Samaritans vvere Schismauikes from the Iewes, and had a Schismatical temple in mount Garizim, of purpose to drav men thither from Gods temple in Hierusalem, vvhich was the true and as it vvere the Catholike seruice and Sacrifice vnto God. Therefore they did not gladly receiue our Sauour, because they perceiued he vvas going to Hierusalem. 10. 4. 9. 1 Rg. 12. 22. Tob. 1.
- Desire of reuenge. 53. He rebuked them.) Not iustice nor al rigorous punishment of sinners is here forbidden, nor Elias fact reprehended, nor the Church or Christian Princes blamed for putting Heretikes to death: but that none of these should be done for desire of our particular reuenge, or vwithour discretion, & regard of their amendement, and example to others. Therefore S. Peter vsed his pouer vpon Ananias and Sapphira, vvhich he strooke them both dovvne to death for defrauding the Church. Act. 5.
- The Churches seueritie. 62. No man looking backe.) It is a dangerous temptation for a man that hath lost or left his goods for Christ, to looke much backe at them, and to remember vwith delight the pleasures and eases of this vvorlde, for it breedeth in him discontentment of the troubles and crosses that are incident to the state of such as fully folovv Christ. In vvhich case a man should euer looke forward towards heauen, and neuer backward to the vvorlde.

21. To liſe ones) By this place euery vulgar artifice may not preſume that God hath reuealed al truth to him, and therefore reſuſe to be taught of the learned. for Chriſt did not aftervvard endeuv fiſhers and vulgar men nor any other vvith the gifts of vvifdom and tonges, vvithout their induſtrie, ſtudy, and teaching. though at the beginning, of great prouidence he did it, that it might be cleere to the vvorld, that al Nations vvere conuerted to him, not by perſuaſion of cunning Orators or ſubtil Diſputers, but by the plaine force of his grace and truth, vvwhich S. Auguſtine counteth greater then al other miracles. Further We are taught by this place, that the poore humble obedient children of the Church knowv by their faith the high myſteries of Chriſtes Diuinity, and his preſence in the B. Sacrament, and ſuch like: rather then Arius, Caluin, and other like proud Scribes and Pharifees.

The humble vnlearned Catholike knowveth Chriſt better then the proud learned Heretike.

22. This doe.) Not by faith only, but by keeping Gods commaundements We obtaine life euerlaſting: not onely by beleeuing, but by doing. The heretikes ſay that it is impoſſible to keepe this commaundement of louing God vvith al our hart. But the Scriptures giue vs examples of diuers that haue kept and fulfilled it, as far as is requiſite in this life. 3. reg. 14. 8. 2. Par. 15. 15. Pf. 118. 10. Eccleſi. 47. 9, 10. 4 Reg. 20. 3. 5. Luc. 1. 5. And if it vvere impoſſible to keepe it, and yet by Chriſt propoſed for the meane to obtaine life euerlaſting, he had mocked this Lavvyer and others, and not taught them.

The commaundements poſſible to be kept.

Conc. A-rauſ. 2 cap. 30. Half dead.) Here is ſignified man vvounded very ſore in his vnderſtanding and free-wil, and al other povvers of ſoule and body, by the ſinne of Adam: but yet that neither vnderſtanding, nor free-vvil, nor the reſt, vvere extinguiſhed in man or taken avay. The Parable of the vvounded man, ſignifieth the Lavv of Moyſes: this Samaritane, is Chriſt the Prieſt of the newve Teſtament: the oile and the vvine, his Sacraments: the hoſt, the prieſts his miniſters. Vvhereby is ſignified, that the Lavv could not recouer the ſpiritual life of mankind from the death of ſinne, that is, iuſtifie man: but Chriſt onely, vvho by his paſſion and the grace and vertue thereof miniſtred in and by his Sacraments, iuſtifieth, and increaſeth the iuſtice of man, healing and abling free-vvil to doe al good vvorkes.

The parable of the vvounded man, explicated.

42. Marie the beſt part.) Tvvo notable exáples, one of the life Actiue, in Martha: the other of the life Contéplatiue, in Marie: repreſenting vnto vs, that in holy Church there ſhould be alvvayes ſome to ſerue God in both theſe ſeueral ſorts. The life contéplatiue is here preferred before the actiue. the Religious of both ſexes are of that more excellent ſtate. and therefore our Proteſtants haue Wholly abandoned them out of their common wealth, vvwhich the true Church neuer Wanted. But to ſay the truth, they haue neither Martha nor Marie. our Lord geue them grace to ſee their miſerie. If ours were not anſwerable to their profeſſion, or were degenerated, vvwhy haue they no new ones? if our Churches Votaries vvowed vnlawful things, Chaſtitie, Pouertie, Obedience, Pilgrimage: vvwhat other Votaries or lawfull vvowes haue they? For, to offer voluntarily by vvow (beſides the keeping of Gods commaundements, vvwherevnto We are bound by precept and promiſe in our Baptiſme) our ſoules, bodies, goods, or any other acceptable thing to God, is an acte of ſoueraine vvorſhip belonging to God onely: and there vvwas neuer true religion vvithout ſuch vvowes and Votaries. If there be none in their vvhole Church that profeſſe contemperation, or that vvow any thing at al to God voluntarily, neither in their bodies nor in their goods: God and the vvorld knowv they haue no Church nor religion at al.

The Contemperation or Religious life, better then the Actiue and ſecular.

Vvowes and votaries.

AND it came to passe, vwhen he vvas in a certaine place, praying, as he ceased, one of his Disciples said to him, Lord teach vs to pray, as Iohn also taught his Disciples.
† And he said to them, * Vwhen you pray, 2 say, FATHER, *sanctified be thy name. Thy kingdom come, † Our daily bread giue vs this day, † and forgie vs, 3 our sinnes, for because our selues also doe forgie euery one that is in debt to vs. 4 And lead vs not into temptacion. † And he laid to them, Vwhich of 5 you shal haue a frende, and shal goe to him at midnight, and shal say to him, Frende, lend me three loaues, † because a frende 6 of mine is come out of his way to me, and I haue not what to set before him: † & he from vwithin ansuering saith, Trouble 7 me not, novv the doore is shut, and my children are vwith me in bed: I can not rise and giue thee. † And if he shal perse- 8 uere knocking, I say to you, although he vvil not rise and giue him because he is his frende, yet for his importunitie he vvil rise, and giue him as many as he needeth. † * And I say 9 to you, Alke, and it shal be giuen you: seeke, and you shal findē: knocke, and it shal be opened to you. † For euery one 10 that asketh, receiueth: and he that seeketh, findeth: and to him that knocketh, it shal be opened. † And vwhich of you 11 if he aske his father bread, vvil he giue him a stone? or a fish, vvil he for a fish giue him a serpent? † Or if he aske an egge, 12
vvil he reach him a scorpion? † If you then being naught, 13
knovv hovv to giue good giftes to your children, hovv much more vvil your father from heauen giue the good spirit to them that aske him? †*

† * And he vvas casting out a deuil, and that vvas dumme. 14
And vwhen he had cast out the deuil, the dumme spake: and the multitudes marueiled. † * And certaine of them said, In 15 Beel-zebub the prince of Devils he casteth out Devils. † And 16 other tempting, asked of him a signe from heauen. † But he 17 seeing their cogitations, said to them, Euery kingdom deui-ded against it self, shal be made desolate, and house vpon house, shal fall. † And if Satan also be deuided against him 18 self, hovv shal his kingdom stand? because you say that in Beel-zebub I doe cast out Devils. † And if I in Beel-zebub 19 cast out Devils: your children, in vvhom doe they cast out?
therfore they shal be your iudges. † But if I in the ²⁰finger of him that he vvould dine vvith him. and he going in sate him self and to say, Vvhy he vvas not vvashed before dinner.

† And our Lord said to him, * Novv you Pharisees doe make 39 cleane that on the out side of the cuppe and of the platter:
but that of yours vvwhich is vvithin, is ful of rapine and ini-make that also that is on the inside? † But yet ^c that that re- 41 maineth, ^vgiue almes, & behold al things are cleane vnto you.

† But vvo to you Pharisees, because you rithe minte and 42 revve and euery herbe: and passe ouer iudgement and the charitic of God. but these things you ought to haue done, and not to omit those. † Vvo to you Pharisees, because 43 you loue the first chaires in the synagogs, and salutations in the market-place. † Vvo to you, because you are as monu- 44 vvare.

† And one of the Lavvyers ansvvering saith to him, Maister, 45 in saying these things, thou speakest to our reproche also.
† But he said, " Vvo to you Lavvyers also: because you lode 46 men vvith burdens which they can not beare, and your selues touch not the packes vvith one of your fingers. † Wo to you 47 did kil them. † Surely you doe testifie that you consent to the 48 vvorkes of your fathers: because they in deede did kil them, and you build their sepulchres. † For this cause the vvisedō al- 49 altar and the temple. Yea I say to you, it shal be required of this generation. ¶ † Vvo to you Lavvyers, because you haue 52 taken avvay the key of knowvledge: your selues haue not entred, and those that did enter you haue prohibited. † And 53 vwhen he said these things to them, the Pharisees and the Lavvyers began vehemently to vrge him, and to stoppe his mouth about many things, tlying in waite for him, & seeking 54 to catch some thing of his mouth, that they might accuse him.

ANNOTATIONS

CHAP. XII.

Open-confessio of our faith.

1. Every one that confesseth.] A Catholike man is bound to confesse his faith, being called to account or examined by Iew, Heathen, or Heretike, concerning the same. Neither is it ynough to keepe Christ in his hart, but he must also acknowledge him in his wordes and deedes. And to deny Christ, or any article of the Catholike faith, for shame or teare of any worldly creature, hath no lesse punishment, then to be denied, refused, and forsaken by Christ at the houre of his death before al his Angels: which is another maner of presence and Consistorie, then any Court or Session that men can be called to for their faith, in this world.

11. Be not careful.] That the poore vnlearned Catholike should nor be discouraged, or make his excuse that he is a simple man, not able to answer cunning Heretikes, nor to give a reason of his beleefe, and therefore must suffer or say any thing rather then come before them: our Maister giueth them comfort, promising that the Holy Ghost shall euer put into their hartes at the time of their appearance, that which shall be sufficient for the purpose, not that every one which is conuenced before the Aduersaries of faith, should alwaies be endued with extraordinary knowlledge to dispute and confute, as the Apostles and others in the primitiue Church were: but that God will euer giue to the simple that trusteth in him, sufficient courage and wordes to confesse his beleefe. For such an one called before the Commissioners, saith ynough and defendeth him self sufficiently, when he answereth that he is a Catholike man, & that he will liue and die in that faith which the Catholike Church throughout all Christian countries hath and doth teach, and that this Church can giue them a reason of all the things which they demaund of him. &c.

The holy Ghost teacheth every vnlearned Catholike to giue sufficient reason of his faith.

14. Who hath appointed?] Christ refused to medle in this temporal matter, partly because the demaund proceeded of couetousnes and ill intention, partly to giue an example to Clergie men, that they should not be withdravven by secular affaires and controuersies from their principal function of praying, preaching, and spiritual regiment: but not wholly to forbid them all actions pertaining to vvorldly busines, specially vvhere and vvhen the honour of God, the increase of religion, the peace of the people, and the spiritual benefite of the parties doe require. In vvhich cases S. Augustin (as Possidonius vvriteth) was occupied often vvhole daies in ending vvorldly controuersies, and so he vvriteth of him self also, not doubting but to haue reuward therfore in heauen.

In vita c. 19. Li. de op. Monach. c. 29.

21. Riche to God vvard.] He is riche towards God, that by his goods bestovved vpon the poore, hath store of merits, and many almesmens prayers procuring mercie for him at the day of his death and iudgement, vvhich is here therefore called treasure laid vp in heauen, vvhere the barnes be large ynough. The necessitie of vvhich almes is by Christ him self here shewed to be so great, and so acceptable to God, that rather then they should lacke the fruite thereof, they should sell all they haue and giue to the poore.

Meritorious vvorkes.

34. Where your treasure is.] If the riche man withdravven by his vvorldly treasure, can not set his hart vpon heauen, let him send his mony thither before him, by giuing it in almes vpon such as will pray for him, and his hart will folovv his purse thither.

ANNOTATIONS
CHAP. XIII

2. These Galileans.) It is Gods mercie that he straight punisheth not al offenders, but some fewv for a vvarning to all: as that for Schisme he striketh not al such as haue forsaken the Church and the lawvful Priests, as he did Coré and his complices: that for spoile of Churches he reuengeth not al, as he did Heliodorus: and al that vow and reuoke their gifts to God, as Ananias and Sap-phira. Some fewv therefore for their iust deserts, be so handled for example, to prouoke al others guilty of the same crimes to doe penance. Which if they doe not in this life, they shal all assuredly perish in the next World. Optatus li. 1. cont. Parmen. sub finem.

for example.

16. This daughter.) We may see that many diseases which seeme natural, doe procede of the Diuel by Gods permission, either for sinne, or for probation: and both those kindes Christ specially cured, for that no natural medicines could cure them, and specially because he came to dissolue the Workes of Satan both in body and soul.

Diseases not natural.

24. By the narrow.) Our Lord is not contrarie to him self in that he ansvvereth, the gate to be strait, and fewv to be sauéd, whereas els vvhere he said, that many should come from the East and Vvest &c. and ioy vvith Abraham in the kingdom of heauen. Mat. 8, 11. For though they be fewv in respect of the wicked of al sortes, yet they be many in them selues and in the societie of Angels, the vvhete cornes are scarce seen at the threshing, vvhhen they are medled With the chaffe: but vvhhen the il are removed, the vvhole barne of heauen shal be filled. So saith S. Aug. Ser. 32 de verb. Do.

Penance.

34. Shal seeke.) Many vvhould be saued and looke to be saued, but can not, because they vvill not take paines to enter in at so strait a passage, that is to say, to fast much, pray often, doe great penance for their sinnes, liue in holy Churches discipline, abstaine from the pleasures of this world, and suffer persecution and losse of their goods and liues for Christes sake.

Schisme.

26. Eate before thee.) It is not ynough to feede vvith Christ in his Sacraments, or to heare his vvord in the Church, to chalége heauen thereby, vnlesse vve liue in vnitie of the Catholike Church. So S. Augustine applieth this against the Donatistes, that had the very same seruice and Sacraments Cont. lit. which the Catholike Church had, but yet seuered them selues from other Christian countries by Petil. li. 2 Schisme.

23. Compel them.) The vehement persuasion that God vseth both externally by force of his vvord and miracles, and internally by his grace, to bring vs vnto him, is called compelling: not that he forceth any to come to him against their owne Willes, but that he can alter and mollifie an hard hart, and make him vvilling that before vvould not. S. Augustine also referreth this compelling to the penal lawes which Catholike Princes do iustly vse against Heretikes and Schismatikes, prouing that they who are by their former professiō in Baptisme subiect to the Catholike Church, and are departed from the same after Sectes, may and ought to be compelled into the societie of the vniuersal Church againe. and therefore in this sense, by the two former partes of the parable, the Ievves first, and secondly the Gentils, that neuer beleued before in Christi, vvere inuited by faire svete meanes onely: but by the third, such are inuited as the Church of God hath power ouer, because they promised in baptisme, and therefore are to be reuoked not onely by gentle meanes, but by iust punishment also.

Heretikes may by penal lawes be cōpelled to the Catholike faith.

† There vvas a certaine riche man, & he vvas clothed vvith 19

there vvas a certaine begger called Lazarus, that lay at his gate, ful of sores: † desiring to be filled of the crommes, that 21 fel from the riche mans table, but the dogges also came, and licked his sores. † And it came to passe that the begger died, 22 and vvas caried " of the Angels into " Abrahams bosome. And the riche man also died: and he vvas buried in hel. † And lif- 23

Father Abraham, haue mercie on me, and send Lazarus that he may dippe the tippe of his finger into vvater, for to coole my tongue, because I am tormented in this flame. † And Abra- 25

nowv he is comforted, and thou art tormented. † And beside 26 al these things, betvvene vs and you there is fixed " a great chaos: that they vvich vvil passe from hence to you, may not, neither goe from thence hither. † And he said, Then, fa- 27 ther, I beseeche thee that thou vvouldest send him vnto my fathers house, for I haue siue brethren, † for to testifie vnto 28 them, " lest they also come into this place of torments. † And 29 Abraham said to him, :: They haue Moyfes and the Prophets: let them heare them. † But he said, No, father Abraham, 30 but if some man shal goe from the dead to them, they vvil doe penance. † And he said to him, If they heare not Moy- 31

Which also insinuateth to vs, that almes bestowed specially vpon holy men, vvhom by their merites and praiers are great in Gods grace, may much more helpe vs then our charitable deedes done vpon vulgar men in necessitie, though that be of exceeding great merite also. 18. And marrieth.) The good of Mariage through out al nations and men, is in issue and fidelitie of chastitie, but among the people of God it consisteth also in holines of Sacrament: Whereby it commeth to passe that it is a heinous crime to marry againe, though there be a diuorce made, so long as the parties liue. Aug. de bono coniug. c. 24 to. 6. See the Annotations vpon Marke 10, 11.

22. Abrahams Bosome.) The Bosome of Abraham is the resting place of al them that died in perfect state of grace before Christi time, heauē before being shut from men. It is called in Zacharie, Abrahams bosome.

Where this mansion of the fathers stood, or whether it be any part of Hel, S. Augustine doubteth: but that there was such a place, he nor no Catholike man euer doubted: as al the fathers make it most certaine, that our Sauour descending to Hel, went thither specially, and deliuered the said fathers out of that mansion. Some iudge Purgatorie to be placed there, from whence (no doubt) Christ also deliuered some at his descending to hel. for, these in Abrahams bosome vvere not in paines: and S. Augustine saith the Scriptures be plaine that he rooke some out of the places of punishment, and yet none out of the hel of the damned. What other place then can that be but Purgatorie?

Purgatorie.

28. Let them also.) If the damned had care of their frendes aliuē how & for what cause soeuer, much more haue the Saints and sauēd persons. And if those in hel haue meanes to expresse their cogitations and desires, and to be vnderstood of Abraham so far distant both by place and condition, much rather may the liuing pray to the Saints and be heard of them: betwixt earth (that is to say) the Church militant and heauen, being continual passage of soules, and * Angels ascending and descending by Jacobs ladder. Men must not for al that be curious to searche how the soules of the deceased expresse their mindes, and be heard one of an other, and so fall to blasphemie, as Caluin doth, asking whether their eare be so long to heare so far of, and wickedly measuring al things by mortal mens corporal groile maner of vttering conceits one to an other. Which was not here done by this damned nor by Abraham, with corporal instruments of tongue, teeth, and eares: though for the better expressing of the damned case, Christ vouchsaued to vter it in termes agreeing to our capacite.

CHAP. XVII.

So damnable it is to be author of a Schisme, 3 that We must rather forgine be it neuer so often. 5 We must be seruents in faith, 7 and humble wihal, knowing that We are bound to God, and not he to vs. 11 The nine lewes are vngrateful after that he hath cured their leprosie: but the one Samaritane (the one Catholike Church of the Gentils) far otherwise. 20 The Pharisees asking, When cometh thou kingdom of God (of whose approaching they had now heard so much) he teacheth that God must reigne within vs: 22 and warneth vs after hu Passion neuer to goe out of hu Catholike Church for any new secrete coming of Christ that heretikes shal pretend, but onely to expect hu second coming in glorie. 26 preparing our selues vnto it, because it shal come vpon many vnprouided, 31 specially through the persecution of Antichrist a little before it.

∴ Not of mere necessitie, for then it were no fault: but presupposing the great wickednes of men, it is impossible but there shal be scandals & therefore it followeth, Uro to him by whom they come.

THE fourth part of this Gospel, The coming of Christ into Iewrie, towards his Passion.

The Gospel vpb the 13 Sunday after Pentecost.

∴ And yet we see here it vvas not only faith, but also his thankfulness & returnig to giue glorie to God.

AND he said to his Disciples, It is ∴ impossible that scandale should not come: but vvo to him by vvhom they come. † It is more profitable for him, if a mil-stone be put about his necke, and he be cast into the sea, then that he scādalize one of these litle ones. † Looke vvel to your selues, 3
* If thy brother sinne against thee, rebuke him: and if he doe penance, forgiue him. † And if he sinne against thee seuen 4 times in a day, and seuen times in a day be conuerted vnto thee, saying, It repenteth me, forgiue him.

† And the Apostles said to our Lord, Increase faith in vs. 5
† And our lord said, * If you had faith like to a mustard seede, 6 you might say to this mulberie tree, be thou rooted vp, and be transplanted into the sea: and it vvould obey you. † And 7 vvhich of you hauing a seruant plowing or keeping cattle, that vvil say to him returning out of the field, Passe quickly, sit dovvn: † and saith not to him, Make ready supper, and 8 gird thy self, and serue me vvhiles I eate and drinke, and afterward thou shalt eate and drinke? † Doth he giue that ser- 9 uant thanks, for doing the things vvhich he commaunded him? † I trovv not. So you also, vvhen you shal haue done 10 al things that are commaunded you, say, Vve are ∴ vnprofitable seruants: vve haue done that vvhich vve ought to doe.

† And it came to passe, as he vvent vnto Hierusalem, he 11 passed through the middes of Samaria and Galilee. † And 12 vvhen he entred into a certaine tovne, there mette him ten men that vvere lepers, vvho stode a farre of: † and they lif- 13 ted vp their voice, saying, I E S V S maister, haue mercie on vs. † Vvhom as he savv, he said, Goe, * Shevv your selues ∴ to the 14 Priests. And it came to passe, as they vvent, they vvere made cleane. † And one of them as he savv that he vvas made 15 cleane: vvent backe vvith a loud voice magnifying God, † and he fel on his face before his feete, giuing thanks: and 16 this vvas a Samaritane. † And I E S V S ansuering said, Vvere 17 not ten made cleane? and vvhere are the nine? † There vvas 18 not found that returned, and gaue glorie to God, but this stranger. † And he said to him, Arise, goe thy vvaies: 19 because ∴ thy faith hath made thee safe. †

† And being asked of the Pharisees, Vvhen commeth the 20 kingdom of God? he ansuwered them and said. The kingdom of God

C H A P. XVII.

10. Unprofitable seruants.) If our Sauour had said that the keeping of Gods cōmaundements had bene vnprofitable and not auailable to our selues , then might the Protestants haue truely argued thereby that our vvorkes deserue not heauen or any revvard at Gods hand: but so he said not, but that our seruice is to God vnprofitable, who calleth for it as duety, and not as a thing needefull or profitable to him self. And though here our Maister teach vs so humbly to conceiue of our ovne doings tovvard him, yet him self vs wher calieth not his seruants vnprofitable vhen they haue done their labour, but speaketh thus, Good and faithful seruant, because thou wast faithful in a litle, I will place thee ouer much: enter into the ioy of thy Lord. Yea of such as serue him in the grace of the new Testament, he affirmeth that he will not now name them seruants but frenes, yea and take them for his ovne children, and as his frenes and sonnes he counteth of vs and our vvorkes tovvards heauen, though vve in humilitie and truth must confesse alwaies that vve be to him vnprofitable seruants. Yea and S. Paul saith plainly, that by cleansing our selues from sinful vvorkes, We shal be profitable vessels to our lord. 1 Timot. 2, 21.

Confession to the Priest.

14. To the priests.) This leprosie signifieth sinne, vvhich though God may and can heale vvithout any mans meanes, yet he doth it not ordinarily but by the Priests ministerie: therefore let no man despise Gods ordinance nor say that it is ynough to confesse to God though he neuer come at the priest. li. de visis. infirm. apud August.

14. As they vvent.) A man may sometimes be so contrite and penitent, that his sinne is forgiven before he come to the Priest, but then also he must notwithstanding goe to the Priest, as the lepers did: specially whereas we are neuer sure how contrite we are, and because there is no true contrition, but vvith desire also of the Sacrament in time and place.

CHAP. XVIII.

The Church is taught to commit the reuenge of her persecutions to God, and to pray incessantly, for he no doubt (though in the persecution of Antichrist few vvill so thinke) vvill at length come. 9 We must also pray vvith humility, because vve know not vvith the Pharisee if We be iust, but vve know vvith the Publicane that vve be sinners. 15 He vvill haue children to be brought to him, and al to be as children. 18 What is to be done so get life euerlasting. 22 What also, so get perfection, 28 and vvhat reuward they shal haue that leaue al, yea or any part, for his sake. 31 he foretelleth of his Passion most particularly, 33 and entring into Iericho, cureth one blinde man.

∴ Vve should pray alwaies by faith, hope, and charitie, and by vvorking the things that be acceptable to God: though special times of vocal praies in the Canonical houres be assigned for the stirring of vs vp to God through external signes of deuotion.

AND he spake also a parable to them that it behoueth alwaies to pray, & not to be weary, saying, there was a certaine iudge in a certaine citie, vvich feared not God, and of man made no accoumt. † And there vvas a certaine vvidow in that citie: and she came to him, saying, Reuenge me of mine aduersarie. † And he vvould not of a long time. but aftervvard he said vvithin him self, Although I feare not God, nor make accoumt of man: † yet because this vvidow is importune vpon me, I vvill reuenge her, lest at the last she come and defame me. † And our Lord said, Heare vvhat the iudge of iniquitie sayeth. † And vvill not God reuenge his elect that crie to him day and night: and vvill he haue patience in them? † I say to you that he vvill quickly reuenge them. But yet the Sonne of man comming, shal he finde trovv you, faith in the earth?

The Gospel vpo the 10 Sunday after Pentecost.

† And he said also to certaine that trusted in them selues as iust, and despised others, this parable: † Tvvomen vvent vp into the Temple to pray: the one a Pharisee, and the other a Publicane. † The Pharisee standing, praied thus vvith him

- him self: God, I giue thee thanks that I am not as the rest of men, extorcioners, vniust, aduouterers, as also this Publicane.
- 12 † :: I fast twise in a vveeke: I giue tithes of al that I possesse.
- 13 † And the Publicane standing a farre of vwould not so much as lift vp his eies to vvard heauen: but he :: knocked his breast,
- 14 saying, God be merciful to me a sinner. † I say to you, this man vvent dovvne into his house iustified more then he: because euery one that exalteth him self, shal be humbled: and he that humbleth him self, shal be exalted. †
- 15 † * And they brought vnto him infants also, that he might touche them. Vvhich thing vwhen the Disciples savv, they

- 25 that haue money, enter into the kingdom of God? † For it is easier for a camel to passe through the eie of a nedle, then for a. Shal he finde faith? The Luciferians and Donatists vsed this place to excuse their fall from the Church, as our Aduersaries now doe, saying that it vvas decayed in faith, vwhen they forsooke it. To vvhom vve answer as S. Hierom and S. Augustin answered them, that Christ saith not that there should be no faith leaft in earth: but by this maner of speache insinuateth, that at the later day in the great persecution of Antichrist faith should be more rare, and the faithful among so many wicked not so notorious: specially that perfect faith containing deuotion, trust, and affection toward God, which our Maister so praised in certaine vpon whom he wrought miracles, and by force vvhereof mountaines might be moued, vvich is rare euen vwhen the Church flourisheth most.

The Church

CHAP. XIX

* Went vp.) Not onely invvard deuotion of faith and charitie tovwards Christ, but external offices of seeing, solovving, touching, receiuing, harbouing him, are recommended to vs in this example: euen so our manifold exteriour deuotion tovwards his Sacraments, Saints, and seruants, be grateul: specially the endeuour of good people not onely to be present at Masse or in the Church, but to be neere the B. Sacrament, and to see it vvith al reuerence and deuotion according to the order of the Church, much more to receiue it into the house of their body.

External deuotion.

1. Restore fourefold.) That vvhich vve giue of our ovvne, is almes and satisfacion for our sinnes : but that vvhich vve restore of il gotten goods by Extortion, Viurie, Simonie, Bribric, Theft, or othervvise, that is called here Restoring. And it is of duty and not of free almes, and must be rendred not to vvhom vve list, but to the parties annoyed if it be possible, othervvise it must be bestovved vpon the poore, or other good vses, according to the aduise of our superiour & such as haue charge of our soules. But that he yelded fourefold, that vvas more then he vvas bound, but very satisfactorie for his former sinnes also. And here vvith vve may note, that it is not the giuing of a peny, grote, or crowne, of a riche mans superfluitie, that is so much recommended to sinners for redeeming their faultes : but this large bestovving vpon Christ, to sell al and giue it in almes, to giue the moytis of our goodes, to render foure times so much, for that vvhich is vvrongfully gotten, that extinguis heth sinnes. The poore vvidovves brasse peny vvas very grateful, because it vvas al or much of that she had: but the riche mans pound of his superfluitie, though it be good, yet is nothing so grateul.

35. Shal be counted vvorthie.) This truth and speach that good men be vvorthy of heauen, is according to the Scriptures, and signifieth that mans vvorkes done by Christs grace do condignely or vvorthely deserue eternal ioy. as Sap. 3. God proued them, and found them vvorthy of him self, and Mat. 10. He that loueth his father more then me, is not vvorthy of me, and Colof. 1. That you may vvalk vvorthy of God, and molt plainly Apoc. 3. They shal vvalk vvith me in vvhite, because they are vvorthy, as of Christ (c. 1) Thou art vvorthy o Lord to receiue glorie &c. And that, to be counted vvorthie, and to be vvorthie, is here al one, it is plaine, by the Greeke vvord, vvvhich S. Paul vseth so, as the aduersaries ovvne English Testaments do testifie, reading thus Hebre. 10. Of how much soer punishment shal he be vvorthie, vvvhich &c. & it must needes so signifie, because men for sinnes are not onely counted, but are in deede vvorthie of punishment, as them selues do graunt. They do greatly therfore forget them selues, and are ignorant in the Scriptures, and knowv not the force nor the valure of the grace of God, vvvhich doth not onely make our labours grareful to God, but Worthie of the reward vvvhich he hath prouided for such as loue him. C H A P. XXII.

The old Paschal ceaseth and a new is instituted.

15. Wish desire I haue desired.] This great desire he had to eate this Paschal lambe, was not for it self; vvhich he had celebrated many yeres before: but because he meant immediatly after the Paschal of the Law vvas sacrificed & eaten, to institute the other new Paschal in the oblation and eating of his owne body, by vvhich the old Paschal should end and be fulfilled, and in which the old Testament and Law ceating, the Kingdom of God (which is the state of the new Testament and of his Church) should begin. For, the very passage from the old Law to the new was in this one supper.

Two cuppes or chalices at Christs last supper.

17. Taking the chalice.] This chalice according to the very euidence of the text it self also, is not the second part of the Holy Sacrament, but that solemne cuppe of vvine vvhich belonged as a libament to the offering and eating of the Paschal lambe. Which being a figure specially of the holy Chalice, vvas there drunken by our Sauour, and giuen to the Apostles also, With declaration that it should be the last cuppe of the Law, not to be drunken any more, till it should be drunken new in the kingdom of God, that is to say, in the celebration of the B. Sacrament of his bloud of the new Testament. And by this place it seemeth very like that the Wordes in S. Matthew, I wil not drinke of the fruite of the vine &c. Were pertaining to this cuppe of the old Law, and not to the Holy Sacrament, though they be there by repetition or recapitulation spoken after the holy Chalice.

Mat. 26, 29

The real presence.

19. This is my body.] Although sense tel thee it is bread, yet it is the body, according to his wordes. let faith confirme thee, iudge not by sense. after the wordes of our Lord let no doubt rise in thy minde. Cyril. mystag. 4. Of the veritie of flesh and bloud there is left no place to doubt: by the profession of our Lord him self and by our faith it is flesh and bloud in deede. Is not this truth? To them be it untrue, which deny I E S V S C H R I S T to be true God. Hilar li. 8 de Trinit.

Christ sacrificed his body and bloud in Sacrament at his supper.

19. Which is giuen.] As the former Wordes make and proue his body present, so these wordes plainly signifie, that it is present, as giuen, offered or sacrificed for vs: and being vttered in the present tence, it signifieth not onely that it should aftervvard be giuen or offered on the Crosse, but that it vvas then also in the Sacrament giuen and offered for vs. Whereby it is inuincibly proued that his Body is present as an host or Sacrifice: and that the making or consecrating thereof must needs be Sacrificing. And therefore the holy Fathers in this sense call it a Sacrifice. *Nissen. oras. 1 de resur. Leo ser. 7 et 8 de Pass. Hesychius li. 2 in Lewis. c. 8. Grego. ho. 37 in Euang. et Dial. li. 4. c. 59. The Sacrifice of the Altar.

The Apostles are made Priests, & the Sacrament of holy Orders instituted.

19. Doe this) In these vvordes the holy Sacrament of Order is instituted, because povver and comission to doe the principal act and vvorke of Priestthod, is giuen to the Apostles: that is, to doe that vvhich Christ then did concerning his body: Which was, to make and offer his body as a sacrifice for vs and for all that haue neede of Sacrifice, and to giue it to be eaten as Christs body sacrificed, to al faithful. For as the Paschal lambe was first sacrificed, and then eaten: so vvas his body: and thus to doe he here giueth comission and authoritie to the Apostles, and to al Priests which be

19. For a commemoration.] This Sacrifice and Sacrament is to be done perpetually in the Church for the commemoration of Christ, specially of his Passion: that is to say, that it may be a liuely representation, exemplar, and forme of his Sacrifice vpon the crosse. Of vvhich one oblatiō on the crosse, not onely al other sacrifices of the Lavv were figures, but this also: though this in a more nigh, high, mystical, and maruelous sort then any other. for in them Christs death vvas signified as by retemblance and similitudes of external creatures and bodies of brute beafts. but in this of the new Testament, his body visibly sacrificed on the crosse, in and by the self same body sacrificed and immolated in Sacramēt and vnder the shapes of bread and vvine, is most neerely & perfectly resemblēd: and therefore this is most properly cōmemoratiue, as most neerely exprelling the very condition, nature, efficacie, sort, and substance of that on the crosse. For which the holy fathers call it the very self same sacrifice (though in other maner) which was done on the crosse, as it is the self same thing, that is offered in the Sacrament, and on the crosse. Whereby you may see the puerueritie of the Protestants or their ignorance, that thinke it therefore not to be Christs body, because it is a memorie of his body or a figure of his body vpon the crosse: nor to be a true sacrifice, because it is a commemoratiue sacrifice. for as the thing that more liuely, neerely, and truely resembleth or representeth, is a better figure then that which shadoweth it a far off: so this his body in the Sacramēt, is more perfectly a figure of Christs body & sacrifice, then any other. Christ him self the Sonne of God is a figure and character of his fathers person, being yet of the self same substance. and Christs body transfigured on the holy Mount, was a figure and retemblance of his person glorified in heauen. euen so is his body in the Sacrament to a faithful man that knowveth by his beleefe grounded on Chriits owne vword, that in the one forme is his body, in the other his blood, the most perfect representatiō of his death that can be. As for the sacrifice, it is no lesse a true Sacrifice, because it is commemoratiue of Christs Passion: then those of the old Testament were the lesse true, because they were prefiguratiue. for that is the condition annexed to al Sacrifice of euery Lavv, to represent Christs Passion.

Ambr. in 10. Hebr. Chryf. ho. 17 in ep. ad Hebr.

A cōmemoratiue sacrifice is a true sacrifice, no lesse then the prefiguratiue sacrifices were true sacrifices.

To be a figure of a thing, and yet the thing it self, repugneria not.

20. The new Testament in my blood.] Moyfes tooke the blood of the first sacrifice that vvas made after the geuing of the Lavv Exod. 24. and vwith blood confirmed the couenant and compact betwixt God and his people, and so dedicated the old Testament, vvhich vwithout blood (saith S. Paul) vvas not dedicated. Moyfes put that blood also into a stāding peece, and sprinkled al the people &c. vwith the same, & said these formal vwordes, This is the blood of the couenant &c. or (as it is read in S. Paul) of the Testament vvhich God hath deliuered vnto you. Vnto al vvhich, Christ in this actiō about the second part of this his sacrifice, in euery of the Euangelists most cicerely alludeth, exprelling that the new Testament is begonne and dedicated in his blood in the Chalice, no lesse then the old vvas dedicated, begonne, and ratified in that blood of calues contained in the goblet of Moyfes, vwith vvhich his owne blood he sprinkled in vvardly his Apostles as the first fruits of the new Testament, imitating the wordes of Moyfes, and saying, Thou the Chalice the new Testament &c.: Which the other Euangelists spake more plainly, Thou my blood of the new Testament. By al which it is most certaine, that Christs blood in the Chalice, is the blood of Sacrifice, and that in this sacrifice of the altar consisteth the external religion and proper seruice of the new Testamēt, no lesse then the soueraine Worshipp of God in the old Law did consist in the sacrifices of the same. For though Christs sacrifice on the Crosse and his blood shed for vs there, be the general price, redemption, and satisfactiō for vs all, and is the last and perfectest sealing or confirmation of the new law and Testament: yet the seruice and Sacrifice which the people of the new Testament might resort vnto, could not be that violent actiō of the Crosse, but this on the Altar, which by Christs owne appointment is and shall be the eternal office of the new Testament, and the continual application of al the benefites of his Passion vnto vs.

20. Which I haue shed.) It is much to be obserued that the relatiue, vvhich, in these vwordes is not gouerned or ruled (as some vould perhaps thinke) of the nouvne blood, but of the vword chalice. Which is most plaine by the Greeke. Which taketh away al cauillations and shifts from the Protestants, both against the real presence and the true Sacrificing. For it sheweth evidently, that the blood as the contents of the chalice, or as in the chalice, is shed for vs (for so the Greeke readeth in the present tenie) and not onely as vpon the crosse. And therefore as it foloweth thereof inuincibly, that it is no bare figure, but his blood in deede, so it ensueth necessarily, that it is a Sacrifice, and propitiatorie, because the chalice (that is the Blood contained in the same) is shed for our sinnes. For al that know the maner of the Scriptures speaches, know also that this, Blood to be shed for sinne, is to be sacrificed for propitiation or for pardon of sinnes. And this text proueth al this so plainly, that * Beza turneth him self roundly vpon the Holy Euangelist, charging him with Solæcisme or false Greeke, or els that the wordes (which yet he cōfesseth to be in al copies Greeke and Latin) are thrust into the text out of some other place: vvhich he rather standeth vpon then that S. Luke should speake incongruously in so plaine a matter. And therefore he saith plainly that it can not be truely said neither of the chalice it self nor of the contents thereof: vvhich is in deede to giue the lie to the blessed Euangelist, or to deny this to be Scripture. So cleere is the Scripture

The chalice shed for vs, must needs signifie, the blood therein, not vvine, and the same sacrificed.

Beza condemneth the Gospel it self of fallshod and impossibilitie.

ture for vs, so miserable flights and shifts is falshod put vnto, God be thanked.

Ambition.

30. Contention.] The Apostles perceiuing Christs departure from them and his kingdom to be neere, as infirme men and not yet endeued with the spirit of God, began to haue emulation and cogitations of Superiority one ouer an other: Which our Maister represseth in them by exhortation to humility and by his owne example, that being their Lord, yet so lately serued them: not forbidding Maioritie or Superioritie in them, but pride, tyranny, and contempt of their inferiours.

Peters faith shall neuer faile.

31. Simon Simon.] Lastly put them out of doubt, he calleth Peter twice by name, and telling him the Diuels desire to liſte and trie them al to the vttermoſt (as he did that night) saith that he hath ſpecially prayed for him, to this end that his faith ſhould neuer faile, and that he being once conquered, ſhould after that for euer confirme, eſtabliſh or vphold the reſt in their faith. Which is to ſay, that Peter is that man whom he would make Superiour ouer them and the whole Church. Whereby we may learne that it was thought fit in the prouidence of God, that he who ſhould be the head of the Church, ſhould haue a ſpecial priuilege by Christs praier and promes, neuer to faile in faith, and that none other either Apoſtle, Biſhop, or prieſt may chalenge any ſuch ſingular or ſpecial prerogatiue either of his Office or perſon, otherwiſe then ioyning in faith with Peter and by holding of him. The danger (saith S. Leo) was common to al the Apoſtles, but our Lord tooke ſpecial care of Peter, that the ſtare of al the reſt might be more ſure, if the head were inuincible: God ſo diſpenſing the aide of his grace, that the aſſurance and ſtrength which Chriſt gaue to Peter, might redound by Peter to the reſt of the Apoſtles. S. Auguſtine alſo: Chriſt praying for Peter, prayed for the reſt, becauſe in the Paſtor and Prelate the people is corrected or commended. And S. Ambroſe writeth, that Peter after his tentation was made Paſtor of the Church, becauſe it was ſaid to him, Thou being conuerted, confirme thy breſthren. Neither was this the priuilege of S. Peters perſon, but of his Office, that he ſhould not faile in faith but euer confirme al other in their faith. For the Church, for whoſe ſake that priuilege was thought neceſſarie in Peter the Head thereof, was to be preferred no leſſe afterward, then in the Apoſtles time. Wherevpon al the Fathers apply this priuilege of not failing and of confirming other in faith, to the Romane Church and Peters ſucceſſors in the ſame. To which (saith S. Cyprian) infidelity or falſe faith can not come. And S. Bernard ſaith writing to Innocentius Pope, againſt Abailardus the Heretike, we muſt referre to your Apoſtleſhip al the ſcandals and perils which may fall, in matter of faith ſpecially. For there the defects of faith muſt be holpen, where faith can not faile. For to what other ſee was it euer ſaid, I haue prayed for thee Peter, that thy faith do not faile? So ſay the Fathers. not meaning that none of Peters ſeate can erre in perſon, vnderſtanding, priuate doctrine or writings, but that they can not nor ſhall not euer iudicially conclude or giue definitiue ſentence for falshod or heresie againſt the Catholike faith, in their Conſiſtories, Courts, Councils, decrees, deliberations or conſultations kept for deciſion and determination of ſuch controuerſies, doubts, or queſtions of faith as ſhalbe propoſed vnto them: becauſe Christs prayer and promes protecteth them therein for confirmation of their brethren. And no maruel that our Maister would haue his vicars Conſiſtorie & Seate infallible, ſeeing euen in the old Law the high Prieſt and Chaire of Moyſes wanted not great priuilege in this caſe, though nothing like the Churches and Peters prerogatiue. But in both, any man of ſenſe may ſee the difference betwene the perſon, and the Office, as wel in doctrine as life. Liberius in perſecution might yield, Marcellinus for feare might commit Idolatrie, Honorius might fall to Heresie, and more then al this, ſome Iudas might creepe into the Office: and yet al this without prejudice of the Office and Seate, in which (saith S. Auguſtine) our Lord haſt ſet the doctrine of truth. Caiphas by priuilege of his Office prophesied right of Chriſt, but according to his owne knowledge and faith, knew not Chriſt. The Euangelists and other penners of holy Write, for the execution of that function had the aſſiſtance of God, and ſo far could not poſſibly erre: but that Luke, Marke, Salomon or the reſt might not erre in other their priuate

The lacke of knowledge and humble acceptation of which Gods prouidence, that is, that one is not honoured and obeyed of al the brotherhod, is the cauſe of al Schiſmes and Heresies, ſaith S. Cyprian. A point of ſuch importance, that al the Twelue being in Apoſtleſhip like, Chriſt would yet for the better keeping of vuity and truth, haue one to be head of them al, that a head being once appointed, occaſion of Schiſme might be taken away, ſaith S.  15 † And Herod seeing I E S V S, vvas very glad, for he vvas 16 desirous of a long time to see him, for because he heard many things of him: and he hoped to see some signe vvrought by him. † And he asked him in many vvordes. But he ansvve-red him nothing. † And there stoode the cheefe Priests and the Scribes constantly accusing him. † And Herod vvith his armie set him at naught: and he mocked him, putting on him a vvwhite garment, and sent him backe to Pilate. † And Herod and Pilate vvere made frendes that day. for before they vvere enemies one to an other.
 † And Pilate calling together the cheefe Priests and magistrates, and the people, † said to them, You haue presented vnto me this man, as auerting the people, and behold I examining him before you, haue found no cause in this man of those things vvherein you accuse him. † No, nor Herod neither. for I sent you to him, and behold, nothing vvorthie of death is done to him. † I vvil chasten him therefore and di-misse him.

† And

† And he of necessitie had to release vnto them vpon the 17 feast day, one. † But the vvhole multitude together cried out, 18 saying, Dispatch him, and release vs Barabbas. † vvhich was 19 for a certaine sedition made in the citie and murder, cast into prison. † And Pilate againe spake to them, desirous to release 20
I E S V S. † But they cried againe, saying, Crucifie, crucifie him. 21
† And he the third time said to them, Vvhy, vvhich euil hath 22 this man done? I finde no cause of death in him. I vvill correct him therfore and let him goe. † But they vvere instant vvith 23 loude voices requiring that he might be crucified. And their voices preuailed. † And Pilate adiudged their petition 24 to be done. † And he released vnto them him that for mur- 25 der and sedition had been cast into prison, vvhom they demaunded: but I E S V S he deliuered to their pleasure.

† And vvhen they led him, they tooke one Simon of 26 Cyréne comming from the countrie: and they laid the crosse vpon him to carie after I E S V S. † And there folowed 27 him a great multitude of people, and of vvomen vvich bevvailed and lamented him. † But I E S V S turning to 28 them, said, Daughters of Hierusalem, vveepe not vpon me, but vveepe vpon your selues, and vpon your children. † For 29 behold the daies shal come, vvherein they vvill say, Blessed the pappes that haue not giuen sucke. † Then shal they begin to say 30 greene wood they doe these things, in the drie vvhich shal be done?

† And there vvere led also other two malefactours vvith 32 him, to be executed. † And after they came to the place 33 vvhich is called Caluarie, there they crucified him: and the theeues, one on the right hand, and the other on the left.
† And I E S V S said, Father, forgiue them, for they know 34 not vvhich they doe. But they deuinding his garments, did cast lottes.

† And the people stode expecting, and the princes 35 vvith them derided him, saying, Others he hath saued, let him saue him self, if this be Christ, the elect of God. † And 36 the souldiers also mocked him comming to him, and offering him vinegre, † saying, If thou be the king of the Iewes, 37 saue thy self. † And there vvas also a superscription vvritten 38
ouer him in Greeke, and Latine, and Hebrevv letters: T H I S

 40 thecues that vvere hanged, blasphemed him, saying, If thou be Christ, saue thy self, and vs. † But the other ansvvering, rebuked him, saying, Neither doest thou feare God, vwhere as 41 thou art in the same damnation? † And vve in deede iustly, for vve receiue vvorthie of our doings: but this man hath 42 done no euil. † And he said to I E S V S, Lord, remember me this, he gaue vp the ghost.

30. Tooke bread.) The Fathers in diuers places take this to be meant of the B. Sacrament. Author operis imperf. ho. 17. S. Augustine li. 39 de consensu Euang. c. 25 & ser. 140 de temp. & ep. 59 ad Paulinum q. 8. Paulinus him self in the next epistle before that, among S. Augustines. Venerable Bede also vpon this place. Theophylacte vpon this place. And that it should be meant of the holy Sacrament, the forme of solemne taking the bread into his handes, blessing it, breaking it, and reaching it to his disciples (exceeding proper to the consecration, and common to none other vulgar benediction, nor any where vied but in Christs miraculous multiplying the loaves) and the singular effecte in notifying Christ vnto them, do proue. And if it be the Sacrament (as it is most probable) then is it an euident example and varrant of ministracion in one kinde. The B. Sacrament in one kinde.

46. Penance to be preached.) He shewed vnto them out of the Scriptures, not onely the things that were now accomplished in him self, but also that were yet to come about his Church: as, where it should begin, to vvit, at Hierusalem: and how farre it should goe, to vvit, to al nations: that he might not suffer vs (saith S. Augustine) to erre neither in the bridegrome nor in the bride. The Catholike or vniuersal Church.

De vni. Ec. c. 10. For this maketh manifestly against al Heretikes and Schismatices, that set vp new churches in particular countries, drawing the people from the foresaid onely true Church, vvich from Hierusalem so groweth ouer al nations, til the end of the vvorld come. Christ blessed diuers waies.

30. Blessed them.) Christ our high priest, prefigured specially therein by Melchisedec, often gaue his blessing to his: somtimes by vvordes, as, Peace be to you: somtimes by imposing his handes: and now here by lifting vp his handes ouer his Disciples as it vvore for his farewell. In vvhat forme, the Scripture doth not expresse, but very like it is that in forme of the croisse, as Iacob the Patriarch blessed his nephewes for signification of Christs benediction, for now the croisse began to be glorious among the faithful, and the Apostles (as it is most certaine * by the fathers vvich call it an ancient tradition) vied that signe for an external note of benediction. Blessing with the signe of the croisse.

14. * Tertul. de coron. milit. nu. 3 Basil. de Sp. sanct. c. 27. Yea S. Augustine saith (in Pf. 30 Conc. 3) that Christ himself not without cause would haue his signe to be fixed in our foreheads as in the seate of thamefastnes, that a Christian man should not be ashamed of the reproche of Christ. and what forme can a Christian man vie rather to blesse him self or others, then that vvich was dedicated in Christs death, and is a conuenient memorial of the same? Howsoever it be, that the Bishops and Priests of Gods Church blesse vvith an external signe, no man can reprehend, being warranted by Christs owne example and action.

THE ARGUMENT OF S. IOHNS GOSPEL.

Iohns Gospel may be divided into foure partes.

The first part is, of the actes of Christ before his solcenne manifestation of himselfe, while Iohn Baptist was yet baptizing: Chap. 1. 2. 3. 4.

The second, of his Actes in Iurie (having now begunne his solcenne manifestation in Galilee, Mar. 4. 12) the second Easter or Pasche of his preaching: Chap. 5. For of the first pasche, we had in the first part, chap. 2, 13: And the pasche of the Iewes was at hand. And that feast wherewith we haue in this second part, chap. 5, 1: After this there was a festiual day of the Iewes, is thought of good Authors, to be the feast of Pasche. Iren. li. 2. c. 39.

The third part is, of his Actes in Galilee, and in Iurie, about the third Pasche, and after it: cap. 6, to the 12. For so we haue chap. 6, 4: And Pasche the festiual day of the Iewes was at hand.

The fourth part is of the fourth pasche (which we haue in the end of the chap. 11, 55: And the pasche of the Iewes was at hand) that is to say, of the Holy weeke of his Passion in Hierusalem: chap. 12. vnto the end of the booke.

By which diuision it is manifest, that the intent of this Euangelist writing after the other three, was, to omit the Actes of Christ in Galilee, because the other three had written them at large: and to reporte his Actes done in Iurie, which they had omitted.

And this he doth, because Iurie with Hierusalem and the Temple, being the principal parte of the Countrey, there abode the principal of the Iewes, both for authoritie, and also for learning in the law or knowledge of the Scriptures. and therefore that was the place, wher our Lord IESVS finding in the Head it selfe and in the leaders of the rest, such wilful obstinacie and desperate resistance, as the Propbets had foretold, did by this occasion, much more plainely then in Galilee, both say and proue, at sundry times, euen euery yere of his preaching, him selfe to be the CHRIST that had bene so long promised vnto them, & expected of them: & the same CHRIST to be not onely a man, as they imagined, but also the natural, consubstantial, & coeternal Sonne of God the Father, who now had sent him. Therefore these were the wordes and deedes that serued best the purpose of this Euangelist, being, to shew the glorie & excellencie of this person IESVS: that thereby the Gentils might see, how worthily Hierusalem & the Iewes were reprobed, who had refused yea & crucified such an one: and how wel & to their owne saluation themselues might doe, to receiue him and to beleue in him. For this to haue bene his purpose, him selfe declareth in the end, saying: These are written, that you may beleue that IESVS is CHRIST the Sonne of God: and that beleuing, you may haue life in his name.

* This speech very common in this Gospel, as appeareth by the places here marked, declareth that he writeth to the Gentils.

And hereupon it is, that S. Hierome writeth thus in his life: Iohn the Apostle, a whom IESVS loued very much, the b sonne of Zebedee, b the brother of Iames the Apostle c whom Herod after our Lords Passion

tion beheaded, last of all wrote the Gospel, at the request of the Bishops of Asia, against Cerinthus, and other Heretikes, and especially against the assertion of the Ebionites then rising, who say that Christ was not before M A R I E. Whereupon also he was compelled to utter his Diuine Natiuitie. Of his three Epistles, and of his Apocalypse, shall be said in their owne places.

It foloweth in S. Hierome, that In the Second persecution vnder Domitian, fourtene yeres after the persecution of Nero he was exiled into the ile Patmos. But after that Domitian was slaine, and his actes for his passing crueltie repealed by the Senate: vnder Nerua the Emperour he returned to Ephesus, and there continuing vnto the time of Traiane the Emperour, he founded and gouerned all the Churches of Asia, and worne with old age, he died the threescore and eighteth yere after the Passion of our Lord, and was buried besides the same citie.

Whose excellencie the same holy Doctour thus breifly describeth. li. 1. Aduers. Iouinianum.

IOH N the Apostle, one of our Lords Disciples, who was the yongest among the Apostles, and whom the faith of Christ found a virgin, remained a virgin, and therefore is more loued of our Lord, and lieth vpon the breast of I E S V S: and that which Peter durst not aske, he desireth him to aske: and after the resurrection, when Marie Magdalen had reported that our Lord was risen againe, both of them ranne to the Sepulchre, but he came thither first: and when they were in the ship, and fished in the lake of Genesareth, I E S V S stood on the shore, neither did the Apostles know whom they saw: onely the virgin knoweth the virgin, and saith to Peter, It is our Lord. This Iohn was both an Apostle, and Euangelist, and Prophet: an Apostle, because he wrote to the Churches as a Maister: an Euangelist because he compiled a booke of the Gospel, which (except Matthew) none other of the twelue Apostles did: a Prophet, for he saw in the ile Patmos, where he was banished by Domitian the Emperour for the testimonie of our Lord, the Apocalypse, containing infinite mysteries of things to come. Tertullian also reporteth, that at Rome being cast into a barrel of hore boiling oile, he came forth more pure and fresher or liuelier, then he went in. Yea and his Gospel it self much differeth from the rest. Matthew beginneth to write as of a man: Marke of the prophetic of Malachie and Esay: Luke of the Priesthod of Zacharie: the first hath the face of a man, because of the genealogie: the second the face of a lion, for the voice of one crying in the desert: the third the face of a calfe, because of the Priesthod. But Iohn as an Eagle flieth to the things on high, & mounteth to the Father him self, saying: In the beginning was the V V O R D, and the V V O R D was with God, and God was the V V O R D. Thus far S. Hierome.

Vpon this Gospel there are the famous commentaries of S. Augustine called Tractatus in Euang. Ioan. to. 9. and twelue bookes of S. Cyrils commentaries.

At the request of his mother he wrought his first miracle, turning water into wine as a mariage in Galilee, although the time of his manifestation be not yet come. 12 Then in Hierusalem at Pasche, being but one, and yet obscure, he throweth out of the Temple most miraculously al the marchantes. 18 And being yet of the blind Ierues asked a signe, he signifieth so long before, that they should kill him, but he will rise againe the third day. 21 Which also presently they would doe, but that he knowing their falses hartes (though many beleue in him) will not saue among them.

Profaners of Gods Church are to be punished in soul & body by the Spiritual power. 15. Cast them out. By this chastising corporally the defilers and abusers of the Temple, he doth not onely shew his power, that being but one poore man he could by force execute his pleasure vpon so many sturdy fellowes: but also his soueraine authoritie ouer al offenders, and that not vpon their soules onely, as by excommunication and spiritual penalties, but so far as is requisite for the execution of spiritual iurisdiction, vpon their bodies and goods also. That the Spiritualltie may learne, how far and in what cases, for iust zeale of Christs Church, they may vse and exercise both spiritually and temporally their forces and faculties against offenders, specially against the prophanners of Gods Church, according to the Apostles allusion 1 Cor. 3. If any defile the Temple of God, him will God destroy.

Baptisme in Water necessa-
 rie to saluation.

5. Borne againe of Water.] As no man can enter into this World nor haue his life and being in the same, except he be borne of his carnal parents: no more can a mā enter into the life & state of grace which is in Christ, or attaine to life euerlasting, vnles he be borne and baptized of water and the Holy Ghost. Whereby we see first, this Sacrament to be called our regeneration or second birth, in respect of our natural and carnal which was before. Secondly, that this Sacrament consisteth of an external element of water, and internal vertue of the Holy Spirit: wherein it excelleth Iohns Baptisme, which had the external element, but not the spiritual grace. thirdly, that no man can enter into the kingdom of God, nor into the fellowship of Holy Church, without it. Whereby the * Pelagians, and Caluinitis be condemned, that promise life euerlasting to yong children that die without Baptisme, and all other that thinke onely faith to serue, or the external element of * August. heref. 88. water superfluous or not necessarie: our Saviours wordes being plaine and general. Though in this case, God which hath not bound his grace, in respect of his owne freedom, to any Sacrament, may and doth accept them as baptized, which either are martyred before they could be baptized, or els depart this life with vow and desire to haue that Sacrament, but by some remediless necessitie could not obtaine it. Lastly, it is proued that this Sacrament giueth grace ex opere operato, that is, of the worke it self (which all Protestants denie) because it to breedeth our spiritual life in God, as our carnal birth giueth the life of the World.

18. Is iudged already.] He that beleueth in Christ with faith which worketh by charitie (as the Gal. 5, 6. Apostle speaketh) shall not be condemned at the later day nor at the houre of his death, but the infidel, be he Iew, Pagan, or Heretike, is already (if he die in his incredulitie) by his owne profession and sentence condemned, and shall not come to iudgement either particular or general, to be discussed according to his workes of mercie done or omitted. In which sentē S. Paul saith that the obstinate Heretike is condemned by his owne iudgement, preuenting in him self, of his owne free Tit. 3, 11. wil, the sentence both of Christ and of the Church.

31. He that cometh from above.] As though he should say, No maruel that men resort to Christ so fast and make lesse account of me. for, his baptisme and his preaching and his person are all from heaven immediatly. He bringeth all from the very bosome, mouth, and substance of God his Father. Whatsoeuer is in me, is but a litle drop of his grace. His spirit and graces are aboue all measures or mens gifts, euen according to his Manhood: and all power temporal and spiritual, the kingdom and the Priesthood, and all souerainie in heaven and earth are bestowed vpon him as he is man also.

CHAP. IIII,

^{20.} Our Fathers adored.] By adoration is meant doing of sacrifice for other offices of Religion might be done in any place. The Samaritanes to detend their adoring in Garizim, pretended their worshipping there to be more ancient then the Iewes in Hierusalem, referring it to

The Schismatical tēple contendeth against the true Tēple.

Iacob: Whereas in deede that Patriarch adoring there before the Temple vvas appointed, or the Law giuen, made nothing for their Schisme: Which vvas begone by Manasses a fugitiue Priest, onely to hold his vnlawful Wife thereby, and to obtaine Superioritie, in Schisme: vvhich he could not doe in the vnitie of his brethren: long after the Temple of Hierusalem, from vvhich the reuolt vvas made. Therefore Christ giueth sentence for the Ievves and the Temple of Hierusalem, affirming that they had a good ground thereof, but the Samaritanes none at al.

The true Temple preuaileth.

Iosephus also recordeth hovv the Samaritanes demanded of Alexander the Great, the like priuileges and immunities as he had graunted to the high Priest and Temple of Hierusalem, pretending their Temple to be as great and as vvorthy, and them selues to be Ievves as the other, and to vvorship the same God. but their Schismatical hypocritie vvas easely spied and dismissed vwith nothing. An other time the Ievves and Samaritanes (as the same vwriter testifieth) made a great sturre in Alexandria about the truth and antiquitie of the Schismatical temple and seruice in Garizim and the other true Temple of Salomon: in so much that the matter vvas put to arbitrement by Ptolomæus the kings commaundement, onely to trie whether of the two was first. And the Schismatices (as their custome is) per falsum can make their Church or seruice as old as they list, referring it to the Patriarches, as our Schismatices do now to Christ and the Apostles. But when the trial was made, onely they of Hierusalem did inuincibly proue by continual succession of their Priests, and by the iust note of the time when the Schismatices went out from them, that theirs was the lawfull, and the other the false temple and false adoration. and to it was iudged, and the Samaritanes put to silence. Afterward the said Schismatices (which is lightly the end of al Schismes) reuolted quite from the Iewes religion, and dedicated their temple in Garizim to Iupiter Olympius, as Caluins supper and his bread and wine is like at length to come to the sacrifice of Ceres and Bacchus.

The true Temple is proued by continual succession.

Christian adoration through-out al nations in every place, in spirit & veritie: that is, in the Sacraments and seruice of the new law, full of spirit & grace: in the veritie of things before prefigured, specially the true sacrifice of Christs body and blood.

23. In Spirit and veritie. Our Sauour foretelleth her that the end & ceasing of their sacrifice & adoration in both the Temples should shortly be, and euen then vvas begone to be fulfilled: instructing her in three things concerning that point. first, that the true Sacrifice should be tied no more to that one place or nation, but that true adoration should be through out al Nations according to the Prophecie of Malachie. Secondly, that the grosse and carnal adoration by the flesh and blood of beastes and other external terrene creatures, not hauing in them grace, spirit, and life, should be taken avway, & an other sacrifice succede, which should be in it self inuisible, celestial, diuine, full of life, spirit, and grace. and thirdly, that this adoration and sacrifice should be the veritie it self, vvhich of al the former sacrifices and hostes were but shadowes and figures. and he calleth that here spirit and truth, vvhich in the first Chapter is called grace and truth. Al vvhich is no more but a prophecie and description of the Sacrifice of the faithful Gentils in the body and blood of Christ: not that it is not by external meanes giuen to vs (for otherwise vve being men consisting of flesh and blood could not be capable thereof) but that it is spirit and life in it self, being the flesh of the VVORD of God. And if a man enlarge the vword of Adoration, (vvhich here as is laid, signifieth properly the worship of God by sacrifice) to al the Sacraments of the new Law, they al likewise be spirit and grace, the Holy Ghost working inuisibly and internally vpon our soules by euery one of them. Wherevpo our Baptisme, is water & the Holy Ghost: our Penance, the word of absolution and the Holy Ghost: our Confirmatiõ, oile & the Holy Ghost by imposition of handes: finally, al the adoration of the Catholike Church, is properly spiritual, though certaine external creatures for our natures, state and necessitie, be ioyned therevnto. Take heede therefore thou gather not of Christs wordes, that Christian men should haue no vie of external office towards God: for that would take away al sacrifice, Sacraments, prayers, Churches, and societie of men in his seruice.

ANNOTATIONS
 CHAP. V.

Hiero. de locis Hebr. post med.

2. A pond.) This is as great a wonder and worke as was in the old Law, yet neuer recorded in the Scripture before: the conditions and circumstances of the same much to be distinctly weighed against the Miscreants of this time for many causes. First, that God without derogation to his honour, yea to the great commendation of it, doth giue vertue of miracles and cure to water or other creatures. Secondly, that he giueth such vertues to these creatures specially which be by vic and occupying in sacred functions or other wise, as it were sanctified: for this pond was it wherein the carcasses of sheepe (therefore called Probatia & other beasts to be sacrificed, were first washed, to which being alwaies red (as S. Hierom saith) with the bloud of holtes, this force was giuen, for the commendation of the sacrifices of the Law there offered. How much more may we acknowledge such workes of God miraculously done in or about the Sacrifice or Sacraments of the new Testament, which faithlesse men wholly reiect and condemne for fables, because they know not the Scriptures nor the power of God. Thirdly, that this operation was giuen at one time more then an other, & rather on great festiual daies then other vulgar times (for this was the feast of Pasche or of Pentecost) as daies more sanctified, and vhen the people made greater concourse: which sheweth that we should not wonder to see great miracles done at the Memories and feastes of Martyrs or other great Festiuities, more then at other places and times. Fourthly, that the Angels or some special Saints are Pretidents or Patrones of such places of miracle, and workers also vnder God of the effects that there extraordinarily be done. Which ought to make Christians lesse doubt, that the force of diuers waters in the world is iustly attributed by our forefathers and good stories to the prayers and presence of Saints, which proane incredulous men referre onely to nature, vntruly pretending that God is more glorified by the workes of nature, which be of his ordinarie prouidence, then by the graces of Miracle giuen to his saincts or Angels by his extraordinary prouidence. Fifthly, that miracles be not wrought on men by their faith onely and as wel by their presence in spirit as in body, or vpon the parties desire or deuotion onely, according to the Heretikes pretext that God is a like present by his power and grace to every man and place: and therefore that men neede not to go from their owne houses or countries to seeke holines or health at the places of Christs or his Saincts birth, death, memories: for none could haue benefite of this water but he that could touch it, and be in it corporally, and at that iust time when the water was in motion by the Angel. Yea sixtiy, we may consider that in such cases to make the matter more maruelous, rare, and more earnestly to be sought for, and to signifie to vs that God hath al such extraordinary operations in his owne wil and commaundement, without al rules of our reasons and questioning thereon, none could be healed but that person who first could get into the pond after the Angel came and stirred the same. Seuently, that these graces of corporal cures giuen to this water, * prefigure the like force of the Sacrament of Baptisme for the cure of soules, though we neede not seeke the correspondance thereof to the figure in every point. Lastly, Chrit by his power of excellencie and prerogatiue could and did heale this poore man that

8 Christ extraordinarily healeth and saueth without creatures. that could get no body to help him into the water, because he earnestly and long desired the remedie by God appointed, but was excluded by necessitie: as our Lord saueth al such as die without Bapisme, if they in their owne persons earnestly intended, desired, and fought for the same.

14. Sinne no more.) We may gather hereby that this mans long infirmite was for punishment of his sinnes, and that men often attribute their sicknes to other natural defects, and seeke for remedies of the world in vaine, when the iunne for which it was sent, remaineth, or is not repented of: and therefore that in al infirmities men should first turne to God & goe to their Ghostly father, and then call for the wordly Phisicians after ward.

34. I receiue not.) Our Maister meaneth that mans testimonie is not necessarie to him, nor that the truth of his Diuinitie dependeth on worldly witnessers or mens commendations: though to vs such testimonies be agreable and necessarie. and so for our instruction he vouchtaued to take the testimonies of Iohn the Baptist and Moyes and the Prophets: and departing out of this world, to send forth al his Apostles, and in them al Bishops and Lawfull Pastors, to be his witnessers from Hierusalem to the ends of the world.

39. Searche the Scriptures.) He reprehendeth the Iewes, that reading daily the Scriptures and acknowledging that in them they should finde life and saluation, they yet looked ouer them so superficially that they could not finde therein him to be CHRIST their King, Lord, life, and Sauiour. For the special maisters & Scribes of the Iewes then, were like vnto our Heretikes now, vwho be euer talking and turning and shuffling the Scriptures, but are of al men most ignorant in the deepe knowldge thereof. And therefore our Maister referreth them not to the reading onely or learning them without booke, or hauing the sentences thereof gloriously painted or vwritten in thier Temple, houses, or coates: but to the deepe searche of the meaning and myteries of the Scriptures, which are not so easily to be seen in the letter.

Neither Iewes nor Heretikes finde the truth, because they searche not the Scriptures deeply, but read superficially.

27. Worke not the meate.] By their greedy seeking after him for meate of the body, he taketh occasion to dravv them to the desire of a more excellent food: which he had to give them, and so by litle to open vnto them the great meate and mysterie of the B. Sacrament: which (as he pro- ueth) doth not onely far passe their ordinarie bread or his maruelous multiplied loaves, but Manna it self, which they thought came from heauen, and so much wondered at it.
22. The true bread.] Though the person of Christ incarnate, euen out of the Sacrament also, be meant vnder the Metaphores of bread and drinke from heauen: and our beleefe in him, be signi- fied by eating and feeding: yet the causes why they should be recommended vnto vs in such ter- mes, were, that he was to be eaten and drunken in deed in the formes of bread and wine: for the which cause his body on the crosse is called *his bread: & his blood shed on the crosse, *the blood of the grape: no doubt because the same body and blood were in Holy Sacrament to be eaten and drunken. In vvhich speeches, either of Christs person generally, or peculiarly of the same as in the B. Sacrament, the true bread is not taken properly and specially for that substance which is of corne, and called vvvith vs bread: but generally for food or meate, and therefore it hath ioyned vvith it lightly a terme signifying a more excellent sort of sustenance: as, the true bread, the bread of heauen, the bread of life, Super substantial bread, in which sort the holy Sacrament which is Christs body, is both here, and in S. Luke and S. Paul also, often called bread, euen after consecration: not onely for that it was made of bread, but because it is bread more truly, and by more excellent property and calling, then that vvhich ordinarily is named bread.
44. Dravv him] The Father dravveth vs and teacheth vs to come to his Sonne, and to beleefe these high and hard mysteries of his incarnation and of feeding vs vvith his ovvne substance in the Sacrament: not cōpelling or violently forcijng any against their Will or vvithout any respect of their consent, as Heretikes pretend: but by the svvete internal motions and periuasions of his grace and spirit he wholly maketh vs of our owne vvill and liking to consent to the same.
49. Manna, and died.] The Heretikes holding the fathers of the old Testament to haue eaten of the same meate, and to haue had as good Sacraments as vve, be here refuted: Christ putting a plaine difference in the very substance thereof, and in the graces and effects much more at large. Manna vvas onely a figure of the B. Sacrament, though a very excellent figure thereof for many causes. It came in a sort from heauen, our Sacrament more: it vvas made by God miraculously, our Sacrament more: it vvas to be eaten for the time of their peregrination, our Sacrament more: it vvas to euey man vvhat he liked best, our Sacrament more: a litle thereof serued and sufficed as vvell as much, our Sacrament more: it vvas reserved for such daies as it could not be gathered, and our Sacrament much more: it vvas kept for a memorial in the arke of the Testament, our Sacrament much more: the discontented and incredulous murmured and gainesaid it, at our Sacrament much more: it sustained their bodies in the desert, our Sacrament both body and soule much more.
52. How can this man?] It came not to their minde that nothing vvas impossible to God, that vvick- edly said, How can this man give vs his flesh? but vve may make great profite of their sinne, beleeuing the Mysteries, and taking a lesson, neuer to say or once thinke, How? for it is a leuittish word and vvorthy of punishment. so saith S. Cyril. li. 2. c. 13 in 10. Neuertheles if one asked onely for desire to learne in humility, as our Lady did touching her hauing a childe in her virginie, then he muſt take the Angels answer to her, That it is of the Holy Ghost, so saith S. Damascene li. 2. c. 12.
53. vnles you eate.] Christ comending the Sacrament of the faithful vnto vs, said, Except you eate &c. you can not haue life in you. So the life saith of life, and to him that thinketh the life to be a liſt, this meate shal be death & not life to him. Augult. Ser. 2 de verb. Ap. c. 1. And S. Leo thus, Beauſe our Lord teach, Except you eate &c. let vs so communicate that vve nothing doubt of the truth of Christs body and blood: for that is receiued vvith mouth, vvhich is beleued in hart: and they answer Amen in vaine, that dispuse against that vvhich they receiue. Ser. 6 de ieiun. 7.
55. And drinke.] This the Protestants alleage for the necessitie of receiuing in both kindes: but in respect of them selues (who lightly hold all this chapter to pertaine nothing to the sacra- mental receiuing, but to spiritual feeding on Christ by faith onely) it can make nothing for one kinde or other. And in respect of vs Catholikes, who beleefe Christs whole person both humani- tie and Diuinitie, both flesh and blood to be in either forme, and to be vvholly receiued no lesse in the first, then in the second or in both, this place commaundeth nothing for both the kindes.
53. You shal not haue life.] Though the Catholikes teach these wordes to be spoken of the Sa- crament, yet they meane not (no more then our Sauour here doth) to exclude all from saluation, that receiue not actually and Sacramentally vnder one or both kindes. For then children that die after they be baptized and neuer receiued Sacramentally, should perishe: which to hold, were heretical Neither did S. But the holy Body of Christ is the true food nourishing to life euerlasting, and his bloud the true drinke that driueth death avvay vsterly, for they be not the body and bloud of a mere man, but of him that being ioyned to life is made life: and therefore are vve the body and members of Christ, because by this benediction of the mysterie vve receiue the iōne of God him self. By this place the holy Council proueth that for the grace and effect of the Sacrament, which is the life of the soule, there is no difference whether a man receiue grace and effect both kindes or one, because our Sauour vvho before attributed life to the eating and drinking of thereof in one his body and bloud, doth here also affirme the same effect, vvhich is life euerlasting, to come of kinde, and there- eating onely vnder one forme. Nay, it is they that haue defrauded the World, by Receiuing in one taking away both the real substance of Christ, and the grace from one kinde and both kindes, and or both kindes, from al other Sacraments. The Church doth onely (by the Wisedom of Gods Spirit and by instru- idifferēt, accord- tion of Christ and his Apostles, according to time and place, for Gods most honour, the reuerence ing to the holy of the Sacrament, and the peoples moit profite thereby) dispose of the maner and order, how the Churches ap- Prielt, how the people shall receiue, and al other particular pointes, Which him self (saith S. Whereby the Church being warranted and in the ruling of such things fully taught by Gods spirit, as well for the repprouing of certaine hereties, that Christ God and man vvas not vvhole and al in euery part of the Sacrament, as specially for that the Christian people being novv enlarged, and the communicants often so many at once, that neither so much vvine could be conueniently consecrated, nor vvithout manifold accidents of sheading or abusing be receiued (vvhereof the Protestants haue no regard, because it is but common vvine vvhich they occupie, but the Church knowving it to be Christovvne bloud, must haue al dreadful regard) therefore I say the hath decreed and for some hundreth yeres put in vie, that the Prielt saving Masse, should alvvayes both conse- The Priests that crate and also receiue both kindes, because he must expresse liuely the Passion of Christ, and the te- say Masse, must paration of his bloud from his body in the same, and for to imitate the vvhole action and institu- receiue both tion as vvell in sacrificiing as receiuing, as to vvhom properly it vvas said, Do this, for that vvas spo- kindes.

But the Lay men, and the Clergie also vvhen they do not execute or say Masse them selues, should receiue in one kinde, being there- by no lesse partakers of Christs vvhole person and grace, then if they received both. For (as S. Paul saith) He that eateth the hostie, is partaker of the altar.  ded. onely that the condition and qualities of his body in heauen should be other then in the Sacrament, it were tolerable: for S. Augustine speakech sometime in that sense. but to deny the substance of the body to be the same, that is wicked.

63. The flesh profiteth nothing.) If this speach were spoken in the sense of the Sacramentaries, it would take away Christs Incarnation, manhood, and death, no lesse then his corporal presence in the Sacrament. for if his flesh were not profitable, all these things were vaine. Therefore CHRIST denieth not his owne flesh to be profitable, but that their grosse and carnal conceiuing of his wordes, of his flesh, and of the maner of eating the same, was vnprofitable. Which is plaine by the sentence following, where he warneth them, that his wordes be spirit and life, of high Mytical meaning, and not vulgarly and grossly to be taken, as they tooke them. And it is the vie of the Scripture to call mans natural sense, reason, and carnal resisting or not reaching supernatural truths, flesh or bloud. is, Flesh and bloud revealed not this to thee &c. Mar. 16.

The Capharnaimites grosse vnderstanding of Christs flesh to be giuen or eaten. And, how his flesh doth profit, and not profit.

This carnalitie then of theirs, stood in two points specially: first, that they imagined that he would kill him self, and cut & mangle his flesh into partes, & so giue it them raw or roit to be eaten among them. Which could not be meant, saith S. Augustine: for that had conteneid an heinous and barbarous facte, and therefore they might and should haue bene assured, that he would command no such thing: but some other sweete sense to be of his hard, mytical, or figuratiue wordes, and to be fulfilled in a Sacrament, matterie, and a marvelous diuine sort, otherwise then they could comprehend. Secondly, they did erre touching his flesh, in that they tooke it to be the flesh of a mere man, and of a dead man also, when it should come to be eaten: of which kind of flesh Christ here pronoucereth, that it profiteth nothing. Wherevpon S. Cyril saith, This body is not of Peter or Paul or any other like, but of Christ IESVS Who is the life it self: and therefore this Body giueth life, the very fulnes of the Diuinitie dwelling in it. And the holy Council of Ephesus in the 11 Anathematisme expounded also by the said S. Cyril: The Eucharist is not the body of any common person (for the flesh of a common man could not quicken) but of the VVORD it self. But the Heretic Nestorism dissoluech the vertue of this Mysterie, holding mans flesh onely to be in the Eucharist. Thus here. And S. Ignatius cited of Theodoret, and many other Fathers haue the like. Whereby we may see that it cometh of the Diuinitie and Spirit (without which Christs flesh can not be) that this Sacrament giueth life.

64. Thas beleue not.) It is lacke of faith, you see here, that causeth men to surne against this high truth of the Sacrament: as also it may be learned here, that it is the great and merciful gift of God that Catholike men do against their senses and carnal reasons, beleue and admit them selues to the humble acknowledging of this Mysterie: saith, that it may wel be by Christs insinuation of

66. Went backe.) It can be no maruel to vs now that so many reuolt from the Church, by offense or scandal vniuently taken at Christs body and bloud in the Sacrament: seeing many of his Disciples that saw his wonderful life, doctrine, and miracles, forsooke Christ himself, vpon the speach & promises of the same Sacrament. for the mysterie of it is so supernatural and diuine in it self, and withal so low & base for our sakes, by the thew of the formes of these terrene elements vnder which it is, and we eat it: that the vnfaithful and infirme do so stumble at Christ in the Sacrament, as the Iewes and Gentils did at Christ in his humanitie. For, the causes of contradictions of the Incarnation and Transubstantion be like. And it may be verily deemed, that who neuer now can not beleue the Sacrament to be Christ, because it is vnder the formes of bread and wine, and is eaten and drunken, would not then haue beleued that Christ had bene God, because he was in shape of man, and crucified. To conclude, it was not a figure nor a mysterie of bare bread and wine, nor any Metaphorical or Allegorical speach, that could make such a troupe of his Disciples reuolt at once. When he said he was a doore, a vine, a way, a Pastor, and such like (vnto which kinde of speeches the Protestants ridiculously resemble the wordes of the holy Sacrament) who was so mad to mistake him, or to forsake him for the same? For the Apostles at the least would haue plucked them by the sleeves, and said, Goe not away my maisters, he speakech parables.
 The cause therefore was their incredulitie, and the height of the Mysterie, for that they neither knew the meanes how it might be present, nor would beleue that he was able to giue his flesh to be eaten in many places. And euen such is the vnbeleefe of the Heretikes about this matter at this day.

 out of the Synagogue, and, Excommunication. Besides that, not euery one which was not of the

As for the caufe of thrusting this poore man and such other out of the Synagogue, and excom-municating Heretikes, there is as great oddes as betwixt heauen and hel: he being vsed so for following Christ and his Church, these for forsaking Christ and his Church. Some more agreement there is betwene that corrupt sentence of the Iewes against the folowers of Christ, and the pretended excommunication executed against Catholike men by our Heretikes. although in truth there is no great resemblance. For, the Iewes though they abused their power sometimes, yet had they au-thoritie in deed by Gods law so to punish contemners of their Law, & therefore it was feared and respected euen of good men. But the excommunication vsed by heretikes against Catholikes or any offenders, is not to be respected at al, being no more but a ridiculous vsurpation of the Churnot tarie to be thrust out: according to the Warning giuen against Coré and Dathan. Bye separa-

1. Climeth an other way.) Whosoever taketh vpon him to preach without lawfull sending, to minister Sacraments, and is not Canonically ordered of a true Catholike Bishop, to be a Curate of soules, Person, Bishop, or what other spiritual Pastor so euer, and commeth not in by lawfull election and holy Churches ordinance to that dignity, but breaketh in against order by force or fauour of men; and by humane lawes, he is a theefe and a murderer. So came in Arius, Caluin, Luther, and al Heretikes: and al that succede them in roome and doctrine. And generally euery one that descendeth not by Lawfull succession in the knowen ordinarie line of Catholike Bishops and Pastors that haue been in al Countries since their conuersion. And according to this rule S. Irenaeus li. 3 c. 3 trieth the true shepheards from the theeues and Heretikes. So doe Tertul. de Praeser. nu. 11. S. Cyr. de vnir. Ec. nu. 7. S. August. ep. 165. & cons. ep. Manich. c. 2. and Lirinensis.

11. Good Pastor.) The good Pastor, is he whose special care is not of his owne aduantage, but of the safety of the flocke. The hireling, is he that respecteth not the profite and good of the flocke, but his owne lucre. The Wolfe, is the Heretike, or any persecutor of the Church, which is Christs flocke.

Whē the Pastor must tarie, or may flee.

12. Fleeth.) Euery Bishop and Pastor is bound to abide with his flocke in times of danger and persecution euen to death, except him self be personally sought for, rather then the flocke, or the flocke it self forsake him. for in such cases the Pastor may flee, as the Apostles did, and S. Athanasius, and others. S. Athan. Apol. de sua fuga. August. ep. 120.

Iudas Macha-

22. The dedication.) This is the teat of Dedication instituted by Iudas Machabzus li. 1 Mach. c. 4. Christ vouchsafed to honour an I keepe that feast instituted by him: & our Heretikes vouchsafe not to pray and sacrifice for the dead, *vied and approued by him. The Dedication also of Christian Churches is warranted thereby, with the annual memories thereof. And it proueth that such things may be instituted without any expresse commaundement in Scripture.

Christs essence & diuine nature of the Father.

29. That vvhich he gaue me.) Thus read also diuers of the Fathers, namely S. Hilar. Trin. li. 7 post medium. S. Ambr. de Sp. S. li. 3 c. 12. S. August. in 10. tract. 48. S. Cyril. li. 7 in 10. c. 10. and vse it to proue that Christ had his essence and nature of the Father. And therefore some Heretikes of our time wickedly accuse the Council of Laterane for fallif, ing this place and applying it to the same purpose. Which they lesse can abide, for that it is against Caluins Autotheisme, holding that Christ tooke his person of the Father, but not his substance. See the 2 Annot. in 10. v. 1.

Puritie requi- red to the re- ceiuing of the B. Sacrament.

5. Began to vvash.) This lotion was not onely of curtesy, such as the Iewes vsed toward their ghefts, nor onely for example of humilitie: but for mysterie and signification of the great puritie that is required before we come to receiue the holy Sacrament, which straight after this vvashing was to be instituted and giuen to the Apostles. Ambr. li. 3 de Sacra. c. 1 Bernard. de cena Domini Serm. 1.

Venial sinnes taken avway by sacred ceremonies.

10. To vvash his feet.) The foulnes of the feet, when al the rest is cleane, signifieth the earthly affections and reliques of former sinnes remitted: which are to be cleansed by deuout actes of charitie & humilitie, as S. Ambrose li. 3 de Sacra. c. 1. and S. Augustine ep. 108. Et tract. 36 in 1a. do note. And because this was onely a ceremonie, & yet had such force, both now and aftervvard vsed of the Apostles, that it purged smaller offenses and filthines of the soule, as S. Ambrose and S. Bernard gather, it may not seeme strange that holy water and such ceremonies may remit venial sinnes.

directed by the Holy Ghost, we know this to be no Sacrament nor necessarie ceremonie, and the other to be. And why do they beleue the Church in this, and do not credit her affirming the chalice not to be necessarie for the communicants?

34. A new commaundement.) The commaundement of mutual loue was giuen before, but manifoldly misconstrued, and abridged by the Iewes to freends onely, to this life onely, for earthly respects onely; but Christ reneweth it and enlargeth it after the forme of his owne loue toward vs, and giueth grace to fulfill it.

1. Life euerlaſting.) Both the life of glorie in heauen, and of grace here in the Church, conſiſteth in the knowledge of God: that, in perfect viſion: this, in faith Working by charitie. for, knowledge of God without keeping his commaundements, is not true knowledge, that is to ſay, it is an vnprofitable knowledge. 1 Jo. 2.

 ledge of God.

17. Sanctifie them.) Chriſt prayeth that the Apoſtles, their ſucceſſors, & al that ſhal be of their beleeue, may be ſanctified in truth. Which is as much to ſay, as to deſire that the Church may euer haue the Spirit of truth, and be free from errour. Which praiſe of Chriſt had not been heard, if the Church might erre.

The Church
 can not erre.

20. But for them.) He expreſſeth (and it is a great comfort) that he praieth not onely for the Apoſtles, but for the whole Church after them, that is, for al beleeuers. The being of Christs body in the B Sacramēt without space or quātitie correspondēt there vnto, is proued by other exam- ples I Scripture. Heretical shifts to auoid plaine Scripture.

maner of the quantitie, space or place agreeable to the condition of his humanitie, be inuincibly re- futed by Christs entering into the Disciples, the doores shut: and by that that his true natural body, whole and perfect in al his limmes, length, bredth, and thicknes, distincte and diuers from the substance and corpulence of the wood, was in the same proper place that the wood was in, and passed through the same: as he also came out of his mothers wombe, the clauure not sturred: and passed through the stone, out of his Sepulcher. By al which the Heretikes being plainly re- proued, and conuinced of infidelitie, they boldly deny the plaine Scriptures, or so sonly shift them selues from the euidence thereof, that their impudencie is specially to be marked in this point.

Some say, that he came in at the window: some, that the doore opened of it self to let him in: some, that to come in, the doores being shut, signifieth no more, but that he came in late in the euening, at what time men vse to shut their doores: and such other flightes to defend fals hōd, against expresse Scriptures, and against the Apostles testimonie, who therefore tooke him to be a Spirit, becaue they saw him stand sōdenly in the middes of them, al the house being close shut. And the Fathers al confesse that he went in, the doores being shut. See S. Ambroie li. 10 in Lucam c. 24. S. Augustine ep. 3 ad Volusian. c. li. 22 de ciuit. c. 8, & S. Cyril, in Io. li. 12, c. 53. & S. Hiero. li. 1 cont. Iovinianum c. 21. We know it is the natural course of Gods ordinance, that euery body should haue but one and his owne proper place fitted to the lineaments, quantitie, termes and limites of the same: without which naturally the bodies were no where, and consequently not at al, as S. Augustine saith ad Dardanum. but that God supernaturally and miraculously can not by his om- nipotence dispose otherwise of his owne body, then the natural forme or quantitie or qualitie thereof require, that is great incredulitie. seing we must beleue that he can doe so with any other body of mere men or other creatures, the Scripture being plaine that he can make a camel passe through a needles eie, continuing in his natural figure and quantitie stil: and S. Augustine telleth of a woman whose ring fel from her girdle, both being fast and whole: and Rupertus of a Reli- gious man, whose girdle fast buckled fel do wne before him from his body. De off. Eccl.

Christ can dis- pose of his owne body & others about nature.

Vbiquetaries or Brentiani.

Therefore it is to much vnfaithfulness, by rules of place to embarre Christ of his wil or wisdom to be in the Sacrament how him self list, and on as many altars or places as he liketh. We detest for al that, the wicked heresie of certaine Protestants, holding quite contrarie to the Zuinghians, that Christ according to his Humanitie is in euery place where the Diuinitie is: which is both against faith, and the common rules of nature and diuinitie.

Christ sheweth his commiſſion & so giueth the Apostles power to remit finnes.

21. As my Father.) As when he gaue them commiſſion to preach and baptize through the world, he made mention of his owne power therein: so here before he intitute the Sacrament of Penance, and giue them authoritie to remitte finnes, lest the wicked should aske after ward, by what right they do such great functions, he sheweth his Fathers commiſſion giuen to him self, and then in plaine termes most amply imparteth the same to his Apotles: that whoſoever deny the Apostles & their successors, the Priests of Gods Church, to haue right to remitte finnes, should deny consequently Christ as man to haue authoritie to doe the same.

The holy Ghost is here purpose- ly giuen to the Apotles, to re- mit finnes.

22. He breathed.) He giueth the Holy Ghost in and by an external signe, to his Apotles, not visibly and to al such purposes as after ward at Whitſunede, but for the grace of the Sacrament of Orders, as S. Augustine saith, and that none make doubt of the Priests right in remiſſion of finnes, seing the Holy Ghost is purposely giuen them to doe this same. In which case if any be yet cōten- tious, he must deny the Holy Ghost to be God, and not to haue power to remitte finnes. It is not abjurd (saith S. Cyril) that they forgiue finnes, which haue the Holy Ghost. For when they remitte or reteine, the Holy Ghost remitteth or reteineth in them, and that they doe ττο ττοαιε, first in Baptisme, and then in Penance. As S. Ambrose also (li. 1 c. 7 de penitentia) refelling the Nouatians (a Sect of old He- retikes which pretending Gods glorie as our new Sectaries do, denied that Priests could remitte finnes in the Sacrament of Penance) asketh, vwhy it should be more dishonour to God, or more impossible or inconuenient for men, to forgiue finnes by Penance then by Baptisme, seing it is the Holy Ghost that doeth it, by the Priests office and ministerie in both.

The Sacrament of PENANCE instituted.

23. Whose finnes.) Power to offer Sacrifice, which is the principal function and acte of Priest- hod, was giuen them at the institution of the B. Sacrament: the second and next special facultie of Priesthod, consisting in remitting finnes, is here bestowed on them. And withal the holy Sacra- ment of Penance implying Contrition, Confession, and Satisfaction in the Penitent, and absolu- tion on the Priests part, is instituted. for in that, that expresse power and commiſſion is giuen to Priests to remitte or reteine al finnes: and in that, that Christ promiſeth, whose finnes soeuer they forgiue, they be of God forgiuen also: and vwhose finnes they reteine, they be reteined before God:

Men are bound to confesse, al their mortal sin- nes, and that in particular.

it to followeth necessarily, that we be bound to submit our selues to their iudgment for releafe of our finnes. For, this vvonderful povver vvere giuen them in vaine, if none vvere bound to seeke for absolu- tion at their hands. Neither can any rightly seeke for absolu- tion of them, vnles they confesse particularly at least al their mortal offences, vvwhether they be cōmitted in minde, hart, vvil and cogitation onely, or in vvord, and vvorke. for, Gods priests being in this Sacrament of Penance cōstituted in Christs steele as iudges in causes of our conscience, can not rightly rule our cases vvithout full and exacte cognition and knowledge of al our finnes, and the necessarie circum- stances and differences of the same, which can not othervvise be had of them being mortal men.

* Cypri. de laps. nu. 11. * Hiero. in 16 Mat. then then by our simple, sincere, and distinct utterance to them of our sinnes, with humble contrite hart, ready to take and to doe penance according to their iniunction. For that authoritie to re- teine sinnes, consisteth specially in enioyning satisfaction and penitentiall workes of praying, fa- sting, aimes, and such like. Alvvhich Gods ordinance whoſoever condemneth or contemneth, as Heretikes doe, or neglecteth, as ſome careleſſe Catholikes may perhaps doe: let them be assured they can not be laued. Neither muſt any ſuch Chriſtian man pretend or looke to haue his sinnes after Baptiſme, remitted by God onely, without this Sacrament: (Which was the old Heresie of the Nouatians Ambr. li. 1 de penit. c. 2. Socras. li. 7 Ec. hist. c. 25) more then any may hope to be laued or haue his original or other sinnes before Baptiſme, forgiven by God without the ſame Sacramet. Let no man deceiue him ſelf, this is the second table or borde after ſhipwracke, as S. Hierom calleth it. Whoſoever take not hold of it, ſhal periſh without al doubt, becauſe they contemne Gods coun- ſel and order for their ſaluation. And therefore S. Augultine (ep. 180) ioyning both together, ſaith it is a pitiful caſe, When by the abſence of Gods Prielts, men depart this life, aut non regenerati, aut ligati. that is, eiſher not regenerated by Baptiſme, or ſaſt bound, and not abſolued by the Sacrament or penance and reconciliation: becauſe they ſhal be excluded from eternal life, and deſtruction fol- loweth them. And S. ViCTOR (li. 2 de perſecut. Vandalica) telleth the miſerable lametation of the peo- ple, when their Prielts were baniſhed by the Arian Heretikes. Who (ſay they) ſhal baptize theſe in- fants? Who ſhal miniſter penance vnto vs, & looſe vs from the bandes of ſinnes &c? And therefore S. Cyprian very oiten (namely ep. 54) calleth it great cruelty, & ſuch as Prielts ſhal answer for at the later day, to ſuffer any man that is penitent of his sinnes, to depart this life without this reconciliation and abſolution: becauſe (ſaith he) the Lawmaker him ſelf (Chriſt) hath graunted, that things bound in earth, ſhould alſo be bound in heauen: and that thoſe things might there be looſed, which were looſed before here in the Church. And it is a world to ſee, how the Heretikes wrattle with this ſo plaine a commiſſion of remitting ſinnes, reterring it to preaching, to denouncing Gods threats vpon ſinners, and to we can not tel what els. though to our Engliſh Proteſtants this authoritie ſeemeth ſo cleere, that in their order of viſiting the ſicke, their Miniſters acknowledge & challenge the ſame, vling a formal abſolution according to the Churches order, after the ſpecial cõfeſſion of the partie. But to con- clude the matter, let euery one that liſt to ſee the true meaning of Chriſts wordes, and the Prielts great power and dignitie giuen them by the ſame wordes and other, marke wel theſe wordes of S. Carylſtoſome. *For, ſaith he, they that dwell on the earth, and conuerſe in it, to them u commiſſion giuen to diſpenſe thoſe things that are in heauen. to them u is giuen to haue the pouuer which God would not to be giuen neither to Angels nor Archangels. for, neither to them was it ſaid, Whatſoever you ſhal binde in earth, ſhal be bound in heauen: and whatſoever you ſhal looſe in earth, ſhal be looſed in heauen. The earthly Princes in deepe haue alſo pouuer to binde, but the bodies onely: but that bond of Prielts which I ſpeake of, toucheth the very ſoule it ſelf and reacheth euen to the heauens: in ſo much that whatſoever the Prielts ſhal doe beneath, the ſelf ſame God doth raiſie aboue, and the ſentence of the ſeruaunts the Lord doth confirme. for in deepe what els u tuu, then that the pouuer of al heauenly things u graunted them of God? Whoſe ſinne: ſo euer, ſaith he, you ſhal reſeine, they are reſeined. What pouuer (I beſeeche you) can be greater then this one? The Faſther gaue al pouuer to the Sonne: but I ſee the ſame pouuer altogether deliuered by the Sonne vnto them. And as this concerneth the Prielts high authoritie to abſolue, ſo therevpon con- cerning confeſſion alſo to be made vnto them, the ancient Fathers ſpeake in this ſort. S. Cyprian de Lapſis nu. 11. They (ſaith he) that haue greater faith and feare of God, though they did not fall in perſecu- tion, yet becauſe they did onely thinke it in their minde, thru very cogitation they confeſſe to Gods Prielts ſo- rowfully and plaineiy, opening their conſcience, viſiting and diſcharging the burden of their minde, and ſeeking holeſome medicine for their wvoundes though but ſmal and little. And a litle after, Let euery one (my bretheren) I beſeeche you, confeſſe hu ſinne, vvhiles he u yet aliue, vvhiles hu confeſſion may be admitted, vvhiles ſatisfaction and remiſſion made by the Prielts u acceptable before God. S. Cyril (or as ſome thinke, Origen) li. 2 in Leuit. calleth it a great part of penance, when a man is aſhamed, and yet openeth his ſinnes to our Lords Prielt. See alſo Tertul. li. de Penit. S. Hiero. in c. 10 Eccleſiaſtæ. S. Baſil. in Regula breu. quaſt. 229. Where they muſt needes meane ſecrete confeſſion to be made to them that may abſolue. And S. Leo ep. 80 moſt plaineiy (as before S. Cyril) expreſly nameth Prielts. That confeſſion is ſufficient which u made firſt to God, then to the Prielt alſo. And againe, It is ſufficient that the guiltines of mens conſciences be vttered to the Prielts onely by the ſecrecie of confeſſion. S. him, No. † He saith to them, Cast the nette on the right side 6 of the boate: and you shal finde. They therfore did cast it:

and novv they vvere not able to dravv it for the multitude of fishes. † That disciple therfore vvhom I E S V S loued, saith 7 to Peter, It is our Lord. † Simon Peter vvhe he had heard that it is our Lord: girded his coate vnto him (for he vvas na-came in the boate (for they vvere not farre from the land, but as it vvere tvvo hundred cubits) dravving the nette of fishes.

† Therefore after they came dovvne to land, they savv hote 9

ANNOTATIONS
CHAP. XXI.

17. Feede my sheepe.] As it was promised him Mat. 16, that the Church should be builded vpō him, and that the keies of heauen should be giuen to him: so here it is performed, & he is actually made the general Pastor and Gouverner of al Christs sheepe. For though the other ten (as Matthias and Paul also afterward) were Apostles, Bishops, Priests, and had authoritie to binde and loose, to remitte and rete.ne, to preach, baptize, and such like, as wel as he: Yet in these things and al other gouernement, Christ would haue him to be their head, and they to depend of him as head of their College, and consequently of the whole flocke of Christ: no Apostle nor no Prince in earth
Peter is here made the general Pastor, and the Church is builded vpon him.
(if

The Protestants otherwise deny this preeminence of Peter, yet to uphold their Archbishops, do a uouch & prou it against the Puritanes.

(if he acknowledge him self to be a sheepe of Christ) exempted from his charge. And that Christ maketh a difference betwixt Peter and the rest, and giueth him some greater preeminence and regnying then the rest, it is plaine by that he is asked whether he loue our Lord more then the other Apoitles do: Where, for equal charge no difference of loue had bene required. To Peter (saith S. Cyprian) our Lord after his Resurrection said, Feede my sheepe, and builded his Church upon him alone, and to him he giueth the charge of feeding his sheepe. For although after his Resurrection he gaue his pouuer like to al, saying, As my Father sent me, so I send you, take the Holy Ghost, if you remitte to any their sinnes, they shall be remitted &c. Yet so manifestly vnike, he constituted one Chaire, & so disposed by his auctoritie that vnike should haue origine of one. The rest of the Apoitles were that Peter was, in equal fellowshipp of honour and pouuer, but the beginning cometh of vnitie: the Primacie is giuen to Peter, that the Church of Christ may be shewed to be one. & one Chaire. S. Chrysostome also saith thus: Why did our Lord shede his blood? Li. 2 de Sacerd.

Cyprian de vnit. Ec.

Peters successors succede hi in vniuersal auctoritie.

truly to redeme these sheepe, the cure of which he committed both to Peter and also to his Successors. And a little after, Christ would haue Peter indued with such auctoritie, and to be far above al his other Apoitles: for he saith: Peter, dost thou loue me more then al these do? Whereupon our Maister might haue inferred, if thou loue me Peter, vse much fasting, sleepe on the hard floure, vvasch much, be patrone to the oppressed, father to the orphans, and husband to the vuides: but omitting al these things, he saith, Feed my sheepe. For, al the foresaid vertues certes may be done easly of many subiects, not onely men but women: but when it cometh to the gouernement of the Church and committing the charge of so many soules, al woman kind must needes vvholy giue place to the burden and greatnes thereof, and a great number of men also. So writeth he.

S. Gregorie. though he misliked the title of vniuersal Bishop, yet is most plaine both in his writings & doings for the Popes Supremacie. as also S. Leo the great.

And because the Protestants would make the vnlearned thinke, that S. Gregorie deemed the Popes Supremacie to be wholly vnlawful and Antichristian, for that he condemneth Iohn of Constantinople for vsurping the name of vniuersal Bishop, resembling his insolence therein to the pride of Antichrist: note wel the wordes of this holy father in the very same place and Epistle as gainst the B. of Constantinople, by which you shal easily see that to deny him to be vniuersal Bishop, is not to deny Peter or the Pope to be head of the Church, or supreme Gouerner of the same, as our Aduerariaries fraudulently pretend. It is plaine to al men, saith he, that euer read the Gospel, that by our Lordes mouth the charge of the vvhole Church was committed to S. Peter Prince of the Apoitles. for to him it was said, Feed my sheepe: for him was the prayer made that his faith should not faile: to him were the keyes of heauen giuen and auctoritie to binde and looie: to him the cure of the Church and principality was deliuered: and yet he was not called the vniuersal Apoitlic. This title indeed was offered for the honour of S. Peter Prince of the Apoitles, to the Pope of Rome by the holy Council of Chalcedon: but none of that See did euer vse it or consent to take it. Thus much S. Gregorie. Who though he both praised iurisdiction through out al Christendom, as other of that See haue euer done, and also acknowledged the Principality and Soueraintie to be in Peter and his Successors: yet would he not for iust causes vse that title subiect to vanitie & misconstruction. But both he & al the Popes since haue rather called them selues, Seruos seruorum Dei, the Seruants of Gods seruants. Though the word, vniuersal Bishop, in that sense wherein the holy Council of Chalcedon offered it to the See of Rome, was true and Lawful. For that Council would not haue giuen any Antichristian or vnjust title to any man. Onely in the B. of Constantinople and other, which in no sense had any right to it, and who vsurped it in a very false and tyrannical meaning, it was insolent, vnjust, and Antichristian. See also the Epistles of S. Leo the Great concerning his practise of vniuersal iurisdiction, though he refused the title of vniuersal Bishop. And S. Bernard that you may better perceiue that the general charge of Christs sheepe was not onely giuen to Peters perion, but also to his successors the Popes of Rome, as S. Chrysostom also before alleaged doth testify writeth thus to Eugenius, Thou art he to whom the keyes of heauen are deliuered, & to whom the sheepe are committed. there be other Porters of heauē, & other Pastors of flockes: but thou hast inherited in more glorious & differēt sort. For they haue euerly one their particular flocke, but to thee al vniuersally, as one flocke to one mā, are credited: being not onely the Pastor of the sheepe, but the one Pastor of al the Pastors them selues. but thou wilt aske me how I proue that: euen by our Lordes word. For to whom of al, I say not onely Bishops, but Apoitles, were the sheepe so absolutely and without limitation committed? If thou loue me Peter, feede my sheepe. He saith not, the people of this kingdom or that citie, but, my sheepe, without al distinction. So S. Bernard. And herevnto may be added that the second, feede, is in greeke a word that significth withal to gouerne and rule, as Ps. 2. Mich. 5. Mas. 2. Apoc. 2. and therefore it is spoken of Dauid also and other temporal Gouerners (as the Hebrew word answering therevnto) in the Scriptures very often, and the Greeke in profane Writers also.

The title of vniuersal Bishop refused, but vniuersal iurisdiction alwaies acknowledged and praised.

THE ARGUMENT OF
THE ACTES OF THE APOSTLES.

* Hier. in Catal.

THE Gospel hauing shewed, how the Iewes most impiouly reiected Christ (as also Moyses and the Prophets had foretold of them:) and therefore deserued to be reiected themselues also of him: now foloweth this booke of the Actes of the Apostles (* written by S. Luke in Rome the fourth yere of Nero, An. Dom. 61) and sheweth, how notwithstanding their desertes, Christ of his mercy (as the Prophets also had foretold of him) offered him selfe vnto that vnrworthy people, yea after that they had Crucified him, sending vnto them his truelue Apostles to moue them to penance, and so by Baptisme to make them of his Church: and whiles al the Truelue were so occupied about the Iewes: how of a persecuting Iewe he made an extraordinarie Apostle (whow was S. Paul) and to auoide the scadal of the Iewes (to whom onely him selfe likewise for the same cause had preached) sent him, and not any of his Truelue by and by, who were his knowen Apostles, vnto the Gentiles, whow neuer afore had heard of Christ, and were worshippers of many Gods, to moue them also (for, that likewise the Prophets had foretold) to faith and penance, and so by Baptisme to make them of his Church: and how the incredulous Iewes euery where resisted the same Apostle and his preaching to the Gentiles, persecuting him and seeking his death, and neuer ceasing vntil he fel into the handes of the Gentils: that so (as not onely he euery where, but also the Prophets afore him, and Christ had foretold) the Gospel might be taken arway from them, and giuen to the Gentiles: euen from Hierusalem (whowse reprobation also by name had been often foretold) the headcitie of the Iewes, where it began, translated to Rome the headcitie of the Gentiles. Al this wil be euident by the partes of the booke: which may be these sixe.

Act. 13, 46, 18, 6.
19, 9, 28, 28.
Mat. 21, 23.
Esa. 1.
Luc. 13, 33.

First, how Christ Ascending in the sight of his Disciples, promised vnto them the Holy ghost, forselling that of him they should receiue strength, and so begin his Church in Hierusalem: and from thence dilate it into al that Countrie, that is into al Iurie: yea and into Samaria also, yea into al Nations of the Gentiles, be they neuer so far of. You shal receiue (saith he) the vertue of the Holy ghost coming vpon you: and you shal be witnesses vnto me in Hierusalem, & in al Iurie, and Samaria, and euen to the vtmost of the earth. Chap. 1.

Secondly, the beginning of the Church in Hierusalem, accordingly. Chap. 2.

Thirdly, the propagation of it consequently into al Iurie, and also to Samaria. Chap. 8.

Fourthly, the propagation of it to the Gentiles also. Chap. 10.

Fifthly, the taking of it arway from the obstinate Iewes, and geuing of it to the Gentiles, Gentiles, by the ministerie of S. Paul and S. Barnabee. Chap. 13.

Sixthly, of taking it away from Hierusalem it selfe, the headcittie of the Iewes, and sending it (as it were) to Rome the headcittie of the Gentiles, and that, in their persecuting of Paul so far, *that he appealed to Caesar. and so deliue- A.C. 25, 12.
ring him after a sort vnto the Romanes: as they had * before deliuered to them also Luc. 23, 10.
Christ him selfe. where as S. Peters first coming thither, was vpon an other occasion, as shalbe said anone. Of which Romanes and Gentiles therefore, the same S. Paul being now come to Rome (the last Chap. of the Actes) foretelleth the obstinat Iewes there, saying: Et ipsi audient. You will not heare, but they will heare. that A.C. 28, 28.
so the prediction of Christ aboue rehearsed might be fulfilled: And euen to the vtmost of the earth. And there doth S. Luke end the booke, not caring to tel so much as the fulfilling of that which our Lord had foretold (Act. 27, 24) to S. Paul, Thou must appeare before Caesar. because his purpose was no more but to shew the new Hierusalem of the Christians, where Christ would place the chiefe seate of his Church, as also in deede the Fathers and al other Catholikes haue in al ages looked thither, when they were in any great doubt: no lesse then the Iewes to Hierusalem, as they were appointed in the old Testament. Deut. 17, 8.

And so this Booke doth shew the true Church, as plainely, as the Gospel doth shew the true Christ, vnto al that do not vilfully shut their owne eyes. to wit, this to be the true Church, which beginning visibly at Hierusalem, was taken from the Iewes, and translated to the Gentils (and namely to Rome) continuing visibly, and visibly to continue hereafter also, Vntil the fulnes of the Gentiles Rom. 11, 25.
shal be come in: that then also Al Israël may be saued. and then is come the end of the world. For so did Christ most plainely foretel vs: This Gospel of Mat. 24, 14.
the Kingdom shal be preached in the vvhole world, for a testimonie to al Nations. and then shal come the consummation. For the conuersion of which Nations and accomplishing the fulnes of al Gentiles, the foresaid Church Catholike, being mindful of her office, to be Christes witnes euen to the vtmost of the earth, doth at this present (as alwaies) send preachers to conuert and make them also Christians: where as the protestants and * al other Heretikes Tertul. de presc.
do nothing els but subuert such as before were Christians.

And this being the Summe and scope of this Booke, thus to giue vs historically a iust sight of the fulfilling of the Prophets & Christes prediction about the Church: it is not to be marueiled at, why it telleth not of S. Peters coming to Rome: considering that his first coming thither, was not, as S. Paules was, by the Iewes deliuerse of him, working so to their owne reprobatiō, but vpon another occasion, to wit, to confound Simon Magus. Euf. Hist. li. 2. c. 12. 12. For vvhich also seeth not, that it maketh no mention of his preaching to any Gentiles at al, those seer onely Act. 10 excepted, vvhich were the first, and therefore (lest the Gentiles should seeme lesse cared for of God, then the Iewes) Peter being the Head of al, was elected of God, to incorporate them into the church, as before he had done the Iewes. God A.C. 15, 7.
(saith he) among vs chose, that by my mouth the Gentiles should heare the vvhord of the Gospel, and belceue. and S. James therevpon: Simon hath told how God first visited to take of the Gentiles a people to his name. A.C. 15, 14.
But other wise (I say) here is no mention of Peters preaching to any Gentiles: no nor of the other eleuen Apostles. Will any man therefore inferre, that neither Peter, nor the other Eleuen preached to any Nation or citie of the Gentiles? No. the meaning of the Holy ghost was not to write al the Actes of al the Apostles, no nor the preaching of Peter and his, to the Gentiles, but onely to the Iewes: thereby to set out vnto the world, the great mercy of Christ toward those unworthy

Iewes

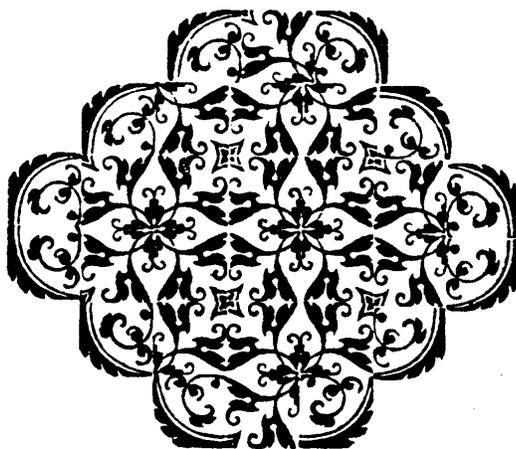

Ierues, and consequently their most worthy reprobation for cōtempting such grace and mercy. as also on the other side to shew, how readily the Gentiles in so many Nations, were conuerted by one Apostle onely, vwho From Hierusalem euen to Illyricum replenished the Gospel of Christ. And this parting of the worke so made by S. Peter vwith the rest, doth S. Paul him selfe touche: That vve vnto the Gentiles, and they vnto the Circuncision. Neuerthelesse before his cōming to Rome, not onely vvas the Church come to Rome (as it is euident Act. the last chap.) there plac'd by S. Peter and others (as likewise by S. Peter it vvas planted in the first Gentils, before that S. Paul began the taking of it avvay from the multitude of the Ierues, and the translating of it to the multitude of the Gentils) but also so notable vvas the same Church of Rome, that S. Paul vwriting his Epistle to the Romanes, before he came thither, saith: Your faith is renouvmmed in the vvhole vvorld. and therefore they vwith the rest of the Gentiles, be that Nation vvhereof Christ told the Ierues, saying: The Kingdom of God shal be taken avvay from you, & shal be giuē to a Nation yelding the fruites thereof.

THE ACTES OF THE APOSTLES.

CHAP. I.

Christ now ready to ascend, biddeth the apostles to expect the Holy Ghost which he had promised, foretelling vvhether (being strengthened by him) they should begin his Church, and how far they should carry it. 9 After his Ascension they are warned by two Angels to set their mindes vpon his second comming. 14 In the daies of their expectation, 15 Peter beginneth to execute his vicars hip, giving instruction and order, by vvhich Matthias is elected Apostle in the place of Iudas.

ANNOTATIONS
CHAP. I.

2. Giuing commaundement.] He meaneth the power giuen them to preach, to baptize, to remit finnes, and generally the whole commillion and charge of gouernement of the Church after him and in his name, steede, and right. the which Regiment was giuen them together with the Holy Ghost to assist them therein for euer.

7. It is not for you.] It is not for vs, nor needful for the Church, to know the times & moment of the world, the coming of Antichrist, and such other Gods secretes. This is ynough in that case, to be assured that Christs faith shal be preached, and the Church spred through out al Nations, the Holy Ghost concurring continually with the Apostles and their Successors for the same.

11. Assumped from you.] By this visible Ascending of Christ to heauen and like returne from thence to iudgement, the Heretikes do incredulously argue, him not to be in the Sacrament. But let the faithful rather giue eare to S. Chrysostome saying thus: O miracle, he that sitteth vwith the Father in heauen above, at the very same time is handled of men beneath. Christ ascending to heauen, both hath his flesh vwith him, and left it vwith vs beneath. Elias being taken up, left to his Disciple his cloke only: but the Sonne of man ascending left his owne flesh to vs. Lt. 3 de Sacrad. Ho. 2 ad po. Ant. in fine. Ho. de diuis. & paup. in fine.

14. MARIE the mother of IESVS.] This is the last mention that is made in holy Scripture, of our B. Lady. for though she were full of diuine wisdom, and opened (no doubt) vnto the Euangelistes and other Writers of holy Scriptures, diuerse of Christs actions, speeches, and mysteries, whereof she had both experimental and reuealed knowledge: Yet for that she was a woman, and the humblest creature liuing, and the paterne of al order and obedience, it pleased not God that there should be any further note of her life, doings, or death, in the Scriptures. She liued the rest of her time with the Christians (as here she is peculiarly named and noted among them) and specially with S. Iohn the Apostle, * to Whom our Lord recommended her. Who provided for her al necessaries, her spouse Ioseph (as it may be thought) being deceased before. The common opinion is that she liued 63 yeres in al. At the time of her death, (as S. Denys first, & after him S. Damaicene de dormit. Deipara. writeth,) al the Apostles then dispersed into diuers nations to preache the Gospel, were miraculously brought together (sauiug S. Thomas who came the third day after) to Hierusalem, to honour her diuine departure and funeral, as the said S. Denys witnesseth. Who saith that him self, S. Timothee, and S. Hierotheus were present: testifying also of his owne hearing, that both before her death and after for three daies, not onely the Apostles and other holy men present, but the Angels also and Powers of heauen did sing most melodious Hymnes. They buried her sacred body in Gethsemani. but for S. Thomas sake, who desired to see and to reuerence it, they opened the sepulcher the third day, and finding it void of the holy body, but exceedingly fragrant, they returned, assuredly deeming that her body was assumed into heauen. as the Church of God holdeth, being most agreeable to the singular priuilege of the mother of God, and therefore celebrateth most solemnly the day of her Assumption. And that is consonant not onely to the said S. Denys, and S. Damaicene, but to holy Athanasius also, who auoucheth the same, Serm. in Euang. de Deipara. of which Assumption of her body, S. Bernard also wrote five notable sermons extant in his workes.

But neither these holy fathers, nor the Churches tradition and testimonie, do beare any way now a daies with the Protestants, that haue abolished this her greatest feast of her Assumption. Who of reason should at the least celebrate it as the day of her death, as they doe of other Saints. For though they beleue not that her body is assumed, yet they wil not (we trow) deny that she is dead, and her soule in glorie: neither can they alke scriptures for that, no more then they require for the deathes of Peter, Paul, Iohn, and other, which be not mentioned in scriptures & yet are still celebrated by the Protestants. But concerning the B. Virgin MARIE, they haue blotted out also both her Natiuite, and her Conception: so as it may be thought the Diuel beareth a special malice to this woman whose seede brake his head. For as for the other two daies of her Purification & Annunciation, they be not proper to our Lady, but the one to Christs Conception, the other to his Presentation. so that she by this meanes shal haue no festiuitie at al.

But contrariwise, to consider how the auncient Church and fathers esteemed, spake, and how the Primitiue Church wrote of this excellent vessel of grace, may make vs detest these mens impietie, that can not abide the praises of her * Whom al generations should call blessed, and that esteeme her honours a derogatiõ to her sonne. Some of their speeches we wil set downe, that al men may see, that we neither praise her, nor pray to her, more amply then they did. S. Athanasius in the place alleaged, after he had declared how al the Angelical spirits and euery order of them honoured and praised her with the AVE, wherewith S. Gabriel saluted her: We also, saith he, of al degrees vpon the earth

Most holy and auncient Ephrem, also in a special oration made in praise of our Lady, saith thus in diuerse places thereof, Inseparata Deipara &c. As Adam and Eue, so Christ & our Lady. speeches are applied vnto her. to wit, either because of her praier and intercession for vs, whereby she is our hope, our refuge, our aduocate &c. or because she brought forth the author of our redemption and saluauon, whereby she is the mother of mercie, and grace, and life, and whatsoever goodnes we receiue by Christ.

The meaning of the titles and termes giuen to our B. Lady. 15. Peter rising vp. Peter in the meane time practised his Superioritie in the cōpanie or Church, publishing an election to be made of one to supply Iudas roome. Which Peter did not vpon commaundement of Christ written, but by suggestion of Gods Spirit, and by vnderstanding the Scriptures of the old Testament to that purpose: the sense whereof Christ had opened to the Apostles before his departure, though in more full maner afterward at the sending of the Holy Ghost. And this acte of Peter in prescribing to the Apostles and the rest, this election, and the maner thereof, is so euident for his Supremacie, that * the Aduerlaries confesse here that he was, Antistes, the cheefe and Bishop of this whole College and companie.

Peter beginneth to practise his Primacie. 16. Lottes.] When the euent or fall of the lot is not expected of Diuels, nor of the starres, nor of any force of fortune, but looked for to be directed by God and his holy Saincts: then may lottes be vsed lawfully. And sometimes to discern betwixt two things mere indifferent, they be necessurie, as S. Augustine teacheth ep. 110 ad Honoratum.

The Holy Ghost coming to the Faithful upon Whitunday. 5 Ievves in Hierusalem of al Nations do vunder to heare them speake al tongues. 14 And Peter to the deriders declareth, that it is not drunkennes, but the Holy Ghost which loel did prophesie of, which I E S V S (Whom they crucified) being now risen againe and ascended (as he sheweth also out of the Scriptures) hath powred out from heauen, concluding therefore that he is CHRIST, and they most horrible murderers. 17 Whereat they being compuncte, and submitting them selues, he telleth them that they must be baptized, and then they also shal receive the same Holy Ghost, as being promised to al the baptized. 21 And so 3000 are baptized that very day. 22 Whose godly exercises are here reported, and also their living in state of perfection. The Apostles Worke many miracles, and God daily increaseth the number of the Church.

ANNO TATIONS
 CHAP. II.

1. The daies of Pentecost.) As Christ our Pasche, for correspondence to the figure, was offered at the Iewes great feast of Pasche, so fifty daies after (in Greeke, Pentecost) for accomplishing the like figure of the Law-giuing in Mount Sinai, he sent downe the Holy Ghost iust on the day of their Pentecost. Which was alwaies on Sunday, as appeareth Leuit. 23. 15. Both which daies the Church keepeth yerely for memorie of Christs death and Resurrection, and the sending downe of the Holy Ghost: as they did the like for record of their deliuerie out of Ægypt, and their Law-giuing aforesaid. the said Feastes with vs contening, besides the remembrance of benefites past, great Sacraments also of the life to come. Aug. ep. 119, C. 16.

The feastes of Pasche & Pentecost.

2. Al replenished.) Though the Apottles and the rest were bapuzed before, and had thereby receiued the grace of the Holy Ghost to sanctification and remission of sinnes, as for diuers other purposes also: Yet as Christ * promised them they should be further indued with strength and vertue from aboue, so here he fulfilleth his promes, visibly powring downe the Holy Ghost vpon al the companie and vpon euery one of them, thereby replenishing the Apostles specially with al truth, wisdom, and knowledge necessarie for the gouernement of the Church, and giuing both to them and to al other present, the grace and effect of the Sacrament of Confirmation, a. com. plishing, corroborating, and strengthening them in their faith and the confession of the same. And lastly for a visible token of Gods Spirit, he endued them al with the gift of diuers strange tongues: al (I say) there present, as wel our Ladie, as other holy women and brethren, besides the Apottles. though the Heretikes fondly argue, for the desire they haue to dishonour Christs mother, that neither she nor they were there present, nor had the gift of tongues, contrarie to the plaine text that saith, They vvere al together, to wit, al the 120 mentioned before c. 1, 15.

Gods determination that Christ should die, excuseth not the Iewes.

23. By the determinate counsel of God deliuered.) God deliuered him, and he deliuered him self, for loue and intention of our saluation, and so the acte was holy and Gods owne determination. But the Iewes and others which betraied and crucified him, did it of malice and wicked purpose, and their acte was damnable, and not of Gods counsel or causing: though he tolerated it, for that he could and did turne their abominable acte to the good of our saluation. Therefore abhorre those new Manichees of our time, both Lutherans and Calvinists, that make God the author and cause of Iudas betraying of Christ, no lesse then of Pauls conuersion beside the false translation of Beza, saying for Gods prescience or foreknowledge (in the Greeke, προγνωσις) Gods providence. 24. Loosng the forovues.) Christ was not in paines him self, but loosed other men of those doulours of Hel, where with it was impossible him self should be touched. See S. Augustine. * Li. 12 c. 13

Corrupt translation against the Article of Christs descending into Hel.

27. My soul in Hel,) Where al the Faithful, according to the Creede, euer haue beleueed, that Christ according to his soul, went downe to Hel, to deliuer the Patriarches and al iust men there holden in bondage til his death, and the Apostle here citing the Prophets wordes, most euidently expresseth the same, distinguishing his soule in Hel, from his body in the graue: Yet the Calvinists to defend against Gods expresse wordes, the blasphemie of their Maister, that Christ suffered the paines of Hel, and that no where but vpon the Crosse, and that other wise he descended not into Hel, most falsely and flatly here corrupt the text, by turning and wresting both the Hebrew and Greeke wordes from their most proper and vsual significations of, Soule, and Hel, into body, and graue: saying for, my soule in Hel, thus, my body, * life, person, yea (as Beza in his new Testament * Eng. Bi-an. 1556) my carcas in the graue. and this later they corrupt almost through out the Bible for that purpose. But for refelling of both corruptions, it shal be sufficient in this place: first, that al Hebrews & Greekes, and al that vnderstand these tonges, know that the foresaid Hebrue & Greeke wordes are as proper, peculiar, and vsual to signifie, soul and Hel, as anima and infernus in Latin, yea as soul and Hel in English do properly signifie the soule of man, and Hel that is opposite to heauen: and that they are as vnproperly vsed to signifie body and graue, as to say in English, soul for body, or Hel for graue. Secondly, it doth so mislike the Heretikes them selues, that Castaleo one of their fine Translatours refelleth it, and to make it the more sure, he for, in inferno, translateth, in Orco, that is, in Hel. Thirdly, Beza him self partly recanteth in his later edition, and confesseth that, Carcas, was no fit word for the body of Christ, and therefore, I haue (saith he) changed it, but I retaine and keepe the same sense stil. meaning, that he hath now translated it, soule, but that he meaneth thereby as before, Christs dead body. fourthly, * he saith plainly, that translating thus, Thou shalt not leaue my carcas in the graue, he did it of purpose against Limbu Patrum, Purgatorie, and Christs an. 1556, descending into Hel, which he calleth foul errors, and marueleth, that most of the ancient fathers annot. in vvere in that error: namely of Christs descending into Hel, and deliuering the old fathers, v what neede we more? He opposeth him self both against plaine Scriptures and al auncient fathers, per- 27 & 28. uerting the one, and contemning the other, to ouerthrow that truth which is an Article of our Creede. Whereby it is euidently false which some of them say for their defense, that none of them did euer of purpose translate falsely. See the Annotation vpon 1 Per. 3. v. 19.

Liuing in common.

44. Al things common.) This liuing in common is not a rule or a precept to al Christian men, as the Anabaptists falsely pretend: but a life of perfection and counsel, folowed of our Religious in the Catholike Church. See S. Aug. in Ps. 122 in principio. & ep. 109.

The increase & perpetuities of the V I S I B L E C H U R C H.

47. Increased.) Moe and moe were added to the Church (as the Greeke more plainly expresseth) that we may see the visible propagation & increase of the same. from which time a diligent man may deduce the very same visible Societie of men ioyned in Christ, through the whole booke, and after ward by the Ecclesiastical storie, downe til our daies, against the pretended invisible Church of the Heretikes. Ananias and his wife Saphira, for their sacrilege, at Peters word fall do^wne dead, to the great terrour of the rest. 12 By the Apostles miracles, not onely the number, but also their faith so increaseth, that they seeke in the streets to the very shadow of Peter, the to^wnes also about bringing their diseased to Hierusalem. 17 The Rulers againe oppose them selves, but in vaine. 19 For out of prison an Angel deliuereth them, bidding them preach openly to al: 27 and in their Councel Peter is nothing afraid of their bigge wordes: 34 Yea Gamaliel being one of them selves casteth a doubt among them, lest the matter be of God, and therefore impossible to be dissolued. 40 Finally, the Apostles being scourged by them, count it an honour, and cease no day from preaching.

 som. 10.*

2. Defrauded.) In that (saith S. Augustine) he withdrew any part of that which he promised, he was guilty at once, both of sacrilege, and of fraude. of sacrilege, because he robbed God of that which was his by promise: of fraude, in that he withheld of the whole gift, a peece. Let now the Heretikes come, and say it was for lying or hypocrisie onely that this facte was condemned: because they be loth to haue sacrilege counted any such sinne. Who haue taught men not onely to take away from God some peece of that or al that them selues gaue, but plainly to spoile & apply to them selues al that other men gaue.

Sacrilege.

3. Peter (saith.) S. Peter (as you see here) without mans relation knew this fraude and the cogitations of Ananias, and as head of the College and of the whole Church against which this robbery was committed, executed this heauy sentence of Excommunication both against him, and his wife consenting to the Sacrilege. for: it was excommunication by S. Augustines iudgement, (li. 1. cont. ep. Parm. c. 1 to. 7) and had this corporal miraculous death ioyned withal, as the Excommunication that S. Paul gaue out against the inceptuous and others, had the corporal vexation of Satan incident vnto it.

Vow of Chastitie, & the breach thereof. In thy pouer. If it displeaseth God (saith S. Augustine) to withdraw of the money which they had vowed to God, how is he angry when chastitie is vowed and is not performed? for to such may be said that which S. Peter said of the money: Thy virginitie remaining did it not remaine to thee, and before thou didst vow, was it not in thine owne power? for, Who soeuer haue vowed such things and haue not paid them, let them not thinke to be condemned to corporal death, but to euerlasting fire. August. Ser. 10. de diuersis. And S. Gregorie to the same purpose writeth thus, Ananias had vowed money to God, which afterward overcome with diuellsish perswasion he withdrew: but with what death he was punished, thou knowest. If then he were worthy of that death, who rooke away the money that he had giuen to God, consider what great peril in Gods iudgement thou shalt be worthy of, which hast withdrawn, not money, but thy self from almighty God, to whom thou hadst vowed thy self under the habite or vveede of a Monke. Greg. li. 1. ep. 22.

Not to men, but. To take from the Church or from the Gouvernours thereof, things dedicated to their vie and the seruice of God, or to lie vnto Gods Ministers, is so iudged of before God, as if the lie were made, and the fraude done to the Holy Ghost him self, who is the Churches Pretident and Protector.

Peters shadow & intercession. His shadow. Specially they sought to Peter the cheefe of al, who not onely by touching, but by his very shadow cured all diseases. Where vpon S. Augustine saith, If then the shadow of his body could helpe, how much more now the fulnes of power? And if the a certaine litle vwind of him passing by did profite them that humbly asked, how much more the grace of him now being permanent & remaining? Ser. 29 de Sanctis, speaking of the miracles done by the Saincts now reigning in heauen.

AND in those daies the numbre of disciples increasing, there arose a murmuring of the Greekes against the Hebrues, for that their vidovves were despised in the daily ministerie. † And the Twelve calling together the multitude of the disciples, said, It is not reason, that we leaue the vword of God, and serue tables. † Consider therefore brethren, seuen men of you of good testimonie, full of the holy Ghost and wisdom, vvhom we may appoint ouer this busines. † But we will be instant in praier and the ministerie of the vword. † And the saying was liked before al the multitude.  CHAP. VI.

1. Murmuring.] It commeth of humane infirmitie, that in euery Societie of men (be it neuer so holy) there is some cause giuen or taken by the weake, of murmur and difference, which must euer be provided for and staid in the beginning, lest it grow to further schisme or sedition. And to al such defects, the more the Church increaseth in number and diuersitie of men and Prouinces, the more it is subiect. In al which things the spiritual Magistrates, by the Apostles example and authoritie, must take order, as time and occasion shal require.

Murmuring & emulation.

2. Seuen men] We may not thinke that these Seuen (here made Deacons) were onely chosen to serue profane tables or dispose of the Churches mere temporals, though by that occasion only they may seeme to some now elected, no expresse mention being made of any other function. for, diuers circumstances of this same place giue euidence, and so doth al antiquitie, that their Office stood not principally about profane things, but about the holy Altar. The persons to be elected, must be full of the Holy Ghost and Wisedom, they must after publike praier be ordered and consecrated by the Apostles imposition of hands, as Bishops and Priests were afterward ordered. ep. ad Tim. Where S. Paul also requireth in a maner the same conditions in toem as in Bishops. Al which would not haue bene prescribed for any secular stewardship. Yea straight vpon their Ordering here (no doubt by commission of the Apostles, which they had not before their election) they preached, baptized, disputed, and as it may appeare by the wordes spoken of S. Steuen, that he was full of grace and fortitude, they receiued great increase of grace by their Deacons hip.

The 7 Deacons

But S. Ignatius ep. 2 ad Tral. can best witness of their Office and the Apostles maner and meaning in such things, who writeth thus: It behooueth also to please by al meanes the Deacons, vvhich are for the ministerie of I E S V S C H R I S T. For they are not seruitors of meate and drinke, but ministers of the Church of God. For vvhat are Deacons but imitators or followers of Christ, ministering to the Bishop, as Christ to his Father, & vvorking vnto him a cleane and immaculate Worke, euen as S. Steuen to S. Iames &c. S. Polycarpe hath the like in his epistle ad Philippentes. And S. Denys writeth that their Office was about the Altar, and putting in holy bread and chaice vpon the same. S. Clement also (Apost. Const. li. 2 c. 61.) that their Office among other things, is to assist the Bishops, and read the Gospel in the Seruice &c. S. Cyprian in diuers places (ep. 65. & ep. 49 ad Cornel.) calleth Deacons, the Churches and the Apostles Ministers, and their Office, administrationem sacram, an holy administration. S. 35. Holy ground.) If that apparition of God him self or an Angel, could make the place and ground holy, and to be viced of Moyses With al signes of reuerence and feare: how much more the corporal birth, abode, and wonders of the Sonne of God in Iewrie, and his personal presence in the B. Sacrament, may make that countrie and al Chriitian Churches & altars holy? And it is the greatest blindnes that can be, to thinke it superstition to reuerence any things or places in respect of Gods presence or wonderful operation in the same. See S. Hierom. ep. 17. s. 27. of the holy land. The holy land.
Holy places.

38. Not in houses.) The vulgar Heretikes alleage this place against the corporal being of Christ in the B. Sacrament & in Churches: by which reason they might haue driuen him out of al houses, Churches, and corporal places, when he vvas visible in earth. But it is meant of the Diuinitie only, & spoken to correct the carnal Ievves: Who thought God either to be contained, compassed, and limited to their Temple, that he could be no vvhere els, or at least that he vvould not heare or receiue mens praies and sacrifices in the Churches of the Gentiles, or els vvhere, out of the said Temple. And so as it maketh nothing for the Sacramentaries, no more doth it serue for such as esteeme Churches and places of publike praier no more conuenient nor more holy then any other profane houses or chambers. For though his person or vertue be not limited to any place, yet it pleaseth him condescending to our necessitie and praite, to vvorke his vvonders and to be vvorshipped of vs in holy places rather then profane. God is not contained in place,

THE propagation of the Church
from Hieru-salem into al Iewrie and to Samaria.

So farre is persecution from preuailing against the Church, that by it the Church groweth from Hierusalem into al Iewrie and Samaria. The second of the Deacons, Philip, conuerteth vwith his miracles the cite it self of Samaria, and baptizeth them, euen Simon Magus also him self among the rest. But the Apostles Peter and Iohn are the Ministers to giue them the Holy Ghost. Which ministerie Simon Magus would bie of them. The same Philip being sent of an Angel to a great man of Aethiopia, Who came a Pilgrimage to Hierusalem, first catechizeth him: and then (he professing his faith and desiring Baptisme) doth also baptize him.

† But Saul * vvalted the Church: entring in from house to ³ house, and draving men and vvomen, deliuered them into prison.

1. Deuout men.] As here great deuotion vvas vsed in burying his body, so aftervvard at the In-uention & Tranflation thereof. And the miracles vvrought by the same, and at euery litle memorie of the same, vvere infinite: as S. Augustine vvittnesseth. li. 22 de Ciuit. Dei c. 8. & Sermon. de S. Steph. 10. 10.

That Peter was sent, is no reason against his Primacie.

12. Sent Peter.] Some Protestants vse this place to proue S. Peter not to be head of the Apostles, because he and S. Iohn vvere sent by the Tvvelve. by vvhich reason they might as vvell conclude that he vvas not equal to the rest. for commonly the Maister sendeth the man, and the Superior the inferior, vvhen the vvord of Sending is exactly vsed. But it is not alvvayes so taken in the Scriptures, for then could not the Sonne be sent by the Father, nor the Holy Ghost from the Father and the Sonne: nor othervvise in cōmon vse of the vvorld, seing the inferior or equal may intreate his friend or Superior to doe his busines for him. and specially a body Politike or a Corporation may by election or othervvise choose their Head and send him. so may the Citizens send their Maior to the Prince or Parliament, though he be the head of the citie; because he may be more fitte to doe their busines also the Superior or equal may be sent by his ovvne content or desire. Lastly, the Colledge of the Apostles comprising Peter vvith the rest (as euery such Body implieth both the head and the members) vvas greater then Peter their head alone. as the Prince and Parliament is greater then the Prince alone. And so Peter might be sent as by authoritie of the vvhole Colledge, notwithstanding he vvere the head of the same.

The Sacrament of Confirmation, ministred by Bishops onely:

17. Did they impose?] If this Philip had bene an Apostle (saith S. Bede) he might haue imposed his handes, that they might haue receiued the Holy Ghost. but thus none can doe sauing Bishops. For though Priest may baptize, and anoint the Baptized also vvith Chrisme consecrated by a Bishop: yet he can not signe his forehead vvith the same holy oile, because that belongeth only to Bishops, vvhen they giue the holy Ghost to the Baptized. So saith he touching the Sacrament of Confirmation in 8 Act. This imposition therfore of handes together vvith the praier here specified (vvhich no doubt vvere the very same that the Church yet vvieth to that purpose) vvas the ministratiō of the Sacrament of Confirmation.
 Whereof S. Cyprian saith thus. They that in Samaria vvere baptized of Philip, because they had lawfull and Ecclesiastical Baptisme, ought not to be baptized any more: but only that vvhich vvanted, vvas done by Peter and Iohn, to vvith, that by praier made for them and imposition of handes, the Holy Ghost might be povvred vpon them. Vvich now also is done vvith vs, that they vvhich in the Church are baptized, be by the Rulers of the Church offered, and by our praier and imposition of hand receiue the Holy Ghost, and be signed vvith our Lordes seale. So S. Cyprian.

ep. 73. m.

 anum.

But the Heretikes obiekt that yet here is no mention of oile. To vvhom vve say, that many things vvere done and said in the administration of this and other Sacraments, and al instituted by Christ him self and deliuered to the Church by the Apostles, vvhich are not particularly vvritten by the Euangelists or any other in the Scripture, among vvhich this is euident by al antiquitie and most general praetise of the Church, to be one.

Ec. Hier. c. 2 & 4.

S. Denys saith, The Priests did present the baptized to the Bishop, that he might signe them Chrisme in Cōfirmation. diuino & deifico unguento, vwith the diuine and deifical ointment. And againe, Aduentum S. Spiritu consummans inunctio largitur, the inunction contumming giueth the comming of the Holy Ghost. Tertullian de resur. carn. nu. 7 & li. 1 adu. Marcio. speaketh of this Cōfirmation by Chrisme thus: The flesh is anointed, that the soul may be consecrated: the flesh is signed, that the soul may be sensed: the flesh by imposition of hand is shadowed, that the soul by the Spirit may be illuminated. S. Cyprian likevvise, ep. 70. nu. 2. He must also be anointed, that is baptized, vwith the oile sanctified on the Altar. And ep. 72 (see also ep. 73. nu. 3) he exprestly calleth it a Sacrament, ioyming it vwith Baptisme. As Melchiades doth (ep. ad omnes Hispanie Episcopos nu. 2. 101 Conc.) shewing the difference betvvixt it and Baptisme. S. Augustine also, cont. lit. Petil. li. 2, c. 104. The Sacrament of Chrisme in the kind of visible seales is sacred and holy, euen as Baptisme it self. Vve omit S. Cytill mystag. 3. S. Ambrose li. 3 de Sacram. c. 2. & de ijs qui mysterijs initiantur c. 7. S. Leo ep. 88, the aūcient Councils also of Laodicea, can. 48. Carthage 3 can. 39. and Araucanian 4 can. 1. and others. And S. Clement (Apost. Const. li. 7, c. 44) reporteth certaine cōstitutions of the Apostles touching the same. * S. Denys referreth the maner of consecration of the same Chrisme to the Apostles instruction. S. Basil li. de Sp. sancto c. 27 calleth it a tradition of the Apostles. And the most aūcient Martyr S. Fabian ep. 2 ad omnes Orientales Episcopos in initio, 10. 1 Conc. saith plainly that Christ him self did fo instruct the Apostles at the time of the institution of the B. Sacramēt of the Altar. And so doth the Author of the booke de unctioe Chrymatu apud D. Cyprianum nu. 1. telling the excellent effects and graces of this Sacrament, and vvhy this kinde of oile and balsme vvas taken of the old Lavy, & vsed in the Sacraments of the new Testament. Vvhich thing the Heretikes can vvith lesse cause obiekt against the Church, seeing they confesse * that Christ and his Apostles rooke the ceremonie of imposition of hands in this and other Sacraments, from the lewes maner of consecrating their hostes deputed to sacrifice.

* Ec. Hier. c. 4.

* Beza in Act. c. 6. v. 6.

To conclude, neuer none denied or contemned this Sacrament of Confirmation and holy Chrisme, but knovven Heretikes. S. Cornelius that B. Martyr so much praised of S. Cyprian, ep. ad Fabium apud Euseb. li. 5 c. 35 affirmeth, that Nouarus sel to Heretic, for that he had not receiued the Holy Ghost by the contignation of a Bishop. Vvhom al the Nouatians did folow, neuer vsing that holy Chrisme, as Theodorette vvriteth, li. 3 Fabul. Her. And Optatus li. 2 cont Parm. vvriteth that it vvas the special barbarous sacrilege of the Donatists, to conculcate the holy oile. But al this is nothing to the sauage disorder of Caluinists in this point.

Old heresies against confirmation and Chrisme.

kemnit. in exam. sone, Trid. de Confir-

17. And they receiued the Holy Ghost.] The Protestants charge the Catholikes, * that by approving and commending so much the Sacrament of Confirmation, and by attributing to it specially the gift of the Holy Ghost, they diminit h the force of Baptisme, chalenging also boldly the aūcient Fathers for the same. As though any Catholike or Doctōr euer laid more then the expresse vvordes of Scripture here and els vvhere plainly giue them vvarrant for. If they diminit h the vertue of Baptisme, then did Christ so, appointing his Apostles and al the Faithful euen after their Baptisme to expecte the Holy Ghost & vertue from aboue. then did the Apostles iniurie to Baptisme, in that they imposed hands on the baptized, and gaue them the Holy Ghost. And this is the Heretikes blindness in this case, that they can not, or vvill not see that the Holy Ghost is giuen in Baptisme to remission of sinnes, life, and sanctification: & in Confirmation, for force, strength, and corroboration to fight against al our spiritual enemies, and to stand constantly in confession of our faith, euen to death, in times of periecutiō either of the Heathen or of Heretikes, vwith great increase of grace. And let the good Reader note here our Aduerfaries great pueruicity and corruption of the plaine sense of the Scriptures in this point: some of them affirming the Holy Ghost here to be no other but the gift of vvisedom in the Apostles and a fevv moe to the gouernement of the Church, vvhen it is plaine that not only the Gouverners but al that vvere baptized, receiued this grace, both men and vvomen. Some, that it vvas no internal grace, but only the gift of diuers languages: Vvhich is very false, the gift of Tongues being but a requele and an accident to the grace, and an external token of the inuyvart gift of the Holy Ghost, and our sauour calleth it vertue from aboue. Some say, that vvhatsoeuer it vvas, it vvas but a miraculous thing, and dured no longer then the gift of the Tongues ioyned therewith: by vvich euasion they deny also the Sacrament of Extreme Vnctiō, and the force of Excommunication, because the corporal punishments vvich vvere annexed ofren times in the Primitiue Church vnto it, ceaseth, and so may they take avvay (as they meane to do) al Christs faith or religion, because it hath not the like operation of miracles as in the beginning.

The effectes of Baptisme and Confirmation differ.

Hæretical shiftes and euasions against manifest Scriptures, and against this Sacrament of Confirmation.

Tractat. 6 in ep. 10.

But S. Augustine toucheth this point fully. Is there any man (saith he) of so puerse an hart, to deny these Children on vvhom vvve nowv impose hands, to haue receiued the Holy Ghost, because they speak not vvith Tongues? & c. Lastly, some of them make no more of Confirmation or the Apostles facte, but as of a doctrine, instruction, or exhortation to contuevv in the faith receiued. Vvherevpon they haue turned this holy Sacrament * into a Catechisme. * There are also that put the baptized coming to yeres of discretio, to their owne choise vvhether they vvil cōtinuev Christiās or no. To such diuelish and diuers inuentions they fall, that vwill not obey Gods Church nor the expresse Scriptures, vvhich tel vs of praier, of imposition of hands, of the Holy Ghost, of grace and vertue from aboue, and not of instruction, vvhich might and may be done as vvel before Baptisme, & by others, as by Apostles and Bishops, to vvhom only this Holy function pertaineth, in so much that in our Cōuntry it is called Bishoping.

* Cons. Trid. Sess. 7 can. 16 de Bapt.

Bishoping.

18. Offered money.] This vvvicked forcerer Simon is noted by S. Irenæus li. 1 c. 20. and others, to haue been the first Heretike, & father of al Heretikes to come, in the Church of God. He taught, only faith in him, vvvithout good life and vvorkes, to be ynough to saluation. he gaue the onies to purchase vvvith his money a spiritual function, that is to be made a Bishop. for, to haue povver to giue the Holy Ghost by imposition of hædes, is to be a Bishop: as to bye the povver to remitte sinnes or to consecrate Christs body, is to bye to be a Priest, or to bye Priethod: and to bye the authoritie to minister Sacraments, to preach or to haue cure of soules, is to bye a benefice. and likewise in al other spiritual things, vvhereof either to make tale or purchase for money or money vvorth, is a great horrible sinne called Simonie: and in such as thinke it lavtul (as here Simon iudged it) it is named Simoniacal Herese, of this detestable man vvho first attempted to bie a spiritual function or office. D. Greg. apud Ioan. Diac. in Vir. li. 3. c. 2. 3. 4. 5.

Simonie.

22. Doe penance.] S. Augustine (ep. 108) vnderstanding this of the penance done in the Primiuiue Church for heinous offences, doth teach vs to translate this and the like places (2 Cor. 12, 21. Apoc. 9, 21) as vve doe, and as it is in the vulgar Latin, and consequently that the Greeke μίσωσθαι doth signifie so much. Yea vvhen he addeth, that very good men doe daily penance for venial sinnes by fasting, praier, and almes, he vvarranteth this praier and translation through out the new Testament, specially him self also reading so as it is in the vulgar Latin, and as vve translate.

Penance.

22. If perhaps.] You may see, great penance is here required for remission of sinne, & that men must stand in feare and dread lest they be not vvorthy to be heard or to obtaine mercie. Vvhereby al men that bye or sel any spiritual functions, dignities, offices, or liuings, may specially be vvarned that the sinne is exceeding great.

Simon Magus more religious then the Protestants.

24. Pray you for me.] As this Sorcerer had more knowlledge of the true religion then the Protestants haue, vvho see not that the Apostles and Bishops can giue the Holy Ghost in this Sacrament or other, vvhich he plainly perceiued and confessed, so surely he vvvas more religious then they, that being so sharply checked by the Apottle, yet blaipnemed not as they do vvhen they be blamed by the Gouerners of the Church, but desired the Apostles to pray for him.

Beza.

27. This is desert.] Intolerable boldnes of some Protestants, here also (as in other places) against al copies both Greeke and Latin, to surmise corruption or fallshod of the text, saying it can not be so: Vvhich is to accuse the holy Euangelist, and to blaipheme the Holy Ghost him self. See Beza, vvho is often very saucie vvith S. Luke.

Annot. no. Test. 1116.

The ceremonies of Sacraments done, though not mentioned.

28. He baptized him.] When the Heretikes of this time finde mention made in Scripture of any Sacrament ministred by the Apostles or other in the Primiuiue Church, they imagine no more vvvas done then there is exprestly told, nor scarcely beieue so much. As if imposition of hands in the Sacrament of Confirmation be onely exprest, they thinke there vvvas no chrisme nor other vvorkes or vvord vsed. So they thinke no more ceremonie vvvas vsed in the baptizing of this noble man, then here is mentioned. Vvherevpon S. - Good vvorkes before faith, are preparatiues to the same, not properly meritorious. 2. Doing many almes deedes.] He knew God creator of al, but that his omnipotent Sonne vvas incarnate, he knew not: and in that faith he made praier and gaue almes vvch pleased God, and by vvell doing he deserved to know God perfectly, to beleue the mysterie of the Incarnation, and to come to the Sacrament of Baptisme. So saith Venerable Bede out of S. Gregorie. And S. Augutine thus, li. 1. de Baps. c. 2. red. in hūo locum. Because vvhatsoeuer goodnes he had in praier and almes, the same could not profite him vnles he vvere by the band of Christian Societas and peace, incorporated to the Church, he is bidden to send vnto Peter, that by him he may learne Christ, by him he may be baptized, &c. Vvhereby it appeareth that such vvorkes as are done before iustification, though they iustifie not to saluation, yet be acceptable preparatiues to the grace of iustification, and such as moue God to mercie, as it might appeare also by Gods like prouident mercifulnes * to the Eunuche. though al such vvorkes preparatiue come of grace also: othervvise they could neuer deserue at Gods hand of congruity or any othervvise toward iustification. Act. 1.
- The Canonical houres. 9. To pray about the sixt houre.] The houre is specified, for that there vvere certaine appointed times of praier vsed in the Law, vvch deuout persons, according to the publike seruice in the Temple, obserued also priuately: and vvch the Apostles and holy Church aftervvard both kept and increased. Vvhereof thus vvriteth S. Cyprian very notably. In celebrating their praier, vve finde De Ora: Dom. nu. 15. that the three children With Daniel obserued the third, sixt, and ninthe houre, as in Sacrament (or mysterie) of the holy Trinitie. &c. And a litle after, Which spaces of houres the vvorshippers of God spiritually (or mystically). determining long since, obserued set times to pray: and after vvard the thing became manifest, that it vvas for Sacrament (or mysterie) that the iust vvould pray. For as the third houre the holy Ghost descended vpon the Apostles, fulfilling the grace of our Lords promise, and at the sixt houre Peter going up to the higher roome of the house, vvas both by voice and signe from God instructed, that al Nations should be admitted to the grace of saluation, vvhereas of cleaning the Gentiles he doubted before. and our Lord being crucified at the sixt houre, as the ninthe vvashed away our sinnes vvith his blood. But to vs (dearly beloved) beside the seasons obserued of old, both the times and sacraments of praying be increased. for vve must pray in the morning early, that the Resurrection of our Lord may be celebrated by morning praier: as of old the holy Ghost designed in the Psalme, saying, In the morning early vvill I stand vp to thee, early in the morning vvilt thou heare my voice. Toward the euening also vvhen the sunne departeth, and the day endeth, vve must of necessitie pray againe. Act. 2. Act. 10. Luc. 23. Psal. 5.

Cyprian de Orat. Do. num. 15) and by the morning, the first houre called Prime: al correspondent to the times and houres of Christs Pallion, as in S. Matthevv is noted c. 26. 27. By al vvwhich vve see, hovv agreable the vie of the Churches seruice is euen at this time to the Scriptures and primitiue Church: and hovv vvicked the Puritan-Caluinistes be, that count al such order and set seasons of praier, superstition: and lastly, hovv insufficient and vnlike the nevv pretended Church-seruice of England is to the primitiue vse, vvwhich hath no such houres of night or day, sauing a litle imitation of the old Martins and Euenfong, and that in Schisme and Heretic, and therefore not onely vnprofitable, but also damnable.

25. Adored.] S. Chrysofom ho. 21 in Act. thinketh Peter refused this adoration of humilitie only, because euery falling dovvne to the ground for vvorthip sake, is not Diuine vvorthip or dew only to God, * the vvord of adoration and proitration being commonly vsed in the Scriptures Adoration of creatures. tovvard men. But S. Hierom adu. Vigil. c. 2 to. 2. rather thinketh that Cornelius by error of Gentility, and of Peters perion, did go about to adore him vvith Diuine honour, and therefore vvvas lifted vp by the Apottle, adding that he vvvas but a man.

47. Baptized, vvwhich haue receiued.] Such may be the grace of God sometimes tovvard men, and their charitie and contrition so great, that they may haue remission, iustification, and sanctification before the external Sacrament of Baptisme, Confirmation, or Penance be receiued, as vve see in this example, vvhere at Peters preaching they al receiue the Holy Ghost before any Sacrament, but in the same vve learne one necessarie lesion, that such notwithstanding must needs receiue the Sacraments appointed by Christ, vvwhich vvhofoeuer contemneth, can neuer be iustified. Aug. super Lewis. q. 8 + 10, 4. They that are iustified before, must not omit the Sacraments.

The name of CHRISTIANS.

ANNO TATIONS
CHA P. XI.

24. Multitude added.) As before (c. 10) a few, so now great numbers of Gentiles are adioyned also to the visible Church, consisting before only of the Ievves. Vvhich Church hath bene euer since Christs Ascension, notoriously seen and knowven: their preaching open, their Sacraments visible, their discipline visible, their Heades and Governours visible, the prouision for their maintenance visible, the persecution visible, their dispersion visible: the Heretikes that went out from them, visible: the ioyning either of men or Nations vnto them, visible: their peace and rest after persecutions, visible: their Governours in prison, visible: the Church praieeth for them visibly, their Councils visible, their gifts and graces visible, their name (Christians) knowven to al the vvorlde. of the Protestants inuisible Church we heare not one vvorde.

The Church visible.

26. Christians.) This name, Christian, ought to be common to al the Faithful, and other new names of Schismatickes and Sectaries must be abhorred. If thou heare (saith S. Hierom) any vvhich such as be said to be of Christ, not to haue their names of our Lord IESVS CHRIST, but to be called after some other certaine name, as Marcionites, Valentinians, (as now also the Lutherans, Calvinists, Protestants) knowv thou that they belong not to the Church of Christ, but to the Synagogue of Antichrist. Laetantius also (li. 7 Diuin. instit. c. 30) saith thus, When Phrygians, or Nouatians, or Valentinians, or Marcionites, or Anthropomorphites, or Arians, or any other be named, they cease to be Christians, vvhich hauing lost the name of Christ, haue done on the names of men. Neither can our new Sectaries discharge them selues, for that they take not to them selues these names, but are forced to beare them as giuen by their Aduersaries. For, so vvere the names of Arians and the rest of old, imposed by others, and not chosen commonly of them selues: Vvhich notwithstanding vvere callings that proued them to be Heretikes. And as for the name of Protestants, our men hold them vvel content therewith. But concerning the Heretikes turning of the argument against the peculiar callings of our Religious, as Dominicás, Franciscans, Iesuites, Thomists, or such like, it is nothing, except they could proue that the orders & persons so named, were of diuers faithes & Sectes, or differed in any necessary point of religion, or vvere not al of one Christian name and Communion: and it is as ridiculous as if it vvere objected, that some be Ciceronians, some Plinians, some good Augustine men, some Hieronymians, some Oxford mé, some Cambrige men, & (vvhich is most like) some * Recha-bites, some * Nazareites.

Names of Sectaries and Heretikes.

Protestants.

Diuers religious orders are not diuers sectes.

Jerem. 35.
Num. 6.

Neither doth their obiection, that we be called Papistes, helpe or excuse them in their new names. for, besides that it is by them scornfully inuented (as the name Homosians was of the Arians) this name is not of any one man B. of Rome or els vvhich, knowven to be the author of any schisme or sect, as their callings be: but it is of a vvhole state and order of governours, and that of the cheefe Governours, to vvhom we are bound to cleaue in religion and to obey in al things. So to be a Papist, is to be a Christian man, a childe of the Church, and subiect to Christs Vicar. And therefore against such impudent Sectaries as compare the faithful for folowing the Pope, to the diuersitie of Heretikes bearing the names of new Maiters, let vs euer haue in readines this saying of S. Hierom to Pope Damasus, Vitalis I knowv not, Melesius I refuse, I knowv not Paulinus, Who soeuer gathereth not vvvith thee, scattereth: that is to say, Who soeuer is not Christs, is Antichrist. And againe, If any man ioyne vvith Peters Chaire, he is mine.

Papistes, Catholices, and true Christians, al one.

Not to be with the Pope, is to be with Antichrist.

to. 2. ep. 57 et ep. 58
ad Damas.

The name of CHRISTIANS. We must here further obserue that this name, Christian, giuen to al beleeuers and to the vvhole Church, vvas specially taken to distinguish them from the Ievves and Heathens vvhich beleued not at al in Christ, and the same novv leuereth and maketh knowven al Chriitian men from Turkes and others that hold not of Christ at al. But vvhenn Heretikes began to rise from among the Christians, vvhio professed Christs name and sundry Articles of faith as true beleeuers doe, the name Christian vvas so common to leuer the Heretikes from true faithful men: and therevpon the Apostles by the holy Ghost imposed this name Catholike vpon the Beleeuers vvhich in al points vvere obedient to the Churches doctrine. When heresies vvere risen (saich S. Pacianus ep. ad Symphorianum) & endeouored by diuers names to teare the doue of God and Queene, and to rent her in peeces, the Apostolical people required their iurname, vvhich by the incorrupt people might be distinguis hed, &c. and so thio that before vvere called Christians, are novv surnamed also Catholikes. Christian is my name, faith he, Catholike my iurname. And this vword, Catholike, is the proper note vvheryby the holy Apostles in their Crede taught vs to diicerne the true Church from the false heretical congregation of vvhich sort fouer. And not only the meanig of the vword, vvhich signifieth vniuersalitie of times, places, and persons, but the very name and vword it self, by Gods prouidence, alwayes and only appropriated to the true beleuvers, and (though sometimes at the beginning of Sectes chalenged) yet neuer obtained by Heretikes, giueth so plaine a marke and euidence, that S. Augustine saich, In the lappe of the Church the very name of Catholike keepeth me. cont. ep. fund. c. 4. And againe tract. 32 in Io. vve receive the Holy Ghost if vve loue the Church, if vve be ioyned together by charitie, if vve reioyce in the Catholike name and faith. And againe de ver. rel. c. 7. co. 1. We must hold the communion of that Church vvhich is named Catholike, not only of her ouerne, but also of al her enemies. for, vvil they nil they, the Heretikes also and Schismatikes them selues, vvhenn they speake not vwith their ouerne fellowes but vwith strangers, call the Catholike Church nothing els but the Catholike Church: for they could not be vnderstood vnles they diicerne it by thn name vvheryvwith she is called of al the vworld. The Heretikes vvhenn they see them selues preuented of this name Catholike, then they plainely reiect it and deride the name, as the Donatistes did, calling it an humane forgerie or fiction, vvhich S. Augustine calleth vwordes of blasphemie. li. 1 c. 33 cont. Gasudent. and some Heretikes of this time call them scornefully cartholikes, and cacolikes. An other calleth it, the most vaine terme Catholike. Beza in pref. no. Teft. an. 1565. An other calleth the Catholike religion, a Catholike Apostasie or defection. Humphrey in vis. Iuel. pag. 213. Yea and some haue taken the vword out of the Crede, * putting Christian for it. But against these good fellowes let vs solovv that vvhich S. Augustine (de vitil. crea. c. 8. to. 6.) giueth as a rule to direct a mā the right and sure vway from the diuerlitie & doubtfulnes of al error, saying, If after these troubles of minde thou seme to thy self sufficiently roised and vexed, & vvil haue an end of these molestacions, foiovv the vway of Catholike discipline, vvhich from Christ him self by the Apostles hath proceeded euen vnto vs, and shal procede from hence to the posteritie. See the Annotation 1 Tim. 3. c. 15.

The Protestants deride the name CATHOLIKE.

CHAP. XII.

Herod the first king that persecuted the Church, hauing at Hierusalem (vvhenn Barnabas and Saul vvere there vwith the collation of the Antiochians) killed Iames the Apostle. 3 and to please the Ievves imprisoned Peter vwith the minde to kil him also, but frustrate by an Angel sent of God as the continual praies of the Church made for her cheefe Pastor, 19 being puffed up vwith such prae that at Calarea he refused not to be honoured as God: 23 is miraculously striken of Gods Angel. 24 and so after the persecutors death, the Churches preaching prospereth exceedingly.

The Epistle vpo SS. Peter and Pauls day iun.

As Peters person vvas more notorious then others, & therefore better garded then other, for feare he should escape: so Gods prouidence in preferring & deliuering him for the longer government of his Church, is very maruelous.

AND at the same time Herod the king set his handes, to afflict certain of the Church. † And 2 he killed Iames the brother of Iohn vwith the svword. † And seing that it pleased the Ievves, 3 he added to apprehend Peter also. And it vvas the daies of the Azymes. † Vvhom vvhenn he had apprehended, he cast into prison, deliuering him to 4 foure quaterniōs of souldiars to be kept, meaning after the Pasche to bring him forth to the people. † And Peter in deede vvas kept in 5 prison. But 6 praier vvas made of the Church vwithout intermission

- 6 mission vnto God for him. † And vwhen Herod vwould haue brought him forth, the same night Peter vvas sleeping betvvene tvvo souldiars, bound vwith "tvvo chaines: and the
- 7 keepers before the doore kept the prison. † And behold an Angel of our Lord stode in presence: and light shined in the house: and striking Peters side, he raised him, saying,
- 8 Arise quickly. And the chaines fel from his handes. † And the Angel said to him, Gird thee, and put on thy shoes. And he did so. And he said to him, Put thy garment about thee, &
- 9 folovv me. † And going forth he folovved him, & he knew not that it vvas true vvhich vvas done by the Angel: but he
- 10 thought that he savv a vision. † And passing through the first & the second vwatch, they came to the yron gate that lea-deth to the citie, vvhich of it self opened to them. And going out, they vvent forvvard one streate: and incontinent the
- 11 Angel departed from him. † And Peter returning to him felt, said: Novv I knowv in very deede that our Lord hath sent his Angel, and deliuered me out of Herods hand, & from al the expectation of the people of the Ievves. †
- 12 † And considering, he came to the :: house of Marie the mother of Iohn, vwho vvas surnamed Marke, vwhere many
- 13 vvere gathered and praying. † And vwhen he knocked at the doore of the gate, there came forth a vvenche to see, named Rhodè. † And as she knew Peters voice, for ioy she opened not the gate, but running in she told that Peter stode
- 14 before the gate. † But they said to her, Thou art mad. But she affirmed that it vvas so. But they said, It is "his Angel. † And Peter cōtinued knocking. And vvhē they had opened, they
- 15 savv him, & vvere astonied. † And beckening vwith his hand to them, that they should hold their peace, he told hovv our Lord had brought him out of prison, and he said, " Tel these things to Iames & to the brethren. And going forth he vvent
- 16 :: into an other place. † And when day vvas come, there vvas no litle a doe betvvene the souldiars, vwhat vvas become of Peter. † And Herod, vwhen he had sought him, and had not found, making inquisitiō of the keepers, cōmaūded them to be led avvay: & going dovvn frō Ievvrie into Cæsaréa, there
- 17 he abode. † And he vvas angrie vwith the Tyrians and the Sidonians. But they vwith one accord came to him, and persuading Blastus that vvas cheefe of the kings chamber, they desired peace, for that their countries vvere nourished by him.

:: It is much for the praise of these good Christians that the assemble to Gods seruice & praier was kept in their houses in the time of persecution, & that the Apostle came thither straigh out of prison, as his first refuge. as now Christian people doe much to their cōmendatiō in places where Heretic doth reigne.

:: Though God had so miraculously deliuered him, yet he would not répt God by tarying among his persecutors, but accordig to Christes cōmaūdemēt fled for a time.

† And vpon a day appointed, Herod being araied vvith 21 kingly attire, fate in the iudgement seate, and made an oration to them. † And the people made acclamation, The voices of 22 a God, & not of a man. † And forthvvith an Angel of our 23 Lord † itrooke him, because he had not giuen the honour to God: and being consumed of vvormes, he gaue vp the ghost.
† But the vvord of our Lord increased and multiplied. † And 24
Barnabas and Saul returned from Hierusalem, hauing accom- 25 plished their* ministerie, taking vvith them Iohn that vvas surnamed Marke.

S. Peters chaines.

6. Tvvo chaines.] These chaines are famous for miracles, and vvere brought from Hierusalem to Rome by Eudoxia the Emperesse, vvife to Theodosius the yonger, vvhere they vvere matched & placed vvith an other chaine that the same Apostle vvas tied vvith by Nero, & a Church fouided therevpon, named Petri ad vincula, vvhere they are religiously kept and reuerenced vntil this day, and there is a Feast in the vvhole Church for the same, the first of August, vvwhich vve call, Lammes day.

The preachers of the Church of Antioche preparing the saines, the Holy Ghost out of them al, chooseth Saul and Barnabas. 3 They being first consecrated Bis'hops, 4 goe their appointed circuite ouer al the land of Cypres, the Proconsul vvhereof is also conuerted, seing the miraculou excecation of a leuu by Paul. 13 Thence, into Pamphilia: 14 and Pisidia, vvhere in Antioche Paul preacheth to the Iewes, shewing that I E S V S is Christ, 38 and that in him is saluation, and not in their Law of Moyses: 40 vvarning them to bevvare of the reprobation foretold by the Prophets. 44 But the next Sabbath, they blaspheming, he in plaine termes forsaketh them, and turneth to the Gentiles. Whereas the Gentils be as glad on the contrarie side. 50 Finally the Iewes raising persecution, they forsake them, pronouncing them to be obstinate conserners.

AND

1 AND there were in the Church which was at Antioche, Prophets and Doctors, among whom was Barnabas, & Simon that was called Niger, and Lucius of Cyrene, and Manahen who was the foster-brother of Herod the Tetrarch, and Saul.

2 † And as they were ministering to our Lord, and fasting, the holy Ghost said: "Separate me Saul and Barnabas vnto the worke, whereto I haue taken them.
 3 † Then they fasting and praying, and imposing hands vpon them, dismissed them.

4 † And they being sent of the holy Ghost, went to Se-leucia, and thence sailed to Cypres. † And when they were come to Salamina, they preached the word of God in the synagogs of the Iewes. And they had Iohn also in their ministerie. † And when they had walked through out the 6 vvhole iland as farre as Paphos, they found a certaine man that was a magician, a false-prophete, a Iew, whose name

7 was Bar-iesu, † vvhich was with the Proconsul Sergius Paulus a wise man. He sending for Barnabas & Saul, 8 desired to heare the word of God. † But Elymas the magician
 (for so is his name interpreted) resisted them, seeking to auert
 9 the Proconsul from the faith. † But Saul, otherwise Paul,
 10 replenished with the holy Ghost, looking vpon him, † said:

11 O ful of al guile, and al deceit, sonne of the deuil,emie of al iustice, thou ceasest not to subuert the right vvaies of our Lord. † And now behold the hand of our Lord vpon thee, and thou shalt be blind, not seing the sunne vntil a time. And forthwith there fel dimnesse and darkenesse vpon him, and going about he sought some body that would giue him his 12 hand. † Then the Proconsul, when he had seen that vvhich was done, beleued, marueling at the doctrine of our Lord.

13 † And when Paul and they that were with him had sailed from Paphos, they came to Pergè in Pamphylia. And Iohn 14 departing from them, returned to Hierusalem. † But they passing through Pergè, came to Antioche in Pisidia: and en-tring into the synagogue on the day of the Sabboths, they 15 sate downe. † And after the lesson of the Law and the Prophets, the princes of the Synagogue sent to them, saying, Men brethren, if there be among you any sermon of exhortation to the people, speake.

- The Apostles Liturgie or Masse. 2. As they were ministering.] If we should, as our Aduerſaries do, boldly turne vvhhat text we list, and flee from one language to another for the aduantage of our cause, we might haue translated for ministering, sacrificing. for so the Greeke doth signifie, and so Erasmus translated. yea we might haue translated, Saying Masse, for so they did: and the Greeke Fathers hereof had their name, Liturgie, vvhich Erasmus translateth Masse, saying, Missæ Chrysoſtomi. But we keepe our text, as the translators of the Scriptures should do most religiously. λεϊτουργ-

And this fasting vvas not fasting from sinne, nor moral or Christian temperance, as the Protestants ridiculouly affirme, for such fasting they were bound euer to keepe: but it vvas abstinence for a time from al meates or from some certaine kindes of meates, vvhich vvas ioyned vvith praier and sacrifice, and done specially at such seasons as the Church prescribed, of al together (as in Lent, the Imber daies, Friday, Saturday) and not vvhen euey man list, as Aërius and such Heretikes did hold. AND it came to passe at Iconium that they entred together into the synagogue of the Ievves, and so spake, that a very great multitude of Ievves and of the Greekes did beleue. † But the Ievves that vvere incredulous, stirred vp and incensed the hartes of the Gentils to anger against the brethren. † A long time therefore they abode, dealing confidently in our Lord, vwho gaue testimonie to the vword of his grace, graunting signes and vvonders to be done by their handes. † And the multitude of the citie vvas deided: and certaine of them in deede vvere vvith the Ievves, but certaine vvith the Apostles. † And vvhen the Gentils and the Ievves vvith their princes had made an assault, to vse them contumeliously, and to stone them, † vnderstanding it, they fled to the cities of Lycaonia, Lystra and Derbé, and the vvhole cuntry about, and there they vvere euangelizing.

ANNOTATIONS CHAP. XIII.

Lacta.

12. They would sacrifice.) This loe is the diuine vvorship, consisting in external sacrifice, and in acknowledging the parties vvorshipped to be gods: vvhich * may be done to no man nor creature, and therefore the Apostles refuse it vvith al possible diligence, and al the Angels and Saincts in heauen refuse that adoration by sacrifice. The Catholike Church suffereth no Priest nor other (so to vvorship any Sainct in heauen or earth. She hath but one external Sacrifice, vvhich is in the holy Masse, of Christs body and blood: that she offereth to God alone, and neither to Peter nor to Paul (saith S. Augustine) though the Priest that sacrificeth, standeth over their bodies, and offereth in their memories. But other kindes of honours and dueties, interior vvithout al comparison (hovv great so euer they be) to this, vve do, as the Scriptures and Nature teache vs, to al Superiors in heauen and earth, according to the degrees of grace, honour, and blessednes that God hath called them vnto, from our B. Ladie Christs ovvne mother, to the lest seruant he hath in the vvorld. for vvhich the Heretikes vvould neuer accuse Christian people of Idolatrie, if they had either grace, learning, faith, or natural affection.

22. Had ordained.) The Heretikes, to make the vvorld beleue that al Priests ought to be chosen by the voices of the people, and that they neede no other Ordering or Consecration by Bishops, pressing the profane vse of the * Greeke vvord more then the very natural signification requireth and Ecclesiastical vse beareth, translate thus, Ordained by election. Vvhereas in deede this vvord in Scripture significth, Ordering by impolition of hands, as is plaine by other vvordes equivalent, Act. 6, 13. 1 Tim. c. 5. 2 Tim. 1. Vvhere the Ordering of Deacons, Priests, and others is called * Impolition of hands: not of the people, but of the Apostles. 22. Priests.) Euen so here also, as before, being from the proper, apt, knowven, vvord & vvwhich is most precisely correspondent to the very Greeke in our tongue and all nations, they translate: Priest, Elder, that is, for a calling of Office, a vvord of age: for a terme of art and by consent of all the Church and Apostolike authoritie and Fathers, appropriated to holy Order, a vulgar, common, and profane terme: Vvith as litle grace as if they should translate Pontificem, a bridgmaker, the Mayor of London, the Bigger of London. And thus you see vvithin three vvordes compasse they flee guilefully from the Latin to the Greeke, and againe guilefully from the Greeke to the vulgar English. Such corruption of Scriptures their hatred of Priesthood driueth them vnto. If they had translated it so vvhen the Scriptures were first vvritten, (at vvwhich time the vvord vvvas but newly received into the special and Ecclesiastical signification, and vvwhen it vvvas yet taken sometimes in common profane sort, as 1 Tim. 5. or there only vvwhere our aúcient Latin version turneth Presbyter into Senior, because the vvord vvvas not yet vvholly and only appropriated to holy Orders, as afterward by vse of many hundred yeres it vvvas and is) their dealing might haue had some colour of honestie and plainesse, vvwhich now can not be but of plaine fall hood and corruption, and that of further purpose then the simple can see. Vvwhich is to take avvay the office of Sacrificing and other functions of Priests, proper in the nevv Testamēt to such as the Apostles often, and the posteritie in maner altogether call Priests, Presbyteros. Vvwhich vvword doth so certainly imply the authoritie of sacrificing, that it is by vse made also the onely English of Sacerdos, the Adueraries them selues as vvvel as vve, so translating it in all the old and nevv Testament: though they can not be ignorant that Priest commeth of Presbyter, and not of Sacerdos: and that antiquitie for no other cause applied the signification of Presbyter to Sacerdos, but to shew that Presbyter is in the nevv Law, that vvwhich Sacerdos vvvas in the old: the Apostles abstaining from this and other like old names at the first, and rather vsing the vvordes, Bishops, Pastors, and Priests, because they might be distinguished from the Gouvernours and sacrificers of Aarons order, vvwho as yet in the Apostles time did their old functions still in the Temple. And this to be true, and that to be a Priest, is to be a man appointed to sacrifice, the Heretikes them selues calling Sacerdos alvvvaies a Priest, muít needs be driuen to confesse. Although their folly is therein notorious, to apply vvwillingly the vvword Priest to Sacerdos, and to take it from Presbyter vvwhereof it is properly deriued, not only in English, but in other languages both french and Italian. Vvwhich is to take avvay the name that the Apostles and fathers gaue to the Priests of the Church, & to giue it vvholly & onely to the order of Aaron, vvwhich neuer had it before our Priesthood began. Neuer did there Heretikes stand so much vpon doubtful deriuations and descant of vvordes as these Protestants do, and yet neuer men behaued them selues more fondly in the same: as vvwhosoever marketh the distinction of their Elders, Ministers, Deacons, and such like, shall perceiue.

ANNO TATIONS
CHAP. XV.

The Way to end diffension in religion, is to commit it to a Couc-eel.

1. Appointed] Vve learne by this example, vwhat is to be done vwhen any controuersie ariseth in religion betvvene the teachers or other Christian people. Vve see it is not ynough to contend by allegations of Scriptures or other proofes seeming to make for either part: for so ot contentious part taking there should be no end, but the more vwriting, vvrestling, struiuing there vvere, euery one for his ovvne fan- sie, cloking it vwith the title of Gods vword and scripture, the more Schismes, Sectes, and diuisions vvould fall: as vve see specially in the restles Heresies of our time. Vvhose fautors admitting no iudges, stand to no trial of mortal men, to no tribunal of Pope, Councils, Bishops, Synodes, but eche man to his ovvne phantastical spirit, his ovvne sense of Scriptures, and his ovvne vvilful obdurate rebellion against Gods Church and his Superiors in the same. But here vve see S. Paul and Barnabas, men that vvere Apostles and ful of the Spirit of God, and the other parties, though neuer so much partial to the ceremonies of their Lawv by their former long vse and education therein, yet not to stand stilly to their ovvne opinion on either side, but to condescend to referre the vvhole controuersie and the determination thereof to the Apostles, Priests or Auncients of Hierusalem, that is to say, to commit the matter to be tried by the heads and Bishops and their determination in Council. This is Gods holy and vvise providence among other iudgements in his Church, to keepe the Christian people in truth and vniue, and to condemne sectes and false teachers and troublers of the Church. By vvwhich iudgements and order, vvhosoeuer vvil not or dare not be tried in al their doctrine and doings, they shevv them selues to mistrust their ovvne cause, and to flee from the light, and ordinance of God. Vvithout vvwhich order of appealing al differences in faith and constructions of the Scriptures, the Church had bene more defectual and insufficient, then any Commonvvealth or Societie of men in the vvorld: none of vvwhich euer vvanteth good meanes to decide al discordes and diffension arising among the subiects & citizens of the same.

Of vwhat persons a Council consisteth.

6. Apostles and Auncients.] The Heresies of our Protestants vvwhich vvould haue al men to giue voice, or to be present in Councils, and of others that vvould haue none but the holy or elect to be admitted, are refuted by this example, vvhere vve see none but Apostles & Priests or Auncients assembled to dispute of the matter, though many deuout people vvere in the citie the same time. Neither did euer any other in the Auncient Councils of the Church assemble to debate and define the matter, but such, though many other for other causes be euer present. Secular men or vvomen, be their gifts neuer so great, can not be iudges in causes of faith and religion. If any thing, saith God be hard and doubtful, thou shalt come to the Priests of the Leuitical stocke, and thou shalt follow their sentence. Againe, The lippes of the Priest shal keepe knowledg, and the Lawv thou shalt require of his mouth. Againe, Aske the Lawv of the Priest. Much more must vve referre al to our Bishops and Pastors, vvhom God hath placed in the regiment of the Church vvith much larger priuilege, then euer he did the old Priests ouer the Synagogue, to vvhom it is said, He that despiseth you, despiseth me. And it is to be noted that the Bishops so gathered in Council, represent the vvhole Church, haue the authoritie of the vvhole Church, and the Spirit of God to protect them from error, as the vvhole Church: SS. Paul and Barnabas come hither for the definition of the vvhole Church. The sentence of a plenarie or general Counsel (saith S. Augustine) is the consent of the vvhole Church. And so it must needes be in the Church, because the Magistrates, Senate, Council or deputies of al commonvvealthes, represent the vvhole body: and to haue it othervvise (as the Churches Rebels vvish) vvere to bring al to hel and horrou, and them selues to be perpetually, by the seditious and popular persons, vvholden against Lawv, reason, and religion, in their vvickednes.

A general Couc-eel representeth
the vvhole Church.

The first Couc-eel at Hierusalem.

7. Assembled.] A Council vvas called to discusse the matter. vvwhich Council vvas the more easily gathered, because the Christian Bishops and countiees vvere not yet so many, but that the principal Gouvernours of the Church being not far disperfed, and as many learned men as vvere necessarie, might be in Hierusalem, or easily called thither. And it vvas not a Prouincial Council or Synode only, but a general Council, consisting of the cheefe Apostles and Bishops that then vvere, though though the number was nothing so great as afterward used to assemble, when the Church was spread into all nations.

7. Peter rising up.] S. Peter as the head of the Church speaketh first, as his Successors have ever had, not only in their personal presence, but in their absence by their legates and substitutes, the cheefe voice in all Councils general, none ever received into authoritie and credite in the Church without their Confirmation. And therefore the Councils of the Arians and of other Heretikes, were they neuer so great, wanting the Popes assent, assistance, or Confirmation, did shamefully erre, as Ariminense for the Arians, and Ephesinum secundum for the Nestorians, and such like condemned Assemblies.

Peter head of the Council, & his successors after him.

7. Chose that by my mouth.] Though Paul were called and appointed specially to be the Apostle of the Gentils, yet that was S. Peters special privilege by Gods owne choise, that the first Gentils should be called by his mouth, and that he first should utter to the Church that truth of the admission of the Gentils him self. for that he was Christes Vicar, being notwithstanding (as his

13. James.] S. James because he was an Apostle and also Bishop of Hierusalem, gave his sentence next for the speache interposed of S. Paul and Barnabas, was but for their better information in the decision of the matter, and for confirmation of S. Peters sentence, though they being Apostles, and Bishops, had voices in the Council also: as many mo had, though their sentences be not here reported. And where S. James in his speech saith, I iudge, it is not meant that he gave the principal definitive sentence: for he (as all the rest) folovved and allowed the sentence of S. Peter, as it is plaine in the text, the vvhole assembly for reuerence of his person and approbation of his sentence, holding their peace. At the multitude (saith S. Hierom) held their peace, and into his sentence James the Apostle & all the Priests did passe together. For though S. James did particularise certaine points incident to the question debated, as of eating strangled meates &c. yet the proper controuersie for which the Council assembled, was, Vvwhether the Gentils converted were bound to obserue the Law of Moyse. and it was concluded, that they were not bound, nor ought not to be charged vvith Moyse Law or the Sacraments and ceremonies of the same. this is the substance and principal purpose of this Councils decree, vvwhich doth binde for euer: and Peter (saith S. Hierom in the same place) was Prince or author of this decree. the matter of fornication and Idolothytes being but incident to the question or resolution, and the forbidding of eating strangled and blood, but a temporal prohibition, vvwhich by the consent of the Church or otherwise afterward was abrogated, the Church of God hauing the true sense of difference of times, places, & persons, vvhen and how far such things are to be obserued, and vvhen not. And in such things as these, and in other like vvwhich according to circumstances require alteration, it is, that S. Augustine saith, li. 2. de bapt. c. 3. to. 7. The former general or plenarie Councils may be amended by the later.

The principal question.

Incident questions.

How later councils alter the former.

20. Fornication.] Fornication and contamination vvith Idols, are of them selues mortal finnes, and therefore can neuer be lawfull: yet because the Gentiles by custome were prone to both, and of fornication made very smal account, it pleased the Holy Ghost to forbid both specially. Concerning the other points of abstaining from blood and stifled meates, they were things of their owne nature indifferent, in vvwhich for a time the Iewes were to be borne vvithal, and the Gentils to be a litle exercised to obedience. By vvwhich we may see the great authoritie of Gods Church and Councils, vvwhich may commaund for euer, or for a time, such things as be fitte for the state of times and nations, vvwithout any expresse Scriptures at all, and so by commaundement make things necessarie that were before indifferent.

The Churches authoritie in making Decrees.

24. Going forth from vs.] A proper discription or note of Heretikes, Schismatikes, and seditious teachers, to go out from their spirital Pastors and Gouvernours, and to teach vvwithout their commission and approbation, to disquiet the Catholike people vvith multitude of vvordes and sverere speeches, and finally to ouertrov their soules.

Going out, a marke of heretikes.

28. To the Holy Ghost and to vs.] By this first we note, that it is not such a fault as the Heretikes vvould make it in the sight of the simple, or any incongruities at all, to ioyne God and his creatures. as the principal cause and the secundarie, in one speache, and to attribute that to both, vvwhich though diuersely, yet procedeth of both. God and you, say good people commonly: God and our Ladie, Christ and S. Iohn: We confesse to God and to Peter and Paul. as, God and his Angel, To our Lord and Gedeon, The sword of our Lord and of Gedeon, Our Lord and Moyses, Christ and his Angels. Our Lord and all Saints. ep. ad Philem. S. Paul and our Lord. 1 The. 1, 6. All these speeches being partly Scriptures, partly like vnto the Scriptures speeches, are vvarranted also by this Council, vvwhich saith boldly, & hath giuen the forme thereof to all other Councils lawfully called and confirmed, to say the like, It hath pleased the Holy Ghost and vs. S. Cyprian ep. 54. nu. 2. reporting the like of a Synode holden in Africke, saith, It hath pleased vs by the suggestion of the Holy Ghost.

Secondly we note, that the holy Councils lawfully kept for determination or clearing of doubtes, or condemning of errors and Heresies, or appeasing of Schismes and troubles, or reformation of life, and such like important matters, haue euer the assistance of Gods Spirit, and therefore

Sp. sancto & nobis.

The holy Ghost can not erre in their sentences and deterrminations concerning the same, because the Holy Ghost assistant in all lawful councils, can not erre, from vvhom (as you see here) ioyntly vvvith the Council the resolution procedeth. Thirdly vve learne, that in the holy Councils specially (though othervvise and in other Tribunals of the Church it be also verified) Christs promes is fulfilled, that the Holy Ghost should suggest them and teach them al truth, and that not in the Apostles time only, but to the vvorldes end, and that by Christs promise. 10. 16, 19.

S. Gregories reuerence of General Councils. S. Gregorie therfore reuerencing al fiue alike, it may be marueled vvhen the Heretikes haue their fond difference betvvixt those foure first and other later: attributing much to them, and nothing to the rest. Vvhereas in deede the later can erre no more then the first foure, being holden and approued as they vv ere, and hauing the Holy Ghost as they had. But in those first also vvhen a man findeth any thing against their Heresies (as there be diuers things) then they say plainly that they also may erre, and that the Holy Ghost is not tied to mens voices, nor to the number of sentences: Vvwhich is directly to reprove this first Council also of the Apostles, and Christs promes of the Holy Ghosts assistance to teach al truth. Yea that you may knowv and abhorre these Heretikes throughly, heare ye vvhat a principal Sect-Maister vvith his blasphemous mouth or penne vctereth, saying, that In the very best times such vv as partly the ambition of Bishops, partly their foolishnes and ignorance, that the very blind may easily perceiue, Satan verily to haue bene president of their assemblies. Good Lord deliuer the people and the vvorld from such blasphemous tongues and bookes, and giue men grace to attend to the holy Scriptures and Doctours, that they may see howv much, not only S. Augustine and other fathers attribute to al general Councils specially, (to vv which they referre them selues in al doubtres among them selues and in al their controuersies vvith Heretikes:) but to vv which euen S. Paul him self (so specially taught by God) and others also yielded them selues. Notorious is the saying of S. Augustine concerning S. Cyprian, Vvho being a blessed Catholike Bishop and Martyr, yet erred about the rebaptizing of such as vv ere Chrutened by Heretikes. If he had liued (saith S. Augustine li. 2 de bapt. c. 4.) to haue seen the determination of a plenario Council, vv which he sawv not in his life time, he vvould for his great humilitie and charitie straight vvay haue yielded, and preferred the general Council before his ovvne iudgement and his fellowv Bishops in a Prouincial Council only. Vvhereby also vve learne, that Prouincial Councils may erre, though many times they do not, and being conformable to the general Councils, or confirmed and allowed by them or the See Apoitolike, their resolutions be infallible as the others are.

Provincial Councils. If any here aske, vvhat neede so much disputing, study, and tranail in Councils to find out and deterrmine the truth, if the Holy Ghost infallibly guide them? Vve antvver that such is the ordinarie providence of God in this case, to assist them vvhen they doe their endeavour, and vse all humane meanes of industrie, and nor els. And so (though somvvhat othervvise) God assisted the Euangelistes and other vvriters of the holy Scriptures, that they could not erre in penning the same, but yet they did and ought to vse al possible humane diligence to knowv and learne out the histories and truth of matters, as is plaine in the beginning of S. Lukes Gospel: els the Holy Ghost vvould not haue assisted them. Euen so in this Council of the Apostles, though they had the holy Ghost assistant, yet the text saith, cum magna conquisitio fieret, Vvhen there vv as great disputation, search and examination of the case, then Peter spake &c. If againe it be demanded, vvhat neede is there to expect the Councils deterrmination, if the Popes or See Apoitolikes iudgement be infallible and haue the assistance of God also, as the Catholikes affirme? Vve antvver, that for the same assistance, tholike and peaceable obedient children of the Church it is a comfort to haue such various meanes of determination, trial, and declaration of the truth, and that it is necessarie for the recovery of Heretikes, and for the contentation of the vveake, vvho not alvvayes giuing ouer to one mans determination, yet vvil either yeld to the iudgement of al the learned men and Bishops of al Nations, or els remaine desperate and condemned before God and man for euer. And as I said before, this assistance of the Holy Ghost promised to Peters See, presuppolet humane meanes of searching out the truth, vv which the Pope alvvayes hath vsed, & vvil, & mult vse in matters of great importance, by calling Councils, euen as here you see S. Peter and Paul them selues and al the Apostles, though indued vvith the Holy Ghost, yet thought it notvvithstanding necessarie for further trial & clearing of truth and maintenance of vnitie, to keepe a Council.

Notvvithstanding the Holy Ghosts assistance, yet humane meanes must be vsed to search the truth. Lastly it is to be noted, that as Christ and the Holy Ghost be present by his promes, to al such assemblies as gather in the obedience & vnitie of the Church, vvith full minde to obey vvhatsoeuer shall be determined, vv hereby the assembled though of diuers iudgements before, do most peaceably yeld to truth, and agree in one vviforme determination of the same: so al such as gather out of the Church, without humilitie or intention to yeld one to another, or to any Superior, man or Council, or vvhath els so euer, but challenge to them selues learning, spirit, and vve can not tel vvhath: such, how many meetings so euer they make, being destitute of the Holy Ghost the author of truth and concord, are further of and further out, then euer before: as God hath shewed by the successe of al Heretical Colloquies, Synodes, and Assemblies in Germanie, France, Poole, and other places in our daies. Read a notable place in S. Cyprian, that the promes of Christ, that he vould be in the middes of two or three gathered in his name, pertaineth not to them that assemble out of the Church.

Heretical or Schismatical assemblies.

31. Reioyced upon the consolation.] Straight vpon the intelligence of the Councils determination, not only the Gentils, but euen the Maisters of the former troubles and dissention, vvere at rest, & al tooke great comiort that the controuersie vvas so ended. And so should al Christian men do, vvhether they see the sectes of our time condemned by the like authoritie and most graue iudgement of the holy Council of Trent. Against vvhich the Heretikes of our time make the like iriuolous exceptions and false cauillations, as did the old Hereukes heretofore against those Councils that specially condemned their errors. The Pope and Bishopes (say they) are a partie, and they ought not to be our iudges: they are partial and come vwith preiudicate mindes to condemne vs, and vve accuse them al of Idolatrie and other crimes, and vve vvil be tried by Gods vvord only, and vve vvil expound it according to an other rule, that is to say, as vve list. So say they against this Council, and the like said the Arians against the first Nicene Council, and al such like against those Councils namely that condemned their heresies. And so say al theeues against their correctors and punishers, and vwould both say and do more against temporal tribunals, Iudges, Iustices, and Iuries, if they had as much licence and libertie in those matters, as men haue novv in religion.

Al Heretikes make exceptiōs against the councils that condemne them.

37. Dissension] Such occasions of differences fall out euen among the perfect men often, without any great offence. And this their departing fell out to the great iudgement of Christians. And therefore it is very ridiculously applied to excuse the disagreeing of the Heretikes among them selues in the principal pointes of religion, namely the Sacrament.

CHAP. XVI.

Paul hauing for his part visited the Churches of Syria, Cilicia, and Lycaonia, deliuering vnto them vvhath to keepe the Decrees of the Council: 6 beginneth a new journey, ouer Phrygia, Galatia, Mysia: 8 Yea into Europe also he passeth, admonished by a vision, and commeth into Macedonia, 12 and there he beginneth the Church of the Philippians, vworking miracles, and suffering persecution.

1 AND he came to Derbé and Lystra. And behold, there vvas a certaine disciple there named Timothee, the sonne of a vvidow, vvhose woman that beleued, of a father a Gentile.

2 † To this man the brethren that vvere in Lystra and Iconium, gaue a good testimonie. † Him Paul vwould haue to goe forth vwith him: and

3 taking him he circumcised him because of the Iewes that vvere in those places. For they al knew that his father vvas a Gentile.

4 † And vvhether they passed through the cities, they deliuered vnto them to keepe the decrees that vvere decreed of

5 the Apostles and Auncients which were at Hierusalem. † And the Churches vvere confirmed in faith, and did abound in number daily.

Here againe they take order that the decrees and articles of faith agreed vpon in the Council of Ierusalé, should be executed & obserued, vvhetherby vve see both the great authoritie of Councils, & the diligence that al Prelates ought to haue to see the decrees & Canons of the Coucels put in executiō.

∴ This people had not the Gospel denied vnto them altogether, but for a time: because (as Venerable Bede thinketh) God foresaw they would not beleue, & so should haue been more greuously damned.

∴ Colonia, is such a citie where the most inhabitants are strangers, sent thither from other great cities & States, namely from the Romanes.

∴ Either the Diuel vvas compelled by the vertue of Pauls presence to say truth, or els (as such do often times) he spake truth movv, that they might the more trust him, and he better beguile them at other times.

† And passing through Phrygia and the countrie of Galatia, they vvere ∴ forbidden by the holy Ghost to preach the vword in Asia. † And vwhen they vvere come into Mysia, 7 they attempted to goe into Bithynia: and the Spirit of I E S V S permitted them not.

† And vwhen they had passed through Mysia, they vvent 8 dovvne to Troas: † and a vision by night vvas shewed to 9 Paul: There vvas a certaine man of Macedonia standing and beseeching him, and saying, passe into Macedonia, and helpe vs. † And as soone as he had seen the vision, forth- 10 vvith vve sought to goe into Macedonia, being assured that God had called vs to euangelize to them. † And sailing from 11 Troas, vve came vvith a straight course to Samothracia, and the day folovving to Neapolis: † and from thence to Phi- 12 lippi, vvwhich is the first citie of the part of Macedonia, a ∴ colonia. And vve were in this citie certaine daies, abiding. † And 13 vpon the day of the Sabbath, vve vvent forth vvithout the gate beside a riuer, vvhere it seemed that there vvas praier: & sitting vve spake to the vvomen that vvere assembled. † And 14 a certaine vvoman named Lydia, a seller of purple of the citie of the Thyatirians, one that vvorshipped God, did heare: vvwhose hart our Lord opened to attend to those things vvwhich vvere said of Paul. † And vwhen she vvas baptized, 15 and her house, she besought vs, saying: If you haue iudged me to be faithful to our Lord, enter in vnto my house, and tarie. And she constrained vs. † And it came to passe as 16 vve vvent to praier, a certaine vvenche hauing a Pythonical spirit, mette vs, that brought great gaine to her maisters by diuining. † This same folovving Paul and vs, cried saying, 17 ∴ These men are the seruants of the high God, vvwhich preach vnto you the vvay of saluation. † And this she did many 18 daies. And Paul being sorie, and turning, said to the spirit, I comaund thee in the name of I E S V S C H R I S T to goe out from her. And he vvent out the same houre. † But her mai- 19 sters seeing that the hope of their gaine vvas gone, apprehending Paul and Silas, brought them into the market place to the Princes: † and presenting them to the magistrates, they 20 said, These men trouble our citie, being Ievves: † and they 21 preach a fashon vvwhich it is not lauvful for vs to receiue, nor doe, being Romanes. † And the people ranne against 22 them: and the magistrates tearing their coates, commaunded them

23 them to be beaten vvith roddes. † And vvhen they had laid *many stripes vpon them, they did cast them into prison, commaunding the keeper that he should keepe them dili-24 gently. † Vvho vvhen he had receiued such commaun-dement, cast them into the inner prison, and made their feete 25 fast in the stockes. † And at mid-night, Paul and Silas praying, did praise God. And they that vvere in prison, heard 26 them. † But sodenly there vvvas made a great earthquake, so that the foundations of the prison vvere shaken. And forth-vvith al the doores vvere opened: and the bands of al vvere 27 loosed. † And the keeper of the prison vvaked out of his sleepe, and seeing the doores of the prison opened, drawing out his svord, vvould haue killed him self, supposing that 28 the prisoners had been fled. † But Paul cried vvith a loud voice, saying, Doe thy self no harme, for vve are al here.
 29 † And calling for light, he vvvent in, and trembling fel dovvne
 30 to Paul and Silas at their feete: † and bringing them forth, 31 he said, Maisters, vvhat must I doe that I may be saued? † But they said, :: Beleeue in our Lord IESVS: and thou shalt be sa-32 ued and thy house. † And they preached the vvord of our 33 Lord to him vvith al that vvere in his house. † And he taking them in the same houre of the night, ^c vvashed their vvoundes: and him self vvvas baptized and al his house in-34 continent. † And vvhen he had brought them into his ovvne house, he laid the table for them, and reioyced vvith al 35 his house, belceuing God. † And vvhe day vvvas come, the ma-36 gistrates sent the sergeants, saying, Let those men goe. † And the keeper of the prison told these vvordes to Paul, That the magistrates haue sent that you should be let goe. novv ther-37 fore departing, goe ye in peace. † But Paul said to them: Being vvhipped openly, vncōdemned, men that are Romanes, they haue cast vs into prison: & novv do they send vs out secretly?
 38 Not so, but let them come, & let vs out them selues. † And the sergeants reported these wordes to the magistrates. And they 39 vvere afraid hearing that they vvere Romanes: † and com-ming they besought them, & bringing them forth they desi-40 red them to depart out of the citie. † And going out of the prison, they entred in vnto Lydia: and hauing seen the brethren, they comforted them and departed.

How in other parts of Macedonia he planted the Church, and namely at Thessalonica, where the obstinate Ievves are so malicious, that they pursue him also into Berea. 14 From whence being conducted into Greece, he preacheth at Athens both to the Ievves and Gentiles, disputing with the Philosophers, 19 and in Areopagus, persuading them from their Idols vnto one God and IESVS CHRIST raised from the dead.

AND vwhen they had vwalked through 1 Amphipolis and Apollonia, they came to Thessalonica, vwhere there vvas a syna- 2 gogue of the Ievves. † And Paul according to his custome entred in vnto them, & three Sabboths he discoursed to them out of the Scriptures, † declaring and 3 insinuating that it behoued CHRIST to suffer and to rise againie from the dead: and that this is IESVS CHRIST, vvhom I preach to you. † And certaine of them belecued, 4 and vvere ioyned to Paul and Silas, and of the Gentiles that serued God a great multitude, and noble vvomen not a fevv.

22 Zelantes. This is the zeale of Heretikes, and a liuely paterne of their dealing at this day against Catholike Priests and preachers and the good Iasons that receiue them.

† But the Ievves 22 enuying, & taking vnto them of the rascal sort certaine naughrie men, and making a tumult, stirred the citie: and besetting Iasons house, sought to bring them forth vnto the people. † And not finding them, they drevv Iason 6 and certaine brethren to the princes of the citie, crying, That these are they that stirre vp the vworld, and are come hither, † vvhom Iason hath receiued, and al these doe against the 7 decrees of Cæsar, saying that there is an other king, IESVS.
† And they moued the people, and the princes. of the citie 8 hearing these things. † And taking a satisfaction of Iason 9 and of the rest, they dimissed them. † But the brethren forth- 10 vvith by night sent avvay Paul and Silas vnto Berea.

gogue of the Ievves. † (And these were more noble then they 11 that are at Thessalonica, vvhoe receiued the vvord vvith algreedines, daily searching the scriptures, if these things vvere
so. † And many surely of them belecued, and of honest vvo- 12 in Thessalonica vnderstood, that at Berea also the vvord of:

and troubling the multitude. † And then immediatly the 14 brethren

15 brethren sent avvay Paul, to goe vnto the sea: but Silas and 16 Timothee remained there. † And they that conducted Paul, brought him as farre as Athens, and receiuing commaundement of him to Silas and Timothee, that they should come to him very speedily, they departed.

16 † And vvhhen Paul expected them at Athens, his spirit vvas 17 incensed vwith in him, seeing the citie giuen to Idolatrie. † He disputed therfore in the synagogue vwith the Ievves, & them that serued God, and in the market-place, euery day vwith 18 them that vvere there. † And certaine Philosophers of the Epicures and the Stoikes disputed vwith him, and certaine said, Vvhat is it that this^b vvord-fovver vvould say? But thou bringest in certaine nev^c things to our cares. Vve vvil

CHAP. XVII.

The people may not iudge of the ſenſe of Scriptures. 11. Searching the Scriptures.) The Heretikes vſe this place to proue that the hearers muſt trie and iudge by the Scriptures, vvwhether their teachers and preachers doctrine be true, and ſo reiect that that they find not in the Scriptures. as though here the ſheepe vvere made iudges of their Paſtors, the people of the Priests, and men and vvomen of al ſortes, euen of S. Pauls doctrine it ſelfe. Which vvere the moſt foliſh diſorder in the vvorld. And they did not therfore read the Scriptures of the old Teſtament (for none of the nevv vvere yet extant commonly) to diſpute vvith the Apoſtle, or to trie and iudge of his doctrine, or vvwhether they ſhould belecue him or no: for they vvere bound to belecue him and obey his vvord, vvwhether he alleaged Scripture or no, and vvwhether they could reade or vvnderſtand the Scriptures or no. but it vvvas a great comfort and confirmation for the Ievves that had the Scriptures, to finde euen as S. Paul ſaid, that Chriſt vvvas God, crucified, riſen, and aſcended to heauen: vvwhich by his preaching and expounding they vvnderſtood, and neuer before, though they read them, and heard them read euery Sabbath. As it is a great comfort to a Catholike man, to heare the Scriptures declared & alleaged moſt euidently for the Churches truth againſt Heretikes, in Sermons or othervvviſe. And it doth the Catholikes good & much confirmeth them, to vvew diligently the places alleaged by the Catholike preachers. Yet they muſt not be iudges for al that, ouer their ovvne Paſtors, vvhom Chriſt commaundeth them to heare and obey, and by vvhom they heare the true ſenſe of Scriptures.

The Proteſtants call deuotion, ſuperſtition. 22. Superſtitions.) S. Paul calleth not them ſuperſtitious for adoring the true and only God vvith much deuotion or many ceremonies or in comely preſcribed order, or for doing due reuerence to holy Sacraments, to Saints and their memories, Images, or Monuments: or for keeping the preſcribed lawves, daies, and faſtes of the Church, or for fulfilling vvowes made to God, or for bleſſing vvith the ſigne of the Croſſe, or for capping and kneeling at the name of I E S V S, or for religiously vvſing creatures ſanctified in the ſame name, or any other Chriſtian obſervation, for vvwhich our nevv Maſters cõdemne the Catholike people of Superſtition: them ſelues vvholly voide of that vice by al vvviſe mens iudgement, becauſe they haue in maner taken avvay al religion, and are become Epicureians and Atheiſts: vvho are neuer troubled vvith ſuperſtition, becauſe it is a vice conſiſting in exceſſe of vvworſhip or religion, vvwhereof they are void. but the Apoſtle calleth them ſuperſtitious for vvworſhipping the Idols and goddes of the Heathen, and * for the feare that they had, leſt they ſhould leaue out any God that vvvas vnknown to them: for thus their Altar vvvas inſcribed: Dys Aſia, Europa, & Lybia, Deo ignoto & peregrino. that is, To the gods of Aſia, Europe, and Lybia: to the vnknown and ſtrange God. This ſuperſtition (ſaith S. Auguſtine) is vvholly taken avvay from the Church by Chriſts incarnation, and by the Apoſtles preaching, and by Martyrs holy life and death. Neither doth the Catholike Church allow this or any other kinde of ſuperſtitious obſervation. Only vve muſt take heede that vve belecue not her Aduerſaries definition of ſuperſtition, for they vvould imply therein al true religion.

29. The Diuinitie to be like.) Nothing can be made by manſhand of vvwhat forme or ſort ſo euer, that is like to Gods eſſence, or to the forme or ſhape of his Godhead or Diuinitie. therfore howvvſoever the Heathens did paint or graue their Idols, they vvwere nothing like to God. And this alſo is impertinently alleaged by Heretikes againſt the Churches images: Vvwhich are not made, either to be adored with godly honour, or to be any resemblance of the Diuinitie or any of the three persons in Godhead, but only of Christ as he was in forme of man, vvhich in that respect may be truly expressed, as other men by their portraites: and of the Holy Ghost, nor as he is in him self, but as he appeared in fire tongues or in the similitude of a dooue, or such like. And so to paint or graue any of the three persons as they appeared visibly and corporally, is no more inconuenient or vnlawfull, then it was vndecent for them to appeare in such formes. And therefore to paint or portraite the Father also being the first person, as he hath shewed him self in vision to any of the Prophets of the old or new Testament (namely to Daniel as an old man) or the three Angels representing the three Persons to Abraham, or the one Angel that vvatling with Iacob base our Lords Person, no such thing is any vvhere forbidden, but is very agreable to the peoples instruction. In vvich sort the Angels vvere commonly pourtered (and namely the Cherubins ouer the Propitiatorie) as they be now in the Church, not in their natural forme, but vvith corporal vvings (as the Seraphins appeared to Elay the Prophete) to expresse their qualitie and office of being Gods Angels, that is, Messengers: and God the Father vvith the vvorld in his hand, to signifie his creation and gouernement of the same, and such like: Vvhereof the people being vvell instructed may take much good, and no harme in the vvorld, being novv through their faith in Christ far from al fond imaginaon of the false gods of the Pagans. And therefore S. Gregorie (saith of the Churches Images, That vvich scripture or vvriting doth to the readers, the same doth the picture to the simple that looke thereupon. for in it euen the ignorant see vvhat they ought to follow, in it they do read, that know no letters. Vvhere he calleth it a matter of antiquitie and very conuenient, that in holy places Images vvere painted to the peoples instruction. so they be taught that they may not be adored vvith diuine honour. and he in the same place sharply rebuketh Serenus the Bishop of Maffilia, that of indiscrete zeale he vvould take avay Images, rather then teach the people how to vse them.

34. Dionysius Areopagita) This is that famous Denys that first conuerted France, and vvrote those notable and diuine vvorkes de Ecclesiastica & caelesti hierarchia, de diuinis nominibus, and others, in vvich he confirmeth and proueth plainly almost al things that the Church novv vvieth in the ministracion of the holy Sacraments, and affirmeth that he learned them of the Apostles, giuing also testimonie for the Catholike faith in most things novv controuersed, so plainly, that our Adversaries haue no chift but to deny this Denys to haue been the author of them, seyning that they be an others of later age. Vvich is an old flight of Heretikes, but most proper to these of al others. Vvho seeing al antiquitie against them, are forced to be more bold or rather impudent then others in that point.

How there may be Images or resemblances of the three persons in Trinitie, and of Angels.

Images are for the peoples instruction.

S. Dionysius Areopagita is al for the Catholikes.

CHAP. XVIII.

At Corinth in Achaia, he vvorketh vvith his owne hands, preaching IESVS to be CHRIST, vnto the Iewes vpon their Sabbathes. 6 But they being obstinate and blaspheming, he in plaine termes forsaketh them, and turneth to the Gentils, among vvhom according to a vision that he had to embolden him, he planteth the Church in great numbers, 12 the obstinate Iewes in vaine solliciting the Proconsul against him. 18 From thence at length departing he returneth 19 by Ephesus (vvhere he promisseth the Iewes to returne to them) 22 and so to Antioch in Syria (from vvhence he began his iourney Act. 15) 23 but not resting, by and by he goeth againe to visite the new Churches that he planted Act. 16 in Galatia and Phrygia: 24 Apollo in his absence mightily confounding the Iewes at Ephesus, 27 and aftervvard at Corinth.

1  AFTER these things, departing from Athens, he came to Corinth. † and finding a certaine Iewv, named Aquila, borne in Pontus, vvho of late vvvas come out of Italie, and Priscilla his vvife (because Claudius had commaunded al Iewves to depart from Rome,) he came to them. † And because he vvvas of the same craft, he remained vvith them, and vvrought, (and they vvwere tentmakers by their craft.) † And he disputed in the synagoge euery Sabboth, interposing the name of our Lord I E S V S, and he exhorted the Ievves and the Greekes. † And vvhē Silas and Timothee vvere come 5 from Macedonia, Paul vvas instant in preaching, testifying to the Ievves that I E S V S is C H R I S T. † But they contradi- 6 cting and blaspheming, he shaking his garmērs, said to them, Your blood vpon your ovvne head: I being cleane, from hence forth vvil goe to the Gentiles. † And departing thēce, 7 he entred into the house of a cerraine man, named Titus Iustus, one that serued God, vvwhose house vvas adioyning to the synagoge. † And Crispus the prince of the Synagoge 8 beleued our Lord, vvith al his houte: and many of the Corinthians hearing beleued, and vvere baptized. † And our 9 Lord said in the night by a vision to Paul, Doe not feare, but speake, and hold not thy peace, † for-because I am vvith 10 thee: and no man shall set vpon thee to hurt thee: for I haue much people in this citie: † And he sate there a yere & sixe 11 moneths, teaching among them the vvord of God.

† But Gallio being Proconsul of Achaia, the Ievves vvith 12 one accord rose vp against Paul, and brought him to the iudgement seate, † saying, That this man contrarie to the Lavv 13 perswadeth men to vvorshippe God. † And Paul beginning 14 to open his mouth, Gallio said to the Ievves, If it vvere some vniust thing, or an heinous facte, O you men Ievves, I should by reason beare you. † But if they be questions of vvord & 15 names, and of your lavv, your selues looke vnto it: I vvil not be iudge of these things. † And he droue them from the 16 iudgement seate. † And al apprehēding Sosthenes the prince 17 of the synagoge, strooke him before the iudgement seate: and Gallio cared for none of those things.

† But Paul vvhen he had staid yet many daies, taking his 18 leaue of the brethren, sailed to Syria, (and vvith him Priscilla and Aquila,) vvho had shorne his head in Cenchris. for he had * a vvovv. † And he came vnto Ephesus, and thē he 19 left there. But him self entring into the synagoge, disputed vvith the Ievves. † And vvhen they desired him, that he 20 vvould tarie a longertime, he consented not, † but taking 21 his leaue, and saying, I vvil returne to you againe God vvilling, he departed from Ephesus. † And going dovvn to 22 Cæsarēa, he vvēnt vp, and saluted the Church, and came dovvn to Antioche.

23 † And hauing taried there a certaine time, he departed, vvalking in order through the countrie of Galatia and Phrygia, confirming al the dilciples.

24 † And a certaine Ievv, named Apollo, borne at Alexandria, an eloquent man, came to Ephesus, mighty in the scrip- Apollo.

26 of Iohn. † This man therefore began to deale confidently in the synagogue. Vvhom vwhen Priscilla and Aquila had heard, they tooke him vnto them, and expounded to him the 27 vway of our Lord more diligently. † And vvhereas he vvas desirous to goe to Achaia, the brethren exhorting vvrote to the dilciples to receiue him. Vvho, vwhen he vvas come, pro-

28 fited them much that had beleued. † For he vvith vehemencie conuincd the Ievves openly, shewing by the scriptures, that I E S V S is C H R I S T.

How Paul began the Church of Ephesus, first in 12 that vvore baptized vvith Iohns baptisme, & then preaching three moneths in the Synagogue of the Ievves, vntil for their obstinacie and blaspheming he forsooke them, disputing aftervvard in a certaine schoole for xvij yeres space to the marvelous increase of the Church, specially through his great miracles also, in healing diseases vvith the touch of his clothes, and expelling diuels, 18 vvho yet contemned the Exorcists of the Ievves. 19 How the Christians there confesse their actes, and burne their vnlawful bookes: 21 and how he foretold that after he had been at Hierusalem, he must see Rome. 22 and vvhat a great sedition vvvas raised against him at Ephesus, by them that got their liuing of vvorking to the idolatrous Temple of Diana.

AND it came to passe vwhen Apollo vvas at Corinth, that Paul hauing gone through the higher partes came to Ephesus, and found certaine dilciples: † and he said to them, Haue you receiued the holy Ghost, beleuing? † And at that time there vvas made no litle trouble about 23 the 24 the way of our Lord. † For one named Demetrius, a silversmith, that made silver temples of Diana, procured to the artificers no small gain: † whom calling together and them that were the same kinde of workemen, he said, Sirs, you know that our gain is of this occupation: † and you see, and heare that this same Paul by persuasion hath auerted a great multitude not only of Ephesus, but almost of all Asia, saying, That they are not gods which be made by handes.

27 † And not only vnto vs is this part in danger to be reprov'd, but also the temple of great Diana shall be reputed for nothing, yea & her maiestie shall begin to be destroyed, whom all Asia & the world worshipeth. † Hearing these things, they were replenished with anger, and cried out saying, Great is Diana of the Ephesians. † And the whole citie was filled with confusion, & they ranne violently with one accord into the theatre, catching Gaius and Aristarchus Macedonians, Pauls companions. † And when Paul would have entred in to the people, the disciples did not permit him.

31 † And certaine also of the Princes of Asia that were his frendes, sent vnto him, desiring that he would not adventure him self into the theatre: † and others cried an other thing. For the assemblie was confus'd, & the more part knew not for what cause they were assembled. † And of the multitude they drew forth Alexander, the Iewes thrusting him forward. But Alexander with his hand desiring silence, would have given the people satisfaction. † Whom as soone as they perceiued to be a Iew, there was made one voice of all, almost for the space of two houres crying out, Great is Diana of the Ephesians. † And when the Scribe had appeas'd the multitudes, he saith, Ye men of Ephesus, for what man is there that knoweth not the citie of the Ephesians to be a worshipper of great Diana, & Jupiters childe?

36 † Forasmuch therefore as these things can not be gainsaid, you must be quieted, and doe nothing rashly. † For you have brought these men, being neither sacrilegious, nor blaspheming your Goddess. † But if Demetrius and the artificers that are with him, have matter to say against any man, there are Courtes kept in the common place, & there are Proconsuls, let them accuse one another. † And if you aske any other matter: it may be resolved in a lawfull assemblie. † For we are in danger also to be accused for this daies sedition:

12. Napkins.] The napkins that had touched S. Paules body, vvrought miracles, and it vvas no superstition to attribute that vertue to them vvich God gaue to them in deede: nor to seeke to touch them for health, vvas any dishonour to God, but it much proued Christes religiō to be true, and him to be the only God. vvwhose seruants, yea vvwhose seruants * shades and napkins could do such vvanders, as S. Chrysostome (to. 5. cont. Gentiles, quod Christus sit Deus, in vit. Babyl.) sheweth in a vvhole booke to that purpose, against the Pagans, prouing hereby and by the like vertue of other Saincts and their Reliques, that Christ their Lord and Maister is God. for it is al one concerning the bodies of Saincts, reliques, garments, staues, bookes, or any thing that belonged to them, al vvich may and haue done and yet doe (vvhen it is necessarie to our edification) the like vvonders to Gods great honour: not only in their life time, but after their death much more. for S. Paules napkins had as great force vvhen he vvas dead, as vvhen he liued, and so much more, as his grace and dignitie vvith God is greater then before. Vvhich S. Chrysostom in the place alleaged proueth at large by the scribe of S. Babylas the Martyr: and to thinke the contrarie, is the Heresie of Vigilantius, condemned so long since as S. Hieroms time, and by him refuted abundantly.

Vvhereby vve learne that not only Christes name, vvich is the principal, but his seruants names also inuocated vpon the possessed, haue pouer ouer diuels: vvich is a maruelous honour to Saincts, and nothing diminisheth the glorie of Christ, but exceedingly increaseth the same, not only him self, but his seruants also being able to do such things, and to be stronger then any Diuel in Hel. So vve read in * S. Hierom that many did inuocate the name of S. Hilarion vpon the possessed, and the Diuels straight departed. so did the Diuel know * S. Babylas and other Saincts, euen after they vvere dead, vvhen they could not speake for the presence of their Reliques, and vvhen they vvere tormented and expelled by them: vvhereof al antiquitie is full of testimonies. Having visited the Churches of Macedonia and Achaia (as he purposed Act. 19) and now about to saile from Corinth toward Hierusalem, because of the letters lying in vvait for him, he is constrained to returne into Macedonia. 6 And so as Philippus taking boate, commeth to Troas, vvhere upon the Sunday, vvith a sermon, and a miracle, he greatly confirmeth that Church. 13 Thence comming to Milétum, 17 he sendeth to Ephesus for the Clergie of those partes: to vvhom he maketh a Pastoral sermon, committing vnto their charge the focke begune by him there, and now like to be seen of him no more, considering the troubles that by reuelation he looketh for at Hierusalem.

16. Pentecost.] Though the Apostles might desire to come to the Ievves Festiuities, by reason of the general concourie of people to the same, the better to deale for their saluation and to spread the Gospel of Christ, yet it is like that they novv kept solemnly the Christian Pentecost or vvhitson-tide, for memorie of the Holy Ghost, and that S. Paul vvent to that Feast of the Christians rather then the other of the Ievves. And Ven. Bede saith here, The Apostle maketh hast to keepe the fifteth day, that is, of remission and of the Holy Ghost. For, that the Christians already kept the eight day, that is, the Sunday or our Lordes day, and had altered already the ordinarie Sabboth into the same, it is plaine by the Scriptures (1 Cor. 16. 2. Apoc. 1. 10.) and by antiquitie. Iustin. Mart. Apolog. 2 ad Anton. Pium in fine. And it is as like that they changed the Ievves Pasche and Pentecost as that, specially vvhen it is euident that * these Festiuities be kept by Apostolike tradition, and approved by the vie of al auncient Churches and Councils.

29. Rauening vvoules.] The gouernours of the Church are foretold of the great danger that should fall to the people by vvoules, that is to say, by Heretikes, vvhole cruelty toward the Catholikes is noted by this terme. They be knowve by the forsaking the vnitie of the Church vvhereof they vvwere before, by going out and drawing many disciples after them, and by their peruerie doctrine. Such vvoules came altervvard in deede in diuers ages, Arius, Macedonius, Nestorius, Eutyches, Luther, Caluin, great bloudsucking vvoules, and vvasters of the flocke of Christ.

Rauening vvoules are the Heretikes of al ages.

35. More blessed to giue.] Among many other infinite goodly things and speaches vvwhich Christ spake and be not vvritten in the Gospels, this sentence is one: vvwhich S. Paul heard of some of the Apostles daily conuerfant vvith him, or els learned of Christ him self, or of the Holy Ghost. And it lignifieth, that vvwhereas the vvorld commonly counteth him happie that receiueth any benefite, as almes eicher temporal or spirital, yet in deede he that giueth or bestovveth, is more happie. Vvwhich if the vvorld did vvvel consider, men vvould giue almes faster then they do, if it vvwere but for their ovvne benefite.

The honour of Priesthod.

Also the 65. 69. nu. blessed Apostle vvhen it vvas said to him, Dost thou assaile the high Priest so vvith il vvordes? spake not any thing vvoruliously against the Priest, vvheras he might haue put forth him self stouely against them vvich had had both crucified our Lord, and which had now also lost their God and Christ; Temple and Priesthood, but though in false and spoiled Priests, yet considering the very bare shadow of the name of Priests, he said, I knew not brethren that he was high Priest. By which wordes of the Apostle, either it may be thought he knew not in deed that he was in that function, because he had not bene of long time in those partes: or els that he so said in respect of the abrogation of the high Priesthood of the Ievves, vvhich by he knew this man not to be truly any Priest, as also because at this time they came not orderly to it by succession of Aaron and Lavv of Moyse, but by the Roman Emperours favour, * as is said before, though (as it is lawfull in such a case) the lesse to irritate them, he frameth his speach so as they might not take occasion of further accusation against him.

8. The Sadducees.] This was the worst Heresie among the Ievves, denying that there be any Angels, or spirits, the Resurre&io also of the bodies: & consequently (as it may very well be gathered by the booke of the Machabees) they denied prayer for the dead. for to offer or pray for the dead, & to thinke rightly & religiously of the Resurre&io, are made there sequels one of another. Of this sect of Sadducees was (as Eusebius writeth li. 2. c. 22. Ec. hist.) this Ananias the High Priest, that caused Paul to be smitten. for their Priesthood had now no more the protection of God to preserve it in truth and right iudgement, the Christian Priesthood being then established.

The Sadducees (as it seemeth) denied prayer for the dead.

12. Vovved them selves.] Such vovves, othes, or execrations as this, binde no man before God, yea they must in no wise be observed. It is a great offence either to vovv voluntarily, or to take any such thing vpon a man, for feare or by commaundement. For example, if thou haue rashly by promise, vovv, or othe, appointed to be reuenged vpon any man, thou bindest not thy self thereby, neither must thou keepe thy promises. If thou be put to an othe to accuse Catholikes for serving God as they ought to do, or to vtter any innocent man to Gods enemies and his, thou oughtest first to refuse such vnlawfull othes: but if thou haue not constancie and courage so to do, yet know thou that such othes binde not at all in conscience and Lavv of God, but may and must be broken vnder paine of damnation. For to make or take such vovves or othes, is one sinne, and to keepe them, is an other far greater. as vvhich Herode, to keepe his othe, killed Iohn Baptist. And such vovves and othes to God as these, are vnlawfull & must be broken: and not the vovves of Chastitie and Religion, as our new Ministers teach by their wordes and vworkes.

Vnlawfull othes & vovves must not be kept.

 the cheefe priests, & principal men of the Iewes went vnto him against Paul: and against him, that he would commaund him to be brought to Hierusalem, laying that Paul is in Cæsarea: and that he would very shortly goe 5 thither. † They therefore, saith he, that are of abilitie among you, going downe with me, if there be any crime in the man, let them accuse him.

6 † And hauing taried among them not about eight or ten daies, he went downe to Cæsarea, and the next day he sat in the iudgement seate: and he commaunded Paul to be 7 brought. † Vwho being brought, there stode about him the Iewes that were come downe from Hierusalem, ob-iecting many and greuous causes which they could not 8 proue, † Paul making answer, That neither against the law of the Iewes, nor against the temple, nor against Cæsar haue 9 I any thing offended. † But Festus willing to shew the Iewes a pleasure, answering Paul, said, Vvilt thou goe vp to Hierusalem, and there be iudged of these things before me?

they taried there a good many daies, Festus signified to the vvhich I thought il of: † but certaine questions of their 19

vwith vs, you see this man, concerning vvhom al the multi- 24 tude of the Ievves called vpon me at Hierusalem, requesting and crying out that he ought not to liue any longer. † Yet haue I found nothing that he hath committed vworthie of 25

I haue determined to send him. † Of vvhom vvhhat to vwrite 26

It is the part of al faithful men to referre ſuch things to God, vvhen any iuſt occaſion is giuen therevnto, rather then to nature: though the incredulous doe alvvayes contrarie, for feare of ſuperſtition & diſhonouring God. 21. Concerning

23. Concerning this sect.] The Heretikes of al sortes comfort them selues much, vwhen they finde here or els vvhether the Christian faith called of the Ievves or incredulous persons, a Sect or an Heresie, & sometimes in contempt of Christes person the Maister of the same, the Secte of the Nazarenes: as though the Church of God might as vvel erre in naming their doctrine Heresie, as the Sect is vvel giuen to al Heretikes, though the Protestants doctrine vvere as vvel proued and tried to be no Heresie, by the Prophets and other Scriptures, miracles, and consent of al Nations and ages, as Christes bleisfed doctrine is. Christian religion vvhich is in deed the Protestants doctrine is evidently conuincid to be heretical, by the same argu- gion at the first And vvhosoeuer can deduce the Christian faith from Adam to this day, through our al the Fathers, Patriarches, Prophetes, Priests, Apostles, and Bishops, by descent and succession of al lawes and states of true vvorshippers and beleuers (vvhich is the only or special vvay to proue that the Christian faith is no heresie) he shal by the same meanes al at once proue the Protestants doctrine to be an heresie and a false secte. That the Ievves therefore and il men in al places contradicted the Christian religion, calling it an Heresie or a Sect, as though it had a beginning of some certaine Secte-Maister other then God him self, they were deceiued: and the Church of God neuerthelesse calling the Protestants doctrine Heresie in the vvorst part that can be, and in the vvorst sort that cuer vvas, doth right and most iustly.

THE SUMME OF THE ACTES OF THE APOSTLES, CONTEINING

SPECIALLY THE GESTES OF THE TWO PRINCIPAL Apostles, SS. Peter and Paul, in such order of time and yeres of the Emperours, and from Christs Nativite, and Ascension, as they were done: so far as by holy Scriptures or Ecclesiastical writers may be gathered. Wherein though it be not possible to set downe the precise and vndoubted time or yere of every thing, because neither S. Luke nor others do nose particularly and orderly the moments of every action of the said Apostles: yet we followe the most probable and plaine plas that we finde in holy Scripture and auncient writers. Whereby the studious reader may easily discover the folly of the Protestants, that can finde no time When * Peter might possibly come to Rome, be Bishop, and die there: divers things in S. Pauls actes being no lesse hard to reconcile to the course of S. Lukes narration, then any thing touching the historie of S. THE

THE ARGUMENT OF THE EPISTLES IN GENERAL.

AFTER the Gospels, which is a storie of Christ himselfe, and after the Actes of the Apostles, which is a storie of Christes Church: now follow the Epistles of the Apostles, which they wrote of such matters, as they had then occasion to write of. For being the founders and the Doctōrs of the Church, they did in their time, as the Doctōrs that succeeded them, did after them: who from the beginning vnto this day, haue written Epistles & Bookes against heresies, euer as they arose, and of al other Ecclesiastical matters, as they had occasion ministred vnto them. Of which their doing, the Apostles first gaue here the ensample: as also S. Luke in the Actes of the Apostles, led the way to al the writers of the Ecclesiastical Historie after him. For al though there be no comparison betwene them for authoritic, forasmuch as these are Canonical Scripture, and so are not any writings of their successors: yet the occasions and matters (as I haue said) are like.

Most of these Epistles are S. Pauls Epistles: the rest are called * Catholice Euseb. li 2. Eccl. hist. c. 22. Epistolæ, the Epistles Catholike. For S. Paul writeth not any Epistle to al (howbeit every one of them is for al the Church:) but some to particular Churches of the Gentils, as to the Romanes, to the Corinthians, to the Galatians, to the Ephesians, to the Philippians, to the Colosians, to the Thessalonians: some to particular persons, as to Timothee, to Tite (who were Bishops among the Gentiles, to wit, of Ephesus, and of Crete) and to Philemon, and then one to the Hebrewes, who were the Iewes of Hierusalem and Iurie. But the Epistles of the other Apostles, that is, of S. James, S. Peter, S. Iohn, and S. Iude, are not so intuled to any one Church or person (except S. Iohns two later short Epistles, which yet might not be separated from his first, because they were al of one Author) and therefore they are termed Catholike, that is, vniuersal. For so writeth S. James: To the twelue tribes that are in dispersion, greeting. and S. Peter in his first Epistle, thus: To the elect strāgers of the dispersion of Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, & Bithynia. in his second, thus: To them that haue obtained equal faith with vs. likewise S. Iude: To them that are in God the father beloved, and in Iesus Christ preserued, and called. S. Iohns first is without title.

Now, for the occasions of their writing, whereby we shal perceiue the matters or arguments that they handle: it must be remembered (as the Storie of that time in the Actes of the Apostles doth at large declare) that the Church then beginning, was planted by the Apostles not onely in the Iewes, but also in the Gentiles: yea and specially in the Gentiles. Which thing offended the Iewes many waies. For, they could not abide to see, so much as their owne Countrey to receiue him for CHRIST, whom they had reiected and crucified: much lesse, to see, them preach him to the Gentiles also. that offended euen those Iewes also, that beleueed him to be Christ. Howbeit such of them as were Catholikes, and therefore not obstinat, were satisfied when they understood by the Apostles that it was Gods pleasure, as Act. 11. we reade. But others of them became heretikes, & preached to the Christian Gentiles, that it was necessary for them to receiue also the Iewes religion. Of such we reade Act. 15. Vnles you be circumcised, you can not be saued. And as these did so preach against the truth, so did the vnchristened Iewes not onely themselves persecute, but also stirre vp the Idolatrous Gentiles euery where to persecute the Christians: by such obstinacie prouoking God to reprobate their Nation: which yet they thought vnpossible to be done, because they were the seede of Abraham, and were circumcised, and had receiued the Law by Moyses. for such carnal respects they trusted in themselves, as though God and Christ were vnseparably bound vnto them: attributing also so much to their owne workes, (which they thought they did of themselves, being holpe with the know ledge of their Law,) that they would not acknowledge the death of Christ to be necessarie for their saluation: but looked for such a Christ, as should be like other princes of this world, and make them great men temporally.

Herevpon did S. Paul write his Epistles, to shew both the vocation of the Gentiles, and the reprobation of the Iewes. Moreover, to admonish both the Christian Gentiles, not to receiue Circumcision and other ceremonies of Moyses Law, in no wise: and the Iewes also, not to put their trust in the same, but rather to understand, that now, Christ being come, they must cease. Againe, to shew the necessitie of Christs coming and of his death: that without it, neither the Gentiles could be saued: no nor the Iewes, by no workes that they could doe of themselves, although they were also holpen by the Law, telling them what was good & what was bad: for so much as all were sinners, and therefore also impotent or infirme: and the Law could not take away sinne, and infirmitie, and giue strength to fulfil that which it gaue know ledge of. but this was God onely able to doe, and for Christs sake onely would he doe it. Therefore it is necessarie for all to beleue in Christ, and to be made his members, being incorporat into his Body which is his Catholike Church. For so (although they neuer yet did good worke, but all ill) they shall haue remission of their sinnes, and new strength withal, to make them able to fulfil the commaundments of Gods Law. yea & their workes after this shall be so gracious in Gods sight, that for them he will giue them life euerlasting. This is the necessitie, this is also the fruite of Christian Religion. And therefore he exhorteth all, both Gentils and Iewes, as to receiue it humbly, so also to perseuere in it constantly vnto the end, against all seduction of heresie, and against all terror of persecution: and to walke at their time in good workes, as now God hath made them able to doe.

The doctrine of the Cath.
Church concerning good workes.

The same doctrine doth the Catholike Church teach vnto this day most exactly: to wit, that no workes of the vnbeleeuing or vn timerized, whether they be Iewes or Gentiles, can saue them: no nor of any Heretike, or Schismatike, although he be baptizd, because he is not a member of Christ: yea more then that, no worke of any that is not a liuely member of Christ, although other wise he be baptizd, and continue within his Church, yet because he is not in grace but in mortal sinne, no worke that he doth, is meritorious or able to saue him.

S. Pauls doctrine concerning faith and good workes.

This very same is S. Pauls doctrine: he denieth to the workes of such as haue not the Spirit of Christ, all vertue to iustifie or to serue: neither requireth he a man to haue had know ledge of the Law, or to haue kept it a fortune, as though other wise he might not be saued by Christ: but yet when he is christened, he requireth of necessitie, that he keepe Gods commaundments, by auoiding of all sinne, and doing good workes: and to such a mans good workes be attributeth as much vertue as any any Catholike of this time.

Neuerthelesse there were certaine at that time (as also al the Heretikes of this our time) whom S. Peter termeth vnlearned and vnstable, who reading S. Pauls Epistles, did misconster his meaning, as though he required not good workes no more after Baptisme, then before Baptisme: but held that onely Faith did iustifie and saue a man. Therevpon the other Apostles wrote their Epistles, as S. Augustine noteth in these wordes: Therefore because this opinion (Ad salutem obrinendam sufficere solam fidem, that onely faith is sufficient to obtaine saluation) was then risen: the other Apostolical Epistles, of Peter, Iohn, Iames, Iude, do against it specially direct their intention: to auouch vehemently, fidem sine operibus nihil prodesse, that faith without workes profiteth nothing. As also Paul him selfe did not define it to be quantilibet fidem, qua in Deum creditur, whatsoeuer maner of faith, wherewith we belecue in God, but that holcsome & expresse Euangelical faith, whose workes procede from loue, and the faith (quoth he) that worketh by loue. wherupon that faith, which some thinke to be sufficient to saluation, he so affirmeth to profite nothing, that he saith, If I should haue al faith so that I could remoue mountaines, and haue not charitie, I am nothing.

He therefore that will not erre in this point, nor in any other, reading either S. Pauls Epistles, or the rest of the holy Scriptures, must stick fast to the doctrine of the Catholike Church, which Church S. Paul termeth the pillar and ground of the truth: assuring him selfe that if any thing there found to him as contrarie herunto, he faileth of the right sense: and bearing awaies in his minde the admonition of S. Peter, saying: As also our most deere brother Paul according to the wisdom giuen to him, hath written to you: as also in al his Epistles, speaking in them of these things, in the which are certaine things hard to vnderstand, which the vnlearned and vnstable depraue; as also the rest of the Scriptures, to their ovvne perdition. You therefore brethren, foreknowing, take heede lest ye be led amis by the error of the vnnwise, and fall avvay from your ovvne stedfastnes.

THE TIME VVHEN THE EPISTLE TO THE ROMANES VVAS VVRITTEN, and the Argument thereof.

THE historie of S. Paul, vntil he came to Rome, S. Luke in the Actes of the Apostles wrote exactly: and though without any mention of his Epistles, yet certaine it is, that some of them he wrote before he came there, to wit, the two vnto the Corinthians, and this to the Romanes: & (* as it seemeth) before them al, the Epistle to the Galatians. Wherein yet because he maketh mention of the fourteenth yere after his conuersion, it appeareth, that he preached so long without any writing.

And this order may thus briefly be gathered. First he preached to the Galatians Act. 16: and passing through Phrygia and the countrey of Galatia. Whereof he maketh mention him selfe also; Gal. 1: Vve euangelized to you. and Gal. 4: I euangelized to you heretofore. After which the false Apostles came and persuaded them to receiue Circumcision. Wherevpon he saith Act. 15: I marvel that thus so soone you are transferred from him that called you to the grace of Christ, vnto an other Gospel. and wisheth therefore

Bbb 4 Gal. 4:

Gal. 4. saying: And I wvould I wvere wvith you now. And accordingly he came vnto them afterwvard, as vve reade Act. 18. Vvalking in order through the countrie of Galatia and phrygia, confirming al the Disciples. At vvhich time also it seemeth, that he tooke order wvith them about those contributions to helpe the neede of the Christians in Hierusalem, vvhreof he speaketh 1. Cor. 16: And concerning the collections that are made for the faints, as I haue ordined to the Churches of Galatia, so doe you also. By vvhich vvordes also it is eident, that the Corinthians had not as then made their gathering. But vvhhen he vvrote the Second to them (vvhre in the 11 chapter he maketh mention of 14 yeres, not onely after his Conuersion, as to the Galatians, but also after his Rapte, vvhich seemeth to haue bene vvhhen he vvvas at Hierusalem Act. 9. foure yeres after his Conuersion, in a traunce, as he calleth it Act. 22, 17) then vvvere they readie. For so he saith 2. Cor. 8: You haue begone from the yere past. and 2. Cor. 9: For the vvvhich I doe glorie of you to the Macedonians: that also Achaia is ready from the yere past. howbeit it solovveth there: But I haue sent the brcthren, that (as I haue said) you may be ready: lest vvhhen the Macedonians come vvwith me, and find you vnready, vve be ashamed. But vvhhen he vvrote to the Romanes, then vvvas he now come to Corinth for the purpose, and had receiued theire contribution, and vvvas readie to goe vvwith it vnto Hierusalem. For so he saith Rom. 15. Nowv therefore I vvil goe vnto Hierusalem to minister to the faints. For Macedonia and Achaia haue liked vvvel to make some cōtribution vpō the poore faints that are in Hierusalem.

The vvorkes of the Lawv.

So then, the Epistle to the Romanes vvvas not the first that he vvrote. But yet it is * and alvvvayes vvvas set first, because of the primacie of that Church, for vvhich cause also he handleth in it, such matters as pertained not to them alone, but to the vniuersal Church, and specially to al the Gentiles: to vvvit, the very frame (as it vvvere) of the Church of Christ. Tanquam enim^a pro ipso Domino legatione fungens, hoc est, pro b lapide angulari, vtrumque populum tam ex Iudais quam ex Gentibus connectit in Christo per vinculum gratia. so saith S. Augustine, giuing vs briefly the argument. in english thus: As being a legate for our Lord him self, that is, for the corner stone, he knitteth together in Christ by the bād of Grace, both peoples, as vvvel of the Ievves as of the Gentils. shewing, that neither of them had in their Gentilitie or Iudaisme any vvworkes to bragge of, or to chalenge to them selues iustificatiō or saluation thereby, but rather sinnes they had to be forse for, and to humble them selues to the faith of Christ, that so they might haue remission of them, and strength to doe meritorius vvworkes afterwvard. In vvhich sort, because the Gentils did humble them selues, therefore had they found mercy, though they neuer vvvisit of the Lawv of Moyses. But the Ievves, because they stooode vpon their ovvne vvworkes, vvhich they did by their ovvne strength, vvwith the knowvledge of the Lawv (being therefore also called the vvworkes of the Lawv,) so vvould not humble them selues to beleue in Christ crucified, they missed of mercy, and became reprobate, excepting a few Reliquæ that God of his goodnes had reserved to him self. Howbeit in the end, vvhhen the fulnes of the Gentils is come into the Church, then shal the fulnes of the Ievves also open their eyes, acknowledge their errour, and submit them selues to Christ and his Church, in like maner. In the meane time, those that haue found the grace to be Christians, be exhorted to perseuerāce (as it vvvas specially needeful in those times of persecutions) and to leade their vvwhole life now after Baptisme in good vvworkes: and to be careful of vniite, bearing therefore one vvwith an other, both Iew and Gentil, al that they may, may, and geuing no offence to them that are weak. Thus he dispuseth, and thus abhorreth through the whole Epistle: though, if we wil diuide it by that which is principall in ecb parte, we may say, that vnto the 12 chapter is his disputation:

 and from thence to the end, his exhortation.

Now, in these points of faith, and in al others (as also in example of life) the comaendation that he giueth to the Church of Rome, is much to be noted. Your faith is renoued in the vvhole vworld. and your obediēce is published into euery place. I reioyce therefore in you. Rom. 1.
 And againe: you haue obediēd from the hart vnto that forme of doctrine, vvhich hath been deliuered to you. Rom. 16.
 And therevpon againe: I desire you brethren, to marke them that make dissensions and scandals contrarie to the doctrine vvhich you haue learned, and auoide them. For such doe not serue Christ our Lord, but their owne belly: and by svete speeches ad benedictions seduce the harts of innocents. Rom. 6.
 Therefore to shunne Luther and Caluin, and al their crewes, we haue iust reason and good vvarrant. They make dissensions and scandals against the doctrine of the Romane Church. Let no man therefore be seduced by their sugred vvordes. Rom. 16.

THE EPISTLE OF PAVL THE APOSTLE TO THE ROMANES.

CHAP. I.

The foundation of his Apostleship being laid, & he highly commendeth the Romanes, and protesteth his affection towards them. and so coming to the matter, saith, our Christian Catholike doctrine (that teacheth al to beleue) to be the vray way to saluation: is because the Gentiles (first of al) could not be saued by their Philosophie, vwhereby they knew God, for so much as they did not serue him, but Idols: he therefore iustly permitting them to fall into al kind of most damnable sinne.

ANNOTATIONS
CHAP. I.

- Apostolical salutation or blessing. 7. Grace to you and peace.] It is a kind of blessing rather than a prophane salutation, proper to the Apostles, of greater vertue then the benedictions of the fathers in the old Testament. The holy fathers of the Church seemed to abstaine from it for their reuerence to the Apostles. * The Manichees (August. cont. ep. funda. c. 5. 6.) and other Heretikes (as also theie of our time) because they would be counted Apostles, often vse it. Epiph. ha. ref. 66.
- The same vsed of heretikes. 8. Your faith renowned.] The holy Doctours vpon these vvordes of the Apostle, and specially by our Maiiters promis * made to Peter, that his faith should not faile, giue great testimonie for the prouidence of God in the preferuation of the Romane faith. S. Cyprian thus: ep. 55. nu. 6. They are so bold to cary letters from prophane Schismatikes to the chaire of Peter and the principal Church vvhen Priestly vnitie rose: not considering the Romanes to be them vvho'se faith (the Apostle being the commender) was praised, to vvhom misbeleefe can not haue acesse. So S. Hierom Apolog. adu. Ruff. li. 3 c. 4. to. 2. Knowv you, that the Romane faith commended by the Apostles mouth, vvii receive no such deceites, nor can be possibly changed, though an Angel taught othervvise, being sensed by S. Pauls authoritie. Againe ep. 63 ad Pammach. & Oceanum. c. 4. to. 2. Whatsoeuer thou be that avouchest newv sectes, I pray thee haue respect to the Romane eares, spare the faith vvich was praised by the Apostles voice. And in an other place: vvill ye knowv o Paula and Eustochium, howv the Apostle hath noted euery prouince vvith their proprietie? the faith of the people of Rome is praised. Where is there so great concourse to Churches and Martyrs sepulchres? Where foundest thou Amen like thunder from heauen, or vvhere are the temples (void of Idols) so shaken as there? Not that the Romanes haue an other faith then the rest of the Christian Churches, but that there is in them more deuotion and simplicitie of faith. In an other place the same holy Doctour signifieth that it is al one to say, the Romane faith, and, the Catholike. Apolog. adu. Ruff. c. 1. So doth S. Cyprian ep. 52. num. 1. ad Antonianum: and S. Ambrose de obitu fratru, in med. Vvherevpon, this vvord, Romane, is added to, Catholike, in many countries vvhere Sectes do abound, for the better distinction of true beleeuers from Heretikes: vvich in al ages did hate and abhorre the Romane faith and Church, as al malefactours do their Iudges and correctors.
- The Romane faith highly commended. 9. Serue in spirit.] Diuerse Heretikes vvhen they heare that God is a spirit, and must be serued and adored in spirit, imagine, that he must be honoured only inwardly, vvithout ceremonies and external vvorkes: vvich you see is othervvise, for that the Apostle serued God in spirit, by preaching the Gospel. To serue God then in spirit, is to serue him vvith faith, hope, and charitie, and vvith al vvorkes proceeding of them: as to serue him carnally, is, vvith vvorkes external, vvithout the said internal vertues.
- It can not faile, nor be corrupted. 9. A memorie of you.] A great example of charitie for al men, specially for Prelates and Pastors, not only to preach, but to pray continually for the conuersion of people to Christes faith: Vvch the Apostle did for them vvhom he neuer knevv, in respect of Gods honour only and the zeale of soules.
- The Romane statiōs, a token of greater faith and deuotion. 15. To euangelize.] The Gospel is not only the life of our Sauour vvritten by the foure Euangelistes, nor only that vvch is vvritten in the newv Testamēt: but their vvhole course of preaching and teaching the faith. Vvch faith cometh ordinarily of preaching and hearing, and not of vvriting or reading. And therefore S. Paul thought not him self discharged by vvriting to the Romanes, but his desire vvvas to preach vnto them: for that vvvas the proper commission giuen to the Apostles
- Proom. li. 2. Com. in ep. ad Gal.*

Mat. 28. Apostles, *to preach to al nations. The vvriting of the bookes of the Testament, is an other part The Apostles of Gods providence, necessary for the Church in general; but not necessarie for euery man in parti- vvriting, and cular: as to be taught and preached vnto, is for euery one of age and vnderstanding. And therefore preaching, S. Peter (vvhich vvas the cheefe of the Commission) vvrote litle: many of them vvrote nothing at vvhether more al: and S. Paul that vvrote most, vvrote but litle in comparison of his preaching: nor to any but necessarie, and such as vvere conuerted to the faith by preaching before. how.

17. Liueh by faith.] In the 10. to the Hebrewes, he sheweth by this place of the Prophete (Abacuc 2) that the iust though he liue here in peregrination, and seeth not presently nor enioyeth the life euerlasting promised to him, yet holdeth fast the hope thereof by faith. In this place he applieth the Prophetes vvordes further to this sence, That it is our faith, that is to say, the Catholike beieefe (faith S. Augustine li. 1. cont. 2 ep. Pelag.) Which maketh a iust man, and distinguisheth betwene the iust and vniust, and that by the lavv of faith, and not by the lavv of vvorkes. Vvhence it riseth, that the Iew, the Heathen Philosopher, and the Heretike, though they excelled in al vvorkes of moral vertues, could not yet be iust: and a Catholike Christian man liuing but an ordinarie honest life, either not sinning greatly, or supplying his faults by penance, is iust. And this difference riseth by faith. not that faith can saue any man vvithout vvorkes, For it is not a reprobate faith that we speake of, (as the holy Doctour saith) but that vvich vvorketh by charitie, and therefore remitteth sinnes and maketh one iust. See S. Augustines place.

18. Is revealed.] By al the passage folowving you may see, that the Gospel and Christs lavv consisteth not only in preaching faith, (though that be the ground, and is first alwaies to be done:) but to teach vertuous life and good vvorkes, and to denounce damnation to al them that commit dealdy sinnes and repent not. And againe vve see that not only lacke of faith is a sinne, but al other actes done against Gods commandements. Not only faith.

20. Has deliuered them vp.] As he saith here, God deliuered them vp, so to the Ephesians (c. 4. 19) he saith of the same persons and things, They deliuered them selues vp to al vncleanness. So that it is not meant here that God doth driue, force, or cause any man to sinne, as diuers blasphemous heretikes do hold: but only that by his iust iudgement, for their ovvne deseruing, and for due punishment of their former greuous offenses, he vvithholdeth his grace from them, and so suffereth them to fall further into other sinnes. As, for their crime of Idolatrie, to suffer them to fall into vnatural abominations: as now for heresie, he taketh his grace and mercie from many, and so they fall headlong into al kind of turpitude. as contrarievvise, for il life, he suffereth many to fall into heresie. And for Christes sake let euery one that is entangled vvith the idolatrie of this time, that is to say, vvith these nevv sectes, looke vvell into his ovvneconscience, vvhether his forsaking the true God, may not come vnto him for a punishment of his former or present il life vvich he liueh. God is not the author of sinne. God punisheth sinne by permitting men to fall further and further.

22. Worthy of death.] Here you see vvhy the Church taketh some sinnes to be deadly, and calleth them mortal: to vvith, because al th^{at} doe them, are vvorthy of damnation: others be venial, that is to say, pardonable of their ovvne nature and not vvorthy of damnation. Sinnes mortal and venial.

CHAP. II.

Now also he sheweth that neither the Iewes could be saved by the knowledge of the Lavv, of the vvich they did so much bragge against the Gentils, seeing they did nor vvithstanding sinne as the Gentils did. 14. And therefore that the true Iew is the Christian (though he be a Gentil) vvho by grace in hu k art doeth the good vvorkes that the Lavv commaundeth.

ANNOTATIONS
 CHAP. II.

1. Thou that iudgest.) Such as by publike authoritie either spiritual or temporal haue to punish offenders, be not forbidden to iudge or condemne any for their offences, though them selues be sometimes guilty in their conscience of the same or greater: yet may it be matter of aggrauating sinnes before God, vvhhen they vvill not repent of those offences them selues, for the vvhich they punish others. but if they be open offenders them selues, in the same sort for vvhich they iudge other, they giue scandal, and thereby aggrauate their sinnes very much. Proprely here he forbiddeth to charge an other falsly or truly vvvith these crimes vvhereof him self is as farre guilty or more then the other, as the Ievves specially did the Gentils, to vvhom he speaketh here.

Iudging other men.

4. Doest thou contemne?) This proueth that God offereth his grace and mercie to many, and by long patience and sufferance expecteth their repētaunce, differing their punishment of purpose that they may amend, and that he is not delighted in their perdition, nor is the cause of their sinne: but contrariwise that they harden their ovvne hartes, and of their ovvne free vvill reiect his grace and contemne his benignitie.

Gods long suffering is for our repentance.

6. According to his vvorkes.) Though the holy Apostles special purpose be in this Epistle, to commend vnto the Gentiles that trusted so much in their moral vvorkes, the faith in Christ: yet left any man should thinke or gather vntruely of his vvordes, that Christian mens vvorkes vvare not meritorious or the cause of Saluation, he expressly vvriteth, that God giueth as vvell euerlasting life and glorie to men, for and according to their good vvorkes, as he giueth damnation for the contrarie vvorkes. And hovv so euer Hereukes fondly flee from the euidence of these places, yet

S. Augustine saith, Life euerlasting to be rendered for good vvorkes according to this manifest Scripture, God shall render to every man according to his vvorkes.
 13. Not the hearers.) This same sentence agreable also to Christes vvordes (Mat. 7. 21) is the very ground of S. Iames disputation, that not faith alone, but good vvorkes also do iustifie. Therefore S. Paul (hovvfoeuer some perversly conter his vvordes in other places) meaneth the same that S. Iames. And here * he speaketh not properly of the first iustification, vvhhen an Infidel or il man is made iust, vvho had no acceptable vvorkes before to be iustified by (of vvhich kind he specially meaneth in other places of this Epistle) but he speaketh of the second iustification or increase of former iustice, vvhich he that is in Gods grace, daily procedeth in, by doing al kind of good vvorkes, vvhich be iustices, and for doing of vvhich, he is iust in deede before God. and of this kinde doth S. Iames namely treat. Vvhich is directly against the Heretikes of this time, vvho not only attribute nothing to the vvorkes done in sinne and infidelitie, but esteeme nothing at al of al Christian mens vvorkes toward iustification and saluation, condemning them as vnclene, sintul, hypocritical, Pharisaiical: vvhich is directly against these & other Scripture, and plaine blaspheming of Christ and his grace, by vvhole spirit and cooperation vve doe them.

13. Shall be iustified.) Of al other Articles deceitfully handled by Heretikes, they vse most guile in this of iustification: and specially by the equiuocation of certaine vvordes, vvhich is proper to al contentious vvranglers, and namely in this vvord, Iustifie, Vvhich because they finde sometime to signifie the acquiting of a guilty man of some crime vvhereof he is in deede guilty, & for vvhich he ought to be condemned, (as by mans iudgement either of ignorance or of purpose often a very malefactor is deemed or declared and pronounced innocent) they falsly make it to signifie in this place and the like, vvherefoeuer man is said to be iustified of God for his vvorkes or othervvise: as though it vvare said, that God iustifieth man, that is to say, imputeth to him the iustice of Christ,

though, he be not in deede iust: or of fauour reputeth him as iust, vwhen in deede he is vicked, impious, and vniust. Vvhich is a most blasphemous doctrine against God, making him either ignorant vvhoh is iust, and so to erre in his iudgement, or not good, that can loue and saue him vvhom he knoweth to be euil. And a maruelous pitieful blindnes it is in the Churches Aduerfaries, that they should thinke it more to Gods glorie, and more to the commendation of Christes iustice, merites, and mercie, to call and count an il man so continuing, for iust: then by his grace and mercie to make him of an il one, iust in deede, and so truely to iustifie him, or as the vvard doth here signifie, to esteeme and approue for iust in deede, him, that by his grace keepeth his lavv and commaundements. For, that the keepers or doers of the commaundements be iust and so reputed, it is plaine by the correspondance to the former vvordes, Not the hearers are iust, but the doers. Vvherevpon S. Augustine de Sp. & lit. c. 26. to. 3. hath these vvordes, When it is said, The doers of the Lavv shalbe iustified, vvhath other thing is said, then, The iust shalbe iustified: for the doers of the Lavv verily are iust.

True iustice
both in Ievv and Gentile, is by keeping the Lavv.

26. Keepe the iustices.) If a Gentil either novv since Christ, by his grace and faith, or any other before Christ, not of the stocke of Abraham, through the Spirit of God keepe the iustices of the Lavv, he is iust no lesse then if he had been outvvardly circumcised, and shal condemne the circumcised Ievv not keeping the Lavv, vvithout vvvhich, his outvvard Sacrament can not serue him, but shal be much to his condemnation, that hauing the Lavv and peculiar Sacraments of God, he did not keepe the Lavv, nor invvardly exercise that in his hart vvvhich the outvvard signe did import. And al this is no more but to insinuate that true iustice is not in faith only or knowlledge of the Lavv, or in the name either of Ievv or Christian, but in doing good vvorkes and keeping the Lavv by Gods grace.

The letter, and the spirit.
The carnal, and spiritual Ievve.

29. In spirit, not letter.] The outvvard ceremonies, Sacraments, threatens, and commaundements of God in the Lavv, are called the letter: the invvard vvorking of God in mens hart, and enduing him vvith faith, hope, and charitie, and vvith loue, liking, vvill, and abilitie to keepe his commaundements by the grace and merites of Christ, are called the spirit. In vvvhich sense, the carnal Ievv vvas a Ievv according to the letter, and he vvas circumcised after the letter: but the true beleeuing Gentil obseruing by Gods grace in hart and in Gods sight, that vvvhich vvas meant by that carnal signe, is a Ievv according to the spirit, and iustified by God. Of the spirit and letter S. Augustine de Sp. & lit. to. 3. made a famous vvorke, very necessaric for the vnderstanding of this Epistle.

CHAP. III.

He graunteth that the Ievves did passe the Heathen Gentils, in Gods benefits, 9 but not in their ovvne vvorkes. concluding, that he hath shewved, both Ievv and Gentil to be sinners: 18 and therefore (inferring) that there must be some other way to Salvation, indifferent to both, vvvhich is to beleue in IESVS CHRIST, that for his sake their sinnes may be forgiven them.

God only by nature is true, al mere men by nature may lie, deceue and be deceiued: yet god by his grace & spirit may and doth preferue the Apostles and principall gouerners of his people & the Church and Councils in al truth, though they vvvere and are mere men.

WHAT preminence then hath the Ievv, or what is the profit of circumcision? † Much by al means.  C H A P. IIII.

Abrahams vvorkes before faith. 1. Abraham.] The Apostle disputing in this chapter, as before, against them that thought they might be iustified by their vvorkes done vvithout the grace of Christ and faith in him, propoicth Abraham for an example, and proueth that he had no iustice nor estimation of iustice before God by any vvorkes done before he had faith, or that proceded nor of faith and Gods grace.

Iustice before men, and iustice before God. 2. By vvorkes.] If Abraham did any commendable vvorkes before he beleued Christ, as many Philosophers did, men might count him iust therfore, but in Gods sight (vvho accepteth nothing vvithout faith in him, or that procedeth not from his grace) he should neuer haue had the estimation of a iust man. Therfore God in the Scriptures reputed him as a iust man, giueth the cause thereof, saying, Abraham beleued God, and it vvas reputed to him for iustice.

Not vvorkes, but mere grace is cause of our first iustificatiō. 4. To him that vvorketh.] That is to say, He that presumeth of his ovvne vvorkes as done of him self vvithout faith, Gods helpe, and grace: and saying, that grace or iustification vvere giuen to him for his vvorkes: this man doth challenge his iustification as dette, and not as of fauour and grace.

5. To him that vvorketh not] He vvorketh not (in this place) that hath no vvorkes or alleageth not his vvorkes done in his infidelitie as cause of his iustification, but faith in Christ, and that proceeding of mere grace. Vvherevpon S. Augustine saith: Know thou that faith found thee vniust. And if faith giuen to thee, made thee iust, it found thee a vvicked one vvhom it might make iust. If it found thee vvicked, and of such an one made thee iust, vvhat vvorkes hadst thou being then vvicked? None couldest thou haue (nor canst haue) before thou beleuedst. Beleue then in him that iustificieth the impious, that thy good vvorkes may be good vvorkes in deede. August. in Plal. 31.

Heretical translation. 6. As David termeth.] The Protestants for, c termeth, translate, describeth, for that they vvould c layes haue the ignorant beleuee, the vvhole nature & definition of iustification to be nothing els but remission of sinnes, and no grace or inherent iustice giuen from God at al. Vvhen the Apostle vvould say nothing els, but that in the first iustificatiō God findeth no good vvorkes or merites to reppard, but only sinnes to forgiue vnto such as haue faith in him.

Vvhat is, Sinnes covered or not impused. 7. Covered. s. not impused.] You may not gather (as the Heretikes doe) of these termes, covered, and, not impused, that the sinnes of men be neuer truly forgiuen, but hidden only. for that derogate much to the force of Christes blood and to the grace of God, by vvhich our offences be truly

10. 1. 29. truly remitted. He is the Lambe that taketh away the sinnes of the world, that was heth, and 2 Cor. 6. 11. bloteth out our sinnes. therefore to couer them, or, not to impute them, is, not to charge vs with Apo. 1. 5. our sinnes, because by remission they be cleane taken away: otherwile it were but a feined for-giuenesse. See S. Augustine in psal. 31 enarrat. 2.

11. A feale.] The Heretikes would proue hereby, that the Sacraments of the Church giue not grace or iustice of faith, but that they be notes, markes, and badges only of our remission of sinnes had by faith before: because Abraham was iust before, and tooke this Sacrament for a feale thereof only. To which must be answered, that it foloweth not that it is so in al, because it was so in the Patriarch, vho was iust before, and was therefore as it were the founder of Circumcision, or he in vvhom God would first establish the same: no more then it foloweth that, because the Holy Sacrament of the Altar remitted not sinnes to Christ nor iustified him, therefore it hath that effect in none. Looke S. Augustine de baptismo contra Donatistas li. 4. c. 24. Vwhere you shal see that (though not in Abraham) yet in Isaac his sonne, and so consequently in the rest, the Sacrament went before, and iustice folowed.

The Sacraments
are not mere markes, but causes of iustifica-
tion.

24. For vs, to vvhom it shal be reputed.] By this it is most plaine against our Aduerfaries, that the faith vvhich was reputed for iustice to Abraham, was his beleefe of an Article reuealed to him by God, that is to say, his assent and credit giuen to Gods speeches: as in vs his posteritie according to the Spirit, it is here plainly said, that iustice shal be reputed to vs by beleeuing the Articles of Christes death and Resurrection, and not by any fond special faith, fiducia or confidence of eche mans ovne saluation, to establish the vvhich fiction, they make no account of the faith Catho-like, that is, vvhich we beleue the Articles of the faith, vvhich only iustifieth, but call it by contempt, an historical faith: so as they may terme Abrahams faith, and our Ladies faith, of vvhich it was said, Beata quæ credidisti, Blessed art thou that hast beleued. And so in truth they deny as well the iustification by faith, as by vvoekes.

By vvhich faith
we are iusti-fied.

CHAP. V.

Against the He-faith and secu-ritie.

1. Let vs haue.) Vvhether vve read, Let vs haue peace, as diuerse also of the Greeke Doctors ^{ἔχωμεν} (Chrysof. Orig. Theodor. Oecum. Theophyl.) doe, or, We haue peace: it maketh nothing for the vaine ^{ἔχωμεν} securitie and infallible certaintie vvhich our Aduerſaries lay, euery man ought to haue vpon his preiudged iustification by faith, that him self is in Gods fauour, and sure to be sauẽd: peace towards God, being here nothing els, but the sincere rest, tranquillitie and comfort of minde and conscience, vpon the hope he hath, that he is reconciled to God. Sure it is that the Catholike faith, by vvhich, and none other, men be iustified, neither teacheth nor breedeth any such securitie of saluation. And therefore they haue made to them selues an other faith vvhich they call Fiduciam, quite vwithout the compatie of the Creede and Scriptures.

Iustificatiõ attributed much

2. Acceſſe through faith.) Iustification, implieth al grace and vertues received by Christes meri-tes, but the entrance and accesſe to this grace and happy ſtate is by faith, becauſe faith is the ground and

and first foundation to build on, and port to enter into the rest. Vvchich is the cause that our iustification is attributed to faith, namely in this Epistle, though faith it self be of grace also.

to faith as to the foundation.

2. Probation hope.) This retelleth the errour also of the Protestants, that vvould haue our hope to hold only on Gods promises, and not a vvhit on our doings; Vvhere vve see that it standeth (and is strengthened also) vpon patience and constancie, and good probation and trial of our selues in aduerities: and that so grounded vpon Gods promises and our ovvne doings, it neuer confoundeth.

Our hope is strengthened by vvel doing.

3. Charitie is pouvred.) Charitie also is giuen vs in our first iustification, and not only imputed vnto vs, but in deede invvardly pouvred into our hartes by the Holy Ghoit, vvho vvith and in his giites & grace is bestovved vpon vs. for this Charitie of God is not that vvchich is in God, but that vvchich he giueth vs, as S. Augultine expoundeth it: li. de Sp. & lit. c. 12. Vvho referreth this place also to the grace of God giuen in the Sacrament of Confirmation, de baps. cont. Donat. li. 1 c. 16.

Charitie is a qualitie in vs.

Cone. Tri. sess. 5. decr. de pec. orig.

4. By one man sinne entred.) By this place specially the Church of God defendeth and proueth against the old Heretikes the Pelagians, that denied children to haue any original sinne, or to be baptized for the remission thereof: that in and by Adam al be conceived, borne, and constituted sinners. Which no lesse maketh against the Caluinists also, that affirme, Christiā mens children to be holy from their mothers vvombe. And the same reason vvchich S. Augultine deduceth (li. 1 c. 8. 9. de pec. meritu.) out of this text, to proue against the said Pelagians, that the Apostle meaneth not of the general imitation of Adam in actual sinnes, serueth against Erasmus and others, inclining rather to that nevv exposition, then to the Churches and fathers graue iudgement herein. Cone. Mileuitanum c. 2.

Al by Adam borne in original sinne.

5. vnto Moyfes.) Euen in the time of the Lavv of nature, vvhen men knevv not sinne, and therefore it could not by mans iudgement be imputed: and in the time of Moyfes Lavv, vvhen the commaundement taught them to knovv it, but gaue them no strength nor grace to avoid it, sinne did reigne, and therevpon death and damnation, euen til Moyfes inclusiue, that is to say, euen til the end of his Lavv. And that not in them onely vvchich actually sinned, as Adam did, but in infants vvchich neuer did actualiy offend, but onely vvere borne and conceiued in sinne, that is to say, hauing their natures defiled, destitute of iustice, and auerted from God in Adam, and by their descent from him: Christ onely excepted, being conceived vvithout mans seele, and his mother for his honour and by his special protection (as many godly deuout men iudge) preferred from the same.

Christ only not conceiued in sinne, and (as it is thought) our B. Lady.

6. That sinne might abound.) That, here hath not the signification of causalitie, as though the Lavv vvere giuen for that cause to make sinne abound: but it noteth the sequele, because that followed thereof, and so it came to passe, that by the prohibition of sinne, sinne increased: by occasion vvhereof, the force of Christes grace is more amply and abundantly bestovved in the nevv Testament.

The Lavv did not cause more sinne, though that vvere the sequele thereof.

CHAP. VI.

Whereby it is plaine that he meaneth not onely faith to iustifie, but the Sacraments also, and al Christian religion, vvhich he calleth the Lavv of spirit, grace, and faith. Not only faith.
9. Old man, body of sinne.) Our corrupt state subiect to sinne and concupiscence, comming to vs from Adam, is called the Old man: as our person reformed in & by Christ, is named the New man. And the lump and masse of sinnes vvhich then ruled, is called the corps or body of sinne. The old man, & the new.
10. To sinne he died.) Christ died to sinne, vvhhen by his death he destroyed sinne: Vve die to sinne, in that vve be discharged of the povver thereof, vvhich before vvas as it vvere the life of our persons, and commaunded al the partes and faculties of our soule and body: as contrariewise vve liue to God, vvhhen his grace ruleth and vvorketh in vs, as the soule doth rule our mortal bodies. Dying to sinne. Liuing to God.
12. Sinne reigneth.) Concupiscence is here named sinne, because it is the effect, occasion, and matter of sinne, and is as it vwere a disease or infirmitie in vs, inclining vs to it, remaining also after Baptisme according to the substance or matter thereof: but it is not properly a sinne, nor forbidden by commaundement, til it reigneth in vs, and vve obey and folovv the desires thereof. August. li. de nupt. & concupisc. c. 23. Cont. 2. epist. Pelag. li. 1 c. 13. Conc. Trident. Sess. 5. decret. de pec. orig. Howv concupiscence is called sinne.
17. Forme of doctrine.) At the first conuersion of euery nation to the Catholike faith, there is a forme & rule of beleefe set dovne, vnto vvhich vvhhen the people is once put by their Apostles, they must neuer by any persuasion of men alter the same, nor take of man or Angel, any new doctrine or Analogie of faith, as the Protestants call it. The doctrine of our first Apostles.
23. The grace of God, life euerlasting.) The sequelle of speache required, that as he said, death or damnation is the stipend of sinne, so life euerlasting is the stipend of iustice. and so it is, and in the same sense he spake in the last chapter: that as sinne reigneth to death, so grace reigneth by iustice to life euerlasting. but here he changed the sentence somewhat, calling life euerlasting grace, rather then reward: because the merites by vvhich vve attaine vnto life, be al of Gods gift and grace. August. Ep. 105 ad Sixtum. Life euerlasting a stipend, and yet grace.

CHA P. VII.

Our former husband (sinne) vvhich his lawv, is dead in Baptisme: and novv vve are married to an other husband (to Christ) to bring forth children to God, that is, good vvorkes. 7 And howv the Lawv being good, vvas yet to vs the lawv of sinne and death, because concupiscence reigneth in vs. 17 But novv by Baptisme grace reigneth in vs, though also concupiscence doth remaine and tempt vs still.

7. Thou ſhalt not couet.) It is not the habitual concupiſcence or infirmitie of our nature or ſenſual deſire or inclination to euil, coueting againſt the ſpirit, that is forbidden properly in this precept: but the conſent of our reaſon and minde vnto it, to obey and folovv the luites thereof, that is a ſinne and prohibited. Actual concu-piſcence forbidden, not habitual.

11. That vvhich I vvorke.) This being vnderſtood of S. Paul him ſelf or any other iuſt perſon, the ſenie is, that the fleſh and inferiour part thirreth vp diuerſe diſordered motions and paſſions or perturbations againſt the minde, and vpon ſuch a ſoden ſometimes inuadeth the ſame, that before it attended, or reaſon can gather it ſelf to deliberate, mā is in a ſort (though vnvittingly) entangled. Vvvhich as ſoone as it is perceiued, being of the iuſt condemned, reiectea, and reſiſted, neuer maketh him a ſinner. Soden inuoluntarie motions are no ſinne.

c. 1, 17.

15. Not that vvhich I vvill.) He meaneth not, that he can do no good that he vvilleth or deſireth, or that he is euer forced to do that vvhich his vvill agreeth not vnto: but that by reaſon of the forcibleſſe of concupiſcence, vvhereof he can not rid him ſelf during life, he can not accompliſh all the deſires of his ſpirit and minde, according as he ſaith to the Galatians, The fleſh couereth againſt the ſpirit, and the ſpirit againſt the fleſh, that not vvhatſoever you vvill, you can do. Concupiſcence taketh not avvay free vvil.

ep. ad Aſcl-licum 200.

19. Not the good vvhich I vvill.) So may the iuſt alſo be forced by the rage of concupiſcence or ſenſual appetite, to do or ſuffer many things in his inferiour part or external members, vvhich his vvill conſenteth not vnto. And ſo long it is ſo farre from ſinne, that (as * S. Auguſtine ſaith) he neede neuer ſay to God, forgiue vs our ſinnes, for the ſame. for, ſinne is voluntarie, and ſo be not theſe paſſions. Sinne is voluntarie, and otherwiſe it is no
ſinne.

19. Which I vvill not.) It maketh not any thing againſt free vvill that the Apoſtle ſaith, that good men do or ſuffer ſometimes in their bodies, that vvhich the vvill agreeth not vnto: but it pro- ueth plainly free vvil, becauſe the proper act thereof, that is, to vvill or nill, to conſent or diſſent, is euer (as you may ſee here) free in it ſelf: though there may be internal or external force to ſtay the members of a man, that they obey not in euery act, that vvhich the vvill commaundeth or pre- ſcribeth. And therefore that is neuer imputed to mā vvhich he doth in his external or internal facul- ties, vvhen vvil concurrerh not. Yea aiter vvard (v, 20) the Apoſtle ſaith, Non ego operor, man doeth not that vvhich is not done by his vvill: vvhich doth moſt euidently proue free vvill.

21. With the minde, vvith the fleſh.) Nothing done by concupiſcence (vvhich the Apoſtle here calleth ſinne) vvherevnto the ſpirit, reaſon, or minde of man conſenteth not, can make him guilty before God. Neither can the motions of the fleſh in a iuſt man euer any vvhit deſile the operatiōs of his ſpirit, as the Lutherans do hold: but make them often more meritorious, for the continual combat that he hath vvith them. for it is plaine that the operations of the fleſh and of the ſpirit do not concurre together to make one acte, as they imagine: the Apoſtle concluding cleane contrarie, ſay. That in minde he ſerueſh the Lavv of God, in fleſh the lavv of ſinne, that is to ſay, concupiſ-cence. Concupiſcence deſileth not a ſay.

C H A P. VIII.

The testimonie of the Spirit. 16. The spirit giveth testimonie.) This place maketh not for the Heretikes special faith, or their presumptuous certainty that euery one of them is in grace: the testimonie of the Spirit being nothing els, but the inward good motions, comfort, and contentment, vvhich the children of God do daily feele more and more in their hartes by seruing him: by vvhich they haue as it were an attestation of his fauour tovvardes them, vvhereby the hope of their iustification and saluation is much corroborated and strengthened.

Nowwithstandig Christs satisfaction and Passion, yet ours also is required. 17. Yes if they suffer.) Christs paines or passions haue not so satisfied for al, that Christian men be discharged of their particular suffering or iustifying for eche mans ovne part: neither be our paines nothing vvorth to the attainement of heauen, because Christ hath done ynough, but quite contrarie: he vvvas by his passion exalted to the glorie of heauen: therefore vve by compassion or partaking vvith him in the like passions, shall attaine to be fellowvves vvith him in his kingdom.

Al suffering in this life is nothing in comparison of the heauenly glorie: and yet it is meritorious & vvorthy of the same. 18. Condigne.) Our Aduerlaris ground hereon, that the vvorkes or sufferances of this life be not meritorious or vvorthy or lite euerlasting, vvhether the Apostle saith no such thing, no more then he saith that Christs Passions be not meritorious of his glorie, vvhich I thinke they dare not much avouch in our Saviours actions. He exprelleth onely, that the very afflictions of their ovne nature, vvhich vve suffer vvith or for him, be out of short, momentanie & of no account in comparison of the recompente vvhich vve shall haue in heauen. no more in deede vvere Christs paines of their ovne nature, compared to his glorie, any vvhit comparable: yet they vvere meritorious or vvorthy of heauen, & so be ours. And therefore to expresse the said cõparison, here he saith, They are not condigne to the glorie. He saith not, of the glorie, as the Heretikes taily translate: though the Scripture speaketh so also, vvhether it signifyeth onely a cõparison, as Prov. 3. in the greeke, Omne pretiosum non est iua dignu. S. Augustine, illi aignum. S. Hierom, non valet huic comparari. that is, No pretious thing is vvorthie of vvisedom, or to be compared vvith it. See the like Eccle. 26, 20. Tob. 9, 2. But vvhen the Apostle vvil expresse that they are condigne, vvorthy, or meritorious of the glorie, he saith plainly, That our tribulation vvwhich presently is momentanie and light, vvorketh aboute measure exceedingly an eternal vvweight of glorie in vs. The valewv of Christs actions lieth not of the length or greatnes of them in them selues, though so also they passed al mens doings: but of the vvorthines of the person. And so the value of ours also riseth of the grace of our adoption, vvhich maketh those actions that of their natures be not meritorious nor aniverable to the ioyes of heauen in them selues, to be vvorthy of heauen. And they might as vvell proue that the vvorkes of sinne do not demerite damnation, for sinne in deede for the quantity and nature of the vvorke, is not aniverable in pleasure to the paine of Hel: but because it hath a departing or an auersion from God, be it neuer so short, it deserueth damnation, because it alvvayes procedeth from the enemy of God, as good vvorkes that be meritorious, procede from the childe of God.

Vvhence the merite of vvorkes riseth. 24. By hope saved.) That vvhich in other places he attributeth to faith, is here attributed to hope. As sometime for vvhensoever there be many causes of one thing, the holy vvriters (as matter is ministred and occasion giuen by the doctrine then handled) sometimes referre it to one of the causes, sometime to an other: not by naming one alone, to exclude the other, as our Aduerlaris captiously and ignorantly do argue: but at diuers times and in sundrie places to expresse that, vvhich in euery discourse could not, nor needed not to be vttered. In some discourse, faith is to be recommended in others, hope, and onely charitie: in an other, hope: sometimes, almes, mercie: els vvhere, other vertues. One vvwhile, Every one that belieueth, is borne of God. 1 Jo. 5, 1. An other vvwhile, Every one that loueth, is borne of God. 1 Jo. 4, 7. Sometimes, faith purifieth mans hart. Act. 15, 9. And an other time, Charitie remitteth sinnes. 1 Pet. 4, 8. Of faith it is said, The iust liueth by faith. Ro. 1, 17. Of charitie, We knowe that vve are transferred from death to life, because vve loue &c. 1 Jo. 3, 14.

Scripture abused against the Godhead of the Holy Ghost. 27. The Spirit desireth.) Arius and Macedonius old Heretikes had their places to contend vpon, against the Churches sentie, as our new Maisters novv haue. They abused this text to proue the Holy Ghost not to be God, because he needed not to pray or aske, but he might commaund if he vvere God. Therefore S. Augustine expoundeth it thus, The Spirit prayeth. that is, causeth and teacheth vs to pray, and vvhat to pray or aske. August. de anima & eius orig. li. 4, c. 9. & ep. 121. c. 15.

The doctrine of predestination, how to be re-hoy to be re- 30. Whom he hath predestinated.) Gods eternal foresight, loue, purpose, predestination, and election of his deere children, and in time their calling, iustifying, glorifying by Christ, as al other actes and intentions of his diuine vvil and providence tovvardes their saluation, ought to be reuerenced of al men vvith dreadful humilitie, and not to be sought out or disputed on vvith presumptuous tuos boldnes and audacitie, for it is the gulfe that many proud persons, both in this age and all-vvaies, haue by Gods iust iudgement perished in, founding thereon most horrible blaiphemies against Gods mercie, nature, and goodnes, and diuers damnable errours against mans free vvil, and against al good life and religion. This high conclusion is here set dovne for vs, that vve may learne to knowv of vvhom vve ought to depend in al our life; by vvhom vve expect our saluatiō, by vvhose prouidence al our graces, gittes, and vvorkes do stand: by vvhich an euerlastiſſ gracious determination, our redemption, vvich is in Christ I E S V S, vvas defigured: & to giue God incessable thanks for our vocation and preferment to the state vve be in, before the levvies, vvhō deserued no better then they, before the light of his mercie shining vpon vs accepted vs, and reiected them. But this said eintrinsic truth of Gods eternal predestination standeth (as vve are bound to beleue vnder paine of damnation, vvwhether vve vnderstand hovv or no) & so S. Augustine in al his diuine vvorkes vvritten of the same (De gracia & lib. arb. De corrept. & gratia. Ad articulos falso impositos.) defendeth, decla-reth, proueth, and conuinceth, that it doth stand (I say) vvith mans free vvil and the true libertie of his actions, and forceth no man to be either il or good, to sinne or vertue, to saluation or damnatiō, nor taketh avvay the meanes or nature of merites, and cooperation vvith God to our ovvne and other mens saluation.

ANNOTATIONS
CHAP. IX.

3. Anáthema.] Anáthema, by vse of Scripture is either that vvhich by separation from profane vse, and by dedication to God, is holy, dreadful, and not vulgarly to be touched: or contrariely, that vvhich is reiected, seuered, or abandoned from God, as cursed and detested, and therefore is to be auoided. And in this later sense (according as S. Paul taketh it 1 Cor. 16. If any loue not our Lord I E S V S C H R I S T, let him be Anathema, that is to say, Avvay vvith him, Accursed be he, Bevvare you company not vvith him) the Church and holy Councels vse the vvord for a curse and excommunication againt Heretikes and other notorious offenders and blasphemers. Nowv hovv the Apostle, vvishing him self to be Anathema from Christ to saue his Countrie mens soules, did take this vvord, it is a very hard thing to determine. Some thinke, he desired onely to die for their saluation. Others, that being very loth to be kept from the fruition of Christ, yet he could be content to be so still for to saue their soules. Others, that he vvished vvhat malediction or separation from Christ soeuer that did not imply the disfaueur of God tovwards him, nor take avvay his loue tovvard God. This only is certaine that it is a point of vnspeakeable charitie in the Apostles breast, and a paterne to al Lishops and Priests, hovv to loue the saluation of their focke. As the like vvvas vvtered by Moyfes vvhen he said, Either forgive this people, or blot me out of thy booke.

6. Not al of Israel.] Though the people of the Ievves vvere many vvaiies honoured and priuiledged, and namely by Christes taking flesh of them: yet the promis of grace and saluation vvvas neither onely made to them, nor to al them that carnally came of them or their fathers: Gods election and mercie depending vpon his ovvne purpose, vvill, and determination, and not tied to any nation, familie, or person.

7. But in Isaac.] The promise made to Abraham vvvas not in Ismael, vvho vvvas a sonne borne onely by flesh and nature: but in Isaac, vvho vvvas a sonne obtained by promise, faith, and miracle: and vvvas a figure of the Churches children borne to God in Baptisme.

10. Of one copulation.] It is proued also by Gods choosing of Iacob before Esau (vvho vvvere not onely brethren by father and mother, but also tvvinnes, and Esau the elder of the tvvo, vvhich according to carnal count should haue had the preeminence) that God in giuing graces solovveth not the temporal or carnal prerogatiues of men or families.

11. Not yet borne.] By the same example of those tvvinnes, it is euident also, that neither nations nor particular persons be elected eternally, or called temporally, or preferred to Gods faueur before others, by their ovvne merites: because God, vvhen he made choise, and first loued Iacob, and refused Esau, respected them both as il, and the one no lesse then the other guilty of damnation for original sinne, vvhich vvvas alike in them both. And therefore vvhere iustly he might haue reprobated both, he saued of mercie onc. Vvvhich one therefore, being as il and as void of good as the other, must hold of Gods eternal purpose, mercie, and election, that he vvvas preferred before his brother vvhich vvvas elder then him self, and no vvorse then him self. And his brother Esau on the other side hath no cause to complaine, for that God neither did nor suffered any thing to be done tovards him, that his sinne did not deserue. for although God elect eternally & giue his first grace vvithout al merites, yet he doth not reprobate or hate any man but for sinne, or the foresight thereof.

14. Is there iniquitie?] Vpon the former discourse that of tvvo persons equal, God calleth the one to mercie, and leaueth the other in his sinne. one might inferre that God vvvere vnjust and an acceptor of persons. To vvhich the Apostle ansvvereth, that God vvvere not iust nor indifferent in decde, so to vse the matter vvhere grace or saluation vvvere due. As if tvvo men being Christened, both beleeue vvell, & liue vvell: if God should giue heauen to the one, & should damne the other, then vvwere he vnjust, partial, & forgetful of his promise: but respecting or taking tvvo, vvho both be vvorthy of damnation (as al are before they be first called to mercie) then the matter standeth on mere mercie, and of the giuers vvill and liberantie, in vvhich case partialitie hath no place. As for example.

Anáthema

In vvhat sense S. Paul vvisheth to be anathema.

Gods promis not made to carnal Israel.

Isaac preferred before Ismael.

Iacob before Esau.

By the example of Iacob and Esau, is shewed gods mere mercie in the elect, and iustice in the reprobate.

That God is not vnjust, or an acceptor of persons, is declared by familiar examples.

5. Augustines example is of two debtors: the one forgivē all, and the other put to pay all, by the same creditor. li. de predest. & gra. cap. 1.

1 Two malefactors being condemned both for one crime, the Prince pardoneth the one, and letteth the lavv procede on the other.

2 The theefe that is pardoned, can not attribute his escape to his ovvne desertings, but to the Princes mercie.

3 The theefe that is executed, can not challenge the Prince that he vvas not pardoned also: but must acknowledge that he hath his deserting.

4 The standers by, must not say, that he vvas executed because the Prince vwould not pardon him. for that vvas not the cause, but his offense.

5 If they aske further, vwhy the Prince pardoned not both, or executed not both: the answer is, that as mercie is a goodly vertue, so iustice is necessaric and commendable.

6 But if it be further demaunded vwhy Iohn rather than Thomas vvas executed: or Thomas rather than Iohn pardoned: answer, that (the parties being othervvise equal) it hangeth merely and vvholy vpon the Princes vvil and pleasure.

1 So likewise, God seing al mankind and euery one of the same in a general condemnation, and masse of sinne, in and by Adam, deliuereth some, and not other-foine.

2 Al that be deliuered out of that common damnation, be deliuered by grace and pardon, through the meanes and merits of Christ.

3 Such as be left in the common case of damnation, can not complaine, because they haue their deserting for sinne.

4 Vve may not say that such be damned, because God did not pardon them, but because they had sinne, and therefore deserued it.

5 That some should be damned, and not al pardoned, and other some pardoned rather than al condemned, is agreeable to Gods iustice & mercie: both vvchic vertues in Gods providence tovwards vs are recommended.

6 That Saul should be rather pardoned than Caiphas (I meane vvhere two be equally euil and vnderferuing) that is onely Gods holy vvil and appointment, by vvchic many an vnvvorthy man getteth pardon, but no good or iust or innocent person is euer damned.

Predestination and reprobation take not avvay free vvil, neither must any man be retchlesse & desperate.

In al this mercie of God tovwards some, and iustice tovwards other some, both the pardoned vvorke by their ovvne free vvil, and thereby deserue their saluation: and the other no lesse, by their ovvne free vvil, vvithout al necessitie, vvorke vvickednes, & then selues and onely of them selues procure their ovvne damnation. Therefore no man may vvithout blasphemie say, or can truly say, that he hath nothing to doe tovwards his owne saluation, but vvil liue, and thinke: h he may liue vvithout care or cogitation of his end: the one vvay or the other, saying, If I be appointed to be faued, be it so: if I be one designed to damnation, I can not helpe the matter: come vvhat come may. Al these speeches and cogitations are sinful & come of the enemy, and be rather signes of reprobation, then of election. Therefore the good man must vvithout searche of Gods secretes, vvorke his ovvne saluation and (as S. Peter faith) make his election sure by good vvorkes, vvchic continual hope of Gods mercie, being assured that if he beleue vvell and doe vvell, he shal haue vvell. for example, if a husband man should say, If God vvil, I shal haue corne ynough: if not, I can not make it, and so neglect to till his ground: he may be sure that he shal haue none, because he vvrought: not for it. An other man vveth his diligence in tilling and ploughing, and committeth the rest to God, he findeth the fruite of his labours.

Our election or conuersion is not of our selues, but of gods grace and mercie.

16. Not of the vviller.] If our election, calling, or first comming to God, lay vvholly or principally vpon our ovvne vvil or vvorkes: or if our vvilling or endeouoring to be good, vvould serue vvithout the helpe and grace of God, as the Pelagians taught, then our election vvere vvholly in our selues, vvchic the Apostle denieth. and then might Pharao and other indurate persons (vvhom God hath permitted to be obstinate, to shew his pover and iust iudgement vpon them) be conuerted vvhen them selues list, vvithout Gods helpe and assistance: vvhereas vve see the contrarie in al such obstinate offenders, vvhom God for punishment of former sinnes, vvisteth not vvith his grace, that by no threatens, miracles, nor persuasion, they can be conuerted. Vvherevpon vve may not vvith Heretikes inferre, that man hath not free vvil, or that our vvill vvorketh nothing in our conuersion or comming to God: but this onely, that our vvilling or vvorking of any good to our saluation, commeth of Gods special motion, grace, and assistance, and that it is the secundary cause, not the principall.

17. To this purpose haue I raised.] He doth not say, that he hath of purpose raised or set him vp to sinne, or that he vvas the cause of the same in Pharao, or that he intended his damnation directly or absoliutely, or any othervvise but in respect of his demerits: but rather (as the Apostle faith straight after in this chapter of such hardened & obstinate offenders) that he vvith long patience & toleration expected his conuersion, and (as S. Chryostome interpreteth interpreteth this word, Excitati) preserued him aliuie to repent, vvhom he might iustly haue condemned before. In the 9 of Exodus, vvhence this allegation is, vve reade, Posui te, I haue put or set thee vp, as here, I haue raised thee. that is to say, I haue purposely advanced thee to be so great a king, and chosen thee out to be a notorious example both of the obdurate obstinacie that is in such vvhom I haue for so great sinnes forsaken, and also to shew to the vvorlde, that no obstinacie of neuer so mightie offenders can resist me to doe any thing which shal not fall to my glorie. Vvhich is no more to say, but that God often for the punishment of Nations, and to shew his iustice and glorie, giueth vvhicked Princes vnto them, and indueth them vvvith pover and al prosperitie, and taking his grace from them vpon their deserts, hardeneth their hartes so, as they vvithstand and contemne God, and afflict his people. in vvhose end and fall, either temporal or eternal, at the length God vvil cuer be glorified. Neither vvould he either raise or suffer any such, or giue them pover and prosperitie in this life, vvhervpon he knowveth they vvil be vvorse, but that he can vvorke al that to his honour and glorie. mary, that he vseth not such rigorous iustice on al that deserue it, that is his great grace and mercie. And that he exerciseth his iustice vpon some certaine persons, rather then vpon other some of equal deserts, that lieth vvholly vpon his vvil, in vvhose iudgements there be many things secrete, but no hing vniust.

Exo. 9, 16.

In vvhate sense; God raised v^r Pharao &c.

20. Who art thou?] Here the Apostle staiech the rashnes and presumption of such poore vvormes, as take vpon them to question vvith God of their election or reprobation: as certaine impious Heretikes of our time haue done, setting our bookes farsed vvith most blasphemous and erroneous doctrine cōcerning this high and hidden mysterie, and haue giuen occasion to the ignorant vvich alwaies be curious, to iangle, and perniciously to erre in these things, that are impossibill to be vnderstood of any, or vvell thought of, but of the obedient and humble.

Heretical booke concerning predestination.

21. The potter.] This example of the pot and potter reacheth no further but to declare, that the creature may not reason vvith God his maker, vvhy he giueth not one so great grace, as an other, or vvhy he pardoneth not one as vvell as an other: no more then the chamber pot may challenge the Potter vvhy he vvvas not made a drinking pot, as vvell as an other. And therefore the Heretikes that extend this similitude to proue that man hath no free vvil no more then a peece of clay, doe vntvally and deceitfully apply the example. Inpecially vvhenn vve may see expressly in the booke of Exodus, that Pharao not vvithstanding his indurate hart, had free vvil: vvhere both it is said, He vvould not dismisie the people: and, He indurated his vvne hart him self. Exo. c. 2, 15. and (in the Hebrue) v. 32. & c. 9. 35. 1 Reg. 6. 6. And this Apostle also vvriteth, that * a man may cleanse him self from the filthy, and so become a vessell of honour in the house of God.

The example of the pot and the potter.

V which point (as al other) must both be beleued in hart, and also be confessed by mouth. For though a man be iustified inwardly v when he hath the vertues of faith, hope, and charitie from God: yet if occasion be giuen, he is also bound to confesse vvith his mouth, and by al his external actions, vvithout shame or feare of the vvorld, that vv which he inwardly beleueeth: or els he can not be saued. Aug. Ep. 105. ad Sixsum.

Aparaphrastical explication of the text concerning the Jewes and Gentils, their standing, falling, rising againe, &c.

20. Because of incredulity.] He representh the pride of the Gentils vaunting them selues of their receiuing, and of the Ievves reiection, namely in that they thought the Ievves to be forsaken for no other cause, but that they might come into their roomes: declaring that the direct and proper cause of their forsaking, vvas their incredulity, exhorting the Gentiles to bevvare of the same, because they may fall as vvell as the other, and that God is as like to execute iustice against them as against the Ievves, as he hath done in many nations falling to herefie.

21. According to the Gospel.] In respect, or, as concerning beleefe in Christ and receiuing the Gospel, they are Gods enemies: by occasion of vvhich their incredulity, the Gentiles found mercie: othervvise in respect of his special election of that nation, and the promises made to the Patriarches, the Ievves are deere to him still. for God neuer promisseth but he performeth, nor repeateth him self of the priuileges giuen to that nation.

22. For as you.] As the Gentiles vvhich before beleeued not, found mercie and came to faith, vvhen the Ievves did fall: so the Ievves not novv beleeuing, vvhen al the Gentils haue obtained mercie, shal in the end of the vvorld by Gods disposition obtaine grace and pardon as the Gentiles haue done.

23. Concluded al.] That so God taking al Nations and al men in sinne (vvhich they fell into, not by his drift or causing, but of their ovvne free vvill) may of his mercie call and conuert vvhom and in vvhat order he vvill: and the parties haue no cause to bragge of their deseruings: but both countries and particular men may referre their eternal election and their first calling and conuersion to Christ, and to his mercie only: no vvorkes vvhich they had before in their incredulity, deseruing any such thing, though their vvorkes attervvard proceeding of faith and grace doe merite heauen.

How far to deale and to know, in the doctrine of predestination.

24. O depth] The Apostle concludeth that no man ought to search further into Gods secrete and vnsearcheable counsels of the vocation of the Gentils, and reiecting the Ievves, othervvise then this, that al vvhich be reiecte, for their sinnes be iustly reiecte: and al that be saued, by Gods great mercie and Christs grace be saued. And vvhofoeuer seeke among the people to spred contagion of curiosity by seeking further after things past mans & Angels reache, they ouerreache & ouerthrow them selues. If thou vvilt be saued, beleue, obey the Church, feare God and keepe his commaundements: that is thy part and euery mans els. Thou maist not examine vvwhether thou be predestinate or reprobate, nor seeke to know the vvaies of Gods secrete iudgement tovvard thy self or other men. It is the common enemy of our soules, that in this vnhappy time hath opened blasphemous tongues, and directed the proude pennes of Calvin, Beza, Verone, and such reprobates, to the discussing of such particulars, to the perdition of many a simple man, and specially of yong Scholers in Vniuersities, vvhich vvith lesse itudie may learne to be provvd and curious, then to be humble, vvise, and obedient.

ANNOTATIONS
CHAP. XII.

1. A living host.] Lest men should thinke by the former discourse of Gods eternal predestination, that no reward were to be had of good life and workes, the Apostle now earnestly recommendeth to them holinesse of life.

1. A living host.] Man maketh his body a sacrifice to God by giuing it to suffer for him, by chastising it vvith fasting, vvatching, and such like, and by occupying it in workes of charitie and vertue to Gods honour. Whereby appeareth how acceptable these workes are to God and grateful in his sight, being compared to a sacrifice, which is an high seruice done to him.

5. According to the rule of faith.] By this, and many places of holy write, we may gather, that the Apostles by the holy Ghost, before they were sundered into diuers Nations, let downe among them selues a certaine Rule and forme of faith and doctrine, containing not onely the Articles of the Crede, but al other principles, groundes, and the whole platforme of al the Christian religion. Which Rule was before any of the bookes of the new Testament were written, & before the faith was preached among the Gentiles: by which not onely every other inferiour teachers doctrine was tried, but al the Apostles, and Euangelistes preaching, writing, interpreting (which is here called prophecyng) were of Gods Church approued and admitted, or disproued and reiected. This forme, by mouth and not by Scripture, every Apostle deliuered to the countrie by them conuerted. For keeping of this forme, the Apostle before praised the Romanes, and afterward earnestly warneth them by no mans plausible speache to be drawn from the same. This he commendeth to Timothee, calling it his Depositem. For not holding this fast and sure, he blameth the Galatians, further also denouncing to him self or an Angel that should write, teach, or expound against that which they first receiued, Anathema, and commaunding alwaies to bevvare of them that taught otherwise. For feare of missing this line of truth, him self notwithstanding he had the Holy Ghost, yet lest he might haue preached in vaine and lost his labour, he went to conferre with Peter and the rest. for the fast keeping of this Rule of truth, the Apostles held Councils, and their successors by their example. For the holding of this Rule, and by the measure thereof, were al the holy Scriptures written. for and by the same, al the glorious doctors haue made their sermons, commentaries, and interpretations of Gods vvord: al vvritings and interpretations no otherwise admitted nor deemed to be of God, but as they be agreeable to this Rule.

The Heretikes phâstical rule, or rather rules of faith, many and diuers one from an other.

And this is the sure Analogie and measure of faith, set downe and commended to vs every where for the Apostles tradition: and not the phantastical rule or square that every Sectmaister pretendeth to gather out of the Scriptures falsely vnderstood and wrested to his purpose, by which they iudge of doctor, Scripture, Church, and al. Arius had by that meanes a rule of his owne, Luther had his false weightes, and Calvin his owne also. According to which seueral measure of every Sect, they haue their expositions of Gods vvord: and in England (as in other infected Countries) they kept of late an apish imitation of this prophecyng which S. Paul here and in other places speaketh of, and which was an exercise in the primitiue Church, measured not by every mans peculiar spirit, but by the former Rule of faith first set downe by the Apostles. And therefore al this new phantastical Prophecyng & al other preaching in Caluins schoole, is iustly by this note of the Apostle condemned, for that it is not according to, but quite against the Rule of faith.

ANNOTATIONS
 CHAP. XIII.

1. Every soul be subiect.] Because the Apostles preached libertie by Christ from the yoke of the Law and seruitude of sinne, and gaue al the faithful both example and commaundement to obey God more then men, and withal euer charged them expressly to be obedient and subiect to their Prelates as to them which had cure of their soules and were by the Holy Ghost placed ouer the Church of God: there were many in those daies newly conuerted, that thought them selues free from al temporal Potestats, carnal Lordes, and humane creatures or powers: wherevpon the bondman tooke him self to be loofe from his seruitude, the subiect from his Soueraine, were he Emperour, King, Duke, or what other secular Magistrate so euer, specially the Princes of those daies being Heathens and persecutors of the Apostles, and of Christes religion. for which cause and for that the Apostles were vntruely charged of their Aduersaries, that they withdrew men from order and obedience to Ciuil lawes and Officers: S. Paul here (as S. Peter doth i Chap. 2.) cleereth him self, and expressly chargeth euery man to be subiect to his temporal Prince and Superiour: Not euery man to al that be in Office or Superiority, but euery one to him whom God hath put in authoritie ouer him, by that he is his Maister, Lord, king, or such like: Neither to them in matters of religion or regiment of their soules (for most part were Pagans, whom the Apostle could not vwill men to obey in matters of faith) but to them in such things onely as concerne the publike peace & Policie, and what other causes so euer consist vvith Gods holy vvill and ordinance. for * against God no power may be obeyed.

Obedience to temporal rulers, & in what cases.

Act. 5, 19,

Cbrys. in
ep. Ro. ho.

1. No power but of God.] S. Chrysostome here noteth, that power, rule, & Superioritie, is Gods ordinance, but not estiones al Princes: because many may vsurpe, who reigne by his permission onely, and not by his appointment: nor al actions that euery one doeth in and by his soueraine power, as Iulians apostasie and affliction of Ca. holikes, I haos tyrannical oppression of the Israelites, Achabs persecution of the Prophets, Neros executing of the Apostles, Herods and Pilats condemning of Christ: al which things God permitted them, by the abuse of their power to accomplish, but they were out of the compasse of his causing and ordinance.

In what sense, al power or superioritye is of God.

2. They that resist.] Vvho soeuer resisteth or obeieith not his lawful Superior in those causes vwherein he is subiect vnto him, withstandeth Gods appointment, & sinneth deadly, and is vvorthy to be punished both in this vvorld by his Superior, and by God in the next life. for in temporal gouernement and causes, the Christians were bound in conscience to obey their Heathen Emperours: though on the other side, they were bound vnder paine of damnation to obey their Apostles and Prelates, and not to obey their kings or Emperours

In things lawfully commaunded it is mortal sinne not to obey our Superiours.

Emperours

Emperours, in matters of religion. V hereby it is cleere that v when vve be commaunded to obey our Superiors, it is meant alwaies and onely in such things as they may lawfully commaund, and in respect of such matters vwherein they be our Superiors.

The Apostle speaketh of temporal powers. 4. Beareth not the sword.] That the Apostle meaneth here specially of temporal powvers, vve may see by the sword, tribute, & external compulsion, vvhich he here attributeth to them. And the Christian men then had no doubt vvhether they should obey their Spiritual powvers, but novv the disease is cleane contrarie, for al is giuen to the secular pover, and nothing to the spiritual, vvhich expresly is ordained by Christ and the Holy Ghost: and al the faithful are commaunded to be subiect therevnto, as to Christs ovne vvord and vvill. There vv ere Heretikes called Bogardi, that tooke avvay al rule and Superioritie:

The Wiclefists vvould obey nor Prince nor Prelate, if he vv ere once in deadly sinne. The Protestants of our time (as vve may see in al Countries vvh ere the secular sword is dravven against their sedes) care neither for the one nor for the other, though they extol onely the secular vvh en it maketh for them. The Catholikes onely most humbly obey both, euen according to Gods ordinance, the one in temporal causes, and the other in Spiritual: in vvhich order both these States haue blessedly florished in al Christian countries euer since Christs time, and it is the very vvay to preserue both, as one day al the vvorld shall confesse vvith vs.

The Apostles meaning about eating or not eating certaine meates.

the Ievves might not eat at al, as porke, hare, conny, and such like, both of fishes, foules, and beasts, a great number. Christ discharged al them that became Christians; after his Passion, of that obseruance and al other ceremonies of the old Law: Notwithstanding, because diuers that were brought vp in the Law, had a religion and conscience, sodenly to foretake their former maner, the Apostle here admonisheth such as be stronger and better instructed in the case, to beare vvith the vveaker sort, that being Christians could not yet finde in their hartes to eat and vse the meates forbidden by God in the Law: as on the other side he vvarneth the vveake that vvould not eat, not to take offence or scandal at them that did eat vvithout scruple, any of the irregular or forbidden meates in the Law, nor in any vvise to iudge or condemne the eater, but to commit that to God, and finally that neither nother should condemne the other for eating or not eating.

Now the Protestants fondly apply al this to the fastes of the Church, and differences of meates in the same: as though the Church did forbid any meate vvholly neuer to be eaten or touched, or made any creatures vncleane, or other vvise prescribed any abstinence, then for chastising of mens bodies and service of God. It is a great blindness that they can put no difference betvvixt Christes fast of fourtie daies, Mat. 4. Johns abstaining from al delicate meates and drinks, Mat. 3. 11. the vvidowv Annes, Luc. 2. 37. the Nazareites, Num. 6. the Recabites, Ierem. 35. 14. the Niniuites, Ion. 3. S. Pauls, 2 Cor. 11. 27. S. Timothees, 1 Tim. 5. 23. Johns Disciples and Christis Disciples fast Mat. 9. 14. 15. (Which he said they should keepe after his departure from them:) and the ceremonial distinction of creatures and meates, cleane and vncleane, in the old Law. of vvich it is euident the Apostle treateth in al this chapter, & of none other at al. Therefore vvhen the Protestants by the vvordes of this place vvould proue, that vve be either made free from fasting and from obeying the Churches commaundement or folowing Christes example in that matter, or that the obseruers of Christian fastes be vveake in faith, & ought not in any vvise cõdemne of sinne the breakers of the prescribed fastes of the holy Church, they doe abuse ignorantly or vvilfully the Apostles vvordes and discourse.

Folish Heretikes see not the differēces of things.

Distinction of daies.

1. Bevvvne day and day.] By the like deceite they abuse this place against the Holydaies of Christ and his B. mother and Saincs, vvich concerneth onely the Ievves festiuities and obseruation of times, vvhereof in the Epistle to the Galatians c. 4. 10.

The text explicated concerning every mans cõscience in Iudaical meates and drinks.

6. Every one in his ovvne sense.] The Apostle doth not giue freedom, as the Churches enemies vvould haue it, that every man may doe or thinke vvhat he list. but in this matter of Iudaical obseruation of daies and meates, & that for a time onely, til the Christian religion should be perfectly establisshed, he vvould haue no restraint made, but that every one should be borne vvithal in his ovvne sense: yet so, that they should not condemne one an other, nor make necessitie of saluation in the obseruation of the Iudaical rites of meates, daies, &c.

Not eating, but disobedience damnable.

17. Not meate and drinke.] The substance of religion or the kingdom of God standeth not in meate or drinke, and therefore the better might they vse indifferencie and toleration in that point for a time, for peace sake and to auoid scandal. but if the precept of Moyse Law had bound still as before, then (not for the meates sake, but for the disobedience) it had been damnable to haue eaten the vncleane meates.

22. Haue it vvith thy self.] Thou that art perfect, and beleuest or knowest certainly that thou art free from the Law concerning meates and festiuities, yet to the trouble and hinderance of the feeble that can not yet be brought so far, be discrete & vtter not thy self out of season.

To doe against our conscience, is sinne.

31. He that discerneth.] If the vveake haue a conscience, and should be driuen to eat the things vvich in his ovvne hart he thinketh he should not doe, he committeth deadly sinne, because he doth against his conscience, or against his ovvne pretended knowledge.

Vvhat actions of infidels are sinne, and what are not.

32. Al this is not of faith.] The proper sense of this speech is, that every thing that a man doeth against his knowledge or conscience, is a sinne, for so by the circumstance of the letter, faith must here be taken, though S. Augustine sometimes applieth it also to proue that al the actions of infidels (meaning those vvorkes vvich directly procede of their lacke of faith) be sinnes. But in any vvise take heede of the Heretikes commentarie, vvho hereby vvould proue that the inndel sinneth in honouring his parents, fighting for his countrie, tilling his ground, and in al other vvorkes. And no maruel that they so hold of infidels, vvho maintaine * that Christian men also offend deadly in euery good decde.

16. Salute one an other. Neuer Sectmaisters made more foule or hard shifts to proue or defend falschod, then the Protestants: but in two points, about S. Peter specially, they passe euen themselues in impudencie. The first is, that they hold he vvas not preferred before the other Apostles, vvhich is against al Scriptures most evidently. The second is, that he vvas neuer at Rome, vvhich is against al the Ecclesiastical histories, al the Fathers Greeke and Latine, against the very sence and light of the monuments of his Seate, Sepulcher, doctrine, life, and death there. Greater evidence certes there is thereof and more vveighty testimonie, then of Romulus, Numas, Cæsars, or Ciceros being there: yet were he a very brutish man that vvould deny this to the dilcredite of so many vvriters and the vvhole vvorld. Much more monstrous it is, to heare any deny the other. Theo-spirit, so neere the Apostles time deceiue or be deceiued? how could Calvin and his, after fiftene hundred yeres knovv that vvhich none of them could see?

Some great argument must they needes haue to controule the credite of the vvhole vvorld.
The Protestants This of truth is here their argument, neither haue they a better in any place, to vvit, If S. Peter great argument, had bene at Rome, S. Paul vvould haue saluted him, as he did others here. in the end of his letter that Peter was to the Romanes. Is not this a high point to disproue al antiquitie by? Any man of discretion may neuer at Rome. straight see, that S. Peter might be knovven vnto S. Paul to be out of the Citie, either for persecution or busines, vvhen this epistle vvas vvritten, (for he went often out as S. Epiphanius declareth) & so the omitting to salute him, can proue no more, but that then he vvas not in Rome. but it prouueth not so much neither, because the Apostle might for respect of his dignitie and other the Churches affaires, write vnto him special letters, and so had no cause to salute him in his common Epistle. Or hovv knovv they that this Epistle was not sent inclosed to S. Peter, to be deliuered by his meanes to the vvhole Church of the Romanes in some of their assemblies? it is very like it was recommended to some one principal man or other that is not here named: and tventy causes there may be vnknovven to vs, Why he saluted him not: but no cause vvhy our Adueraries vpon such friuolous reasons should reprove an approued truth. For euen as wel might they say that S.
Iohn vvas neuer at Ephesus, because S. Paul in his Epistle to the Ephesians doth not salute him.

the vvise? vvhere is the Scribe? vvhere is the disputer of this vvorld? Hath not God made the vvisedom of this vvorld folish? † For 21 because in the vvisedom of God the vvorld did not by vvise-preach Christ crucified, to the Ievves certes a scandal, and to the Gentiles, folishnes: † butto the called Ievves & Greekes, 24 Christ the povver of God and the vvisedom of God. † For 25 that vvhich is the folish of God, is vviser then men: and that vvhich is the infirme of God, is stronger then men. † For 26 see your vocation brethren, that not many vvise according to the flesh, not many mightie, not many noble: † but the fo- 27

s. In al knowledge.] Obserue that the Apostles neuer vvrote their letters but to such as vvere conuerted to Christes faith before. for men can not lightly learne the Christian religion by reading Scriptures, but by hearing, and by the presence of their teachers, which may instruct them at large and particularly of euery Article, as clerely & breefely by letters they could not doe. Neither doth now any man learne his faith first, but by hearing of his parents and Maisters. for if vve should vvhen vve come to yeres of discretion, be set to picke our faith out of the Scriptures, there vvould be a made vvorke and many faithes among vs.

Faith cometh by hearing rather then reading.

s. Who is made.] He meaneth not, as our Aduersaries captiously take it, that vve haue no iustice, sapience, nor sanctity of our ovvne, other then Chrutes imputed to vs: but the sense is, that he is made the author, giuer, and meritorious cause of al these vertues in vs. for so the Apostle interpreteth him self plainly in the 6 Chapter folowing, vvhen he vvriteth thus, You be vvashed, you be iustified, you be sanctified in the name of our Lord I E S V S C H R I S T and in the Spirit of our God.

Christ is made our iustice, because he is the author of the iustice in vs.

How Angels

know our co-

11. But the spirit of man.] One man can not knowv an others cogitations naturally: but God giueh to prophets and other, euen in this vvorlde oftentimes, by extraordinary grace to knowv mens secretes. As he did to S. Peter, to knowv the fraude of Ananias and Saph-

12. That vve may knowv.] The Protestants that challenge a particular spirit revealing to eche one his ovne predestination, iustification, and saluation, vould draw this text to that purpose. Vvhich importeth nothing els (as is plaine by the Apostles discourse) but that the holy Ghost hath giuen to the Apostles, & by them to other Christian men, to knowv Gods ineffable gifts bestowed vpon the beleeuers in this time of grace: that is, Christes Incarnation, Passion, presence in the Sacrament, & the incomprehensible ioyes of heauen, vvhich Pagans, Iewes, and Heretikes deride.

The sensual man.

14. The sensual man.] The sensual man is he specially, hat measureh these heavenly mysteries by natural reason, humane prudence, external sense, and vvorldey affection, as the Iew, Pagane, and Heretike doe: and sometime both here and eis vvhether, the more infirme and ignorant sort of Christian men be called sensual or carnal also, vvhoh being occupied in secular affaires, and giuen to sensual ioy and vvorldey pleasures, haue no such sense nor feeling of these great gifts of God, as the perfecter sort of the faithful haue. Vvhoh trying these high pointes of religion, not by reason and sense, but by grace, faith, and Spirit, be therefore called spiritual. The spiritual then is he, that iudgeth and discerneth the truth of such things as the carnal can not attaine vnto: that do h by the spirit of the Church, vvhether of he is partaker in the vnitie of the same, not onely see the errorrs of the carnal, but condem-neth them and iudgeth euery povver resisting Gods spirit and vvorde: the carnal Iew, Heathen, or Heretike, hauing no meanes nor right to iudge of the said spiritual man. For when the spiritual is said to be iudged of none, the meaning is not that he should not be subiect or obedient to his Pastors and spiritual Powvers and to the vvhole Church, specially for the trial or examination of al his life, doctrine, and faith: but that a Catholike man and namely a teacher of Catholike doctrine in the Church, should not be any vvhith subiect to the iudgement of the Heathen or the Heretike, nor care vvhath of ignorance or infidelitie they say against him: for such carnal men haue no iudgement in such things, nor can attaine to the Churches vvifedom in any ceremonie, mysterie, or matter vvhich they condemn.

The spiritual man.

How the spiritual man iudgeth al, & is iudged of none.

Therefore

Therefore S. Irenæus excellently declaring that the Church and euery spiritual childe thereof, iudgeth and condemneth al false Prop:hets and H:eretikes of vvhath sort so euer, at length he concludeth vvvith these notable vvordes: The spiritual shal iudge also all that make schismes, vvhich be cruel, not hauing the loue of God, and respecting their owne priuate, more then the vniuersitie of the Church: mangle, deuide, and (as much as in them lieth) kill for smal causes the great and glorious body of Christ, speaking peace, and seeking battaile. He shal iudge also them that be out of the truth, that is to say, out of the Church: vvhich Church shal be vnacq: no mans iudgement. for to the Church are al things knowen. in vvhich is perfect faith of the Father, and of al the dispensation of Christ, and firme knoweledge of the Holy Gho:st that teacheth al truth.

The Church is vnder no mans iudgement.

CHA. III.

If they vvill not be carnal shil, they must boast in God only, & not in their preachers, which are but hu ministers, so and needs to looke vvell how they preach: is becau: not al preaching, though it be Catholike, is meritorious: but rather it buildeth matter to be purged by fire, vvhich is vaine and vnfruitful: (as also any other like vvorkes of other Catholikes.) marie if it be heretical, destroying the temple of God, then it vvorketh damnation. is The remedie is, to humble them selves and referre al to God.

1. Euery man shal receiue according.] A most plaine text for prooffe that men by their labours, and by the diuerticies thereof, shal be diuersly revvarded in heauen: and therefore that by their vvørkes proceeding of grace, they do deserue or merite heauen, and the more or lesse ioy in the same. for though the holy Scripture comonly vse not this vvord merite, yet in places innumerable of the old and new Testament, the very true sense of merite is contened. and so often as the vvord, merces, and the like be vsed, they be euer vnderstood as correlatiues or correspondent vnto it. for if the ioy of heauen be retribution, repaiment, hire, vvages for vvørkes (as in infinite places of holy Scripture,) then the vvørkes can be none other but the valure, desert, price, vvorth, and merite of the same. And in deede this vvord, revvard, vvvhich in our English tonge may signifie a voluntary or bountiful gift, doth not so vvell expresse the nature of the^a Latin vvord, or the Greeke, vvvhich are rather the very stipend that the hired vvorkeman or iournieman couenanteth to haue of him vvwhose vvørke he doth, and is a thing equally and iustly ansvvering to the time and vvweight of his trauels and vvørkes (in vvvhich sense the Scripture saith, Dignus est operarius mercede sua. the vvorkeman is vvworthy of his hire) rather then a free gift. though, because faithful men must acknowvledge that their merites be the giftes and graces of God, they rather vse the vvord revvard, then hire, stipend, or repaiment. though in deede it be al one, as you may see by diuers places of holy vvrite. 25. * My merces (revvard) is vvwith me to render to euery one^a according to hu vvørkes. And Our Lord vvvil render vnto me according to my iustice. Psf. 17. And the very vvword is self merite (equivalent to the Greeke) is vsed thus, Mercie shal make a place to euery one^a according to the merite of vvørkes. Ecclesi 16, 15. And if you doe your iustice before men, you shal not haue reVVard in heauen. Mat. 6, 1. Vvwhere you see that the revvard of heauen is recompense of iustice. And the euasion of the Heretikes is triuolous and euidently false, as the former and like vvordes do conuince, for they say heauen is our Merces or revvard, not because it is due to our vvørkes, but to the promes of God: vvwhere the vvordes be plaine, According to euery mans vvørkes or labours. vpon vvvhich vvørkes, and for vvvhich vvørkes conditionally, the promes of heauen vvvas made.

12. Upon thu foundation.] The foundation is Christ, and faith in him vvworking by charitie.

The vpper building may be either pure and perfe& matter of gold, siluer, and pretious stone, vvvhich (according to the most authentical and probable exposition) be good vvørkes of charitie and al Christian iustice done by Gods grace: or els, vvwood, hay, stubble, vvvhich signifie the manifold actes of mans infirmitie and his venial sinnes. day, if by penance or other means in the Church, the said venial finnes be before hand cleansed, there shall neede no purgiug at al, but they shall straight receiue the reward due to them.

13. Shal be manifest.] Vvwhether our life and woikes be pure and neede no cleansing, novv in this vvorld is hard to iudge: but the day of our Lord, vvwhich is at our death, vvill make it plaine in vvhat termes euery mans life is tovwards God. for then Purgatorie fire shall reueale and proueit. for, vvholoouer hath any impure matter of venial finnes or iuch other dettes, to Gods iustice paible and purgable, muft into that fire, and after due paiment and cleanting, be saued through the same. Vvhere the vvorkes of the perfect men and such as died vvith al dettes paid, cleansed, or forgiuen, are quitted from the fire, and neuer incurre damage, paine, or losse thereby. The places of fatners expounding this for Purgatorie, be very many moit euident, vvwhich are cited in the last Annotation folovving.

13. The day of our Lord shall declare.] That this purgation rather signifieth the place of Gods iustice after our death, then any affliction in this life, the Apostles precie specifying of fire declareth, and of reuealing and notifying the difference of mens vvorkes by the same: vvwhich is not done euidently euer in this life: and namely the vvord, day of our Lord: vvwhich commonly and properly signifieth in Scripture and namely in this Apostle (1 Cor. 5. 5. 2 Cor. 5. 10. Philip. 1. 10. 6. 1 Thes. 5. 2. 2 Thes. 2. 2.) either the particular, or the general iudgement: and therefore that the trial spoken of, is not properly nor litterally meant any affliction or aduerfite of this lite, as Caluin also cofelleth, coyning a folish nevv construction of his ovvne. Vvhere you may note also in that mans Commentarie, that this vvord, dies Domini, vvvas so prejudicial againft him and al other expositions of the trial to be made in this vvorld, that he vvould gladly haue (Domini) out, reading thus, A day shall come vvwhich shall open &c. Vvhere vnderstand, that if it vvere only Dies (as * in the Greeke) yet thereby also the Scripture is vvont to signifie the self same thing: as, 2 Tim. 1. 12. 28. and 2 Tim. 4. 8. and Heb. 10. 25, the day, as in this place, vvith the greeke atticle only, vvwhich is al one vvith Dies illa, or Dies Domini.

And not al perhaps that are reuoked, shall be amended, but yet some there shall be saued by amending. It shall be so surely, because amending is named: yet so as by fire. but some there shall be that shall be rebuked, and not amended. to vvhom he shall say, Goe ye into euorlasting fire. Fearing therefore these more greuou paines, he desireth that he may neither be reuoked in indignation by eternal fire, nor amended in hu vvrasch. that is to say, Purge me in this life, and make me such an one as shall not neede the amending fire, being for them vvlich shall be saued, yet so as by fire. vvwherefore? but because here they build vpon the foundation, vvood, hay, stubble? for if they did build gold, siluer, and precious stones, they should be secure from both fires, not onely from that eternal vvlich shall torment the impious eternally: but also from that vvwhich shall amend them that shall be saued by fire. for it is said, he shall be safe, yet so as by fire. And because it is said, he shall be safe, that fire is cotemned. Yea verely though safe by fire, yet that fire shall be more greuou, then vvhatsoeuer a man can suffer in this life. And you know how great euils the vvicked haue suffered, and may suffer: yet they haue suffered such as the good also might suffer. for vvhat hath any malefactor suffered by the lawres, that a Martyr hath not suffered in the confession of Christ? 1. But not iustificed.] The Heretikes are certaine that they be in Gods grace, but S. Paul though guiltie of no crime in his conscience, durst not assure him self that he vvvas iustificed, neither could take vpon him to be iudge of his ovvne hart and cogitations, vvwhether they vvvere pure or no: but the trial thereof he left onely to Gods iudging day.
 2. In rodde.] The Apostles haue povver of discipline and censures against offenders, and povver of gentlenes, meekenes, and indulgence also: to vse either punishing or pardoning, according to their vvvisdom, and according to the occasions of time and place.

No man sure of grace or iustification.

ANNOTATIONS
CHAP. V.

1. 1 absent.] S. Paul here vseth his Apostolike povver, of binding this incestuous person, excommunicating him by his letters and Mandatum, though absent.

The authority of Ecclesiastical censures is in the Clergie only, and is executed in the name of Christ.

2. You being gathered.] Though he commaunded the act should be done in the face of the Church, as such sentences and centures be at this day executed also, yet the iudgement and authority of giuing sentence vvvas in him self, and not in the vvhole multitude, as the Protestants and the popular Sectaries affirme. for the povver of binding and loosing vvvas not giuen to the vvhole Church, but as in the persons of the Prelats, & to them for the benefite of the vvhole. Vvherevpon S. Chrysostome vpon those vvordes, Dis Ecclesia, T et the Church, Mat. 18: Complaine to the Church, that is, saith he, to the Prelats and Presidents thereof.

3. Wish the vertue.] Al such great povver ouer sinners, is holden and exercised in the name and vertue of CHRIST IESVS. And vvhofoeuer setteth light by it, despiseth our Lordes name and povver.

The terrible sentence of excommunication.

4. To Satan.] To assure vs that al excommunicate persons be in the povver and possession of the Diuel, and quite out of Christes protection as soone as they be separated by the Churches sentence, from her body and the Sacraments and felovvship of Chriitian Catholike men: it pleased God to giue povver to the Apostles and Prelates in the primitiue Church, to caule the Diuel straight vpon their sentence of excommunication, to inuade tne body of the excommunicate, and to torment him corporally. so Christ excommunicated Iudas, and the Diuel entered into him, and he went forth of the happie felovvship of the Apostles. Jo. 13, 27. so this Apostle excommunicated Alexander and Hymenezus, and Satan straight tooke them: 1 Tim. 1. Yea it is thought that S. Peter excommunicated Ananias and Sapphira, and for signe of his povver and terrour of the sentence, strooke them both starke dead. Demirabil. S. Scriptura li. 8 c. 16 apud D. August. Vvhich miraculous povver though it be not ioyned novv to that sentence, yet as far as concerneth the punishment (spiritual, vvvhich it specially appertaineth vnto, it is as before, and is by the iudgement of the holy Doctours (Cypr. ep. 62. nu. 3. Chryl. in 1 Tim. 1. ho. 5. Ambros. in 1 Tim. 1. Hiero. ep. ad Heliod. c. 7. August. de cor. & gra. c. 11.) the terriblest and greatest punishment in the vvorld, yea far passing al earthly paine and torment of this life, and being a very resemblance of damnation, and so often called by the Fathers, namely by S. Augustine. And by this spiritual sword (saith S. Cyprian) al must locis citantur in their soules, that obey not the Priests of Christ in the new law, as they that vvvere disobedient to the iudges of the old law, vvvere slaine vvith the corporal sword. Vvould God the vvorld knew vvhat a maruelous punishment Christ hath appointed the Priests to execute vpon the offenders of his lawes, and specially vpon the disobedient, as Heretikes namely.

Puritie is receiuing the B. Sacrament.

5. Let vs feast.] The Paschal lambe, vvvhich vvvas the most expresse figure of Christ euery vvay, vvvas first sacrificed and aftervvard eaten vvith azymes or vneleuened bread. so Christ our Paschal, being then newly sacrificed on the Crosse, is recommended to them as to be eaten vvith al puritie and sinceritie, in the holy Sacrament. Vvhich mysterie the holy Church in these vvordes commendeth to the faithful euery yere at the feast of Easter.

Vve are bound to auoid, not al signers, but

6. Not to take meate.] It is not meant that vve should separate our selues corporally from al sinners, or that vve might refuse to liue in one Church or felovvship of Sacraments vvith them, vvvhich vvvas the errour and occasion of the Donatistes great schisme: nor that euery man is straight after he hath committed any deadly sinne, excommunicated, as some Lutherans hold: but that vve should

should auoid them vwhen the Church hath excommunicated them for such. though in minde, and condemnation of their faults, euery one ought to be alwayes far from them. As for the Heathen and Pagans, vvhich be not vnder the Churches discipline, and at that time in external vvorlly affaires dealt vwith Christians and liued amongett them vvinether they vvould or no, the Apottle did not forbid Christians their companie.

11. The euil one. He concludeth that though they can not, nor him self neither, cut of the Heathen that be publike offenders. yet the il perion by him excommunicated being one of their ovvne body, they may cut of, as is aforeiaid, and auoid his companie. Vpon vvhich commaundement of the Apottle, vve see that vve are bound by Gods vvord to auoid al companie and conuerfation vwith the excommunicate, except in cafes of neccellitie, and the ipiritual profite of the perion excommunicated.

CHAP. VI.

ANNO TATIONS CHAP. VI.

Going to law before heathen or heretical iudges.

6. Contendeth in iudgement.] To be giuen much to brabling and litigiousnes for euery trifle, to spend a pound rather then lose a peny, the Apostle much reprehendeth in Christian men. For a Christian man to dravv an other to the iudgements seates and courtes of Heathen Princes (vvich then onely reigned) and not to suffer their controuersies and quarels to be taken vp among them selues brotherly and peaceably, was a great fault : as, for one Catholike to draw an other for mere trifles, before secular or heretical Officers, is a very vnchristian part.

Going to lawv not forbidde : bus to agree othervvise, better.

7. A fault.] He forbade not al iudgements of controuersies, but onely signified that it was a fault, and that it proceeded of some iniuries done one to an other, and imperfections, that they so molested one an other : and that it had been more agreable to Christian perfection and charitie, rather to tolerate and suffer a smal iniurie, then to draw his fellow to iudgement seates.

ANNOTATIONS
CHAP. VII.

2. His ovvne vvife.] He saith not, as the Protestants here pretend to excuse the vnlavvful conjunction of Votaries, Let every one marie: but, let every one haue, keepe, or vse his ovvne vvife to vvhom he vvas matied before his conuersion. for the Apostle ansvvereth here to the first question of the Corinthians, vvvhich vvas not, vvwhether it vvwere lavvful to marie, but vvwhether they vvwere not bound vpon their conuersion, to absteine from the company of their vvviues married before in their infidelitie, as some did persuade them that they ought to doe. Hiero. li. 1. cont. Iovin. c. 4. Chryf. in hunc locum ho. 19.

The Apostle biddeth not al to marie, but to keepe their vvviues before married.

3. Let the husband render.] These vvordes open the Apostles intention and talke to be onely of such as are already married, and to instruct them of the bond and obligation that is betvvene the married couple for rendring of the dette of carnal copulation one to an other: declaring that the married persons haue yelded their bodies so one to an other, that they can not vvwithout mutual consent, neither perpetually, nor for a time, defraude one the other.

5. Giue your self to praier.] This time, & the Heretikes doctrine, and high estimatiõ of matrimoniall actes, are far from the puritie of the Apostolike and primitiue Church, vvwhen the Christians to make their praiers and fastings more acceptable to God, abstained by mutual consent euen from their lavvful vvviues. our nevv Maisters not much absteyning (as it may be thought) from their vvviues for any such matter. And yet S. Augustine saith, the Prelate should passe other in this case, and thinke that not to be lavvful for him, that may be borne in others, because he must daily supply Christes roome, offer, baptize, and pray for the people. So saith he li. 1. q. ex vtroque test. q. 127 in fine. See S. Hiero. li. 1. c. 19 aduers. Iovin. S. Ambr. li. 1. Offic. c. vlt. But alas for the people, vvwhose married Pastors are in this point far vvvorise then the vulgar folke, neither teaching continencie, nor giuing good example.

Continencie in married folkes for praier sake.

6. By indulgence, not commaundement.] Lest some might misconstre his former vvordes, as though he had precisely commaunded married persons not to abstaine perpetually from carnal copulation, or not to giue their content one to an other of continencie but for a time onely: he declareth plainly that he gaue no rule or precept absolutely therein, but that he spake al the foresaid, condescending to their infirmitie onely, insinuating that continencie from carnal copulation is much better, and that him self kept it continually. Aug. de bon. coniug. c. 10. Enchirid. c. 78.

Perpetual continencie, euen in married folkes, better then carnal copulation.

7. A proper gift.] To such as may lavvfully marie, or be already married, God giueth not al vvvaies that more high and special gift or grace of continencie, though euery one of them al that duely aske and labour for it, might haue it: but such are not bound to endeouour or seeke for it al vvvaies, and therefore can not be commaunded to abstaine further then they like. but vvwhensoever a man is bound to abstaine, either by vvovv or any other necessaric occasion (as if one of the parties be in prison, vvarre, banishment, siknes, or absent perpetually by lavvful diuorce) the other must needes in paine of damnation abstaine, and can not excuse the vvwant of the gift of chastitie. for

Who are bound to liue continently: and that God giueth this gift to al that aske it.

And it vvwere a great maruel vvwhy Adult. so fevv of the nevv Sectes or rather none novv a daies haue that gift, but that vve see it is obtained Coniug. to. by those meanes vvvhich our forefathers vsed, & they vse not at all. To liue in mariage continently vvwithout vwithout the breach of coniugal fidelity, is a gift of God also, but men must not breake their faith of vvedlocke for vwant of it, but must know that God giueth that gift to such as humbly aske it of him. August. de grat. & lib. arbitrio c. 4. De continent. c. 1.

That be free, not to vovved persons. 9. Better to marry.] It is better to marry for the said persons that be free, then to be overthrown and fall into fornication. for, to burne, or, to be burnt, is not to be tempted onely

(as the Protestants thinke that picke quarels easely to marry), but it signifieth * to yeld to concupiscence either in minde or external vvorke. Vve say alio, for such as be free, for concerning others lawfully made Priests, and such as otherwise haue made vow of chastitie, they can not marry at al, and therefore there is no comparison in them betwixt mariage and fornication or burning, for their mariage is but pretended, and is the vvorst sort of continencie and fornication or burning

Augustine (li. 3 de pec. mer. & remis. c. 12.) concludeth against the Pelagians, as vve may doe against the Calvinists, holding Christian mens children to be holy from their mothers wombe and not to neede Baptisme, that vvhath other sanctification soeuer it be that is here meant, it can not be ynough to saluation vwithout faith, Baptisme, &c.

To doe that vvhich is counseled, is not necessarie, because one may be sauē notwithstanding, but he that vvil doe that vvhich he is counseled vnto, shall haue a higher degree of glorie. He that fulfilleth not a commaundement, except he doe penance, can not escape punishment. August. li. de virg. c. 13. & 17.

Virginie counseled as more meritorious. 28. If a virgin marrie.] He speaketh not of that virgin vvhich hath dedicated her self to God, (for if any such mary, she shall be damned for breaking her first vow) but onely of yong maides vnmarried in the vworld. Hiero. adu. Iouin. li. 1. c. 7. Chrys. ho 20. Theodoret, Photius, and the other Greeke Doctōrs vpon this place apud Oecum. Epiph. heres. 61.

28. Tribulation of the flesh.] They are maruelously deceiued (saith S. Augustine li. de virg. c. 13) that thinke the Apostle counseleth virginitie rather then mariage, onely for that mariage hath many miseries and molestations ioyned vnto it, which by virginitie shall be auoided, & not in respect of the greater reward in heauen. for the Apostles prouident counseling to virginitie, is for the next life, and he alleageth these troubles of mariage in that sense specially as they be a hinderance from the seruice of God here, and therefore an impediment to vs toward the next life and the more ample ioyes thereof.

The continencie of married folke. Their perpetuall continencie, best. 29. As though they had not.] He exhorteth that such as haue vviues, should not vvholy bestow them selues in the vaine transitorie pleasure and voluptuousnes of their flesh, but liue in such moderation, that their mariage hinder them as little as may be, from spiritual cogitatio. Vvhich is best fulfilled of them that by mutual consent do vvholy containe, vvhether they haue had children or none, contemning carnal issue for the ioyes of heauen. And these mariages be more blessed then any other, saith S. Augustine de Ser. Do. in monte li. 1. cap. 14.

Virginie preferred, and vwhy. Vwhy continencie is required in the clergie. 32. Careful for the things of our Lord.] The Protestants might here learne if they list, first that virginitie is not onely preferred before mariage, for that it is a more quiet state of life in this world, but for that it is more conuenient for the seruice of God. Secondly that virginitie hath a grateful puritie and sanctitie both of body & soule, vvhich mariage hath not. Thirdly, they may learne the cause why the Church of God requireth chastitie in the clergie, and forbiddeh not onely fornication; but al carnal copulation euen in lawfull vvedlocke: vvhich is not onely to the end that Gods Priests be not diuided from him by the clogges of mariage, but also that they be cleane and pure from the fleshy actes of copulation.

CHAP. VIII.

He rebuketh the learned who in pride of their knowledge did eat idolothya, that is things offered to Idols, using (as they said) their libertie: but not considering that the ignorant tooke their doing as an example for them to frequent such meates so, as they did before in their Paganisme, vvas opinion that they did iustifie the eaters.

 8 immolated to Idols, vve knowv that an Idol is nothing in

ANNOTATIONS
 CHAP. VIII.

1. vve al haue knowvledge.] The spiritual and perfectly instructed Christians knewv no meates, norv to be vncleane, neither for signification, as in the Lawv of Moyses: nor alwaies vncleane.

Giuing of scandal reprehended.

By nature and creation, as the Manichees thought: nor by any other pollution, as in that they were offered to Idols: and therefore they did eat boldly of such meates as were sacrificed, contemning and condemning their Idols as mere nothing, and the worship of them as the honour of things imaginarie. which their facte, for their want of discretion and charitie, and for the vie of that their libertie to the offense and scandal of the vveake, the Apostle doth here reprehend.

tiques ridiculously apply

ſtinence.

7. Some wish a conscience.] The perfecter mens fault was, that they gaue offense by their eating, to the vveaker Christians. Who seeing them whom they reputed wise and learned, to eat the meates offered to Idols, conceiued that there was some vertue and sanctificatiō in those meates, from the Idol to which they were offered: and though that such things were or might be eaten with the same conscience and deuotion as before their conuersion.

Going to the Communion, vvhath a sinne
in Catholikes.

Therefore the case standing thus, and the Apostles discourse of eating or not eating meates being so as is declared (a thing so euident that it admitterh no other interpretation) if the Protestants apply any of this admonition against our faſtes in the Cath. Church, they be so to ridiculous.

10. In the Idols temple.] Like as now, some Catholikes haue said, they know that Caluins communion is but as other bread and wine. But yet the ignorant seeing such goe to the Communion, thinke that it is a good act of Religion. Yea vvhathsoeuer they pretend, it must needes seeme an honour to Caluins Communion, when they are seen in the Idols temple solemnly fitting or communicating at the abominable table.

CHAP. IX.

To them that so vaunted their libertie about Idolothya, he bringeth his owne example, to wit, that he also had libertie to liue by the Gospel, but yet that he used it not, so to auoid scandal of the infirme, and because it was more meritorious. 14 Declaiming against their securitie, and shewing them by similitudes and examples, 14 both of himself, 1 And of the Israeites, that saluation is not so lightly come by: 14 and so concludeth againe against eating of Idolothya, because it is also to committ idolatrie, 22 and not onely to giue it example to the infirme.

14 He nameth Cephaz (that is Peter) to proue his purpose by the example of the cheefe and Prince of the Apostles. S. Ambro. S. Chryf. Oram. vpon this place.

 might gaine them that vvere vnder the Lavv. to them that vvere vvithout the Lavv, as though I vvere vvithout the Lavv (vvhereas I vvas not vvithout the lavv of God, but vvas in the lavv of Christ) that I might gaine them that 22 vvere vvithout the Lavv. † To the vveake I became vveake, that I might gaine the vveake. To al men: I became al things, 23 that I might saue al. † And I doe al things for the Gospel,
 "that I may be made partaker thereof.
 24 † Knowv you not that they that runne in the race, al rūne in deede, but one receiueth the price? "So runne that you 25 may obtaine. † And euery one that striueth for the maistrice, refraineth him self from al things: and they certes, that they may receiue a corruptible crowne: but vve an incorruptible.
 26 † I therefore so runne, not as it vvere at an vncertaine thing:
 27 so I fight, not as it vvere beating the aire: † but "I chastise my preached to others, my self become reprobate.

C H A P. IX.

- The Heretikes fond pretense of Gods honour.
Heretical translation.
1. My worke.] As he called him self before Gods coadiutor, so here he boldly also challengeth the Corinthians conuersion to be his handy worke in our Lord: nothing derogating thereby fro Christ, as the Protestants rudely charge the Farbers & Catholike men (vn der pretense of Gods honour) for vsing such phrases or speaches in the Apostles sence, of the Saints or Sacraments.
5. A woman a sister.] The Heretikes peruersely (as they do al other places for the aduantage of their Sect) expound this of the Apostles Wiues, and for, woman, translate, wife, al belles founding vvedding to them. Vwhere the Apostle meaneth plainely the deuout vvomen that after the maner of Ievvrie did serue the preacher of necessaries, of vvwhich sort many folovved Christ, and sustained him and his of their substance. So doth S. Chrysofome, Theodorete, and al the Greekes (Origen in collect. super hunc lo.) take it: So doth S. Augustine De op. Monach. c. 2. and S. Hierom li. 1 adu. Iouinianum c. 14. both disputing and prouing it by the very vvordes of the text. S. Ambrose also vpon this place. And the thing is most plainely, for to vvhat end should he talke of burdening the Corinthias vvith finding his vvife, vvhen him self (c. 7, 7. 3.) clerely saith that he vvvas single?
- Pastors and preachers due.
7. Who plaiesh the soudiar?] He proueth by the Scriptures and natural reasons that Preachers and Pastors may challenge their finding of their flocke, though him self for causes had not, nor intended not to vie his right and libertie therein.
- V worke of supererogation.
16. If I Euangelize.] If I should preach either of compulsion and seruil feare, or mere necessity, not hauing othervvise to liue and sustaine my self in this vvorld, I could not looke for reppard in heauen. but novv doing it, not onely as enioyned me, but also as of loue and charitie, and freely vvithout putting any man to cost, and that voluntarily and of very desire to saue my hearers, I shall haue my reppard of God, yea and a reppard of Supererogation, vvwhich is giuen to them that of abundant charitie do more in the seruice of God then they be commaunded, as S. Augustine expoundeth it. De op. Mon. c. 5.
- Doing vvell in respect of reward.
23. That I may be partaker.] A singular place to conuince the Protestants, that vvill not haue men vvorke vvell in respect of reppard at Gods hand: the Apoitle contending expressly, that al this that he doth either of duety or of Supererogation aboue duety (as to preach of freecost, and to vvorke vvith his ovvne hands to get his ovvne meate and his fellowes, and to abtaine from many lawvful things) al is, the rather to attaine the reppard of heauen.
- Running for the game.
24. So runne.] If such as runne for a price, to make them selues more svvift, and to vvinne the game, abtaine from many meates and pleasures: vvhat should not vve doe or suffer to vvinne the crowne of glorie, proposed and promised to none but such as runne, trauel, and endeouour for it?
- Penance meritorious.
27. I chastise.] The goale of euerlasting glorie is not promised nor set forth for onely-faith men, for such runne at randon: but it is the price of them that chastise and subdue their bodies and fleshy desires by fasting, vvatching, voluntary pouertie, and other afflictions. Lord, how farre is the carnal doctrine of the Sectaries and the maners of their daies from the Apostles spirit. Vwherein euen vve that be Catholikes, though vve do not condemne vvith the Protestants these voluntarie afflictions as superfluous (much leise as superstitious or iniurious to Christs death,) but much comend them, yet vve vie nothing the zeale and diligence of our first Christian aunceters herein, and therefore are like to be more subiect to Gods temporal chastisements, at the least in the next life, then they vvere.
- S. Paul had not the Protestants securitie of saluation.
72. Left perhaps.] Here may vve lambes tremble (saith a holy father) vvhen the ramme, the guide of the flocke, must so labour and punish him self (besides al his other miseries adioyned to the preaching of the Gospel) left perhaps he misse the marke. A man might thinke S. Paul should be as sure and as confident of Gods grace & saluation as vve poore vvretched caitiues: but the Heretikes vnhappy securitie, presumption, and faithles persuasion of their saluation is not fides Apostolorum but fides demoniorum, not the faith of the Apostles, but the faith of Devils.

ANNOTATIONS

CHAP. X.

The old figures of our Sacraments.

Vve receiue greater benefites by our Sacraments the the Iewes did by theirs.

The Apostle and auncient fathers speake couertly of the B. Sacrament.

The Apostles blessed the Chalice, & so consecrated.

3. The same.] The red sea and the cloud, a figure of our Baptisme: the Manna from heauen and vvater miraculously dravven out of the rocke, a figure of the holy Sacrament of Christes body and blood: our Sacraments containing the things and graces in truth, vvchich theirs only signified. And it is an impudent forgerie of the Caluinists, to vvrite vpon this place, that the Iewes received no lesse the truth and subitance of Christ and his benefites in their figures or Sacraments, then vve do in ours: and that they and vve al eate and drinke of the selfsame meate and drinke: the Apostle saying onely, that they among them selues did al feede of one bread, & drinke of one rocke: vvchich vvvas a figure of Christ, therein especially, that out of Christes side pearced vpon the Crosse, gushed out blood and vvater for the matter of our Sacraments.

Calu. in hunc loc.

15. As to vvise men.] To cause them to leaue the sacrifices and meates or dringes offered to Idols, he putteth them in minde of the onely true Sacrifice and meate and drinke of Christes body and blood: of vvchich and the sacrifice of Idols also, they might not be in any case pattakers. Vvling this terme, vt prudensibus loquor, in the same sense (as it is thought) as the Fathers of the primitive Church did giue a vvatch vvord of keeping secrete from the Infidels and vnbaptized, the mysterie of this diuine Sacrifice, by these vvordes, Norunt fideles, norunt qui initiati sunt. August. in Pf. 19. & 33. Conc. 1. 2. & Pf. 109. Ho. 21. c. 2. in lib. 50 hom. Orig. in Leuit. ho. 9. Chryf. ho. 27 in Gen. 17 sine ho. 5 ad ps. Antioch. ho. 5. in 1 Tim. S. Paul saith, I speake to you boldly of this mysterie as to the vvifer and better instructed in the same.

16. Which vve blesse.] That is to say, the Chalice of Consecration vvchich vve Apostles and Priests by Christes commision do consecrate, by vvchich speach as vvell the Caluinists (that vve no consecration of the cuppe at al, blasphemously calling it magical murmuration, and pertufully referring the benediction, to thankes giuing to God) as also the Lutherans be reluted, vvho affirme Christes body and blood to be made preient by receiuing & in the receiuing onely. for the Apostle expressly referreth the benediction to the chalice, and not to God, making the holy blood and the communicating thereof the effect of the benediction.

ἐὐλογεῖται.

16. The participation of the body.] The holy Sacrament and Sacrifice of Christs body and blood being received of vs, ioyneth vs in soule and body and engraffeth vs into Christ himself, making vs partakers and as a pecc of his body and blood. For not by loue or spirit onely (saith S. Chryostom) but in every deede vve are vnited in his flesh, made one body with him, members of his flesh and bones. Chryl. ho. 45 in lo. tub linem. And S. Cyril, Such is the force of mystical beneuolence that it maketh Christ corporally by communicating of his flesh to dwell in vs. Cyril li. 10. in lo. c. 13.

17. One bread, one body.] As vve be first made one with Christ by eating his body and drinking his blood, so secondly are vve conioyned by this one bread vvhich is his body, and cuppe vvhich is his blood, in the perfect vnion and fellowshipp of al Catholike men, in one Church vvhich is his body Mystical. Vvhich name of Body mystical is specially attributed and appropriated to this one commonwealth and Societe of faithful men, by reason that al the true perions and true members of the same, be maruelously knit together by Christs ovne one body, and by the self same blood in this diuine Sacrament. See S. August. li. 21, c. 25 de ciu. Dei. Hilar. li. 8 de Trin. circa med.

18. They that eat the hostes.] It is plaine also by the example of the Iewes in their Sacrifices, that he that eateth any of the host immolated, is partaker of the Sacrifice, and ioyned by office and obligation to God, of vvhote sacrifice he eateth.

19. It is il nos: aueyou.] I conclude then (saith the Apostle) thus: that as the Christian vvhich eateth and drinketh of the sacrifice or Sacrament of the altar, by his eating is participant of Christs body, and is ioyned in fellowshipp to al Christian people that eat and drinke of the same, being the host of the new Law: and as al that did eat of the hostes of the sacrifices of Moyles Law, were belonging and associated to that state and to God to vvhom the Sacrifice vvas done: euen so vvhotoeuer eateth of the meates offered to Idols, he shevveth and professeth him self to be of the Communion and Societe of the same Idols.

20. You can not drinke.] Vpon the premisses he vvarneth them plainely, that they must either forsake the sacrifice and fellowshipp of the Idols and Idolaters, or els refuse the Sacrifice of Christs body and blood in the Church. In al vvhich discourte vve may obserue that our bread and chalice, our table and altar, the participation of our host and oblation, be compared or resembled point by point, in al effects, conditions, and proprieties, to the altars, hostes, sacrifices and immolations of the Iewes and Gentils. Vvhich the Apostle vould not, nor could not haue done in this Sacrament of the Altar, rather then in other Sacraments or seruice of our religion, if it onely had not bene a Sacrifice and the proper vvorship of God among the Christians, as the other were among the Iewes and Heatenen. And so do al the Fathers acknowledge, calling it onely, & continually almost, by such termes as they do no other Sacrament or ceremonie of Christs religion: The lambe of God laid vpon the table: Conc. Nic. the vnbloudy seruice of the Sacrifice, In Conc. Ephel. ep. ad Nestor. pag. 605. *the Sacrifice of sacrifices: Dionys. Ec. ANNOTATIONS
 CHAP. XI.

2. My precepts.] Our Pastors and Prelates haue authoritie to commaund, and vve are bound to obey. And the Governors of the Church may take order and prescribe that vvhich is comely in euery state, as time and place require, though the things be not of the substance of our religion.

5. Euery woman.] Vvhat gifts of God so euer vvomen haue, though supernatural, as some had in the Primitiue Church, yer they may not forget their vvomanly shamefastnes, but shevv them selues subiect and modest, and couer their heads vwith a veile.

16. Custom.] If vvomen or other, to defend their disorder & malipertoes, dispute or alleage Scriptures and reasons, or require causes of their preachers vvhy & by vvhat authoritie they should be thus restrained in things indifferent, make them no other ansvver but this, This is the custome of the Church, this is our custome. Vvvhich is a goodly rule to repress the saucinesse of contentious anglers, vvvhich being out of al modestie and reason, neuer vvant vvordes and replies against the Church, Vvvhich Church if it could then by prescription of twenty or thirty yeres, and by the authority of one or two of their first preachers, stoppe the mouthes of the seditious: vvhat should not the custome of fiftene hundred yeres, & the decrees of many hundred Pastors, gaine of reasonable, modest, and humble men?

That heresies shall come, and vvherfore. 19. There must be heresies] Vvhen the Apostle saith, Heresies must be: He shevveth the euent, and nor that God hath directly so appointed it as necessarie. for, that they be, it commeth of mans malice and free vvil: but that they be conuerted to the manifestation of the good and constant in faith & the Churches vnitie, that is Gods special vvorke of prouidence that vvorketh good of euil. And for that there should fall Heresies and Schismes, specially concerning the Article and vse of the B Sacrament of the Altar, vvhereof he novv beginneth to treat, it may make vs matuel the lesse, to see so great dissensions, Heresies, and Schismes of the vvicked and vveake in faith concerning the same. Such things then vvil be, but vvo to him by vvhom scandals or Sectes do come.

Vvhat cōmoditie vve may make of heresies.

Let vs vse Heresikes, saith S. Augulline, not so that end to approue their errors, but that by defending the Catholike doctrine against their deceites, vve may be more watchful and wary: because it is most truly written, There must be heresies that the true and approved may be manifested or discovered from the holovv partes among you. Let vs use this benefite of Gods providence, for Heretikes be made of such as would erre or be naught, though they were in the Church: but being out, they profite vs exceedingly, not by teaching the truth which they know not, but by stirring up the carnal in the Church to seeke truth, and the spiritual Catholikes, to cleere the truth. for there be innumerable holy approved men in the Church, but they be not discerned from other among vs, nor manifest, so long as vve had rather sleepe in darknes of ignorance, then behold the light of truth. therefore many are raised out of their sleepe by Heretikes to see the day of God, and are glad thereof. August. c. 8. de vera relig.

Catholike

20. Our Lordes supper.] The Christians at or about the time of the Churches onely Sacrifice and their communicating thereof, kept great feastes: vvhich continued long, for that the reliefe of the poore vpon the common charges of the richer sort, and the charitie and vnitie of al sortes were much preserued thereby, for vvhich cause they were called αγάπαι, that is, Charities, of the auncient Fathers, and were kept commonly in Church houses or porches adjoining, or in the body of the Church (vvhich see Tertulian Apolog. c. 19. Clemens Alexand. S. Iustine, S. Augustine cont. Fausst. li. 20 c. 20.) after the Sacrifice and Communion was ended, as S. Chrysostom ho. 27. in 1 Cor. in initio iudgeth. Those feastes S. Paul here calleth Cenae Dominicas, because they were made in the Churches vvhich then were called Dominica, that is, Our Lordes houses. The disorder therefore kept among the Corinthians in these Church-feastes of Charitie, the Apostle seeketh here to redresse, from the foule abuses expressed here in the text. And as S. Ambrose in hunc locum, and most good authors now thinke, this vvhich he calleth Dominicam cenam, is not meant of the B. Sacrament, as the circumstances also of the text do giue, namely, the relieving of the poore, the rich mens priuate deuouring of al, not expecting one another, glottony and drunkenesse in the same, vvhich can not agree to the holy Sacrament. And therefore the Heretikes haue smal reason, vpon this place, to name the said holy Sacrament, rather, the Supper of the Lord, then after the maner of the primitive Church, the Eucharist, M A S S E, or Liturgie. But by like they would bring it to the supper againe or Euening seruice, vvhhen men be not fasting, the rather to take avway the old estimation of the holines thereof.

21. I haue deliuered.] As al other partes of religion were first deliuered by preaching and vword of mouth to euery Nation conuerted, so this holy order and vie of the B. Sacrament was by S. Paul first giuen vnto the Corinthians by tradition. Vnto vvhich as receiued of our Lord he reuoketh them by this Epistle, not putting in vwriting particularly al things pertaining to the order, vse, and institution, as he afterwards saith: but repeating the summe and substance thereof, and leauing the residue to his returne. But his vvordes and narration here vwritten vve vvil particularly prosecute, because the Heretikes make profession to folovv the same in their pretended reformation of the M A S S E.

22. In the night.] First the Aduerſaries may be here conuincd that al the circumstances of time, person, & place vvhich in Christs action are noted, needs not to be imitated. As, that the Sacrament should be ministred at night, to men onely, to onely vvellue, after or at supper, & such like: because (as S. Cyprian ep. 63. nu. 7. & S. Augustine ep. 114. c. 6. note) there were causes of those accidents in Christ that are not now to be alleaged for vs. He instituted then this holy act: vve do not. he made his Apostles Priests, that is to say, gaue them commission to do and minister the same: vve do not. he would haue this the last act of his life & vwithin the bounds of his Passion: it is not so vwith vs. he would care and make an end of the Paschal to accomplish the old Law: that can not be in our action. therefore he must needs doe it after supper and at night: vve may not do so. he excluded al vvomen, al the rest of his Disciples, al lay men: vve inuite al faithful men & vvomen. In many circumstances then, neither vve may imitate Christs first action, nor the Heretikes as yet do: though they seeme to encline by abandoning other names (sauiug this (calling it Supper) to haue it at night and after meate. though (as is before noted) they haue no iust cause to call it so vpon Christs fact, seeing the Euangelists do plainely shew *that the Sacrament was instituted after Supper, as the Apostle him self nere recordeth of the later part in expresse speech. And most men thinke, a long sermon and the vvashing of the Apostles feete came betvvene, yea and that the supper was quite finished, & grace said. But in al these and such like things, the Catholike Church onely, by Christs Spirit can tel, vvhich things are imitable, vvhich not, in al his actions.

Luce. 9, 16.

23. Tooke.] Christ tooke bread into his hands, applying this ceremonie, action, and benediction to it, and did bleſse the very element, vsed pover and actiue vword vpon it, * as he did ouer the bread and fishes vvhich he multiplied: and so doth the Church of God: and so do not the Protestants, if they folovv their ovvne booke and doctrine, but they let the bread & cuppe stand a loofe, and occupie Christs vvordes by vvay of report and narration, applying them not at al to the matter proposed to be occupied: and therefore howsoever the simple people be deluded by the rehearsal of the same vvordes vvhich Christ vsed, yet consecration, benediction, or sanctification of bread and vvine they profess they make none at al. At the first alteration of religion, there was a figure of the Crosse at this vword, He bleſsed: and at the vvorde, He tooke, there was a glosse or rubricke that appointed the Minister to imitate Christs action, and to take the bread into his hands: afterward that was reformed and Christs action abolished, and his blessing of bread turned to thankes giuing to God.

They imitate him not in vnleauened bread, and mingling water with wine. 23. Bread.] Christ made the holy Sacrament of vnleauened bread, and al the Latin Church imitateeth him in the same, as a thing much more agreable to the signification both in it self and in our liues, then the leauen. Yet our Aduersaries neither folow Christ, S. Paul, nor the vvest Church, in the same: but rather purposely make choise of that kind that is in it self more vnseemely, and to the first institution lesse agreable. In the other part of the Sacrament they contemne Christ and his Church much more impudently and damnablely. For Christ and al the Apostles and al Catholike Churches in the world haue euer mixed their wine vvith water; for great mysterie and signification, specially for that water gusheth together vvith blood out of our Lordes side. This our Lord did (saith S. Cyprian Ep. 63 ad Ceciliam. nu. 7.) and none rightly offereth, that foloweth nos him therein. Thus Irenzus (li. 1. c. 1.) Iustine (Apolog. 2. in fine.) and al the Fathers testifie the primitive Church did, and in this sort it is done in al the Masses of the Greekes, S. James, S. Basils, S. Chrysostoms: and yet our Protestants pretending to reduce al to Christ, vvill not doe as he did, and al the Apostles and Churches that euer vvere.

The wordes of consecration, to be said ouer the bread and vvine, the which the Protestants do not. 24. Thru.] These vvordes being set dovne, not in the person of the Euangelistes or Apostles, but expressed as in Christes ovne person, to be said ouer the bread, and the like ouer the vvine, are the formes of the Sacrament and vvordes of consecration: neither is it a Sacrament but (as S. Augustine saith) vvhen the vvordes come, that is to say, actiue- traff. 10 in ly and presently be applied to the elements of the same. Therefore the Protestants neuer applying these vvordes more then the vvhole narration of the institution, nor reciting the vvhole (as is said) othervvise then in historical maner, (as if one vvould minister Baptisme & neuer apply the wordes of the Sacrament to the childe, but onely read Christes speeches of the same) make no Sacrament at al. And that theie proper vvordes be the onely forme of this Sacrament, and so to be spoken ouer or vpon the bread and vvine, S. Ambrose plainly and precisely vvriteth, recording hovv far the Euangelists narratiue vvordes do goe, and vvhere Christes ovne peculiar mystical vvordes of consecration began: and so the rest of the fathers. *Ambro. li. 4. de Sac. c. 4. & c. 9. de init. The Protestants haue taken away the B. Sacrament altogether. 24. My body.] Vvhen the vvordes of Consecration be by the said impietie of the Protestants, thus remoued from the elements: no maruel if Christes holy body and blood be not there, or that it is now no more a Sacrament, but common bread and vvine. So they that vniuently charge the Cath. Church vvith defrauding the people of one peece of the Sacrament, haue in very deepe left no part nor spice of Sacrament, neither folowing Christ, as they pretend, nor S. Paul, nor any Euangelist, but their owne detestable secte, hauing boldly defaced the vvhole institution, not in any accidental indifferent circumstances, but in the very substance and al. The right name is gone, the due elements both gone, no blessing or consecration, or other action ouer them, the formes be gone: and consequently the body and blood, the Sacrament and the sacrifice.

The pouer to consecrate giuen to Priests onely. 24. Thru doe.] By these vvordes, authoritie and pouer is giuen to the Apostles, and by the like, in the Sacrament of Orders, to al lawfull Priests onely. No maruel then that the new heretical Ministers being lay men, giue the people nothing but bare bread and vvine, profane, naked, and natural elements void of Sacrament and al grace. See the Annotation vpon S. Luke chap. 22, 19.

The Sacrament consisteth not in the receiuing. 24. Take and eat.] This pertaineth to the receiuing of those things vvich by consecration are present and sacrificed before: as vvhen the people or Priests in the old Law did eate the hostes offered or part thereof, they vvere made partakers of the sacrifice done to God before. And this is not the substance, or being, or making of the Sacrament or sacrifice of Christes body and blood: but it is the vse and application to the receiuer, of the things vvich vvere made and offered to God before. There is a difference betvvixt the making of a medicine or the substance and ingredience of it, and the taking of it. Now the receiuing being but a consequence or one of the endes vvhy the Sacrament vvvas made, & the meane to apply it vnto vs: the Aduersaries vnlearnedly make it al and some, ad therefore improperly name the vvhole Sacrament and ministracion thereof, by calling it the Communion. Vvich name they giue also rather then any other, to make the ignorant beleue that many must communicate together: as though it vvere so called for that it is common to many. By vvich collusion they take avay the receiuing of the Priest alone, of the sicke alone, of reseruing the consecrated Host and the vvhole Sacrament. Against vvich deceite, know that this part of the Masse is not called Communion, for that many should concur together alvvays in the external Sacrament: but for that vve do communicate or ioyne in vnitie and perfect felovvship of one body, vvith al Christian men in the vvorld, vvith al (vve say) that eate it through the vvhole Church, and not vvith them onely vvich eate vvith vs at one time. And this felovvship riseth of that, that vve be, every time we receiue either alone or vvith companie, partakers of that one body vvich is receiued through out al the vvorld. It is called cōmunion (saith S. Damascene) & so in deede it is, for et al by it vve cōmunicate vvith Christ. & he partakers of his flesh & diuinitie, & by it doe cōmunicate and are vnited one vvith an other. onely let vs take heede that vve de not participat vvith beretikes. And vvhen the Apostle saith, that al be one bread and one body that are partakers of one bread, he meaneth not of them onely that communicate at one time and place: but that al be so, that communicate in vnitie through the vvhole Church. The name Communion is as ignorantly vsed of them, as the name of Supper.

26. Yom / hal / shevv.] Vpon this vvord the Heretikes fondly ground their false supposition, that this Sacrament can not rightly be ministred or made vvithout a sermon of the death of Christ: and that this and other Sacraments in the Church, be not profitable vvhen they be ministred in a strange language. As though the grace, force, operation, & actiurie, together vvith the instruction and representation of the things vvich they signifie, vvere not in the very substance, matter, forme, vse, and vvorke it self of euery of the Sacraments: and as though preaching vvere not one vvay to shew Christes Passion, and the Sacraments an other vvay: namely this Sacrament, containing in the very kindes of the elements and the action, a most liuely representation of Christes death. As vviseely might they say that neither Abels sacrifice nor the Paschal lambe could signifie Christes death vvithout a Sermon.

How Christes death is shewed by the B. Sacrament it self, vvithout sermon or othervvise.

27. Guilty of the body.] First herevpon marke vvell, that il men receiue the body and bloud of Christ, be they infidels or il liuers. For in this case they could not be guilty of that vvich they receiue not. Secondly, that it could not be so heinous an offense for any man to receiue a peece of bread or a cuppe of vvine, though they vvere a true Sacrament. For it is a deadly sinne to receiue any Sacramēt vvith vvil & intentiō to cōtinue in sinne, or vvithout repentance of former sinnes: but yet by the vvvorthy receiuing of no other Sacrament is man guilty of Christes body and bloud, but here, vvhere the vvvorthy (as S. Chrysostom saith) doth vilany to Christes ovne person, as the Ievves or Gentiles did, that crucified it. Chryf. ho. de non contemn. Ec. &c. Ho. 60 & 61 ad po. Antioch. Vvich iniuriously proueth againt the Heretikes that Christ is really present.

The vvicked receiue the body & bloud. The real presence is produced by the heinous offense of vvvorthy receiuing.

28. Let him proue.] A man must examine his life diligently vvwhether he be in any mortal sinne, and must confesse him self of euery offense vvich he knowveth or feareth to be deadly, before he presume to come to the holy Sacrament. For so the Apostles doctrine here, vvith the continual custom of the Cath. Church and the Fathers example, binde him to doe. Cypr. de laps. nu. 7. Aug. Eccl. dog. c. 53.

Confessiō before receiuing the B. Sacrament.

29. Not discerning the body.] That is, because he putteth no difference nor distinction betvvixt this haly meate and others. and therefore S. Augustine saith ep. 118. c. 3. that it is he that the Apostle saith shall be damned, that doth not by singular veneration or adoration make a difference betvvene this meate and al others. And againe in Psal. 98. No man eateth it before he adore it. And S. Ambrose li. 3. c. 12 de Sp. San. We adore the flesh of Christ in the Mysteries. S. Chrysostome ho. 24 in 1 Cor. We adore him on the altar, as the Sages did in the manger. S. Nazianzene in Epitaph. Gorgonia. Myster called on him vvich is vvorshipped upon the altar. Theodoret Dial. 2 Inconf. The Mystical tokens be adored. S. Denys, this Apostles scholer, made solemne inuocation of the Sacrament after Consecration. Ecclesiast. Hier. c. 2 part. 1 in princip. and before the receiuing, the vvhole Church of God crieth vpon it, Domine non sum dignus, Deum propitiū esto mihi peccatori. Lambe of God that takest away the sinnes of the vvorld, haue mercie on vs. And for better discerning of this diuine meate, vve are called from common profane houes to Gods Church: for this, vve are forbidden to make it in vulgar apparel, and are appointed sacrea solemne vestiments. Hiero. in Epitaph. Nepot. & li. 2 adu. Pelag. c. 9. Paulinus ep. 12 ad Scuer. 10. Diaco. in vit. D. Greg. li. 3. c. 19. For this, is the halovving of Corporals and Chalice, Ambr. 2 Off. c. 28. Nazianz. Orat. ad Arianos. Optat. li. 6 in initio. for this, profane tables are remoued and altars consecrated: Augusti. Ser. de temp. 255. for this, the very Priests them selues are honorable, chaste, sacred, Hiero. ep. 1 ad Heliandorum c. 7. Li 1 adu. Iouin. c. 19. Ambrosi. in 1 Tim. 3. for this, the people is forbidden to touch it vvith cōmon hands. Nazianz. orat. ad Arianos in initio. for this, great care and sollicitude is taken that no part of either kinde fall to the ground, Cyri. Hieros. mystag. 5 in fine. Orig. ho. 13 in c. 25 Exod. for this, sacred prouision is made that if any hoits or parts of the Sacrament do remaine vnreceiued, they be most religiously reserued vvith al honour and diligence possible. and for this, examination of consciences, confession, continencie, & (as S. Augustine saith) receiuing it fasting. Thus do vve Catholikes and the Church of God discern the holy Body and bloud by S. Pauls rule, not onely from your profane bread and vvine (vvich not by any icrete abuse of your Curats or Clerkes, but by the very order of your booke the Minister, if any remaine after your Communion, may take home vvith him to his ovne vse

The manifold honour and discerning of Christes body in the Cath. Church.

- and therefore is no more holy by your ovne iudgment then the rest of his meates) but from al^{* Aug. de} other either vulgar or sanctified meates, as^{pec. merit.} the Catechumens bread, and our vñal holy bread. If al^{li. 2. c. 25.} this be plaine and true, and you haue nothing agreeable to the Apostles nor Christiē institution, but^{Ep. iuda.} al cleane contrarie: then imperet vobis Deus and confound you for not discerning his holy Body, and for conculcating the blood of the new Testament.
- Holy bread. 10. Many sleepe. Vve see here by this, it is a fearful case and crime to defile by sinne (as much as in vs lieth) the body of Christ in the Sacrament. seeing God strooke many to death for it in the Primitiue Church, and punished others by greuous sicknes. No maruel that so many strange diseases and deaths fall vpon vs now in the world:
- Vnworthie receiuing. 11. Iudge your selues. Vve may note here that it is not ynough, onely to sinne no more, or to repent lightly of that which is past: but that vve should punish our selues according to the vveight of the faults past and forgiuen: and also that God vvil punish vs by temporal scourges in this life or the next, if vve do not make our selues very cleane before vve come to receiue his holy Sacrament. vvhose heauy hands vve may escape by punishing our selues by fasting and other penance.
- Penance and satisfaction. 12. Expect one another. Returning now to their former fault and disorder for the vvhich he tooke this occasion to talke of the holy Sacrament, and how great a fault it is to come vnworthely to it: he exhorte them to keepe their said suppers or feastes in vnitie, peace, and sobrietie, the riche expecting the poore &c:
- The Masse is agreeable to the Apostles vs and tradition: the Communion is not. 13. I vvil dispose. Many particular orders & decrees, moe then be here or in any other booke of the new Testament expressly vvriten, did the Apostles, as we see here, and namely S. Paul to the Corinthians, set dovvne by tradition, vvhich our vvhole ministracion of the M A S S E is agreeable vnto, as the substance of the Sacrifice and Sacrament is by the premisses proued to be most consonant: Caluins supper and Communion in al points vvholly repugnant to the same. And that it agreeth not to these other not vvritē traditions, they easily confesse. The^{* Aug. ep.} Apostles deliuered vnto^{118 c. 6.} the Church to take it onely fasting: they care not for it. The Apostles taught the Church to consecrate by the vvordes and the signe of the Croise, vvithout vvhich (saith S. Augustine tract. in Jo. 118. Sen. 75. in append. Chryf. ho. 11 in 10 Mat.) no Sacrament is rightly perfited: the Protestants haue takē it away. The Apostles taught the Church to keepe^{* Aug. tract} a Memorie or inuocatiō of Sainctes in this^{84 in 10. Ch} Sacrifice: the Caluinists haue none. The Apostles decreed that in this Sacrifice there should be special^{Chryf. ho.} prayers for the dead, Chryf. ho 3 in ep. ad Philip. Aug. de cur. pro mort. c. 11: they haue none. Likevvise^{21 in Act.} that water should be mixed vvith the wine, and so forth. See Annot. in c. 11. v. 22. Brem. Therefore if Caluin had made his new administracion according to all the Apostles vvriten vvordes, yet not knowing how many things beside, the Apostle had to prescribe in these vvordes, Cetera cum venero disponam. (the rest I vvil dispose, when I come) he could not haue satisfied any vvise man in his new change: But now seeing they are fallen to so palpable blindnes, that their doing is directly opposite to the very Scripture also, vvhich they pretend to follow onely, and haue quite destroyed both the name, substance, and al good accidents of Christiē principal Sacrament, we trust al the world vvil see their folly and impudencie.

CHAP. XII.

They must not make their diuersitie of Giftes an occasion of Schisme, considering that al are of one Holy Ghost, and for the profit of the one body of Christ which is the Church: 12 Vvhich also could not be a body, vvithout such varietie of members. 13 Therefore neither they that haue the inferiour giftes, must be discontent, seeing it is Gods distribution: nor they that haue the greater, contemne the other, considering they are no lesse necessari: 25 bus al in al ioyne together, 28 and every one know vv his ovne place.

† And

4 † And there are diuisions of graces, but one Spirit. † And 5 there are diuisions of ministrations: but one Lord. † And 6 there are diuisions of operations, but one God, vvhich vvorketh
 7 al in al. † And the manifestation of the Spirit is giuen
 8 vnto euery one to profit. † To one certes by the Spirit is giuen 9 knowledge according to the same Spirit: † to an other,
 10 * faith in the same Spirit: to an other, the grace of doing cu-11 res in one Spirit: † to an other, the vvorking of miracles: to 12 an other, prophetic: to an other, discerning of spirites: to an 13 other, kindes of tonges: to an other, interpretation of lan-
 14 guages. † And al these things vvorketh one and the same
 15 Spirit, diuiding to euery one according as he vvill. ¶

12 † For * as the body is one, and hath many members, and 13 al the members of the body vvhereas they be many, yet are

 15 al baptized into `one`, vvwhether Iewves, or Gentiles, or bond-21 the members, euery one of them in the body as he vvould.

19 † And if al vvere one member, vvhere vvere the body? † But 22 members of the body, are more necessarie: † and such as 23 vve thinke to be the baser members of the body, vpon them 24 vve put more abundant honour: and those that are our vn-honest partes neede nothing: but God hath tempered the body, giuing to it that vvanted, the more abundant honour,

24 † that there might be no schisme in the body, but the mem-

Zealous faith.

9. Faith in the same.] This faith is not an other in substance then the common faith in Christ, but is of an other accidental qualitie onely, that is, of more feruor, deuotiō, zeale, and confident trust, specially for doing of miracles.

Vnitie.

11. If the foote.] The Church is of exceding great distinctiō of members, giftes, orders, and offices: yet of great concord, concurrence, mutual communion and participation in al actions of her members among them selues, and vwith Christ the head of the Body.

Schisme.

25. Schisme in the body.] As Charitie and vnitie of spirit, is the proper bond and vveale of the common Body: so is diuision or Schisme, vvhich is the interruption of peace and mutual Societic betuene the partes of the same, the special plague of the Church, and as odious to God as rebellion to the temporal Soueraine.

1. Not Charitie.] Vvithout Charitie, both tovvard euery particular person, and specially tovvard the common body of the Church, none of al the giftes and graces of God be profitable.

Charitie.

2. Deliver my body.] Beleue (saith S. Augustine) assuredly and hold for certaine, that no Heretike and Schismatike that vniteth not him self to the Catholike Church againe, howv great almes so euer he giue, yea or shede his blood for Christes name, can possibly be saued. For, many Heretikes by the cloke of Christes cause, deceiuing the simple, suffer much. But vvhere true faith is not, there is no iustice, because she iust liueth by faith. So it is also of Schismatikes, because vvhere charitie is not, iustice can there be none: vvhich if they had, they vvould neuer plucke in peeces the body of Christ vvhich is the Church. Aug. seu Fulg. de fid. ad Pet. c. 39. So saith S. Augustine in diuers places, not onely of Heretikes that died directly for defense of their heresie, as the Anabaptistes and Caluinists novv a daies do (for that is more damnable:) but of some Heretikes and Schismatikes that may die among the Heathen or Turkes for defense of truth or some Article of Christes religion. Against their vaine childisshnes, that thought it a goodly matter to be able to speake (by miracle) strange languages in the Church, preferring their languages before prophecyng, that is opening of Mysteries: he declareth that this Gift of languages is inferior to the Gift of prophecie. 26 Giuing order also howv both giftes are to be used, to vvise, the Prophet to submit him self to other Prophets: and the Speaker of languages not to publish his inspiration, vnles there be an interpreter. 34 Provided al vvayes, that vvomen speake not at al in the Church.

PLOVV Charitie, earnestly pursue 1 spiritual things: but " rather that you may prophetic. † For he that speaketh 2 vvith tongue, speaketh " not to men, but to God: for no man heareth. But in spirit he speaketh mysteries. † For he that 3 prophecietieth, speaketh to men vnto edification, and exhortation, and consoltion. † He that speaketh vvith tongues, edifieth him self: but 4 he that prophecietieth, edifieth the Church. † And I would haue 5 you al to speake vvith tongues, but rather to prophetic. For greater is he that prophecietieth, then he that speaketh vvith tongues: vnlesse perhaps he interpret, that the Church may take edification. † But novv brethren " if I come to you spea- 6 king vvith tongues, vwhat shal I profit you, vnlesse I speake to you either in reuelation, or in knowvledge, or in prophecie, or in doctrine? † Yet the things vvithout life that giue a 7 sound, be it pipe or harpe, vnlesse they giue a distinction of soudes, hovv shal that be knowven which is piped, or which is harped? † For " if the trumpeter giue an vncertaine voice, vvho 8 shal prepare him self to battel? † So you also by a togue vnlesse 9 you vtter manifest speach, hovv shal that be knowven that is said? for you shal be speaking into the aire. † There are (for 10 example) so many kindes of tongues in this vvorld, & none is vvithout voice. † If then I knowv not the vertue of the 11 voice, I shal be to him to vvhom I speake, barbarous: and he rhat speaketh, barbarous to me. † So you also, because you 12 be emulators of spirites: seeke to abound vnto the edifying of the Church. † And therefore he that speaketh vvith the 13 tongue, " let him pray that he may interpret. † For if I pray 14 vvith the tongue, " my spirit praieth, but my vnderstanding is vvithout fruite.

† Vwhat is it then? I vvil pray in the spirit, I vvil pray also 15 in the vnderstanding. † But if thou blesse in the spirit: he 16 that supplieth the place ° of the vulgar hovv shal he say, Amen, vpon thy blessing? because he knowveth not vvhat thou saiest. † For thou in decde giuest thanks vvell: but the 17

struct others also : rather then ten thousand vvordes in a 20 tongue. † Brethren, be not made children in sense, but in 21 malice be children : and in sense be perfect. † In the Law it is vvritten, That in other tongues and other lippes I vvil speake to this peo- 22 ple : and neither so vvil they heare me, saiesh our Lord. † Therefore languages are for " a signe not to the faithful, but to infidels : but 23 prophecies, not to infidels, but to the faithful. † If therefore the vvhole Church come together in one, and al speake with tongues, and there enter in vulgar persons or " infidels, vvil 24 they not say that you be madde? † But if al prophecie, and there enter in any infidel or vulgar person, he is conuincd 25 of al, he is iudged of al. † the secrets of his hart are made manifest, and so falling on his face he vvil adore God, pronouncing that God is in you in deede.

26 † Vvhat is it then brethren? vvhen you come together, euery one of you hath " a psalme, hath a doctrine, hath a re-uelation, hath a tongue, hath an interpretation : let al things 27 be done to edification. † Vvwhether a man speake vvith tōgue, by two, or at the most by three, and " in course, and let 28 one interpret. † But if there be not an interpreter, let him hold his peace in the Church, and speake to him self and to 29 God. † And let prophets speake two or three, and let the 30 rest iudge. † But if it be revealed to an other sitting, let the 31 first hold his peace. † For you may al prophecie one by one:
 32 that al may learne, and al may be exhorted, † and the spirites 33 of prophets are subiect to prophets. † For God is not the God of dissension, but of peace : as also in all the Churches of the saincts I teache.

3. Tim.

34 † " Let * vvomen hold their peace in the Churches : for it is not permitted them to speake, but to be subiect, as also 35 * the Law saith. † But if they learne any thing, let them aske their ovvne husbands at home. For it is a foule thing for a 36 vvoman to speake in the Church. † Or did the vvord of 37 God proceede from you? came it vnto you onely? † If any man seeme to be a prophet, or spiritual, let him knowv the things that I vvrite to you, that they are the cōmaundements 38 of our Lord. † But if any man knowv not, he shal not be 39 knowven. † Therefore, brethren, be earnest to prophecie: and 40 to speake vvith tongues prohibit not. † But let al things be done honestly and according to order among you.

tion of this Chapter con-

known tongues.

1. Rather prophetic.] The gift of prophesying, that is, of expounding the hard points of our religion, is better then the gift of strange tongues, though both be good.

2. Not to men.] To talke in a strange language, vnknown also to him self, profiteth not the hearers, though in respect of God vvhv vnderstandeth al tongues and thinges, and for the mysterie vvhich he vttereth in his spirit, and for his ovvne edification in spirit and affection, there be no difference: but the Prophet or Expolitor treating of the same matters to the vnderstanding of the vvhole assemblie, edifieth not him self alone but al his hearers.

3. If I come.] That is, If I your Apostle and Doctōr should preach to you in an vnknown tongue, and neuer vse any kinde of exposition, interpretation, or explication of my strange vvordes, vvhv profit could you take thereby?

4. If the trumpet.] As the Trumpeter can not giue vvarning to or from the fight, vnles he vse a distinct & intelligible sound or stroke known to the souldiars: euen so the preacher that exhorteth to good life, or dehorteth from sinne, except he doe it in a speech vvhich his hearers vnderstand, can not attaine to his purpose, nor doe the people any good.

5. Let him pray that.] He that hath onely the gift of strange tongues, let him pray to God for the gift of interpretation: that the one may be more profitable by the other. for, to exhort or preach in a strange, tongue vvas not vnlayful nor vnprofitable, but glorious to God, so that the speech had bene either by him self, or by an other, aftervvard expounded.

6. My spirit praiesh.] Also vvhv a man praiesh in a strange tongue vvhich him self vnderstandeth not, it is not so fruitful for instruction to him, as if he knew particularly vvhv he praied. Neuertheles the Apostle forbiddeth not such praying neither, confessing that his spirit, hart, and affection praiesh vvel tovvardes God, though his minde and vnderstanding be not profited to instruction, as othervvise it might haue bene if he vnderstood the vvordes. Neither yet doth he appoint such an one to get his strange praier translated into his vulgar tongue, to obtaine thereby the foresaid instruction. See the Declaration of solovving of this Chapter.

7. A signe.] The extraordinary gift of tongues vvas a miraculous signe in the primitiue Church, to be used specially in the Nations of the Heathen for their conuersion.

8. Infidels.] In the primitiue Church, vvhv Infidels dyvelt neere or among Christians, and often times came vnto their publike preaching & exercises of exhortation and exposition of Scriptures and the like: it vvas both vnprofitable and ridiculous to heare a number talking, teaching, singing Psalmes & the like, one in this language, & an other in that, al at once like a blacke-faunts, and one often not vnderstood of an other, sometime not to them selues, and to strangers or the simple standers by, not at al. Vvhv othervvise if they had spoken either in known tongues, or had done it in order, hauing an expolitor or interpreter vvithal, the Infidels might haue bene conuincd.

Of vvhv spiritual exercise the Apostle
speakesh.

9. A Psalme.] Vve see here that those spiritual exercises consisted specially, first, in singing or giuing forth new Psalmes or praies and laudes: secondly, in Doctōrine, teaching, or reading lectures: thirdly, in Reuelation of secrete things either present or to come: fourthly, in speaking Tongues of strange Nations: lastly, in translating or Interpreting that vvhich vvas said, into some common known language, as into Greeke, Latin, &c. Al vvhich gifts they had among them by miracle from the holy Ghost.

in the same.

10. In course.] Al these things they did vvithout order, of pride and contention they preached, they prophesied, they praied, they blessed, vvithout any seemely respect one of an other, or observing of turnes and entercourse of vuering their Gastes. Yea vvomen vvithout couer or veile, and vvithout regard of their sexe or the Angels or Priests or their ovvne husbands, malepartly spake tongues, taught, or prophesied vvith the rest. This vvas then the disorder among the Corinthians, vvhich the Apostle in this vvhole chapter reprehendeth and sought to redresse, by forbidding vvomen vtterly that publike exercise, and teaching men, in vvhat order and courie as vvel for speaking in tongues, as interpreting and prophesying, it should be kept.

A MORE AMPLE DECLARATION OF THE sense of this 14 Chapter.

That S. Pauls place maketh nothing agais
the seruice in the latin toge.

This then being the scope and direct drift of the Apostle, as is most cleere by his vvhole discourse, and by the record of al antiquitie: let the godly, graue, and discrete Reader take a tast in this one point, of the Protestants deceitful dealing, abusing the simplicitie of the popular, by peruerie application of Gods holy vvord, vpon some smal similitude and equiuocation of certaine termes, against the approved godly use and truth of the vniuersal Church, for the seruice in the Latin or Greeke tongue: which they ignorantly, or rather vsfully, pretend to be against this discourse of S. Paul touching strange tongues. Know therefore, first, that here is no word written or meant of any other tongues but such as men spake in the Primitiue Church by miracle, and that nothing is meant of those tongues which were the common languages of the world or of the Faithful, By strange vnderstood of the learned and ciuil people in euery great citie, and in which the Scriptures of the Old or new Testament were written, as, the Hebrew, Greeke, and Latin. for though these also, might be giuen by miracle & without study, yet being knowen to the Iewes, Romans, or Greekes in euery place, they be not counted among the differences of barbarous and strange tongues here spoken of, which could not be interpreted commonly, but by the miraculous gift also of interpretation. And therefore this Apostle (as the Euangelists also and others did their bookes) wrote his Epistles in Greeke to the Romans and to all other Churches. Vvhich vhen he wrote, though he penned them not in the vulgar language peculiar to euery people, yet he wrote them not in Tongue, that is, in any strange tongue not intelligible without the gift of interpretation, vvhich he speaketh here: but in a notable knowen and learned speech interpretable of thousands in euery country. No more did S. Augustine our Apostle, speaking in Latin, & bringing in the Scriptures and Seruice in Latin, preach and pray in Tongues according to the Apostles meaning here. for the Latin was not, nor is not, in any part of the West, either miraculous or strange, though it be not the National tongue of any one country this day. And therefore S. Bede saith, (li. i. hist. Angl. c. 1.) that being then foure diuers vulgar languages in our country, the Latin was made common to them all. And in deede of the two (though in truth neither sort be forbidden by this passage of S. Paul) the barbarous languages of euery seueral prouince in respect of the vvhole Church of Christ, are rather the strange Tongues here spoken of, then the common Latin tongue, which is vniuersally of all the West Church more or lesse learned, and pertaineth much more to vnitie and orderly coniunction of all Nations in one faith, Seruice, and worship of God, then if it were in the sundry barbarous speeches of euery prouince. Vvherein all Christians that trauele about this part of the world or the Indies either, vvhich so euer they come, shall finde the self same Masse, Matins, and Seruice, as they had at home. Vvhich now, if we goe to Germanie, or the Germans or Genetiues come to vs, eche others Seruice shall be thought strange and barbarous. Yea and the Seruice of our owne language vvhich within a few hundred yeres (or rather euery age) shall vvholy become barbarous and vnknowen to our selues, our tongue (as all vulgar) doth so often change.

And for edification, that is, for increase of faith, true knowledg, and good life, the experience of a few yeres hath giuen all the world a full demonstration vvhether our forefathers were not as vnitie, as faithful, as deuout, as fearful to breake Gods lawes, and as likely to be saued, and as vve are in all our tongues, translations, and English prayers. Much vanitie, curiositie, contempt of Superiors, disputes, emulations, contentions, Schismes, horrible errors, profanation and diuulgation of the secreete Mysteries of the dreadful Sacraments, * vvhich of purpose were hidden from the vulgar (as S. Denys Ecol. Hier. c. 1. and S. Basil de Sp. Sanct. c. 27. testifie) are fallen by the same, but vertue or sound knowledg none at all.

See Annot
1. Cor. 10.

Vvherein this also is a grosse illusion and vntuth, that the force and efficacie of the Sacraments, Sacrifice, and common prayer, dependeth vpon the peoples vnderstanding, hearing, or knowledg: the principall efficacie of such things and of the vvhole ministerie of the Church, consisting specially of the very vertue of the worke, and the publike office of the Priests, who be appointed in Christs behalfe to dispose these Mysteries to our most good: the infant, innocent, idiote and vnlearned, taking no lesse fruite of Baptisme and all other diuine offices, meeets for euery ones condition, then the learnedst Clerke in the Realme: and more, if they be more humble, charitable, deuout, and obedient; then the other, having lesse of these qualities and more learning.

Vvhich we say not, as though it were inconuenient for the people to be vvel instructed in the meaning of the Sacraments and holy ceremonies and Seruice of the Church (for, that to their comfort and necessarie knowledg, both by preaching, Catechizing, and reading of good Catholike bookes, Christian people do learne in all Nations much more in those countries vvhich the Seruice is in Latin, then in our Nation, God knoweth:) But we say that there be other waies to instruct them, and the same lesse subiect to danger and disorder, then to turne it into vulgar tongues. Vve say, the simple people and many one that thinke them selues some body, vnderstand as little of the sense of diuers Psalmes, Ieisons, and Oraisons in the vulgar tongue, as if they were in Latin: yea and often take them in a wrong, peruerse, and pernicious sense, which lightly they could not haue done in Latin. Vve say, that such as would learne in deuotion and humilitie, may and must rather vwith diligence learne the tongue that such diuine things be vwritten in, or vvhich other diligence in hearing sermons and instructions: then for a few mens not necessarie knowledg, the holy vniuersal order of Gods Church should be altered. For if in the kingdom of England onely, it be not conuenient, necessarie, nor almost possible, to accommodate their Seruice booke to euery prouince and people of diuers tongues: how much lesse should the vvhole Church so do, consisting of so many differences: Neither doth the Apostle in all this Chapter appoint any such thing to be done, but admonisheth them to pray and labour for the grace of vnderstanding and interpretation, or to get others to interpret or expound vnto them. And that much more may vve doe concerning the Seruice in Latin, vvhich is no strange nor miraculously gotten or vnderstood tongue, but common to the most and cheefe churches of the vvorlde, and hath bene, since the Apostles time, daily vwith al diligence through out al these partes of Christendom, expounded in euery house, schole, church, and pulpit: and is so vvel knowven for euery necessaric part of the diuine Seruice, that by the diligence of parents, Mistres, and Curates, euery Catholike of age almost, can tel the sense of euery ceremonie of the Masse, vvhich to ansvver, vvhich to say Amen at the Priestes benediction, vvhich to confesse, vvhich to adore, vvhich to stand, vvhich to kneele, vvhich to receiue, vvhich to receiue, vvhich to come, vvhich to depart, and al other dueties of praying and seruing, sufficient to saluation. And thus is it euident that S. Paul speaketh not of the common tonges of the Churches Seruice.

Catholike people in euery countrie vnderstandeth euery ceremonie, and can behaue themselves accordingly.

Secondly, it is as certaine, that he meaneth not nor writeth any vword in this place of the Churches publike Seruice, praiser, or ministration of the holy Sacrament, vvherein the Office of the Church specially consisteth: but onely of a certaine exercise of mutual conference, wherein one did open to an other and to the assemblie, miraculous giftes and graces of the Holy Ghost, and such Canticles, Psalmes, secrete Mysteries, sorts of Languages, and other Reuelations, as it pleased God to giue vnto certaine both men and vwomen in that first beginning of his Church. In doing of this, the Corinthians comitted many disorders, turning Gods giftes to pride and vanitie, and namely that gift of tonges: vvhich being in deede the least of al giftes, yet most puffed vp the hauers, and novv also doth commonly puffed vp the professors of such knowvledge, according as S. Augustine writeth thereof. This exercise and the disorder thereof was not in the Church (for any thing we can reade in antiquitie) these fourtene hundreth yeres: and therefore neither the vse nor abuse, nor S. Pauls reprehension or redressing thereof, can concerne any vvhich the Seruice of the Church. Furthermore this is euident, that the Corinthians had their Seruice in Greeke at this same time, and it was not done in these miraculous tonges. Nothing is meant then of the Church Seruice. Againe the publike Seruice had but one language: in this exercise they spake in many tonges. In the publike Seruice euery man had not his ovne special tongue, his special Interpretation, special Reuelation, proper Psalmes: but in this they had. Againe, the publike Seruice had in it the ministration of the holy Sacrament principally: vvhich was not done in this time of conference. For into this exercise vvere admitted Catechumens and Infidels and vvhosoever vwould: in this vwomen, before S. Pauls order, did speake and prophecie: so did they neuer in the Ministration of the Sacrament. vwith many other plaine differences, that by no meanes the Apostles vvordes can be rightly and truly applied to the Corinthians Seruice then, or ours novv. Therefore it is either great ignorance of the Protestants, or great guilfulness, so vntreuly and peruersly to apply them.

That he speaketh not of the Churches seruice, is proued by inuincible arguments.

The Apostle speaketh not of the peoples priuate praier in latin, as vpon primars, beades, or other vwise.

Latin praier translated, or the people taught the contents thereof.

The peoples deuotion nothing the lesse, for praying in Latin.

Neither is here any thing meant of the priuate praier which deuout persons of al sortes and sexes haue euer vsed, specially in Latin, as vvel vpon their Primars as Beades. For, the priuate praier here spoken of, vvere psalmes or hymnes and sonnets newly inspired to them by God, and in this conference or prophecying, vttered to one an others comfort, or to them selues and God onely. But the praier, psalmes, and holy vvordes of the Christian people vsed priuately, are not composed by them, nor diuersely inspired to them selues, nor novv to be approued or examined in the assemblies: but they are such as vvere giuen and vvritten by the Holy Ghost, and prescribed by Christ and his Church for the faithful to vse, namely the Pater noster, the Aue Marie, and the Credo, our Ladies Martins, the Litanies, and the like. Therefore the Apostle prescribeth nothing here thereof, condemneth nothing therein, toucheth the same nothing at al. But the deuout people in their auncient right may and ought stil vse their Latin primars, beades, and praier, as euer before. Vvhich the wisdom of the Church for greate causes hath better liked and allowed of; then that they should be in vulgar tonges, though she wholly forbiddeth not, but sometimes graunteth to haue them translated, and vwould gladly haue al faithful people in order and humilitie learne, as they may, the contents of their praier: and hath commaunded also in some Councils, that such as can not learne distinctly in Latin (specially the Pater noster & the Credo) should be taught them in the vulgar togue. And therefore as vve doubt not but it is acceptable to God, & available in al necessaries, & more agreeable to the vse of al Christian people euer since their conuersion, to pray in Latin, then in the vulgar, though euery one in particular vnderstand not what he saith; so it is plaine that such pray vwith as great consolation of spirit, vwith as litle tediousnes, vwith as great deuotion and affection, and oftentimes more, then the other: and alwayes more then any Schismatike or Heretike in his knowven language. Such holy Oraisons be in maner consecrated secrated and sanctified in and by the Holy Ghost that first inspired them. and there is a reuerence and Maieitie in the Churches tongue dedicated in our Sauours Crosse, and giueth more force and valure to them said in the Churches obedience, then to others. The children cried * Hosanna to our Saviour, and were allowed, though they knew not what they said. It is well neere a thousand yeres that * our people vvvhich could nothing els but barbarum fremere, did sing Alleluia, and not, Praise ye the Lord. and longer agoe since the poore hutchmen sang the same at the plough in other Countries. Hiero. to. 1 ep. 18. And Sursum corda, and Kyrie eleison, and the Psalmes of Dauid sung in Latin in the Seruice of the Primitiue Church, haue the auncient and flat testimonies of S. Cyprian, S. Augustine, S. Hierom and other Fathers. Grego. li. 7 ep. 63. Cyp. exp. orat. Do. nu. 12. August. 8. 13 de dono persever. & de bono vid. c. 16. and ep. 178. Hiero. prefat. in Psal. ad Sophron. Aug. de Catechet. rud. c. 9. de Doct. Chr. li. 2 c. 12. See ep. 10. August. of S. Hieroms latin translation readde in the Churches of Africa. Praiers are not made to teache, make learned, or increase knowlledge, though by occasion they sometimes instruct vs, but their special vse is, to offer our hartes, desires, and vvants to God, and to shew that we hang of him in al things: and this euery Catholike doth for his condition, vvwhether he vnderstand the vvordes of his praier or nor. The simple sort can not vnderstand al Psalmes, nor scarce the learned, no though they be translated or read in knowven tonges: men must not cease to vse them for al that, vvhen they are knowven to containe Gods holy praies. The simple people vvhen they desire any thing specially at Gods hand, are not bound to knowv, neither can they tel, to vvhat petition or part of the Pater noster their demaund pertaineth, though it be in English neuer so much. they can not tel no more vvhat is, Thy kingdom come, then Adueniat regnum tuum. nor vvwhether their petition for their sicke children or any other necessitie, pertaine to this part, or to Fiat voluntas tua, or Ne nos inducas, or to vvhat other part els. It is ynough that they can tel, this holy Oraison to be appointed to vs, to call vpon God in al our desires. more then this, is not necessarie. And the translation of such holy things often breedeth manifold danger and irreuerence in the vulgar (as to thinke God is author of sinne, vvhen they read, Leade vs not into tentation) and seldom any edification at al. For, though vvhen the prayers be turned and read in English, the people knowveth the vvordes, yet they are not edified to the instruction of their minde and vnderstanding, except they knew the sense of the vvordes also and meaning of the holy Ghost. For if any man thinke that S. Paul speaking of edification of mans minde or vnderstanding, meaneth the vnderstanding of the vvordes onely, he is foully deceiued. for, vvhat is a childe of five or sixe yeres old edified or increased in knowlledge by his Pater noster in English? It is the sense therefore, vvvhich euery man can not haue, neither in English nor Latin, the knowvledge vvwhereof properly and rightly edifieth to instruction. and the knowvledge of the vvordes onely, otten edifieth neuer a vvhit, and sometimes buildeth to error and destruction: as it is plaine in al Heretikes and many curious persons besides. finally both the one and the other vvwithout charitie and humilitie maketh the Heretikes and Schismatikes vvith al their English and vvwhat other tonges and intelligence so euer, to be as sonans & cymbalum tinniens, sounding brasse and a tinkling cymbal.

To conclude, for praying either publikly or priuately in Latin vvvhich is the common sacred toge of the greatest part of the Christiã world, this is thought by the vviseit & godliest to be most expedient, and is certainly seen to be nothing repugnant to S. Paul. If any yet vvil be contentious in the matter, we must answer them vvith this same Apostle, The Church of God hath no such customs. and vvith this notable saying of S. Augustine, ep. 118. c. 5. Any thing that the vvhole Church doth practise and obserue through out the vvorld, so dispuse thereof as though it were not to be done, is most insalant madnesse

34. Let vvomen hold their peace.] There be, or were, certaine Heretikes in our Countrie (for such euer take the Scriptures diuersely for the aduantage of time) that denied vvomen to hold lawfully any kingdom or temporal Souerainty: but that is false and against both reason & the Scriptures. This onely in that sexe is true, that it is not capable of holy orders, spiritual Regiment or Cure of soules: and therefore can not doe any function proper to Priests and Bis hopes: not speake in the Church, and so not preach, nor dispute, nor haue or giue voice either deliberatiue or definitiue in Councils and publike Assemblies, concerning matters of Religion, nor make Ecclesiastical lawes concerning the same, nor binde, nor loose, nor excommunicate, nor suspend, nor degrade, nor absolue, nor minister Sacraments, other then Baptisme in the case of mere necessitie, vvhen neither Priest nor other man can be had: much lesse prescribe any thing to the Clergie, how to minister them, or giue any mā right to rule, preach, or execute any spiritual function as vnder her and by her authoritie: no creature being able to impart that vvwhereof it self is incapable both by nature and Scriptures. This Regiment is expressly giuen to the Apostles, Bishops, and Prelates: they onely haue authoritie to bind and loose, Mat. 18: they onely are set by the Holy Ghost to gouerne the Church, Act. 20.: they onely haue cure of our soules directly, and must make account to God for the same, Hebr. 13.

soyven in infirmitie, it shal rise in povver. † It is soyven a natural body: it shal rise a spiritual body. If there be a natural body, there is also a spiritual, † as it is vvritten, The first man Adam vvvas made into a liuing soul: the last Adam into a quickening spirit. † Yet that is not first vvwhich is spiritual, but that vvwhich is natural: aftervvvard that vvwhich is spiritual. † The first man of earth, earthly: the second man from heauen, heauenly. † Such as is the earthly, such also are the earthly. and such as the heauenly, such also are the heauenly. † Therefore as vvve haue borne the image of the earthly, let vs beare also the image of the heauenly. † This I say brethren, that flesh and bloud can not possesse the kingdom of God: neither shal corruption possesse incorruption. † Behold I tel you a mysterie. Vve shal al in deede rise againe: but vvve shal not al be changed. † In a moment, in the twinkling of an eie, at the last trompet (for the trompet shal sound) and the dead shal rise againe incorruptible: and vvve shal be changed. † For this corruptible must doe on incorruption: & this mortal doe on immortalitie. † And when this mortal hath done on immortalitie, then shal come to passe the saying that is vvwritten, Death is swallowed vp in victorie. † Death vvwhere is thy victorie? Death vvwhere is thy sting? † And the sting of death, is sinne: and the povver of sinne is the Law. † But thanks be to God that hath giuen vs the victorie by our Lord Iesus Christ. † Therefore my beloued brethren, be stable & vnmouecable: abounding in the worke of our Lord alvvvaies, knowving that your labour is not vaine in our Lord.

THE ARGUMENT OF THE SECOND EPISTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS.

2. Cor. II. 2.
Gal. 2. 1.

OR the time when this Epistle was written, looke the Argument of the epistle to the Romanes: to wit, about the eighteenth yere after his conuersion. & our Lordes passion. because in the 11 chapter he maketh mention of 14 yeres, not only after his Conuersion, as to the Galatians, but also after his rapte, which seemeth to haue bene when he was at Hierusalem Act. 9, 26. foure yeres after his Conuersion (Gal. 1, 18) in a trance or excessse of minde, as he calleth it, Act. 22, 17. It was written at Troas (it is thought) and sent by Titus, as we reade chap. 8.

It is for the most part against those false Apostles whom in the first part of the first to the Corinthians, he noted, or rather spared, but now is constrained to deale openly against them, & to defend both his owne person which they sought to bring into contempt, making way thereby to the correption of the Corinthians, and with-all to maineine the excellencie of the Ministerie and Ministers of the new Testament. about which they did magnifie the Ministerie of the old Testament: bearing themselues very high because they were lewes.

Against these therefore S. Paule auoucheth the preeminence power of his Ministerie, by which power also he giueth a pardon to the incestuous fornicator whom he excommunicated in the last Epistle. seeing now his penance, and againe threateneth to come & excommunicate those that had greuously sinned and remained impenitent. Two chapters also he interposeth of the contributions to the church of Hierusalem, mentioned in his last, exhorting them to doe liberally, and also to haue all in a readines against his coming.

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF PAUL TO THE CORINTHIANS.

CHAP. I.

By his troubles in Asia he comforteth them, and (against his Adversaries the false apostles of the Iouues) alleageth to them the testimonie of his owne and also of their conscience, 17 answering them that objected lightnes against him, for not comming to Corinth according to his promis.

s. Passions of Christ.] Al the afflictions of the faithful be called Christes ovvne passions, not onely because they be suffered for him, but for that there is so strait coniunction and communion betwixt him being the head, and eevery of the liuing members of his body, vvwhich is the Church, that vvharsoeuer is suffered by any one of the same, is counted as a peece of his ovvne Passion. As likevvise vvhatsoeuer good vvorkes be done to any of them or by any of them, be accepted as done to or by Christ him self. Vvwhich thing if the Protestants vvell vvveighed, they vvould not

maruel that the Catholike Church attributeth such force of merite and satisfaction to the worke of holy men. Merite and satisfaction.

10. The comfort abound.] Vvorldly men that see onely the exterior miseries and afflictions that Catholikes do suffer being persecuted by the Heathen or Heretikes, deeme them exceeding miserable. but if they felt or could conceiue the aboundance of consolation vvhich Christ euer giueth according to the measure of their afflictions, they vvould neuer vvonder at the voluntary toleration of vvhat torments so euer for Christes sake, but vvould vvish rather them seiues to be in any dungeon in England vvith the comfort that such haue from God, then to liue out of the Church in al the vvealth of the vvorld. Vvorldly men feele not the comfort of afflicted Catholikes.

11. You helping in prayer.] S. Paul knew that the helpe of other mens praieres vvvas nothing derogatorie to the office of Christes mediation or intercession for him, nor to the hope that he had in God: and therefore he craueth the Corinthians aide herein as a support and succours for him self in the sight of God. Vvith vvhat reason or Scripture then, can the Protestants say that the praieres of Sainctes be iniurious to Christ, or not to stand vvith the confidence vve haue in him? As though it vvwere more dishonour to God that vve should vse the aide of Sainctes in heauen, then of iunners in earth: or * that the intercession of these our fellowes beneath, vvwere more auailable then the praieres of those that be in the glorious sight of God aboue. Intercessiō of Sainctes or holy men for vs, no derogation to Christ.

Hiero.cōt.
Vigil.

12. By many mens.] He meaneth, that as the praieres of many ioyned together for him, shal be rather heard, then of any alone: so their common thankes giuing to God for graunting their request, shal be more acceptable and glorious to God, then any one mans thankes alone. Vvvhich thing doth much commend the holy Churches publike praieres, processions, stations, and pilgrimages, vvhere so many meete and vniformely ioyne their praieres and laudes together vnto God. Publike praieres & fastes.

13. Your glorie.] The Apostles, teachers, and preachers, that conuert countries or particular persons to Christ, and the peoples or parties by them conuerred, shal in the day of iudgement haue much mutual ioy and glorie of and for eche other, one giuing to the other great matter of merite in this life, and of reppard in the next. See 1 Theff. 2. v. 19. Their glorie in heauen that conuert other.

14. It is not.] As he dischargeth him self of al other leuitie touching his promis or purpose of committing to them, so much more of al inconstancie in preaching Christes doctrine and faith. Vvherein, one day to affirme, an other day to deny, to dissent from his fellowes or from him self, to change euery yere or in euery epistle the forme of his former teaching, to come daily vvith new deuises repugnant to his ovvne rules, vvwere not agreable to an Apostle and true teacher of Christ, but proper to false prophets and Heretikes. Vvwhereof vve haue notorious examples in the Protestants: vvho being destitute of the spirit of peace, concord, constancie, vnitie, and veritie, as they varie from their ovvne vvritings vvvhich they retract, reforme or deforme continually, so both in their preachings, & forme of Seruice, they are so restles, changeable, and repugnant to them selues, that if they vvwere not kept in avve vvith much a do, by temporal lawes or by the shame and rebuke of the vvorld, they vvould coine vs euery yere or euery Parliament, new Communiōns, new faithes, and new Christes, as you see by the manifold endeouours of the Puritans. And this to be the proper note of false Apostles and Heretikes, see in S. Ireneus li. 1 c. 18. and S. Basil. ep. 12. The Protestants inconstancie in changing their writings, translations, seruice bookes, &c.

22. Hash sealed.] The learned Diuines proue by this place and by the like in the fourth to the Ephesians, that the Sacrament of Baptisme doth not onely giue grace, but imprinteth and sealeth the soule of the baptized, vvith a spiritual signe, marke, badge, or token, vvvhich can neuer be blotted out, neither by sinne, heresie, apostasie, nor other vvaies, but remaineth for euer in man for the cognifance of his Christendom, and for distinction from others vvvhich vvwere neuer of Christes fold. by vvvhich also he is as it vvwere consecrated and deputed to God, made capable and partaker of the rightes of the Church, and subiect to her lawes and discipline. See S. Hierom in 4. Ephes. S. Ambrose li. 1 de Sp. sancto cap. 6. S. Cyril Hierosol. Catechesi 17 at the end, and S. Dionysius Areopag. c. 2. Eccl. Hierarch. The vvvhich fathers expresse that spiritual signe by diuers agreable names, vvvhich the Church and most Diuines, after S. Augustine, call the character of Baptisme. by the truth and force of vvvhich spiritual note or marke of the soule, he specially conuinceth the Donatistes, that the said Sacrament though giuen and ministred by Heretikes or Schismatikes or vvvhoe els so euer, can neuer be reiterated. See ep. 57. & li. 6 cont. Donatist. cap. 1. & li. 2 cont. Parmenianum c. 13. As the like indeleble characters giuen also by the Sacraments of Confirmation and Orders, do make those also irriterable and neuer to be received but once. Vvwhereas al other Sacraments sauing these three, may be often receiued of the self same person. And that holy Orders can not be iterated, see S. Augustine li. 2 cont. Parmen. c. 13. li. de bono coniug. c. 24. and S. Gregorie li. 2 Regist. ep. 32. The like of Confirmation is decreed in the most auncient Councel Tarraco. cap. 6. Finally that this character is giuen onely by these said three Sacraments, and is the cause that none of them can be in any man repeated or reiterated, see the decrees of the Councels Florentine and Trent. Vvvhich yet is no new deuise of them, as the Heretikes falsly affirme, but agreable (as you see) both to the Scriptures and also to the auncient fathers and Councels. The indeleble character of Baptisme, Confirmation, Holy Orders.

dominion, as S. Iude describeth such, vould by this place deliuer them selues from al yoke of spiritual Magistrates and Rulers: namely that they be subiect to no man touching their faith, or for the examination and trial of their doctrine, but to God and his vword onely. And no maruel that the malefactors and rebelles of the Church vould come to no tribunal but Gods, that so they may remaine unpunished at least during this life. for though the Scriptures plainly cōdemne their berelies, yet they could vwrite them selues out by false gloses, constructions, corruptions, and denials of the bookes to be Canonical, if there vvore no layves or iudicial sentence of men to rule and represle them.

Notvvithstanding then these vvordes of S. Paul, vvhereby onely tyrannical, insoient, and proud behaiour and indiscrete rigor of Prelates or Apostles tovards their flockes is noted, as also in the first of S. Peter cap. 5. (the Greeke vword in these places, and in the Gospel *Mat. 20, 21. Mar. 10, 42. καλῶν τε signifying lordly and insolent dominion:) yet he had and exercised iust rule, preeminence, and pre-laciē ouer them, nor onely for their life, but also and principally touching their faith. for he might & did call them to account for the same, and excommunicated heretikes for foresaking their faith.

1 Cor. 4, 5. 2 Cor. 10, 4. 13, 10. 1 Tim. 1, 20. Tit. 1, 11. And al Christian men are bound to obey their lavful Prelates in matters of faith and doctrine specially, and must not vnder that ridiculous pretence of obeying Gods vword onely (vvhich is the shifte of al other Heretikes, as Anabaptistes, Arians, and the like, as vvell as the Protestants) disobey Gods Church, Councils, and their ovvne Pastors and Bishops, vvho by the Scriptures haue the regimēt of their ioules, and may examine and punish as vvell Iohn Calvin as Simon Magus, for falling from the Catholike faith. for though God alone be the Lord, author and giuer of faith, yet they are his * cooperators and coadiutors by vvhom the faithful do beleue and be preserued in the true faith, and be defended from vvoules, vvhich be Heretikes seeking to corrupt them in the same. And this same Apostle * chalengeth to be

ANNOTATIONS
 CHAP. II.

6. This rebuke sufficeth.] This Corinthian for incest vvas excommunicated and put to penance by the Apostle, as appeareth in the former Epistle c. 5. And here order is giuen for his absolution and pardoning. Vvhon first vve haue a plaine example and prooffe of the Apostolike powver, there of binding, and here of loosing: there of punishing, here of pardoning: there of retaining sinnes, here of remission. Secondly vve may hereby proued that not onely amendment, ceasing to sinne, or repentance in hart and before God alone, is alvvaies ynough to obtaine full reconciliement, vvhon vve see here his separation also from the faithful, and the Sacraments, and from al companie or dealing vvhon other Christian men, besides other bodily affliction: al vvhich called of the Apostle before interitus carnis, the destruction of the flesh, and named here, Rebuke, or (as the * Greeke vvord also importeth) mulct, penance, correction, chastisement, were enioyned him by the Apostles commaundement in the face of the Church, and by the offender patiently sustained so long. Thirdly vve see that it lieth in the handes of the Apostles, Bishops, and spiritual Magistrates, to measure the time of such penance or discipline, not onely according to the weight of the offence committed, but also according to the weaknes of the persons punished, and other respectes of time and place, as to their vvisedom shal be thought most agreeable to the parties good, and the Churches edification. Lastly by this vvhole handling of the offenders case, vve may refute the vvicked heresie of the Protestants, that vvould make the simple beleue, no punishment of a mans ovne person for sinnes comitted, nor penance enioyned by the Church, nor any paines temporal or satisfaction for our life past, to be necessarie, but al such things to be superfluous, because Christ hath satisfied ynough for all. Vvhich Epicurian doctrine is refelled, not onely hereby, but also by the Prophets, Iohn the Baptistes, Christes, and the Apostles preaching of penance and condigne vvorkes or fruites of repentance, to euery man in his ovne person, and not in Christes person onely: and by the vvhole life and most plaine speeches and penitential canons of the holy doctors and Councils prescribing times of penance, commending penance, enioyning penance, and continually vsing the word satisfaction in this case through out al their vvorkes, as our Aduersaries them selues can not but confesse.

s. I beseech you.] They vvhich at the beginning did beare to mush vvith the offender, and seemed loth to haue him excommunicated in so austere maner: yet through their obedience to the Apostle became on the other side so rigorous, and so farre detested the malefactor after he vvvas excommunicated, that the Apostle novv meaning to absolue him, vvvas glad to intreate and commaund them also to accept him to their companie and grace againe.

The Apostle chalengeth their obedience in al things as their Pastor and Superior, and consequently in this point of receiuing to mercie the penitent Corinthian. Vvhereby vve see, that as the power and authoritie of excommunicating, so of absoluing also vvvas in S. Pauls person, though both vvvere to be done in the face of the Church: els he vvould not haue commaunded or required their obedience.

10. I also.] The Heretikes and others not vvell founded in the Scriptures and antiquitie, maruel at the Popes pardons, counting them either fruitles or vnlawful or no elder then S. Gregorie. But in deede the authoritie, power, and right of them is of Christes ovvne vvord and commissiõ, principally giuen to Peter, and so aftervvard to al the Apostles, and in their persons to al the cheefe Pastors of the Church, vvhen it vvvas said, What soeuer you loose in earth, shal be loosd in heauen. By vvhich commissiõ the holy Bishops of old did cut of large peeces of penance enioyned to offenders, and gaue peace, grace, or indulgence, * before they had accomplished the measure of their appointed or deserued punishment. and that is to giue pardon. And so S. Paul here did tovvardes the Corinthian, vvhom he assoiled of mere grace and mercie, as the vvord donare or condonare doth signifie, when he might longer haue kept him in penance and temporall affliction for his offence. Vvherof though he had already before God invvardly repented, yet vvvas he iustly holden vnder this correccion for some satisfaction of his fault past, during the Apostles pleasure. To remit then the temporal punishment or chastisement due to sinners after the offence it self and the guilt therof be forgiuen of God, is an Indulgence or pardon. vvhich the principal Magistrates of Gods Church by Christes vvarrant and the Apostles example, haue euer done, being no lesse authorisid to pardon then to punish, and by imitation of our Maister (who forgauē the aduouteresse and diuers other offenders, not only their sinnes, but also often the temporal punishments due for the same) are as much giuen to mercie as to iustice.

10. I also.] The Heretikes and others not vvell founded in the Scriptures and antiquitie, maruel at the Popes pardons, counting them either fruitles or vnlawful or no elder then S. Gregorie. But in deede the authoritie, power, and right of them is of Christes ovvne vvord and commissiõ, principally giuen to Peter, and so aftervvard to al the Apostles, and in their persons to al the cheefe Pastors of the Church, vvhen it vvvas said, What soeuer you loose in earth, shal be loosd in heauen. By vvhich commissiõ the holy Bishops of old did cut of large peeces of penance enioyned to offenders, and gaue peace, grace, or indulgence, * before they had accomplished the measure of their appointed or deserued punishment. and that is to giue pardon. 10. For you.] Theodorete vpon this place saith that the Apostle gaue this pardon to the Corinthian at the intercession of the blessed men Timotheus and Titus. And we may read in sundrie places, of S. Cyprian namely, that Indulgences or remissions vvwere giuen in the primitiue Church by the mediation of holy Confessors or Martyrs, and by communicating the satisfactorie vvorkes of one to another, to vvwhich end they gaue their letters to Bishops in the behalfe of diuers their Christiã brethē, a thing most agreeable to the mutual entercourse that is betvvveen the members of Christes mystical body, and very answerable to Gods iustice, * vvhich by supply of the one sort that aboundeth, standeth entire in respect of the other sort also that wanteth. In vvhich kinde the Apostle confesseth that him self by his suffering and tribulations, supplieth the vvantes of such passions as Christ hath to suffer, not in his ovvne person, but in his body, vvhich is his Church. Vvherevpon vve inferre most assuredly, that the satisfactorie and penal vvorkes of holy Sainctes suffered in this life, be communicable and applicable to the vse of other faithful men their fellow-members in our Lord, and to be dispensed according to euery ones necessitie and deseruing, by them vvhom Christ hath constituted ouer his familie, and hath made the dispensers of his treasures.

10. In the person of Christ.] For that many might of ignorance or pride reprove the practise of Gods Church and her Officers, or deny the Apostles authoritie to be so great ouer mens soules as to punish and pardon in this sort, S. Paul doth purposely and precisely tell them that he doth giue pardon as Christes Vicar, or as bearing his person in this case: and therefore that no man may maruel of his povver herein, except he thinke that Christes povver, authoritie, and commissiõ is not sufficient to release temporal punishment due to sinners. And this to be the proper meaning of these vvordes, In the person of Christ, and not as the Protestants vvould haue it (the better to auoid the former conclusion of the Apostles giuing indulgence) In the face or septs of Christ, you may easily vnderstand by the Apostles like insinuation of Christes povver, vvhen he committed this offender to Satan, affirming that he gaue that sentence in the name and vvith the versue or povver of our Lord I E S V S C H R I S T. vwho can not see that this is not the vway to extol Christes povver, to deny it to his Priests, seing the Apostle challengeth it by that that Christ hath such povver, & that him self doth it in his name, vertue, and person. So novv in this, and in no other name, giue Popes and Bisshops their pardons. Vvhich pertaining proprely to releasing onely of temporal punishment due after the sinne and the eternal punishment be forgiuen, is not so great a matter as the remission of the sinne it self: 1o. 2o. 21. vvhich yet the Priests * by expresse commission do also remitte.

11. Circumvented of Satan.] Vve may see hereby, that the dispensation of such discipline, and the releasing of the same, be put into the povver and handes of Gods miniiters, to deale more or lesse rigorously, to pardon sooner or later, punish longer or shorter vvhile, as shal be thought best to their vvisedom. for the end of al such correction or pardoning must be the saluation of the parties soul, as the Apostle noted 1 Cor. 5, 5. Vvhich to some, and some certaine times, may be better procured by rigour of discipline then by indulgence, to some others, by lenitie and humane dealing (so pardoning of penance is called in old Councils) rather then by ouermuch chaftefement. for consideration vvhereof, in some ages of the Church, much discipline, great penance and satisfaction vvas both enioyned and also vvillingly susteined, and then vvas the lesse pardoning and fewer indulgences, because in that voluntary vse and acceptation of punishment, and great zeale and feruor of spirit, euery man fulfilled his penance, and fevv asked pardon. Novv in the fall of deuotion and lothsomnes that men commonly haue to do great penance, though the sinnes be far greater then euer before, yet our holy mother the Church knowing vvith the Apostle the cogitations of Satan, hovv he vvould in this delicate time, driue men either to desperation, or to forsake Christ and his Church and al hope of saluation; rather than they vvould enter into the course of canonically discipline, enioyneth small penance, and seldom vseth extremitie vvith offenders as the holy Bisshops of the primitiue Church did, but condescending to the vveaknes of her children, pardoneth exceding often and much, not onely al enioyned penance, but also al or great partes of vvhath punishment temporal so euer due or deserued, either in this vvorld or in the next. As for the Heretikes vvhich neither like the Churches lenitie and pardoning in these daies, nor the old rigor of the primitiue Church, they be like to the Ievves * that condemned Iohn the Baptist of austeritie, and Christ of to much freedom and libertie: not knowing nor liking in deede either Christes ordinance and commission in binding or loosing, or his prouidence in the gouernement of the Church.

17. Adulterating.] The Greeke vvord signifieth to make commoditie of the vvord of God, as vulgar Vinteners do of their vvine. Vvhereby is expresse the peculiar trade of al Heretikes, and exceding proper to the Protestants, that so corrupt Scriptures by mixture of their ovvne phantasies, by false translations, glosses, colorable and pleasant commentaries, to deceiue the tast of the simple, as tauerners and tapsters do, to make their vvines salable by manifold artificiall deceites. The Apostles contrarietie, as all Catholikes, deliuer the Scriptures and vtter the vvord of God sincerely and entirely, in the same sence and sort as the fathers left them to the Church, interpreting them by the same Spirit by vvhich they vvere vvritten or spoken.

1. The Epistle of Christ.] S. Paul and other holy vvrivers of Scriptures did set downe many thinges in vvrting, by penne, inke, and paper, al vvhich be of the holy Ghost: but the special and proper booke of Christes truth and Gospel, is not the external vvrting in those dead creatures, but in the hartes of the faithful, being the proper subiecte of these truthes and graces preached in the nevv Testament, and the habitacle of the holy Ghost.
In the vvhich booke of faithful mens hartes S. Paul vvrote diuers thinges not vttered in any Epistle: as sundrie of the Apostles vvrote the Christian religion in the hartes of their hearers onely, and in other material booke not at all. Vvhereof S. Irenæus li. 3. c. 4. faith, What and if the Apostles also had left no Scriptures, ought vve not to follow the order of the tradition, vvhich they deliuered vnto them so vvhom they committed the Churches? so the vvhich ordinance many nations of those barbarous people that haue beleued in Christ, do consent, vwithous letter or inke, hauing saluation vvrritten in their hartes, and keeping diligently the tradition of the elders. And S. Hierom, (ant. 10. Hieros. 6. 9. ad Pam.) in the Creede of our faith and hope, vvhich being deliuered by tradition from
the

the Apostles, is not written in paper and inke, but in the tables carnal of the hart. And this is the Churches booke also, vvhcreby and vvhcrein she keepeth faithfully al truth vvhritten in the hartes of those to vvhom the Apostles did preach, vvhith the like diligence as she keepeth and preferueth the other booke vvhich is of holy Scriptures, from al corruption of Heretikes and other iniuries.

5. Of our selues.] This maketh first against the Heretikes called Pelagians, that hold Gods grace & our meritorious actions or cogitations to be of free vvil onely, and not of Gods special free Will both grace. Secondly against the Protestantes, vvhon the contrarie side referre al to God, and must cocurre. take avway mans freedom and proper motion in his thoughtes and doings: the Apostle confessing our good cogitations to be our ovvne, but not as comming of our selues, but of God.

6. The letter killeth.] As the letter of the old Lavv not truly vnderstood, nor referred to Christ, commaunding and not giuing grace and spirit to fulfil that vvhich vvas commaunded, did by occasiō kill the carnal lew: so the letter of the new Testamēt not truly taken nor expounded by the Spirit of Christ (vvhich is onely in his Church) killeth the Heretike: vvhon also being carnal and void of spirit, gaineth nothing by the external precepts or good lessons of the Scriptures, but rather taketh hurt by the same. See S. Augustine to. 10. Ser. 70 & 100 de tempore. & li. de Sp. & lit. c. 5. 6. & seq.

9. Much more.] The preeminence of the new Testament and of the priesthod or Ministerie thereof before the old, is, that the new, by al her Sacraments and Priests as ministers immediate of grace and remisison of sinnes, doth so ex opere operato giue the spirit of life and charitie into the hartes of the faithful, as the old did giue the letter or external act of the Lavv. The preeminence of the new Testamēt, Sacraments, & c.

14. The selfsame veile.] As the Iewes reading the old Testament, by reason of their blindnes (vvhich God for the punishment of their incredulitie suffereth to remaine as a couer vpon their eies and hartes) can not see Christ in the Scriptures vvhich they daily heare read in their Synagogs, but shal, vvhon they beleue in him and haue the couer remoued, perceiue al to be most plainejy done and spoken of him in their law & Scriptures: the Iewes in euen to Heretikes hauing (as S. Augustine noteth) a farre greater couer of blindnes and incredulitie ouer their hartes in respect of the Catholike Church vvhich they impugne, than the Iewes haue concerning Christ, can not see, though they read or heare the Scriptures read neuer so much, the maruelous euidence of the Catholike Church and truth in al pointes: but vvhon they shal returne againe to the obedience of the same Church, they shal finde the Scriptures most cleere for her and her doctrine, and shal vvhonder at their former blindnes. The heretikes more blinde in not seing Christ.

17. Libertie.] The Spirit and grace of God in the new Testament dischargeth vs of the bondage of the Lavv and sinne, but is not a vvarrant to vs of fleshly licence, as S. Peter writeth: nor dischargeth Christians of their obedience to order, law, and power of Magistrates spiritual or temporal, as some Heretikes of these daies do seditiously teach. True Christiā libertie.

10. The proper things of his body.] S. Augustine (Enchirid. c. 110.) objecteth this speech of the Apostle, as in the person of such as deny the prayers, almes, and sacrifices of the liuing to be auailable for the dead, and he answereth as folowveth. This practise (saith he) of Gods Church is the commendation of the dead, is nothing repugnant to the sentence of the Apostle, vwhere he saith, that vve shal al stand before the iudgements seats of Christ: that every one may rescieue according to hu deserts in the body, either good or euil. For, in hu life and before death he deserued this, that these vvorkes after hu death might be profitable vnto him, for in deede they be not profitable for al men. and vwhy so? but because of the difference and diuersitie of mens liues vvhiles they vvere in flesh. The like he hath in diuers other places. August. li. de Præd. Sanct. c. 12. & ad Dulcit. q. 2. And so hath S. Denys c. 7. Ec. Hierarch.

10. Either good or euil.] Heauen is as vvell the revvard of good vvorkes, as Hel is the stpend of il vvorkes. Neither is faith alone sufficient to procure saluation, nor lacke of faith the onely cause of damnation: by good deedes men merite the one, and by il deedes they deserue the other. This is the Apostles doctrine here and in other places, hovv so euer the Aduersaries of good life and vvorkes teach othervvise.

18. The ministerie of reconciliation.] Christ is the cheefe Minister, according to his manhod, of al our reconcilment to God: and for him, as his ministers, the Apostles and their successors the Bishops and Priests of his Church, in vvhom the vvord of reconcilment, as vvell by ministring of the Sacrifice and Sacraments of remission of sinnes, as by preaching and gouernement of the vworld to saluation, is placed. And therefore their preaching must be to vs, as if Christ him self did preach: their absolution and remission of sinnes, as Christes ovne pardon: their vvhole office being nothing els (as vve see by this passage) but the Vicarship of Christ.

21. The iustice of God.] Euen as (saith S. Augustine) vwhen vve reade, Saluation is our Lordes, it is not meant that saluatio vvhereby our Lord is saued, but vvhereby they are saued vvho be saued: (vvhich it is said,

CHA. VI.

Gods Ministers are his coadiutors. 2. Helping.] For that he declared before the Ministers of the nevv Testament to be Christes deputies, and that vvhenn they preach or do any function, God as it vvere speaketh or doeth it by them, he boldly novv saith, Helping therefore: that is to say, ioyning or vvorking together vvith God, vve do exhort.

Gods grace forceth no mā against his vvil. 1. Grace in vaine.] The grace of God vvorketh not in man against his vvil, nor forceth any thing vvithout his acceptation and content: and therefore it lieth in mans vvill to frustrate or to folovv the motion of God, as this text plainly proueth.

Voluntarie penance. 1. In Washings.] Vvhen in the middes of many miseries and persecutions, the Apostles yet of their ovvne accord added and required voluntarie vigils, fastings, and chastitie, vve may vvell perceiue these vvorkes to be vvondertul grateful to God, and specially needful in the Clergie.

Not to communicate vvith Heretikes in any acte of religion. 1. What societie.] Generally here is forbidden conuerſation and dealing vvith al Infidels, and consequently vvith Heretikes, but specially in praiers, or meetings at their Schismatical Seruice, preaching, or other diuine office vvhatsoeuer. Vvwhich the Apostle nere vtereth in more particular and different termes, that Christian folke may take the better heede of it. No societie (saith he) nor felovvship, no participation nor agreement, no content betvvene light and darknes, Christ and Baal, the temple of God and the temple of Idols: al Seruice, as pretended vvorship of God set vp by Heretikes or Schismatices, being nothing els but Seruice of Baal and plaine Idolatrie, and their conuenticles nothing but conspirations against Christ. from such therefore specially vve must feuer our selues alvvayes in hart and mind, and touching any act of religion in body also, according as the children of Israel vvere commaunded by God to separate them selues from the Schismatices

CHA. VII.

He proceedeth to exhorte them to puritie, and to receiue him into their charitie. 1 Which lest they should thinke he speaketh to accuse them, he commendeth them highly, both for their behaviour toward Titus, and for their penance vvich they had done vpon his osher epistle.

HAVING therefore these promisses, my dearest, let vs cleaue our selues from al iniquatiō of the flesh and spirit, perfiting sanctification in the feare of God. † Receiue vs. Vve haue 2 hurt no man, vve haue corrupted no man, vve haue circumvented no man. † I speake not to your cōdem- 3 nation. for I said before that you are in our hartes to die together and to liue together. † Much is my confidence vvith 4 you, much is my glorying for you: I am replenished vvith consolation

5 consolation: I do exceedingly abound in ioy in al our tribu-
 6 lation. † For also vwhen vve were come into Macedõnia, 7 our flesh had no rest, but vve suffered al tribulatiõ: vwithout, 8 combats: vwithin, feares. † But God that comforteth the 9 humble, did comforte vs, in the comming of Titus. † And 10 not only in his comming, but also in the consolation, vwhere-11 vvith he vvas comforted among you, reporting to vs your 12 desire, your vweeping, your emulation for me, so that I re-13 ioyced the more. † For although I made you sorie in an 14 epistle, it repenteth me not: albeit it repented me, seing that 15 the same epistle (although but for a time) did make you sorie.
 16 † Novv I am glad: not because you were made sorie, but because you were made⁹ sorie to penance. For you were made sorie according to God, that in nothing you should suffer detriment by vs. † For¹⁰ the sorovv that is according to God, vvorketh penance vnto saluation that is stable: but the sorovv of the vworld vvorketh death. † For behold this very thing, that you were made sorie according to God, hovv great carefulnes it vvorketh in you: yea defense, yea indignation, yea feare, yea desire, yea emulation, yea reuenge.
 in al things you haue shevved your selues to be vndefiled in the matter. † Therefore although I vvrote to you, not for him that did the iniurie, nor for him that suffered: but to manifest our carefulnes that vve haue for you before God, † therefore vve are comforted. But in our consolation, vve did the more abundantly reioyce vpon the ioy of Titus, because his spirit vvas refreshed of al you. † And if to him I gloried any thing of you, I am not cõfounded; but as vve spake al things to you in truth, so also our glorying that vvas to Titus, is made a truth, † and his bovvels are more abundantly toward you: remembering the obedience of you al, hovv vvith feare and trembling you receiued him. † I reioyce that in al things I haue confidence in you.

Punishing of Heretikes. 4. Weapons. He meaneth the ample spiritual and Apostolical pover given by Christ for the punishment of false Apoittles, Heretikes, and rebelles to Gods Church, vuno are here noted specially by pride and intolence (vvhich is the proper marke of such fellowves): to extoll them selues

Their pride. aboute the measure of the science of God, vvhich consisteth in humble obedience to the faith and the preachers of the same.

The spiritual pover of Bishops against Heretikes. 6. To reuenge You may see hereby, that the spiritual pover of Bishops is not onely in preaching the Gospel, and so by persuasion and exhortation onely (as some Heretikes hold) to remitte or retaine sinnes, but that it hath authoritie to punish, iudge, and coniemne Heretikes and other like rebelles: vvhich pover * one of the principal rebelles of this time being conuenced by the euidence of the place, acknowledged to be grounded vpon Christes vword, Whatsoeuer you binde in earth, shal be bound in heauen: Mat. 18, 18. applying also the vwordes spoken to Hieremie

Heretical Cōsistories. (C. 1, 10.) Behold I appoint thee ouer Nations and Kingdoms, that thou plant, plucke up, build ana destroy: to confirme and explicate the pover Apoittolike here alleaged by S. Paul. Many they vwould gladly dravv this pover from the lawfull succcessors of the Apoittles, to them selues, their ministers and consistories, vvhich are nothing eis but the thoppes and Councels of sedition and at the conspiracies of this time, against the lawfull Princes of the vworld.

Ecclesiastical censures (namely Excommunication) vvhē & where to be executed. 8. Vnto edification. This great pover of the Churches censures, specially of Excommunication, as it vvas given for the good and saluation of the people, to it must not be used against the innocent: no nor yet vpon Heretikes or other offenders, but vvhē and vvhēn it may by likelihood benefite either the parties, or the people, or may be executed vvhithout the hurt or perturbation of the vvhole Church, as often times it can not be, by reason of the multitude of offenders. Vvhich caused the Apoittle here to signifie that he vwould not vse his vttermost authoritie against the false Apoittles vvhich disturbed them, till them selues vvere in perfect obedience vnto him, leit by punishing the principal offenders, a greater disturbance and reuolt might fall among the people, if they vvere not before in perfect obedience.

CHAP. XI.

Here reasoneth the master vwith the Corinthians, vwhy they should preferre the false Apoittles before him. 16 And because they giue them leaue to bragge and commend them selues, and so abuse them so miserably, he trusteth they vwill also giue him the hearing: 21 and so he beginneth, and first shewing him self in ad iudicial respectes (vwherein onely stood al their boasting) to be as they are, he addeth afterward such a long roll of his sufferings for Christ, as is incomparable.

s. From the simplicitie. People fall from their first faith, virginitie, and simplicitie in Christ, not by sodē revolt, but by litle & litle, in giuing care to the subtil persuasio of the Serpent, speaking to the by the svete mouthes & illurementes of Heretikes, of vvich kind of seductiō he giueth Lue for an example, vvho vvas by her greedy desire of knowvledge and the Diueis promis of the same, drawen from the nauue simplicitie and obedience to God. as at this day, promis and pretenie of knowvledge driueth many a poore soul from the sure, true, sincere, and onely beleere of Gods Church.

Ambrose in thevv of vvordes, but farre inferior to him (vvithout al comparatiō) in substance and matter. In vvich sort the Apostle here is glad to compare him self vvith the false Apostles, vvhom the Coriathians did solovv and extoill farre aboue him by reason of their eloquence, granting to them that gift, but challenging to him self superioritie in knowvledge, vvich al vvise-men preferre before vaine vvordes. And it is the bane of our poore countrie, that the people novv daies giue credit rather to nevv orators and folish vonkers, for their svete speeches: then to the glorious Doctōrs of Christiē Church, for their singular knowvledge and more graue eloquence.

He telleth of his incomparable visions, 5 but for humilitie liketh better to talke of his infirmities: 11 putting the fault in the Corinthians for that he is faine thus to rehearse his owne commendacions. 13 Where againe he reasoneth the matter wish them like a father, why they should preferre those false Apostles before him. 20 And feareth lest at his coming he shall be compelled to excommunicate many of them.

and if I vvil glorie, I shal not be foolish: for I shal say truth.

Vvisions haue no credite vvith heretikes.

1. Visions.] S. Cyprian (ep. 69. nu. 4.) complaineth that the Aduerſaries of Gods Church and Priestes, giue no credit to visions. but their incredulitie is much more in our daies, that condemne al such revelations, though they be reported and recorded for most certaine, of holy S. Gregorie, S. Bede, or vvho els so euer. Yea they are so vvicked in this case, that the vision vvich the holy author of the booke of Machabees * calleth fide dignum, vvorthy of credit, is one cause vvhy they deny the vvhole booke to be Canonical: and as vvei might they for this vision deny al S. We must sticke to the faith first planted by miracles.

12. In signes.] Miracles be necessarie, and be great signes of truth, vvhen it is first newly taught. And therefore let al Catholike men hold fast that faith vvich vvvas first preached and confirmed by miracles, as in Engiand by S. Augustine, and in other nations by other holy Apostolike men. And let the Heretikes that preach extraordinarily, newly, and othervvise then vve receiued at our first conuersion, shew their calling and doctine by miracles, or els let them be taken for false Apostles as they be.

THE ARGUMENT OF THE
EPISTLE OF S. PAUL TO
THE GALATIANS.

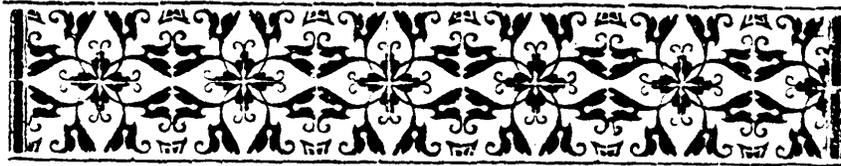

THAT this Epistle may seeme to be the first that S. Paul wrote, was declared in the Argument of the Epistle to the Romanes, notwithstanding that in the second chapter it is euident to haue bene written 14 yeres at the least after his Conuersion, and (as it is said) from Ephesus, belike at that time of his being there. which is mentioned Act. 18.

The occasion of it were such False apostles, as were reade of, Act. 15. Et quidam descendentes, &c. And certaine coming downe from Ievvrie, taught the brethren (that is the Christian Gentiles at Antioche) that vnles you be circumcised according to the manner of Moyses, you can not be saued. Such commers also to the Galatians (whom S. Paul had conuerted Act. 16, as him self mentioneth Gal. 1. and 4.) did seduce them, saying, that al the other Apostles to whom they should rather harken, then to Paul (who came they knew not from whence) did vse Circumcision: yea and that Paul himself, when he came among them, durst do none other. And to winne them more easly, they did not lay on them the burden of the whole Law, but of Circumcision only.

Against these deceuers, S. Paul declareth, that he receiued his Apostleship and learned the Gospel that he preacheth, of Christ him self after his Resurrection: and that the other Apostles (although he learned nothing of them) receiued him into their societie, and allowed wel of his preaching to the Gentiles, though themselves being Ievves, and liuing among the Ievves, had not yet left the ceremonies of the Law: howbeit they did not put in them any hope of iustification, but in Christ alone without them. He declareth moreover, that the said False apostles belyed him, in saying that he also preached Circumcision sometimes. Againe, that they themselves in preaching no more but Circumcision, did against the nature of Circumcision, because it is a profession to obserue the whole Law: finally, whatsoeuer they pretended, that in deeede they did it onely to please the Ievves, of whom otherwise they should be persecuted.

So that in this Epistle he handleth the same matter, which in the Epistle to the Romanes: but here lesse exactly and more briefly, because the Galatians were very rude, and the Romanes contrariwise, repleti omni scientia (Rom. 15) replenished with al knowledg.

THE EPISTLE OF PAUL TO THE GALATIANS.

CHAP. I.

After the foundation laide in the salutation, 6 he exclaimeth against the Galatians, and their falsie apostles, 11 considering that the Gospel which he preached to the, he had it immediatly of Christ him self, 13 which to shew he beginneth to tel the storie of his conuersion and preaching since then, that as he learned nothing of the other Apostles, so yet he had their approbation.

Act. 9, 1.

AN NOT A T I O N S
 CHAP. I.

S. Paul sent to preache by or-dinarie imposition of handes.
 1. Neither by man.] Though he vv ere not first by mans election, nomination, or assignement, but by Gods ovvne special appointmēt, chosen to be an Apostle: yet by the like expresse ordinance of God he tooke orders or imposition of hands of men, as is plaine Act. 13. Let vs bevva re then of such false Apostles, as novv a daies intrude them selves to the office of Ministerie and preaching, neither called of God, nor rightly ordered of men.

No learning or vertue must more vs from the faith.
 2. Or an Angel.] Many vvorthie obseruations are made in the fathers vvritings, of the earnest admonition of the Apostle, and much may vve gather of the text it self, first, that the credit of any man or Angel for vvhat learning, eloquence, shevv of grace or vertue so euer, though he vvrought miracles, should not moue a Christian man from that truth vvhich he hath once receiued in the Catholike Church: of vvwhich point Vincentius Lirinensis excellently treateth. li. cons. profan. haerf.
 Novitates. Vvhereby vve may see that it is great pitie and shame, that so many folovv Luther and Caluin and such other leude fellowes, into a nev v Gospel, vv which are so farre from Apostles and Angels, that they are not any vvhat comparable vvith the old Heretikes in giftes of learning or eloquence, much lesse in good life.

Preaching cō-trarie to the faith recei-ued, is forbidden, not other preaching.
 Secondly S. Augustine noteth vpon the vvord, Beside, that not al other teaching, or more preaching then the first, is forbidden: but such as is contrarie and disagreeing to the rule of faith.
 The Apostle did not say, saith he, if any man euangelize to you more then you haue receiued, but, beside that you receiued. for if he should say that, he should be prejudicial to him self, vvho couered to come to the
 The Iewes, that he might supply that vv which vv as vv wanting to their faith. Now he that supplieth, addeth that which was lacking, taketh not away that which was, &c. By which we see how frivolously and calumniously the Heretikes charge the Church with addition to the Scriptures.

Thirdly, as well by the word euangelizamus (we euangelize) as the word accepistis (you have received) we may note that the first truth, against which no second Gospelling or doctrine may be admitted, is not that onely which he wrote to the Galatians, or which is contained either in his or any other of the Apostles or Euangelistes writings, but that which was by word of mouth also preached, taught, or deliuered them first, before he wrote to them. Therefore the Aduersaries of the Church that measure the Word of God or Gospel by the Scriptures onely, thinking them selues not to incurre S. Pauls curse, except they teach directly against the vwritten word, are fouly beguiled.
As therein also they shamfully erre, when they charge the Catholikes with adding to the Gospel, when they teach any thing that is not in expresse Wordes written by the Apostles or Euangelistes.
not marking that the Apostle in this Chapter, and els where, commonly calleth his & his fellowes whole preaching, the Gospel, be it written or vwritten.

Fourthly, by the same wordes we see condemned al after-preachings, later doctrines, new sectes and authors of the same: that onely being true, which was first by the Apostles and Apostolike men as the lawfull husbandmen of Christes field, sowed and planted in the Church: and that false, which was later and as it were ouertovven by the enimie. By which rule not onely Tertullian (de prescripte, nu. 6 & 9.) but all other auncient Doctores, and specially S. Irenæus (li. 3. c. 2. 3. 4.) tried truth from falshod, and condemned old Heretikes, prouing Marcion, Valentine, Cerdon, Menander, and such like, false Apostles, because they came in with their nouelties long after the Church was settled in former truth.

Sixthly, This curse or execration pronounced by the Apostle, toucheth not onely the Galatians, or those of the Apostles time, that preached otherwise then they did, but it pertaineth to al times, preachers, and teachers, vnto the worldes end, and it concerneth them (as Vincentius Lirinenlis saith) that preach a new faith, or change that old faith which they received in the vnitie of of the Catholike Church. To preach any thing to Christian Catholike men (saith he) besides that which they haue received, neuer was it lawfull, neuer is it, nor neuer shal it be lawfull. so say anathema to such, it hath been, and is, and shal be alwaies behooful. So S. Augustine by this place holdeth al accursed, that draw a Christian man from the societic of the whole Church, to make the seueral part of any one sect: that call to the hidden conuenticles of Heretikes, from the open and known Church of Christ: that allure to the priuate, from the common: finally al that draw with chatting curiositie the children of the Catholike Church, by teaching any thing besides that they found in the church.

uouit.*

155.*

mentioning also that a Donauit feined an Angel to haue admonished him to call his frende out of the Communion of the Catholike Church into his sect. and he saith, that if it had been an Angel in deede, yet should he not haue heard him. Lastly S. Hierom vieth this place, wherein the Apostle giueth the curse or anathema to al false teachers not once but twiue, to proue that the zeale of Catholike men ought to be to great toward al Heretikes and their doctrines, that they should giue them the anathema, though they were neuer to deere vnto them. In which case, saith this holy Doctore, I would not spare mine ovne parents. *Ad Pammach. c. 3. cont.
10. Hieros.*

18. To see Peter. In what estimation S. Peter was with this Apostle, it appeareth: seeing for respect and honour of his person, and of duty as Tertullian de prescripte saith (notwithstanding his great affaires Ecclesiasticall) he went so farre to see him, not in vulgar maner, but (as S. Chrysostom notheth the Greeke word to import) to behold him as men behold a thing or person of name, excellencie, and maiestie. for which cause, and to fill him self with the perfect view of his behaviour, he abode with him nineteene daies. See S. Hierom ep. 103 ad Paulinum. to. 3. Who maketh also a mysterie of the number of daies that he taried with S. Peter. See S. Ambrose *in Comment.
huius loci*, and S. Chrysostome vpon this place, and ho. 87 in Ioan.

vworkes ^{of} of the Law, but by the faith of I E S V S Christ: we also beleue in Christ I E S V S, that we may be iustified by the faith of Christ, and not by the vworkes of the Law: for the vvhich cause, by the workes of the Law no fles h (shal be iustified. † But if seeking to be iustified in Christ, our selues also be found sinners: is Christ then a minister of sinne? For if iustice be by the Law, then Christ died in vaine.

By this and by the discourse of this whole epistle, you may perceine, that when iustification is attributed to faith, the vworkes of Charitie be not excluded, but the vworkes of Moysees law: that is, the ceremonies, sacrifices and sacraments thereof principally, and consequently al workes done merely by nature and free wil, without the faith, grace, spirit, & aide of Christ.

ANNO TATIONS
C H A P. I I.

1. Conferred vvith them.] Though S. Paul vvere taught his Gospel of God and not of S. Paul con- man, and had an extraordinarie calling by Christ him self, yet by reuelation he vvvas sent ferreth vvith to Hierusalem to conferre the said Gospel vvhich he preached, vvith his elders the ordi- S. Peter and narie Apostles and Rulers of the Church, to put both his vocation and doctrine to their the rest, for trial and approbation, and to ioyne in office, teaching, and societie or communion vvith trial of his do- them. For there is no extraordinarie or miraculous vocation, that can seuer or separate & tria. the person so called, in doctrine or fellowvship of Christian life and religion, from the ordi- ninarie known societie of Gods peopie and Priestes. Therefore vvho soeuer he be (vpon The heretikes vvhat pretence so euer) that vvil not haue his calling and doctrine tried by the ordinarie submit their Gouverners of Gods Church, or disdaineth to go vp to the principal plate of our religion, doctrine to no to conferre vvith Peter and other pillars of the Church, it is euident that he is a false teat- rial of Bi- cher, a Schismaticke, and an Heretike. Ey vvhich rule you may trie al your nevv teachers shops or Cou- of Luthers or Calvins schoole: vvho neuer did nor euer durst put their preaching to such ccel. conference or trial of holy Councel or Bishops, as they ought to do, and vvould do, if it vvere of God, as S. Paul vvvas.

2. In vaine.] Though S. Paul doubted not of the truth of the Gospel vvhich he preached, The appro- knowving it to be of the holy Ghost: yet because other men could not, nor vvould not ac- bation of S. knowledge so much, til it vvere allowed by such as vvere vvithout al exception knowven Paules doctri- to be Apostles & to haue the spirit of truth, to discern vvwhether the vocation, spirit, & Gos- ne by Peter & spel of Paul vvere of God, he knew he tould othervvise vvithout conferre vvith them, the rest, vv as haue lost his labour, both for the time past and to come. He had not had (saith S. Hierom) very requisite. seueritie of preaching the Gospel, if it had not been approved by Peters sentence and the rest that vvere vvish bim. Hiero. ep. 89. c. 2. See Tertul. li. 4. Const. Marc. nu. 3. Therefore by reuelation he vvvent so conferre vvith the Apostles at Hierusalem, that by them hauing his Apostleship and Gos- pel liked and approved, he might preach vvith more fruite. Vvherin vve see, this holy Apostle did not as the seditious proud Heretikes do novv daies, vvhich refusing al mans attestation or approbation, vvil be tried by Scriptures onely. As also vve may learne that it is no such absurditie as the Aduersaries vvould make it, to haue the Scriptures appro- No absurditie that the Scri- ued by the Churches testimonie. Seing the Gospel vvhich S. Paul preached (being of as tures be ap- proved by the Churches testimonie. cles to mans censure, and the Scriptures to haue no more force then the Church is content to graunt vnto them, is vaine and false. For, to beare vvitnes or to giue euidence or attestation that the preaching or vvriting of such, is true and of the Holy Ghost, is not to make The Church maketh not it true: no more then the Goldsmith or touch-stone that trie and discerne which is true gold, make it good gold, but they giue euidence to man that so it is. And therefore that disputation also, vvhether the Scripture or the Church be of greater authoritie, is superfluous: either giuing testimonie to the other, and both assured by the Holy Ghost from all error: the Church yet being before the Scriptures, the spouse of Christ, and proper dwelling, temple, or subiect of God and his graces: for the which Church the Scriptures were, and not the Church for the Scriptures. In vvhich Church there is iudicial authoritie by office and iurisdiction to determine of doubtful questions touching the sense of the Scriptures and other controuersies in religion, & to punish disobedient persons. Of which iudicial power the Scriptures be not capable, as neither the trutthes & determinations of the same can be so euident to men, nor so agreeable and fit for euery particular resolution, as diuersitie of times and persons requireth. Certaine is the truth, and great is the authoritie of both; but in such diuers kindes, as they can not be vvell compared together. The controuertie is much like as if a man touching the ruling a case in law or giuing sentence in a matter of question, should aske, vvhether the iudge, or the euidence of the parties, be of more authoritie or credit. vvhich were as friuolous a dispute, as it were a disordered part for any man to say, he vvvould be tried by no other iudge but by his owne writings or euidences. Vvith such triflers and seditious persons haue we to do now a daies in diuinitie, as vvere intolerable in any prophane science or facultie in the vvorld.

The Scriptures alwaies true in them selues, are so knowen to be by the Church.

6. Added nothing.] The Gospel and preaching of S. Paul vvas wholly of God, & therefore though it were put to the Churches probation, as gold is to the touch stone: yet being found in all partes pure, nothing could be altered or amended therein by the Apostles. Euen so the Scriptures vvhich are in deede vvholy of the Holy Ghosts enditing, being put to the Churches trial, are found, proued, and testified vnto the vvorld to be such, and not made true, altered, or amended by the same. Vvithout vvhich attestation of the Church, the holy Scriptures in them selues were alwaies true before: but not so knowen to be, to all Christians, nor they so bound to take them. And that is the meaning of the famous sentence of S. Augustine Cont. ep. fund. c. 5. vvhich troubleth the Heretikes so much. I vvould not beleue the Gospel (saith he) vnles the authoritie of the Church moued me.

The Apostles commissiō general through the vvorld, & yet peculiar to certaine prouinces.

7. To Peter of the circumcision.] Vve may not thinke, as the Heretikes deceitfully teach, that the charge of the Apostles vvas so distincted, that none could preach or exercise iurisdiction but in those seueral places or tovvards those peoples or prouinces onely, vvhervnto by Gods appointment or their owne lot or election, they were specially designed. For, euery Apostle might by Christs commissiō (Mat. 28. Goe, and teach all nations) vse all spirittual functiō through the vvhole vvorld. yet for the more particular regard & care of prouinces, & for peace & order sake, some were appointed to one countrie, & some to another: as, of the other Apostles, we see in the Ecclesiastical histories, and for S. Peter & S. Paul; it is plaine by this place & other, that to them as to the vvvo cheefe and most renowned Apostles, the Church of all Nations vvas giuen, as devided into two partes, that is, Iewes and Gentiles: the first and principal being S. Peters lot, that herein also he might resemble our Sauour, vvho vvas sent namely * to the lost sheepe of Israel, and vvas properly Iewes and Gentiles specially committed to the two principal Apostles.

Neither Peter only of the Iewes, nor Paul Apostle of the Gentiles only.

Caluins foolish reason that Peter vvas not B. of Rome, & his derogatiō from Peters Apostleship.

* the Minister of the Circumcision: the second being S. Pauls, vvhom Christ chose specially to preach to the Gentiles: Not so for all that, that either he vvas limited to the Gentiles onely, (vvho the Actes of the Apostles report, in euery place, first to haue entered into the Synagogs & preached Christ to the Iewes, as he vvrote also to the Hebrues & euer had special regard & honour to the;) or Peter so bound to the Iewes only, that he could not meddle vvith the Gentiles: seing he vvas * the man chosen of God, by vvhom the Gentils should first beleue, vvho first baptized them, and first gaue order concerning them. Therefore the treacherie of Caluin is intolerable, that vpon this distinction of the Apostles charge, vvould haue the simple suppose, that S. Peter could not be Bishop of Rome (so might he barre S. Iohn from Ephesus also) nor deale among the Gentiles, as a thing against Gods ordinance and the appointment betvvene him and S. Paul: as though thereby the one had bound him self to the other, not to preach or meddle vvithin his fellows compass. And vvich is further most seditious, he exhorteth all men to keepe fast the foresaid compact, and rather to haue respect to S. Pauls Apostleship, then to S. Peters: as though the preaching, authoritie, and Apostleship of both were not alike true, and all of one holy spirit, vvhether they preached to Iewes or Gentiles, as both did preach vnto both peoples, as is already proued, and at length, partly by the daily decay of the Iewish state and their incredulitie, and partly for that in Christianitie the distinction of Iew & Gentil ceased after a season: both vvnt to the cheefe citie of the Gentiles, and there founded the Church common to the Hebrues and all nations, Peter first, and Paul aftervvard. And therefore Tertullian saith, de prescripte nu. 14. *O happy Church, to vvich the Apostles poured out all doctrine vvith their blood. 9. Gaue the right handes of societie.] There is and alwaies ought to be, a common fellowship and fraternitie of all Pastors and preachers of the Church. Into vvhich societie who so euer entereth not, but standeth in Schisme and separation from Peter and the cheefe Apostolike Pastors, what pretence so euer he hath, or vvhence so euer he chalengeith authoritie, he is a vvolve, and no true Pastor. Vvhich vnion and communion together was so necessarie euen in S. Pauls case, that, notwithstanding his special calling of God, yet the Holy Ghost caused him to go vp to his elder Apostles, to be receiued into their fellowship or brotherhod. for it is to be noted, that S. Peter, Iames, and Iohn were not sent to S. Paul, to ioine vvith him or to be tried for their doctrine and calling, by him: but contrarievvise he vvvas sent to them as to the cheefe and knowven ordinarie Apostles. They therefore gaue Paul their handes, that is to say, tooke him into their societie, and not he them. And S. Hieroms rule concerning this, (shal be found true to the vvordes end, speaking of S. Peters successor: He that gathereth not vvith thee, scattereth. Ep. 17. And in an other place for the same cause he calleth Rome, tutissimum Communions portum, the most safe and sure haue of communion or societie. Ep. 16. c. 2. And vvhereas the Heretikes by this also vvould proue that Peter had no preeminence aboue Paul being his fellowv Apostle, it is ridiculous. As though al of one fellowship or brotherhod be alwaies equal, or as though there were not order and gouernement, superioritie and inferioritie, in euery societie vvell appointed. And they might perceiue by this vvhole passage, that Peter vvvas the special and in more singular sort, the Apostle of the Iewes, though Iames and Iohn were also: as S. Paul is also called in more singular sort the Apostle and doctor of the Gentiles then S. Barnabas, and yet they vvvere both alike taken here into this societie, as they were both at once and alike segregated into this ministerie, and ordered together Act. 11. it is a poore reason then to say or thinke, S. Peter not to be aboue S. Barnabas neither, because of this societie and fellowship vnto vvhich he vvvas receiued together vvith S. Paul.

11. I resisted him.] Vvicked Porphyrie (as S. Hierom vvriteth) chargeth S. Paul of enuie and malepart boldnes, and S. Peter of error. Proem. Comment. in Galat. Euen so the like impious sonnes of Cham, for this, and for other things, gladly charge S. Peter, as though he had committed the greateit crimes in the vvorld, for, it is the propertie of Heretikes and ill men, to be glad to see the Saints reprehended and their faultes discouered, as vve may learne in the vvritings of S. Augustine againt Faulstus the Manichee, vvho gathered out al the actes of the holy Patriarches, that might seeme to the people to be vvorthy blame. Vvhom the said holy Doctor defendeth at large againt him, as both he, and before him S. Cyprian, finde here vpon this Apostles reprehention, much matter of praising both their vertues: S. Pauls great zeale, and S. Peters vvonderfull humilitie: that the one in the cause of God vvould not spare his Superior, and that the other, in that excellent dignitie, vvould not take it in il part, nor by allegation of his Supremacie disdain or refuse to be controuled by his iunior. vvvhich of the tivo they count the greater grace and more to be imitated. For neither Peter (saith S. Cyprian) Whom our Lord chose the first and vpon vvhom he built the Church, vvhen Paul disputed vvith him of circumcision, chalenged insolently or arrogantly tooke any thing to him self, saying that he had the Primacie, and therefore the later Disciples ought rather to obey him. ep. 71 ad Quintum. nu. 2. And S. Augustine ep. 19 c. 2 in fine. That (saith he) vvhich vvvas done of Paul profitably by the libertie of charitie; the same Peter tooke in good part by holy and benigne godlines of humilitie, and so he gaue vnto posteritie a more rare and holy example, if at any time perhaps they did amiss, to be content to be corrected of their iuniors, then Paul, for to be bold and confident; ee the inferiors to resist their betters for defending the truth of the Gospel, brotherly charitie alwaies preferred. By vvvhich notable speeches of the Doctors vve may also see, how friuolouly the Heretikes argue herevpon, that S. Peter could not be Superior to S. Paul, being so reprehended of him: vvwhereas the Fathers make it an example to the Superiors, to beare vvith humilitie the correction or controuement euen of their inferiors. Nameiy by this example S. Augustine (li. 2 de bap. c. 1. excellently declareth, that the B. Martyr S. Cyprian, vvho vvaike avvry touching the rebaptizing of them that vvvere christened of Heretikes, could not, nor vvould not have been offended to be admonished & reformed in that point by his fellowves or inferiors, much lesse by a vvhole Councel. We haue learned, saith he, that Peter the Apostle, in vvhom the Primacie of the Apostles by excellent grace is so preeminet, vvhen he did othervvise concerning circumcision then the truth required; vvvas corrected of Paul the later Apostle. I thinke (vvithout any reproch vnto him) Cyprian the Bishop may be compared to Peter the Apostle. howbeit I ought rather to feare lest I be iniurious to Peter, for vvho knowveth not that the principalltie of Apostleship is to be preferred before any dignitie of Bishop vvhatsoeuer? but if the grace of the Chaires or Sees differ, yet the glorie of the Carriers is one. And vvho is so dull that can not see, that the inferior, though not by office and iurisdiction, yet by the law of brotherly loue and fraternal correction, may reprehend his superior? Did euery man vvonder that a good Priest or any vertuous person should tell the Pope, or any other great Prelate or greateit Prince in earth, their faultes? Popes may be reprehended, and are iustly admonished of their faultes, and ought to take it in good part,

All Catholike preachers and Pastors must communicate vvith Peter & his successors.

The heretikes ridiculous argumēt againt Peters preeminence.

The heretikes maliciously derogate from S. Peter.

Pauls reprehention of Peter, teacheth vs the zeale of the one, and humilitie of the other.

It proueth nothing againt Peters superioritie, that he vvvas reprehended.

The superior may be reprehended or admonished of the inferior.

Heretikes reprehension of Catholike Bishops is rather failing.

& so they do and euer haue done, vwhen it commeth of zeale & loue, as of S. Paul, Irenæus, Cyprian, Hierom, Augustine, Bernard: but of Simon Magus, Nouatus, Iulian, Wicleffe, Luther, Caluin, Beza, that do it of malice, & raile no lesse at their vertues then their vices, of such (I say) Gods Prelates must not be taught nor corrected, though they must patiently take it, as our Saviour did the like reproches of the malicious Ievves, and as Dauid did the malediction of Semei. 2 Reg. 16.

S. Peters error vvas not in faith, but in conuersation or behaviour

11. Reprehenfible.] The Heretikes hereof againe inferre, that Peter then did erre in faith, and therefore the Popes may faile therein also. To vvnich vve answer, that howsoeuer other Popes may erre in their priuate teachings or vvritings, vvhereof vve haue treated before in the Annotation vpon these vvordes, That thy faith faile not: it is certaine that S. Peter did not here faile in faith, nor erre in doctrine or knowvledge. for it vvas conuersationis non pradicacionis vitium, as Tertullian saith. 32. de praescript. nu. 7. It vvas a default in conuersion, life, or regiment, which may be committed of any man, be he neuer so holy, and not in doctrine. S. Augultine and vvhofoeuer make moit of it, thinke no othervvise of it. But S. Hierom and * many other holy fathers deeme it to haue been no fault at ail, nor any other thing then S. Paul him self did vpon the like occasion: & that this vvhole combat vvas a set thing agreed vpon betvvene them. It is a schoole point much debated betvviixt S. Hierom and S. Augultine ep. 9. 11. 19. apud Augult.

By their owne conuersion at the first, 6 and by the example of Abraham, and promise made to him, he sheweth that the vvay to obtaine the benediction, is to seeke vnto God by faith in Christ. 10 Seing also that the Law curseth every one that hath not euermore kept the Law. 15 And, that the Law vvas not giuen to alser Gods testaments, 19 but to conuince the Ievves of sinne, 23 and so to be their padagogue or leader vnto Christ, 25 and then to cease.

By the same vve proue also that the Sacraments of the new lavv giue grace, for that the receiuers thereof put on Christ. And the Aduersaries euasion, that it is faith vvhich vvorkeh in the Sacrament, and not the Sacrament it self, is plainly falsē: Baptisme giuing grace and faith it self to the infant that had none before.

CHAP. III.

That the Lavv was fit for the time of nonnage: but being now come to ful age, to desire such seruitude is absurd, specially for Gentils. 12 And that he vvvriteth this not of any displeasure, but to tel them the truth, remembering how passingly they honoured him vvhē he was present, and exhorting them therefore not toarken to the false Apostles in his absence. 21 By the allegorie alio of Abrahams two sonnes, shewing, that the children of the leuues Synagogue skal not inherite, but vve who are the children of the free woman: that is, of the Cath. 8. Servus.] There can be no external worship of God nor association of men in religion, either true or false, without the use of corporal things or elements. The Heathen so used the creatures of elements that they served them as their goddesses. The Ievves, of whom the Apostle here speaketh, served not the creatures themselves which they occupied in their ceremonies, but they served the only true God under the elements: that is to say, being servilely clogged, yoked, kept occupied and in awe, with innumerable fleshly, grosse, and comberfom offices about creatures. The Christians neither serve elements, as the one, nor be kept in servile thraldom thereby, as the other: but occupie only a few exceeding easie, sweet, seemely, and significant, for an agreeable exercise both of body and minde. Whereof S. Augustine saith thus, li. 3. c. 9 de doct. Christ. Some few for many, most easie to be done, most honorable for signification, and most cleane and pure for to be observed and kept, hath our Lord him self and the Apostolical discipline deliuered. And li. de ver. relig. c. 17. Of the wisdom of God is self mans nature being taken, whereby we were called into libertie, a few Sacraments most holisom were appointed and instituted, which might containe the societie of Christian people, that is, of the free multitude under one God. And againe, cont. Faust. li. 19. c. 13. The Sacraments are changed, they are made easier, fewer; holisomer, happier. the same he hath in the 118 epistle c. 1. and many other places besides. By which you may see, it is not al one to use elements, visible Sacraments or ceremonies, and to serve them as the Pagans do, or to serve under them as the Ievves did, wherevith the Heretikes calumniously charge the Christians. And as touching the small number, facilitie, efficacie, and signification, wherein the said holy father putteth the special differences: who seeth not that for so many busie sacrifices, we have but one: for Sacraments vel nere infinite, but seuen: al so easie, so ful of grace, so significant, as can be possible, as of euery one in their seueral places is proued?

Here, let the good Readers take heede of a double deceite used by the Aduersaries about S. Augustines places alleaged. first, in that they say he made but two Sacraments, which is untrue. for, although treating of the difference betwene the Ievvish Sacraments and ours, he namely giueth example in Baptisme and the Eucharist (as sometimes also for example he nameth but one) yet he hath no word nor signe at al that there should be no more. but contrarietie in the foresaid epistle 118 he insinuateth, that besides those two, there be other of the same sort in the Scriptures. Yea, with water and bread, which be the elements of the two foresaid Sacraments, he expressly nameth oile also (li. 3. cont. lit. Petul. c. 104.) the element or matter of the Sacrament of Confirmation: which in the same place he maketh to be a Sacrament as Baptisme is. So doth he affirme of the Sacrament of Orders li. 1. de bapt. c. 1. and also of Matrimonie li. de bono coniug. c. 24. of Penance likewise, he speaketh as of Baptisme. which he calleth Reconciliation, li. 1. de adult. coniug. c. 28. Lastly, by the booke de visitatione infirmorum in S. Augustine, li. 3. c. 4. by Prosper de traditionibus p. 2. c. 29. S. Innocentius ad Eugubinum to. 1. Conc. ep. ad Eugub. c. 8. S. Cyril li. 2. in Leuiticum, and S. Chrysostom li. 1. de Sacerdotio, * Extreme unction is proued to be a Sacrament. It is false then that the Heretikes affirme of S. Augustine, by whose doctrine it is plaine, that though the elements or Sacraments of the new law be but few and very few in comparison of those in the old law, yet there be no fewer then seuen specified by him. Vvhich number of seuen the holy Councils of Florence and Trent do expressly define to have been instituted by Christ, against these late Heretikes. See more of these Sacraments in their places. Act. 8. 1 Tim. 4. Io. 20. Ia. 5. Ephes. 5.

The other forgerie of the Aduersaries concerning the elements or ceremonies, is, that S. Augustine (ep. 119. c. 19.) should affirme, that the Church and Christian people in his daies (wherevpon they inferre that it is so much more now) were so laden with obseruation of vnpromitable ceremonies, that they were in as great seruilitie and subiection to such things as the Ievves. He saith so in deede of some particular presumptions, inuentions, and viages of certaine perions, as that some made it a heinous matter to touch the ground with their bare feete within their owne octaues, and such like vanities. Whereby some simple folkes might be infected, vvhich this holy Doctor specially disliked, and vvhith such things (as they may, without scandal) to be taken away. But that he wrote or meant so of any ceremonie that the Church vseth, either appointed by Scripture, or Council, or custom of the Catholike Church, him self denieth it in expresse termes in the same place, and in sundrie other: where he alloweth al the holy ceremonies done in the ministracion of the Sacraments and els vvhether. Vvhetherby it is cleere, that the Churches most comely orders and significant rites pertaine not to the yoke of the old law, much lesse to the superstition of Gentilitie, as Heretikes affirme: but to the sweete yoke of Christ and light burden of his law, to order, decencie, and instruction of the faithful, in al libertie, loue, faith, grace, and spirit.

9. Uvake and poore.] Vvhether he meane of the creatures vvhich the Gentils served (as it may seeme by the wordes before of serving strange gods) so the elements were most base and beggerly: or of the Iudaical ceremonies and sacraments (as most expound it) euen so also their elements vvere vveake and poore in them selues, not giuing life, saluation, and remission of sinnes, nor being instruments or vessels of grace, as the 7 Sacraments of the new law be.

10. You obserue daies.] That vvhich S. Paul speaketh against the Idololatrall obseruation of daies, moneths, and times, dedicated by the Heathen to their false goddes, and to vicked men or spirites, as to Iupiter, Mercurie, Ianus, Iuno, Diana, and such like, or against the superstitious differences of daies, fatall, fortunate, or dismol, and other obseruations of times for good lucke or ill lucke in mans actions, gathered either by particular fantie, or popular obseruation, or curious and vnlawful artes, or (lastly) of the Iudaical festiuities that vvere then ended and abrogated, vnto vvhich notwithstanding certaine Christian Ievves vould haue reduced the Galatians against the Apostles doctrine: al that (I say) do the Heretikes of our time falsely and deceitfully interpret against the Christian holidais, and the sanctification and necessarie keeping of the same. Vvhich is not only contrary to the Fathers exposition, but against the very Scriptures, and the practise of the Apostles & the vvhole Church. Aug. cont. Adimās. c. 16. Ep. 118. c. 7. Hiero. in hunc locum. In the Apocalypse c. 1. there is plaine mention of the Sunday, that is, our Lordes day (Dominicus dies) vnto vvhich the Ievves Sabboth vvas altered, their Pasche into our Easter, their Pētecost into our Vvhitsonde: vvhich vvere ordained & obserued of the Apostles them selues. And the antiquitie of the feattes of Christes Natiuitie, Epiphanie, & Ascēlion is such, that they cā be referred to no other origine but the Apostles institution: vvhō (as S. Clement testifieth li. 8. const. Apost. c. 39.) gaue order for celebrating their fellowv Apostles, S. Steuens, and other Martyrs daies after their death: and much more no doubt did they giue order for Christes festiuities. According to vvhich, the Church hath kept not only his, but S. Steuens and the B. Innocents, euen on the same daies they be now solemnely kept, & his B. mothers, and other Saints, (as the Aduersaries them selues confesse) about 1300 yeres, as appeareth in the barbarous combattes betvvene Vvelfphalus the Lutheran, & Caluin, and by the vvritings betvixt the Puritans and Protestants.

Damasc. & both of that feast and of her Natiuitie in S. Bernard, vvhō professeth he receiued them of the Church, & that they ought to be most solemnely kept. ep. 174. Vvherein vve can not but vvonder at the new Church of England, that (though against the pure Caluinistes vvil and doctrine) keepe other Saints and Apostles daies of their death, and yet haue abolished this special feast of our Ladies departure, vvhich they might keepe, though they beleued not her Assumption in body (vvhereof yet S. Denys giueth so great testimonie) being assured she is departed at the least: except they either hate her, or thinke her vvorthy of lesse remembrance than any other Sainēt, * her self prophēcing the contrary of al Catholike generations, that they should blesse her. And in deede the Assumption is her proper day, as also the feast of her Natiuitie: the other of the Purification and the Annunciation, vvhich they keepe in England, being not so peculiar to her, but belonging rather to Christes Presentation in the Temple, and his Conception. To conclude, vve may see in S. Cyprian ep. 34. Origen ho. 3. in diuers. Tertullian de cor. mil. S. Gregorie Nazianzenē de amore pauperum. the Council of Gangres, yea and in the council of Nice it self giuing order for Easter and the certaine celebrating thereof, that Christian Festiuities be holy, ancient, and to be obserued on prescript daies and times, and that this is not Iudaical obseruation of daies, as Aērius taught, for vvhich he vvas condemned of Heresie, as S. Epiphanius witnesseth. But of holidais S. Augustine sheweth both the reason and his liking, in these memorable vvordes. First for the feastes belonging to our Lord, thus: We dedicate and consecrate the memorie of Gods benefites vvith solemnities, feastes, and certaine appointed daies, lest by tract of times there might creepe in ingrateful and vnkinde obliuion. Cōc the festiuities of Martyrs thus: Christian people celebrate the memories of Martyrs vvith religious solemnities, both to moue them selues to imitation of them, and that they may be partakers of their merites, and be holpen vvith their prayers. Cont. Faust. li. 20 c. 21. And of al Saints daies, thus: Keepe ye and celebrate vvith sobrietie the Natiuities of Saints, that vve may imitate euens vvhiēc haue gone before vs, and they may reioyce of vs vvhiēc pray for vs. In ps. 86. Com. 2. in fine.

And as is said of prescript daies of feastes, so the like is to be said * of fastes, vvhich els vvhere vve haue shewed to be of the Apostles ordinance. And so also of the Ecclesiastical diuision of the yere into Aduent, Septuagesime, & c. the vveeke into so many Ieries, the day into Houres of prayers, as the Prime, the Third, the Sixth, the None & c. Vvhereof see * S. Cyprian, vvhō deriueth these things by the Scriptures from the Apostles also, and counteth these things vvhich the vicked Heretikes reprove, to be ful of mysterie. Like vnto this also is it, that the holy Scriptures were so disposed of, and deuised, that certaine peeces (as is aivvaies obserued and practised vntil this day) should be read at one time, and others at other times and seasons, through out the yere, according to the diuersitie of our Lordes actions and benefites, or the Saints stories then recorded. Vvhich the Puritane Caluinists also condemne of superstition, desiring to bring in hellish horreur and al disorder. See conc. Carthag. 3. c. 47. & pag. 288 of this booke.

Vvhich pregnancie of manifold senses if S. Paul had not signified him self in certaine places, the Heretikes had bene lesse vvicked and presumptuous in condemning the holy fathers allegorical expositions almost vvholly: who now shew them selues to be mere brutish and carnal men, hauing no sense nor feeling of the profunditie of the Scriptures, vvvhich our holy fathers the Doctors of Gods Church saue.

True Christiā
libertie.

25. Freedom.] He meaneth the libertie and discharge from the old ceremonies, sacraments, and the vvhole bondage of the Law, and from the seruitude of sinne, and the Diuel, to such as obey him: but not libertie to do vvhat euery man list, or to be vnder no obedience of spiritual or temporal lawes and gouerners: nor a licence neuer to pray, fast, keepe holy day, or vvorkday, but vvhen and hovv it seemeth best to euery mans phantasie. Such a dissolute licentious state is farre from the true libertie vvvhich Christ purchased for vs.

CHA. V.

ANNOTATIONS

CHAP. V.

e. Faith. This is the faith vvorking by charitie, vvich S. Paul meaneth els vvhere, vvhen he saith that faith doth iustifie. And no e vvil that by these termes circumcision & prepuce not auailable to iustification, it is plaine that in o. her places he meaneth the vvorkes of Circumcision and Prepuce (that is, of the Ievves and the Gentils) vvithout faith, vvich auaike not, but faith vvorking by charitie: as vvho I should say, faith and good vvorkes, not vvorkes vvithout faith.

Againe note here, that if the Protestants vvho pretend conference of places to be the best or only vvay to explicate hard speaches of the holy Scriptures, had solovved but their ovvne rule, this one text vvould haue interpreted & cleared vnto them al other vvhereby iustice and saluation might seeme to be attributed to faith alone: the Apostle here so expressly setting dovvn, the faith vvich he commendeth so much before, not to be alone, but vvith charitie: not to be idle, but to be vvorking by Charitie: as S. Augustine noteth, de fid. & op. c. 16. Further the good Reader must observe, that vvhereas the Protestants some of them confesse, that Charitie and good vvorkes be ioyned and requisite also, and that they exclude them not, but commend them highly, yet so that the said Charitie or good vvorkes are no part of our iustice or any cause of iustification, but as fruits and effectes of faith onely, vvich they say doth all, yea though the other be present: this falle glose also is reprovved evidently by this place, vvich teacheth vs cleane contrarie: to vvitte, that faith hath her vvhole actiuitie and operation tovvard iustice and saluation, of charitie, and not contrariewise: vvithout vvich it can not haue any act meritorious or agreeable to God for our sal-uation. for vvich cause S. Augustine saith, li. 15 de Trin. c. 18. Fidem non facit vtilem nisi charitas.
nothing maketh faith profitable but charitie. But the Heretikes answer, that vvhere the Apostle saith, Iustificatiō by faith onely, disprovved by conference of Scriptures.

Howv the Protestants admit charitie and good vvorkes to iustificatiō.

Charitie is more principal then faith
in iustificatiō.

How faith worketh by

faith worketh by charitie, he maketh charitie to be the instrument only of faith in uel working, and therefore the inferior cause at the least. but this also is easily refuted by the Apostles plaine testimonie, affirming that charitie is * the greater vertue, & that if a man had al faith and lacked charitie, he were vworth nothing. And againe, * that Charitie is the perfection and accöplishment of of the Lavv (as faith is not) vvhich can not agree to the instrumental or inferior cause. And therefore vwhen it is said that faith vworketh by charitie, it is not as by an instrument, but as the body vworketh by the soul, the matter by the forme, vvirhout vvhich they haue no aüiuitie. Vwherevpon the the Schooles call Charitie, the forme or life of faith, that is to say, the force, actiuitie, & operatiue qualitie thereof, in respect of merite and iustice. Vvhich S. Iames doth plainely insinuate, vwhen he maketh faith vvirhout Charitie, to be as a dead corps vvirhout soul or life, and therefore vvirhout profitable operation. c. 2. v. 26.

True libertie, not carnal and

13. Libertie an occasion.] They abuse the libertie of the Gospel to the aduantage of their flesch, that vnder pretense thereof, shake of their obedience to the lawes of man, to the decrees of the Church and Councils, that vvill liue and beleue as they list, and not be taught by their Superiors, but fornicate vwith euery Sect-maister that teacheth pleaiant & licentious things: and al this vnder pretence of spirit, libertie, and freedom of the Gospel. THE ARGUMENT OF THE EPISTLE OF S. PAUL TO THE EPHESIANS.

F S. Paulus first comming to Ephesus, and short abode there, we reade Act. 18. And immediatly Act. 19. of his returning thither according, to his promise. what time he abode there three moneths, speaking to the Iewes in the Synagogue. Act. 19. v. 8. and afterward apart from them (because they were obstinate) two yeres in a certaine schoole, so that al that dwolt in Asia, heard the vvord of our Lord, Iewes and Gentiles. Act. 19. v.

10. The vvhole time himself calleth three yeres, in his exhortation at Miletum to the Cleargie of Ephesus. Act. 20. v. 31.

Eph. 3. v. 1. &
4. v. 1. Eph. 6.
v. 20.

After all this he vvriteth this Epistle vnto them from Rome (as it is said) being then prisoner and in chaines, and that as it seemeth, not the first time of his being in bonds there, vvhereof we reade Act. 28: but the second time, vvhereof we reade in the Ecclesiasticall Stories afterward: because he saith in this Epistle c. 6. v. 21. Tychicus vvil certifie you of al things, vvhom I haue sent to you. Of vvhom againe in the 2. to Tim. c. 4. v. 12. he saith: Tychicus I haue sent to Ephesus. And the said 2. Epistle to Timothee (no doubt) vv as vvritten very litle before his death: for in it thus he saith: I am euen novv to be sacrificed, & the time of my resolution is at hand. 2. Tim. 4, 6.

* See Act. 20.
v. 25-32.

In the three first chapters, he commendeth vnto them the grace of God, in calling of the Gentiles no lesse then the Iewes, and making one blessed Church of both. Vvherein his intencion is to moue them to perseuere (for othervvise they should be passing vngratefull) and specially not to be moued vvith his trouble, vvho vv as their Apostle: knowing (belike) that * it vvould be a great tentation vnto them, if they should heare soone after, that he vv were executed: therefore also arming them in the end of the Epistle, as it vv ere in complete harnesse.

In the other three chapters he exhorteeth them to good life, in all pointes, and all states, as it becommeth Christians: and afore all other things, that they be most studious to continue in the vnitie of the Church, and obedience of the pastors thereof, vvhom Christ hath giuen to continue and to be our stay against all Heretikes, from his Ascension, euen to the full building vp of his Church in the end of the vvorld.

Nine orders of Angels.

21. Al Principalitie.] The Fathers vpon this, and other places of the old and new Testa- ment, vvhere they finde the orders of holy Angels or spirites named, agree that there be nine orders of them. Of vvhich some be here counted and called, as vve see: in the Epistle to the Colosians, the order of Thrones is specified, vvhich maketh five: to vvhich if vve adde these foure, Cherubim, Seraphim, Angels, and Archangels, vvhich are commonly named in holy vvrite, in al there be nine. *S. 22. Head.] It maketh a high prooffe among the Protestants, that no man can be head of the Church, because it is a calling and dignitie proper to Christ. But in truth by as good reason there should be no king nor lord, because, He is king and lord. neither should there be Bishop or Pastor, because he is the Bishop and Pastor of our soules: nor l'ontifex nor Apostle, for by those titles S. Paul termeth him Hebr. 3: none should be pillar, foundation

dation, rocke, light, or maister of the Church or truth, because Christ is properly al these. And yet our nev v doctōrs (though they be exceding seditious and vvould for the aduantage of their sect be gladly ridde of kings and al other Superiors temporal, if they feared not the sword more then God, and vvould finde as good Scriptures to be deliuered of them, as they now finde to discharge them selues of obedience to Popes:) yet (I say) they vvil not deny, al the former titles and dignities (not vvithstanding Christes soueraine right in the same) to be giuen and communicated to the Princes and Magistrates of the earth both spiritual and temporal. though Christ in a more diuine, ample, absolute, excellent, and transcendent sort, haue al these things attributed or appropriated to him self. So then, though he be the head of the Church, and the onely head in such soueraine and principal maner, as no earthly man or mere creature euer is or can be, and is ioyned to the Church in a more excellent sort of coniunction, then any king is to his subiects or Countrie, or any Pope or Prelate to the Church vvhereof he is gouernour, euen so farre that it is called his body Mystical: life, motion, spirit, grace issuing dovvne from him to it and the members of the same, as from the head to the natural body. though in this sort (we say) no man can be head but Christ, nor the Church be body to any but to Christ: yet the Pope may be the ministerial head, that is to say, the cheefe Gouernour, Pastor, and Prelate of the same, and may be his Vicar or Vicegerent in the regiment of that part vvwhich is in earth. as S. Hierom calleth Damasus the Pope, Summum Sacerdotem, the cheefe and highest Priest: and the Apostle saith of this ministerial head, The head can not say to the feete, you are not necessarie for me. For therein also is a great difference betvvene Christ and euery mortal Prelate, that (as the Apostle here saith) he is head of the vvhole Church, meaning of the triumphāt (& of al Angels also though in an other sort) no lesse thē of the Church militāt. So Peter vvvas not, nor any Pope, nor any man can be. Where you must obserue, that for this soueraine preeminence of Christ in this case, the Church is not called the body mystical of any Gouernour, Peter, Paul, or vvhat Prelate or Pope so euer.

Church, and yet man may be head thereof also.

Christ is head of the Church in a far more excellent sort, then any man can be.

Our first iusti- fication of mere grace, & faith the foundation therof.

1. By grace you are saved through faith.] Our first iustification is of Gods grace, and not of our deseruings: because none of al our actions that vvvere before our iustification, could merite or iustly procure the grace of iustification. Againe, he saith, through faith: for that faith is the beginning, foundation, and roote of al iustification, and the first of al other vertues, vvwithout vvwhich it is impossible to please God.

The Church builded vpon Christ, and yet vpon the Apo- stles also.

20. Built vpon the foundation.] Note against the Heretikes that thinke it dishonorable to Christ, to attribute his titles or callings to mortal men, that the faithful (though builded first, principally, and properly vpon Christ) yet are said here to be built also vpon the Apostles and Prophets. Vvwhy may not the Church then be builded vpon Peter?

Cath. Church.

Schisme detestable.

one hope, one faith, one baptisme, one head, one body. Vwhereof S. Cyprian li. de vnitis. Ec. nu. 3. saith thus: *One Church the Holy Ghost in the person of our Lord designeth & saith, One is my doue. This vnitie of the Church he that holdeth not, doth he thinke he holdeth the faith? He that wisheth standeth and resisteth the Church, he that forsaketh Peters chaire upon which the Church was built, doth he trust that he is in the Church? When the blessed Apostle S. Paul also sheweth this Sacrament of vnitie, saying, One body and one spirit & c. Which vnitie vve Bishops specially that rule in the Church, ought to hold fast and maintaine, what vve may proue the Bishoply function also it self to be one and undiuided, & c. And againe, There is Ep. 107. one God, and one Christ, and one Church, and one Chaire, by our Ldes voice founded upon Peter. An other altar to be sette up, or a new Priesthod to be made, besides one altar, or one Priesthod, is impossible. Who soeuer gathereth eis vvhers, scattereth. It is adulterous, it is impious, it is sacrilegiou, vvhatsoeuer is instituted by mans furie to the breach of Gods diuine disposition. Get ye far from the contagion of such men, & flee from their speeches as a canker and pestilence, our Lord hauing pramonij bed and vvarned before hand, They are blind, leaders of the blind, & c. Vwhereby vve learne that this vnitie of the Church commended so much vnto vs, consisteth in the mutual fellowship of al Bishops vwith the See of Peter. S. Hilarie also (li. ad Constantium Augustum) thus applieth this same place of the Apostle against the Arians, as vve may do against the Calvinists. Perilous and miserable it is, saith he, that there are now so many faithes as vvilles, and so many doctrines as maners, vvhiles either faithes are so vvrissen as vve vwill, or as vve vwill, so are vnderstood: and vvhithere as according to one God, and one Lord, and one Baptisme, there is also one faith, vve fall away from that which is the only faith, and vvhiles moe faithes be made, they beginne to come to that, that there is none at al.*

The heretikes 11. Some Apostles.] Many functions that were euen in the Apostles time, are not here named: which must be noted against the Aduersaries that call here for Popes, as though the names of Bishop, Priests, or Deacons were not as well leaft out as Popes: vvhom yet they can not deny to haue been in vie in S. Pauls daies. And therefore they haue no more reason, out of this place to dispute against the Pope; then against the rest of the Ecclesiastical functions. Neither is it necessarie to reduce such as be not specified here, to these here named: though in deede both other Bishops and Prelates and specially Popes may be contained vnder the names of Apostles, Doctors, and Pastors. Certes the roome and dignitie of the Pope is a very continual Apoitelhip, and S. Bernard calleth it Apostolatum. Bernard. ad Eugen. li. 14. c. 4 & c. 6 in fine.

The Popes office is called an Apostle-ship. 12. Until vve meete.] The Church of God shal neuer lacke these spiritual functions, or such as be answerable to them, according to the time and state of the Church, til the vvorlides end. Continual succession of Bishops, an euident argument of the true visible Church. Vwhereby you may proue, the Catholike Church, that is to say, that visible companie of Christians which hath euer had, and by good records can proue they haue had, a continual ordinarie succession of Bishops, Pastors, and Doctors, to be the onely true Church: and these other good fellows that for many vvorlides or ages together can not ihev that they had any one Bishop, or ordinarie yea or extraordinarie officer for them and their sect, to be an adulterous Heretical generation. And this place of the Apostle assuring to the true Church a perpetual visible continuance of Pastors and Apostles or their successors, vvarranted the holy fathers to trie al Heretikes by the most famous succession of the Popes of Rome. So did S. Irenæus, li. 3 c. 3. Tertullian, in prescript. Optatus, li. 2. cons. Parm. S. Augustine, in ps. cons. part. Donat. et cons. sp. Manich. c. 4. et ep. 165. Epiph. her. 27. and others.

The fathers refuted heretikes by the succession of the Bishops of Rome. 13. With euery vvinde.] The special vie of the spiritual Governours is, to keepe vs in vnitie and constance of the Catholike faith, that vve be not carried away vwith the blast or vvinde of euery heresie. Vvhich is a very proper note of sectes and new doctrines that trouble the infirme vveaklings of the Church, by certaine seasons of diuerse ages: as sometime the Arians, then the Manichees, an other time the Nestorians, then the Lutherans, Calvinists, and such like: vvhom at diuers times in diuers places haue blowen diuers blaetes of false doctrine.

CHAP. V.

He continueth his exhortation to good life, assuring them against al deceiuers, that no committer of mortal sinne shal be saued: considering that for such sinnes it is that the Heausten shal be damned: & that Christians must rather be the light of al others. 22 Then he commeth in particular and exhorteth his bands and vviues to do their duty one towards the other, by the example of Christ and his obedient and beloved spouse the Church.

ANNO TATIONS
CHAP. V.

No saluation out of the cath. CHVRCH. 22. Sauour of his body.] None hath saluation or benefite by Christ, that is not of his body the Church. And vvhath Church that is, S. Augustine expresseth in these vvordes. The Catholike Church onely is the body of Christ, vvhoseof he is head. out of this body the Holy Ghost quickeneth no man. And a litle after, He shal vvil haue the Spirit, let him bevvare he remaine nos out of the CHVRCH, let him bevvare he enter nos into it feinedly. August. ep. 50 ad Bonifacium comitem in fine.

The CHVRCH neuer erreth. 24. Subiect to Christ.] The CHVRCH is alvvayes subiect to Christ, that is, not onely vnder him, but euer obedient to his vvordes and commaundement. Vvhich is an euident and inuincible demonstration that she neuer rebelleth against Christ, neuer falleth from him by error, Idolatrie, or false vvorship, as the Heretikes novv, and the Donatistes of old did teach.

Christ's loue toward his Church. 25. Loued the Church.] Loe Christes singular loue of the CHVRCH, for vvvhich onely & the members thereof he effectually suffered his Passion, and for vvvhose continual cleansing and purifying in this life, he instituted holy Baptisme and other Sacraments: that at length in the next life it may become vvithout al spot, vvrinkle, or blemish. for, in this vvorld by reason of the manifold infirmities of diuers her members, she can not be vvholly vvithout sinne, but must say alvvayes,

The Church triumphant vvithout spot and vvrinkle. Dimittite nobis debita nostra, Forgiue vs our debtes. August. li. 2. Retract. c. 18.

The mani- fold dignitie of the Church 29. As Christ the Church.] It is an vnspcakable dignitie of the CHVRCH, vvvhich the Apo- stle expresseth often els vvhere, but specially in this vvhole passage, to be that creature onely for vvvhich Christ effectually suffered, to be vvashed and embrued vvith vvwater and bloud issuing out of his holy side, to be nourished vvith his ovvne body (for so doth S. Irenæus expound li. 5. in principio) to be his members, * to be so ioyned vnto him as the body and members of the same flesh, bone, and substance to the head, to be loued and cherished of him as vvwife of husband, yea to be his vvife and most deere spouse, taken and formed (as S. Augustine often saith) out of his ovvne side vpon the Croisse, as Eue our first father Adams spouse vvvas made of his ribbe. In Psal. 126. & in Psal. 127. & tract. 9 in Ioan. & tract. 120. In respect of vvvhich great dignitie and excel- lencie, the same holy father affirmeth the CHVRCH to be the principal creature, and therefore named in the Creede next after the Holy Ghost. and he proueth against the Macedonians, the Holy Ghost to be God, because he is named before the Church in the confession of our faith. Of vvvhich incomparable excellencie of the Church, so beloved of Christ and so inseparatly ioyned in marriage vvwith him, if the Heretikes of our time had any sentie or consideration, they vvould neither thinke their cōtemptible companie or cōgregation to be the glorious spouse of our Lord, nor teach that the Church may erre, that is to say, may be diuorced from her spouse for Idolatrie, superstition, Heretic, or other abominations: Vvhervpon one of these absurdities vvould ensue, that either Christ may sometimes be without a Church & spouse in earth (as he was at the while there were no Calvinists, if their Church be the spouse of Christ) or els if the Catholike Church onely is and hath been his wife, and the same haue such errors as the Heretikes falsely pretend, that his wife so deere and so praised here, is notwithstanding a very vvhore. Vvhich horrible absurdities proue and conuince to any man of common sense, both that the Catholike Church alwaies is, and that it teacheth truth alwaies, and to honour God truly and sincerely alwaies: vvhathoeuer the adulterous generation of Heretikes thinke or blasphem.

Aburdities that follow, if the Church may erre.

32. This is a great Sacrament.] Mariage a great Sacramēt of Christ and his Church prefigured in the first parēt. Adam (saith S. Augustine traēt. 15 in 10.) who was a forme or figure of him that was to come, yea rather God in him, gaue vs a great token of a Sacrament. For both he deserved sleeping to take a wife, and of hu ribbe hu wife was made vnto him: because of Christ sleeping on the Crosse the Church was to be made out of his side. In an other place he maketh Matrimonie a Sacramēt of Christ and his Church: in that, that as the married mā must forsake father & mother and cleaue vnto his wife, so Christ as it were left his father, exinaniting him self by his incarnatiō, & left the Synagogue his mother, & ioyned him self to the Church. Li. 12 c. 8. cont. Faustum In diuers other places he maketh it also a Sacrament, specially in that it is an inseparable bond betvvixt t̄vo, and that can neuer be dissolued but by death: signifying Christs perpetual and indissoluble coniunctiō vvith the Church his one onely spouse. de Gen. ad lit. li. 9 c. 7. Cont. Pelag. de pec. orig. li. 2 c. 34. De fid. et op. c. 7. De bono coniug. c. 7. & 18. And in an other place, The good of Mariage (saith he) among the people of God in the holines of a Sacrament. De bono cōiugali c. 14.

MATRIMONIE a Sacrament.

Vvho vvould haue thought such mysteries and Sacramēt's to be in Mariage, that the ioyning of man & wife together should represent so great a mysterie, if the Apottle him self, & after him this holy father and others, had not noted it? or vvho can maruel that the holy Church taketh this to be a Sacrament, and to giue grace of sanctification to the parties married, that they may liue together in mutual fidelitie, bring vp their children in faith and feare of God, and possesse their vessel (as the Apottle speaketh) in sanctification and honour, and not in passion of lust and ignominie, as the Heathen do vvhich knowv not God, and as our brutish nevy Maisters seeme to do that commend marriage about al things so farre as it feedeth their concupiscences, but for grace, Sacrament, mysterie, or sanctification thereby, they care no more then the Heathen or brute beastes do? And thus vve gather that matrimonie is a Sacrament, and not of the Greeke vvord Mysterie onely, as Calvin falsely saith, nor of the Latin vvord Sacrament, both vvhich vve knowv haue of their nature a more general signification, and that in the Scriptures also: but vvhereas these names are here giuen to Matrimonie by the Apottle, & are not giuen in the Scriptures to Baptisme and the Eucharist, let them tel vs vvhy they also apply these vvordes from their general signification to signifie specially and peculiarly thoe t̄vo Sacramēt's neuer so named expressly in Scripture, and do not likewise folovv the Catholike Church in calling matrimonie by the same name, vvhich is here so called of the Apottle, specially vvhereas the signification in it, is as great as in any other of the Sacraments, and rather greater.

THE ARGUMENT OF THE
EPISTLE OF S. PAUL TO
THE PHILIPPIANS.

OF S. Paul was called by a vision into Macedonia, vve reade Act. 16. and how he came to Philippi being the first citie thereof, and of his preaching, miracles, and suffering there. And againe Act. 19. Paul purposed in the Spirit, vwhen he had passed through Macedonia and Achaia, to goe to Hierusalem, saying: After I haue been there, I must see Rome also. Vvhich purpose he executed Act. 20. taking his leaue at Ephesus. And being after vward come into Achaia, he had counsel to returne through Macedonia, and so at length from Philippi he began his navigation toward Hierusalem, and from Hierusalem being caried prisoner to Rome (Act. 28.) he vvrote from thence this Epistle to the Philippians: or rather in his second apprehension, about 10 yeres after the first.

In it he confirmeth them (as he did* the Ephesians also about the same time) Eph. 3. against the tentatiō that they might haue in hearing that he vvere executed. therefore he first saith: And I vvil haue you know v brethren, that the things Phil. 1. v. 12. about me, are come to the more furtherance of the Gospel: so that my bandes vvere made manifest in Christ in al the Court &c. Secondly he signifieth that his desire is, to be dissolued and to be vvith Christ. but yet (lest they should be discomforted) that he hopeth to come againe to them. Vvhereof not vvith standing, that he hath yet no certaintie, he signifieth in saying: I hope Phil. 2. v. 23. to send Timothee vnto you, immediatly as I shal see the things that 24. 17. concerne me. Thirdly therefore he prepareth them against the vvorst, saying: I hope to come againe to you: but and if I be immolared, vpon the sacrifice and seruice of your faith, I reioyce and congratulate vvith you al, and the self same thing do you also reioyce and congratulate vvith me.

Moreouer he partly vvarneth them (as he had done before) of those Iudaical Phil. 3. False-apostles vvho preached circumcision & Moyses law to the Christian Gentils: partly he exhorteth them to suffer persecution, to liue vvell, and specially to humble them selues one to an other, rather then by any pride to breake the peace & vnitie of the Church.

He exhorteth them most instantly to keepe the vnitie of the Church, and to humble themselves for that purpose one to another, 5 by the example of the marvelous humilitie of Christ, 9 specially seeing howv maruolously he is nowv exalted for it. 12 Item to obedience, feare, and perseuerance. 17 Insinuating (lest it should aftervvwardes trouble them) that he may be martyred at this time. 19 Timothee he hopeth to send, vvvhom he highly commendeth: 25 as also Epaphroditus, vvvhom he presently sendeth.

9. For the vvwhich.] Calvin doth so abhorre the name of merite in Christian men tovvard their ovvne saluation, that he vvickedly and vvicarnedly denieth Christ him self to haue deserued or merited any thing for him self: though these vvordes (vvwhich he shamefully vvrieth from the proper and plaine sentie, to signifie a tequele and not a caue of his exaltation) and diuers other in holy vvrite, proue that he merited for him self according to al learned mens iudgement. 10. Name of I E S V S.] By the like vickednes they charge the faithful people for capping or kneeling vwhen they heare the name of I E S V S. as though they vvorshipped not our Lord God therein, but the syllables or letters or other material elemets vvhereof the vvord vvritten or spoken consisteth, and al this, by sophistications to dravv the people from due honour and deuotion tovvard C H R I S T I E S V S, vvwhich is Satans drift by putting scruples into poore simple mens mindes about his Sacraments, his Saints, his Crosse, his name, his image, & such like, to abolish al true religiō out of the vvorld, and to make them plaine Atheists. But the Church knowveth Satans cogitations, and therefore by the Scriptures and reason, vvarranteth and teacheth al her children to do reuerence vwhen so euer I E S V S is named. because Catholikes do not honour these things nor count them holy, for their matter, colour, sound, and syllables, but for the respect and relation they haue to our Sauour, bringing vs to the remembrance and apprehension of Christ, by sight, hearing, or vse of the same signes. els vvwhy make vve not reuerence at the name of Iesus the sonne of Sirach, as vvell as of I E S V S C H R I S T? And it is a pitiful case to see these prophane subtelties of Heretikes to take place in religion, vvwhich vvere ridiculous in al other trade of life. Vvhen vve heare our Prince or Soueraine named, vve may vvithout these scruples doe obeisance, but tovvardes Christ it must be superstitious.

12. With feare and trembling.] Agaiſt the vaine presumption of Heretikes that make men secure of their predestination and saluation, he vvilleth the Philippians to vvorke their saluation vvith feare and trembling, according to that other Scripture, Blessed is the man that abvvaies is fearful. Prouerb. 28, v. 14.

13. Worketh in you.] Of this thus saith S. Augustine, Not because the Apostle saith, it is God that vvorketh in you both to vvill and vvorke, must vve thinke he taketh avvay our free vvill. For if it vvere so, then vvould he not a litle before haue vvilled them to vvorke their ovvne saluation vvith feare and trembling. For vvhen they be commaunded to vvorke, their free vvill is called vvpon: but, vvith trembling and feare, is added, lest by attributing their vvill vvorking to them selues, they might be proud of their good deedes as though they vvere of them selues. August. de gratia & lib. arbit. c. 9.

ANNOTATIONS CHAP. III.

9. My iustice.] Diuers Lutherans in their translations do shamfully mangle this sentence by transposing the vvordes, and false pointing of the partes thereof, to make it haue this sense, that the Apostle vvould haue no iustice of his ovvne, but onely that iustice vvhich is in Christ. Vvhich is a false and heretical sense of the vvordes, and not meant by S. Paul: vvho calleth that a mans ovvne iustice, vvhich he chalengeh by the vvorkes of the Law or nature vwithout the grace of Christ: and that Gods iustice (as S. Augustine expoundeth this place) not vvhich is in God, or by Double perfection: here, and in the life to come.

12. Not that novv.] No man in this life can attaine the absolute perfectnes either of iustice or of that knowlledge; vvhich shal be in heauen: but yet there is also an other periectnes, such as according to this state a man may reach vnto, vvhich in respect of the perfection in glorie, is small, but in respect of other lesser degrees of mans iustice and knowlledge in this life, may be called perfectnes. And in this sense the Apostle in the next sentence calleth him self and others perfect, though in respect of the absolute perfectnes in heauen, he saith here, he is not yet perfect nor hath yet attained therevnto.

The heretikes folish defense of their dissensions and diuisions among them selues.

13. Otherwise minded.] Vvhen Catholike men novv a daies charge Heretikes vvhith their horrible diuisions, dissensions, combattes, contentions, and diuersities among them selues, as the Catholikes of al other ages did challenge their Aduersaries most truly and iustly for the same, (both because vvhether the Spirit of God is not, nor any order or obedience to Superiors, there can be no peace nor vnitie, and specially for that it is, as S. Augustine saith (ii. de agone Christi. c. 29) the iust iudgement of God that they vvhich seeke nothing els but to diuide the Church of Christ, should them selues be miserably diuided among them selues) therefore (I say) vvhhen men charge the Protestants vvhith these things, they flee for their defence to this, that the old Fathers vvvere not al of one iudgement in euery point of religion: that S. Cyprian stood against others, that S. Augustine and S. Hierom vvrote earnestly in a certaine matter one against an other, that our Dominicans and Franciscans, our Thomists and Scotists be not al of one opinion in diuers matters, and therefore diuisions and contentions should not be so prejudicial to the Zuinglians and Lutherans, as men make it. Thus they defend them selues: but ridiculously and against the rule of S. Paul here, acknowledging that in this imperfection of mens science in this life, euery one can not be free from al error, or thinke the same that an other thinketh: vvherevpon may rise differences of vnderstanding, opinion, and iudgement, in certaine hard matters vvhich God hath not reuealed or the Church determined, and therefore that such diuersitie is tolerable and agreable to our humane condition and the state of the vvay that vve be in: alvvayes provided, that the controuersie be such and in such things, as be not against the set knowven rule of faith, as he here speaketh, and such as breake not mutual societie, fellowship, and communion in praier, seruice, Sacraments, and other offices of life and religion. for such diuisions and differences come neuer but of Schisme or Heresie, and such are among the Heretikes, not onely in respect of vs Catholikes, but among them selues: as they know that be acquainted vvhith the vvritings of Luther against Zuinglius, or Vvestphalus against Caluyn, or the Puritans against the Protestants, not onely charging one an other vvhith Heresie, Idolatrie, Superstition, and Atheisme, but also condemning ech others ceremonies or maner of administrations, til it come to excommunication, and banishment, yea sometimes burning one of an other. Thus did not S. Cyprian, S. Augustine, S. Hierom, the Dominicans, Franciscans, Thomists, Scotists, vvho al agree in one rule of faith, al of one communion, al most deere one to an other in the same, al (thanks be to God) come to one holy Masse, and receiue the same Sacraments, and obey one head through out al the vvorld. S. Augustine li. 2 de bapt. c. 5. shal make vp this matter vvhith this notable sentence: We are men (saith he) and therefore to thinke somewhat othervvise then the thing is, is an humane sensation: but by louing our owne sentence to much, or by enuying our betters, to procede vnto the sacrilege of deuiding the mutual societie and of making schisme or heresie, is auerulish presumption: in nothing to haue other opinion then the truth is, that is Angelical perfection. And a litle after, If you be any other vvise minded, this God vvill reueale: but to them onely (saith he) that vvalk in the vvay of peace, and that stray a side into no diuision or separation. Vvhich saying vvould God al our deere countrie men vvould marke, and come into the Church, vvhere onely, God reuealeth truth.

The difference betvvene the disagreeing of auncient fathers or other Catholikes, & the Heretikes dissensions among them selues.

The spiteful vvritings of Heretikes, one Secte against an other.

A notable place of S. Augustine.

We are men (saith he) and therefore to thinke somewhat othervvise then the thing is, is an humane sensation: but by louing our owne sentence to much, or by enuying our betters, to procede vnto the sacrilege of deuiding the mutual societie and of making schisme or heresie, is auerulish presumption: in nothing to haue other opinion then the truth is, that is Angelical perfection. And a litle after, If you be any other vvise minded, this God vvill reueale: but to them onely (saith he) that vvalk in the vvay of peace, and that stray a side into no diuision or separation. Vvhich saying vvould God al our deere countrie men vvould marke, and come into the Church, vvhere onely, God reuealeth truth.

THE ARGUMENT OF THE
EPISTLE OF S. PAUL TO
THE COLOSSIANS.

THE Epistle to the Colossians is not only in sense, but almost in words also, all one with the Epistle to the Ephesians, and was sent also by the same messenger Tythicus. c. 4. v. 7. And in it he maketh like mention of his bandes and sufferings. c. 1. v. 24. and c. 4. v. 3, 18. And therefore no doubt it was written at Rome at the same time, to witte, in his last apprehension, yet before he knew of his martyrdom.

This difference there is, that he had himself preached to the Ephesians, but with the Colossians he had neuer bene, as he signifieth c. 2. v. 1. Therefore although in matters of exhortation he be here briefer then to the Ephesians, yet in matters of doctrine he is longer. And generally he assureth them, that to be the truth, which their Apostle Epaphras had taught them, but namely he giueth them warning both of the Iudaical False-apostles, who sought to corrupt them with some ceremonies of Moyses law: and also of the Platonike Philosophers, who reiected Christ; (who is in deede the head of the Church and Mediator to bring vs to God) and in steed of him, brought in certaine Angels as more excellent then he, whom they termed, Minores dii, teaching the people to sacrifice vnto them (calling that, humilitie) that they might bring them to the great God. With which falsehood the heresie of Simon Magus a long tyme deceiued many, as we reade in Epiph. har. 21.

Against such therefore S. Paul telleth the Colossians, that Christ is the Creator of all the Angels, God in person, the head of the Church, the principall in all respects: that he is the Redeemer, Mediator, and pacifier betwene God and men, and therefore by him we must goe to God, so that whether we pray our selues, or desire any other in earth or in heauen to pray for vs, all must be done (as the Cath. Church in euery Collect doth) Per Christum dominum nostrum, that is, through Christ our Lord. or, per Do. nostrum Iesum Christum filium tuum, qui tecum viuit & regnat, &c. Whereby the Church professeth continually against such seductions, both the Mediatorship, and the Godhead of Christ.

CHAP. I.

Saying, that he thanketh God for their excellent faith and charitie, and continually prayeth for their increase, he doeth vvhich giue vvhines to the preaching of their Apostle Epaphras, and extollet the grace of God in bringing them to Christ, vvhich is cheefe aboue al, and peacemaker by his bloud. This is the Gospe. not of Epaphras alone, but of the vniuersal Church, and of Paul him self vvhich also suffereth for it.

He sheweth that the Church and Christes Gospel should daily grow and be spread at length through the whole world. Which can not stand vvhith the heretikes opinion of the decay thereof so quickly after Christes time, nor agree by any meanes to their obscure Conueniencies. See S. Augustine ep. 80. in fine.

21. Do accomplish that vvanteth.] As Christ the head and his body make one person mystical and one full Christ, the Church being therefore his plenitude, fulnes, or complement Ephes. 1: so the passions of the head and the afflictions of the body and members make one complete masse of passions. Vvith such difference for al that, betvvene the one sort and the other, as the preeminence of the head (and specially such a head) aboue the body, requireth and giueth. And not only those passions vvich he suffered in him self, vvich were fully ended in his death, and were in them selues fully sufficient for the redemption of the vvorld & remission of al sinnes, but al those vvich his body and members suffer, are his also, and of him they receiue the condition, qualitie, and force to be meritorious and satisfactorie. for though there be no insufficiencie in the actions or passions of Christ the head, yet his vvisedom vvil, and iustice requireth and ordaineth,* that his body and members should be fellowes of his passions, as they looke to be fellowes of his glorie: that so suffering vvith him and by his example, they may applie to them selues and others the general medicine of Christes merites and satisfactions, as it is effectually also applied to vs by Sacraments, sacrifice, and other vvaies also: the one sort being no more iniurious to Christes death then the other, notwithstanding the vaine clamours of the Protestants, that vvould vnder pretence of Christes Passion, take avvay the value of al good deedes. Herevpon it is plaine novv, that this accomplishment of the vvants of Christes Passions, vvich the Apostle and other Sainets make vp in their flesh, is not meant but of the penal and satisfactorie vvorkes of Christ in his members, euery good man adding continually (and specially Martyrs) somevvhat to accomplish the full measure thereof: and these be the plenitude of his passions and satisfactions, as the Church is the plenitude of his person: & therefore theie also through the communion of Sainets and the societie that is not onely betvvene the head and the body, but also betvvene one member and another, are not onely satisfactorie and many vvaies profitable for the sufferers them selues, but also for other their tellovv-members in Christ. for though one member can not merite for an other properly, yet may one beare the burden and discharge the debt of an other, both by the lavv of God and nature. and it vvas a ridiculous Heresie of Vvicleffe to deny the same. Yea (as vve see here) the passions of Sainets are alvvaies suffered for the common good of the vvhole body, and sometimes vvithal by the sufferers special intention they are applicable to special persons one or many: as here the Apostle ioieth in his passions for the Colloilians, in another place his afflictions be for the saluation of the Corinthians, sometimes he vvil heth to be Anathema, that is according to Origenes exposition (in li. nu. bo. 10 & 24.) a sacrifice for the Ievves, and he often speaketh of his death as of a libation, noit, or offering, as the fathers do of al Martyrs passions. Al vvich dedicated and sanctified in Christes blood and sacrifice, make the plenitude of his Passion, and haue a forcible crie, intercession, and satisfaction for the Church and the particular necessities thereof. In vvich, as some do abound in good vvorkes and satisfactions (as S. Paul, vvho reekeneth vp his afflictions and glorieth in them 2 Cor. 11: and Iob, vvho auoucheth that his penalties farre surmounted his sinnes; and our Ladie much more, vvho neuer sinned, and yet suffered so great do- lours) so other some do vvant, and are to be holpen by the abundance of their tellovv-members.

Vvich entercourie of spiritual offices and the recompensie of the vvants of one part by the store of the other, is the ground of the old libels of Indulgence vvhereof is treated before out of S. Cyprian (See the Annotations 2 Cor. 2. v. 10) and of al indulgences or pardons, vvich the Church daily dispenseth vvith great iustice and mercie, by their hands in vvhom Christ hath put the vvord of our reconcilement, to vvhom he hath committed the keies to keepe and vte, his sheepe to feede, his mysteries and al his goods to dispense, his povver to binde and loose, his commission to remitte and reteine, and the itevvards hip of his familie to giue euery one their meate and sustenance in due season.

Philosophie

to the Church of God.

1. By Philosophie.] Philosophie and al humane science, so long as they be subiect and obedient to Christ (as they be in the Schooles of Christian Catholike men) be not forbidden, but are greatly commended and be very profitable in the Church of God. Othernvise vvhere secular learning is made the rule of religion and commaundeth faith, there it is pernicious and the cause of al heresie and infidelitie. for the vvwhich, S. Hierom and before him Tertullian call Philosophers, the Patri- arkes of Heretikes, and declare that al the old hereties rote onely by to much admiring of prophane Philosophie. Hiero. ad Cresiph. cons. Pelag. c. 1. Tertul. de praescr. & cons. Hermog. & cons. Marcio. li. 5.
And so do these nev v sectes no doubt in many things. for, other arguments naue they none against the presence of Christ in the B. Sacrament but such as they borovv of Aristotle and his like, concerning quantitie, accidents, place, position, dimensions, senies, sight, tast, and other straites of reason, to vvwhich they bring Christs mysteries. Al Philosophical arguments therore against any article of our faith be here condemned as deceiptful, and are called also here, the tradition of men, and the ele- ments of the vvorld. The better to resist vvwhich fallacies and traditions of Heathen men, the Schoole learning is necessarie, vvwhich keepeth Philosophie in avve and order of faith, and vvith the same to vvithstand the Philosophical and sophistical deceites of the Heretikes and Heathen. So the great Philosophers S. Denys, S. Augustine, Clemens Alexandrinus, Iustine, Lactantius and the rest, vvied the same to the great honour of God and benefite of the Church. So came S. Cyprian, S. Ambrose,
S. Hierom, and the Greeke fathers, furnished vvith al secular learning vnto the studie of Diuinitie,

16. In meate.] The Protestants vvillfully or ignorantly applie al these kinds of forbearing meates, to the Christian fastes: but it is by the circumstance of the text plaine (as S. Augustine also teacheth) that the Iudaical obseruation and distinction of certaine cleane and vncleane meates is forbidden to the Colossians, vvho vvcre in danger to be seduced by certaine Ievves, vvnder pretence of holines to keepe the Lavv touching meates and festiuities and other like, vvwhich the Apottle shevveth vvcre onely shadovves of things to come: vvwhich things are come, and therefore the said shadovves to cease. Vvhere he nameth the Sabborths and feastes of the nev moone, that no man needs to doubt but that he speaketh onely of the Ievvish daies and kindes of fastes and feastes, and not of Christian holidaiies or fasting daies at all.

18. Religion of Angels.] By the like false application of this text as of the other before, the Heretikes abuse it against the inuocation or honour of Angels vvused in the Catholike Church, vvwhere the Apottle noteth the vvicked doctrine of Simon Magus and others (See S. Chrys. ho. 7 in hunc locum. and Epipl. nar. 21.) vvho taught, Angels to be our mediators and not Christ, non tenens caput, nos holding the head, as the Apottle here speaketh, & prescribed sacrifices to be offered vnto them, meaning indifferently as vvvel the il Angels as the good. Vvwhich doctrine the said Heretike nad of Plato, vvho taught, that spirites (vvwhich he calleth demoner) vvcre to be honoured as mediators next to God. Against vvwhich S. Augustine disputeth li. 5. 9. & 10 de ciuit. as the condemneth also the same vndue vvorship li. 10 Confess. cap. 42. S. Hierom (q. 10 ad Algaliam) expoundeth this also of il spirites or diuels, vvhom he proueth (out of S. Stevens sermon Act. 7) that the Ievves did vvorship, auouching that they serue them still, so many of them and so often as they obserue the Lavv. Of vvwhich idolatrie also to Angels Theodorete speaketh vpon this place, declaring that the Ievves defended their superstition tovvvards Angels by that, that the Lavv vvvas giuen by them, deceitfully

deceitfully at once inducing the Colossians, both to keepe the law, & to honouring of the Angels as the Protestants wickedly abuse the giuers of the same. Vvhereby diuers of the faithful were so seduced, that they forsooke Christ it against the due honour & inuocation of Angels and his Church and seruice, and committed idolatrie to the said Angels. Against vvvhich abominations the Council of Laodicia Cap. 35 tooke order, accurling all that forsooke our Saviour and committed idolatrie to Angels, and contemning Christ, kept conuenticles in the name of spirites and Idols. of vvvhich kinde of vvvorship of Angels and Diuels see Clemens Alexand. Strom. 3. Angels.

Tertullia (li. 5. cont. Marcion.) expoundeth this place of the false teachers that feined them selues to haue reuelatiō of Angels, that the Law should be kept touching differēce of cleane & vncleane meates. Vvvhich is very agreable to that * in the Epistle to Timothee, vvvhich S. Paul calleth abiding from meates after the Ievvish or heretical maner, the doctrine of Diuels: vvvhich of see more in the annotation vpon that place. Haimo a godly aūcient vvriter, vpon this place, saith further, that some Philosophers of the Gentils and some of the Ievves also taught, that there were foure Angels Presidents of the foure elements of mans body, and that in feined hypocrisie (vvvhich the Apostle here calleth humilitie) they pretended to vvvorship by sacrifice the said Angels. Theophylacte expoundeth this feined humilitie, of certaine Heretikes, that pretending the mediatorship to be a derogation to Christs maiestie, vvvorshipped Angels as the only mediators. Al vvvhich vve see downe vvvhith more diligēce, that the Heretikes may be ashamed to abuse this place against the due reuerence and respect or prayers made to the holy Angels. Vvvhom the Scriptures record so often to offer our prayers vp to God, and to haue been lawfully reuerenced of the Patriarkes, neuer as gods, but as Gods ministers and messengers. Iosu. 5. 14. Tob. 12. 12. Gen. 48. 16. Angelus qui eruit me. 1 Tim. 5. 21. And that they may be praied vnto, & can helpe & heare vs, (see S. Hierom in cap. 10 Danielis, S. Ambrose in Psal. 118. ser. 1. S. Augustine li. 10 de ciuit. Dei c. 12. Bede li. 4 in Cantica c. 24.

19. Not holding the head] Becauie he hath much a do vvith such false preachers as taught the people to preferre the Angels vvvhich gaue the Law, or other vvwhatsoever, before Christ: in this Epistle, and to the Ephelians, he often affirmeth Christ to be our head, yea and to be exalted far aboue al creatures, Angels, Potestats, Principalities, or vvwhatsoever.

δογματισις

20. Why doe you.] A maruelous impudent translation of these vvordes in the English Bibles thus, Why are you burdened vvwith traditions? Vvhereas the Greeke hath not that signification: but to make the name of Tradition odious, here they put it of purpose, not being in the Greeke: and in other places where Traditions are comended (1 Cor. 11. and 2 Thes. 2.) and where the Greeke is so most flatly (παράδοσις) there they translate it, Instructions, ordinances, &c.

Heretical translation.

21. Touch not.] The Heretikes (as before and alvvvaies) very vainely alleage this against the Catholic fastings: vvhen it is most cleere that the Apostle reprehendeth the foresaid false teachers that thought to make the Christians subiect to the obseruation of the ceremonies of the old Law, of not eating hogges, conies, hares flesh, and such like, not to touch a dead corps nor any place vvwhere a vvoman in her floures had sittē, & other infinite doctrines of touching, tasting, vvatching, eating, and the rest, either commaunded to the old people by God, or (as many things were) voluntarily taken vp by them selues, sometime cleane against Gods ordinance, and often frivolous and superstitious. Vvvhich sort as Christ in the Gospel, so here S. Paul calleth the precepts and doctrines of men, and superstition, and (as the Greeke vvord signifieth) * voluntarie vvvorship, that is inuented by Heretikes of their ovvne head vvwithout the vvarrant of Christ in the Scriptures, or the Holy Ghost in the Church, or any lawfull authoritie of such vvvhom Christ commaundeth vs to obey. Against such Sect-Maitters therefore as vvould haue yoked the faithful againe vvwith the Ievvish or Heretical fastes of Simon Magus and the like, S. Paul speaketh, and not of the Churches fastes or doctrines.

Scripture abused against the Churches fastes.

* βουλησις

21. Having a shew.] Againe the Heretikes of our time obiect, that these foresaid false teachers pretended holines, vvvisedom, and chastisement of their bodies (for to S. Paul saith) by forbidding certaine meates according to the Ievves obseruation, euen as the Catholices do. It is true they did so, and so do most vices imitate vertues. for if chastising of mens bodies and repressing their concupiscences and luites were not godly, and if abstinence from some meates were not laudably and profitably vsed in the Church for the same purpose, no Heretikes (to induce the abolished obseruations and differences of meates of the Ievves, or the condemnation of certaine meates and creatures as abominable according to others) vvould haue falsely pretended the chastisement of their flesh, or made other shew of vvvisedom and pietie, to found their vnlawfull Heretical or Iudaical superstition concerning the same. The Catholike Church & her children, by the example of Christ, S. Iohn Baptist, the Apostles and other blessed men, do that lawfully, godly, religiously, and sincerely in deede to the end aforesaid, vvvhich these false Apostles only pretended to do. 1 Cor. 9. 27. 2 Cor. 11. 27. * S. Paul did chastise his body in deede, by vvwatching, fasting, and many other afflictions, and that vvvas lawfull and vvvas true vvvisedom and pietie in deede. The foresaid Heretikes not so, but to induce the Colossians to Iudaisme and other abominable errors, did but pretend these things in hypocritie.

The hypocritical abstinence of old Heretikes, maketh nothing against true and sincere fasting, but comendeth it.

THE ARGUMENT OF THE
FIRST EPISTLE OF S. PAUL TO
THE THESSALONIANS.

HOF S. Paul with Silas (or Silvanus) and Timothee according to a vision calling him out of Asia into Macedonia, came to Philippi being the first citie thereof, vve reade Act. 16. And how againe from Philippi, after scourging and imprisoning there, he came to Thessalonica being the head citie of that countrie, vve reade Act. 17. where after 3 weekes preaching, the Ievves stirred the citie against them, and pursued them also to Beraa: so that Paul was conueied from thence to Athens, where he expected the coming of Silas & Timothee from the foresaid Beraa in Macedonia, but receiued them (as vve haue Act. 18.) at Corinth in Achaia.

Having therefore left the Thessalonians in such persecution, and being careful to know how they did in it, he was desirous to returne vnto them, as he signifieth in the 2 chapter of this Epistle v. 17. But (as he there addeth) Satan hindered vs. therefore tarying himself at Athens, he sendeth Timothee vnto them. at whose returne vnderstanding their constancie, he is much comforted, as he declareth c. 3. So then they are all three together at the writing of this Epistle. as also vve haue in the title of it: Paul and Siluanus and Timothee to the Church of the Thessalonians. And therefore it seemeth to haue bene written at Corinth, not at Athens: because after the sending of Timothee to Thessalonica, they mette not at Athens againe, but at Corinth.

The first three chapters of it are, to confirme and comfort them against the tentations of those persecutions. The other two are of exhortation, to liue according to his preceptes, namely in ianctification of their bodies, and not in fornication: to loue one another: to comfort one another about their frendes departed, with the doctrine of the Resurrection, and with continuall preparation to die: the laicte to obey, and the Cleargie to be diligent in every point of their office.

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PAUL TO THE THESSALONIANS.

CHAP. I.

He thanketh God for them, & ana gathereth that they are elect, because his preaching as their first conversion was with diuine power, and they on the other side receiued it with al ioy, notwithstanding the great persecution that was raised against them.

CHAP. I.

6. Folowers of vs.] S. Paul is bold to commend them for imitation of him, yea and to ioyne him self in that point vvith Christ, to be their paterne to vvalke after. Vvhere vvithout curiositie he nameth him self first, and our Lord aftervvard, because he vvvas a more neere and ready obiect then Christ, vvho vvvas not nor could not be folovved but through the preaching and conuersation of the Apostle, vvho vvvas in their sight or hearing. And this imitation of some holy man or other, hath made so many Religious men of diuers orders and rules, al tending to the better imitation of Christ our Lord. See the like vvordes of the Apostle, 1 Cor. 11. 1. and Philip. 3, 17.

Religious persons imitation of diuers holy men is the imitatiō of Christ him self.

CHAP. II.

He calleth euen them selues to vvitness, that his preaching vnto them vvvas as he said, in most commendable maner. 13 And againe on the other side he than keth God for their maner of receiving it: that is, vvith al ioy, nor vvithstanding the persecution of their ovvne citizens.

1 O R your selues knowv, brethren, our entrance vnto you, that it vvvas not vaine:
2 † but ^c hauing suffered before and * been 3 abused vvith contumelies (as you knowv) at Philippi, vve had confidence in our 4 God, to speake vnto you the Gospel of God in much carefulnes. † For our exhortation
5 vvvas not of errour, nor of vncleanness, nor in deceite:
6 † but as vve vvere approued of God that the Gospel should be committed to vs, so vve speake: not as pleasing men, but 7 God, vvho proueth our hartes. † For neither haue we been at any time in the vvord of adulation, as you knowv: nor in 8 occasion of auarice, God is vvitness: † nor seeking glorie of men, neither of you, nor of others. † Vvhereas vve might 9 haue been a burde to you, as the Apostles of Christ: but vve became children in the middes of you, as if a nourse should 10 cherish her children: † so hauing a desire to you, vve would gladly deliuer vnto you not only the Gospel of God, but also our ovvne soules: because you are become most deere vnto vs. † For you are mindeful, brethren, of * our labour and toile day & night vvorking, lest vve should charge any of you, vve preached among you the Gospel of God. † You

† Therefore we also give thanks to God without intermission: because that when you had received of us the word of the hearing of God, you received it not as the word of men, but (as it is in deed) the word of God, who worketh in you that have believed. † For you, brethren, are become followers of the churches of God that be in Iewrie, in Christ Iesus: for you also have suffered the same things of your owne lineage, as they also of the Iewves, † who both killed our Lord Iesus, and the Prophets, and have persecuted us, and please not God, and are aduersaries to all men, † prohibiting vs to speake to the Gentiles that they may be saued, to make vp their sinnes alwaies. for the vwrath of God is come vpon them euen to the end. † But we, brethren, are de- priued of you for a short time, in sight, not in hart: have hastened the more abundantly to see your face with much desire. † For we would have come to you, I Paul certes, once and againe: but Satan hath hindered vs. † For what is our hope, or ioy, or crowne of glorie? Are not you before our Lord Iesus Christ in his coming? † For you are our glorie and ioy.

¶ If the Apostle without iniurie to god, in right good sense call his scholars the Theffalonians, his hope, ioy, glorie: why blaspheme the Protestants the Cath. Church & her children for terming our B. Ladie or other Saintes, their hope, for the special confidence they haue in their prayers.

CHAP. II.

Not only the writtē word, 11. The word of God. The Aduersaries will haue no word of God but that which is written and contained in the Scripture: but here they might learne that al Paules preaching before he wrote to them, was the very word of God. They might also learne that what so euer the lawfull Apostles, Pastors, and Priestes of Gods Church preach in the vnitie of the same Church, is to be taken for Gods owne word, and ought not to be reputed of them for doctrines of men or I harisical traditions, as they falsly call canons, precepts, and decrees of holy Church.

ANNOTATIONS
CHAP. II.

2. As though the day.] The curiositie of man fed by Satans deceites, hath sought to knowv and to giue out to the vvorld, such things as God vvil not impart to him, nor be necessarief for him to knowv: so farre, that both in the Apostles daies and often aftervvard, some haue feined reuelations, some falsly gathered out of the Scriptures, some presumed to calculate and coniecture by the starres, and giuen iurth to the vvorld a certaine time of Christes coming to iudgement. Al vvhich seducers be here noted in the person of some that vvere about to deceiue the Thessalonians therein. And S. Augustine (in his 80 Epistle ad Hefychium) proueth that no man can be assured by the Scriptures of the day, yere, or age, that the end of the vvorld or the second Aduent shal be.

The day of iudgment vn- certaine, and to be left to Gods secretes.

3. Unless there come a reuolt first.] Though vve can not be assured of the moment, houre, or any certaine time of our Lordes cōming, yet he vvarranteth vs that it vvil not be before certaine things be fulfilled, vvhich must come to passe by the course of Gods prouidence and permission before vvhich are diuers, vvhereof in other places of Scriptures vve be forevvarned. Here he vvarneth vs of two (specially, of a reuolt, defection or an apostasie, and of the comming or reuelation of Antichrist. Vvhich two pertaine in effect both to one, either depending of the other, and shal fall (as it may be thought) neere together, and therefore S. Augustine maketh them but one thing.

Two special signs before the later day: a general apostasie, and the comming of Antichrist.

This apostasie or reuolt, by the iudgement in maner of al auncient vvriters, is the general forsaking & fall of the Romane empire. So Tertullian li. de resur. carnis. S. Hierom q. 11 ad Algasium. S. Chrystostom ho. 4. and S. Ambrose vpon this place, S. Augustine De Ciuit. Dei li. 20 c. 19. Al vvhich fathers and the rest * Caluin presumptuously condemneth of errour and follie herein, for that their expolition agreeth not vvith his and his fellowves blasphemous fiction that the Pope shoud be Antichrist. To establish vvhich false impietie, they interpret this reuolt or apostasie to be a general reuolt of the visible Church from God, vvhoſe house or building (they say) vvvas sodenly destroyed, and lay many yeres ruined, and ruled onely by Satan and Antichrist. So saith the foresaid Arch-heretike here, though for the aduantage of his defence and as the matter els vvhere requireth, he seemeth (as al their fashon is) to speake in oether places quite contrarie: but vvith such colour and collusion of vvordes, that neither other men nor him self can tell vvhat he vvould haue or say. And his fathers Vvicleſſe and Luther, his fellowves and folowers Illyricus, Beza, and the rest, are (for the time of the Churches falling from Christ) so various among them selues, and so contrarie to him, that it is horrible to see their confuſion, and a pitieful case that any reatonable man vvil follow such companions to euident perdition.

Caluin. in hunc locū.

The heretikes interpretatiō of this apostasie, & their cō- dēning of the fathers.

But concerning this errour and falshod of the Churches defection or reuolt, it is refuted sufficiently by S. Augutine against the Donatistes in many places. Vvhere he proueth that the Church shal not faile to the vvorldes end, no not in the time of Antichrist: affirming them to deny Christ, and to robbe him of his glorie & inheritance bought vvith his blood, vvhich teach that the Church may faile or perish. Li. de unit. Ec. c. 12. 13. De Ciuit. li. 20 c. 8. In Psal. 85 ad illud, Tu solus Deus

There can be no apostasie of the visible Churche from God.

A a a ij magnu.

magna. ps. 170. Cant. 2. & Psal. 60. De util. cred. c. 8. S. Hierom refuteth the same vicked Heresie in the * Luciferians, prouing against them, that they make God subject to the Diuel, and a poore miserable Christ, that imagine the Church his body may either perish or be driuen to any corner of the vworld, both of them answer to the Heretikes arguments grounded on Scriptures falsely vnderstood, which were to long here to rehearse. It is vnough for the Christian reader to know, that if it is an old decite and excuse of al Heretikes and Schismatikes, for defence of their forsaking Gods Church, that the Church is perished, or remaineth hidden, or in them selues onely and in those places where they and their folowers dwell: to know also, that this is reprov'd by the holy Doctors of the primitiue Church, and that it is against Christes honour, pover, providence, and promis.

* Dialog. adu. Lucifer. c. 6.

It is very like, the Apostle speaketh of a great apostasie from the See of Rome, and from most articles of the Catho. faith.

If the Aduersaries had said that this reuolt which the Apostle foretellet shal come before the vworlds end, is meant of great numbers of Heretikes & Apostatates reuolting from the Church, they had said truth, of them selues and such others, vvhom S. Ioha calleth Antichristes. And it is very like (be it spoken vnder the correction of Gods Church and al learned Catholikes) that this great defection or reuolt shal not be onely from the Romane empire, but specially from the Romane Church, and vvitthal from most points of Christian religion, not that the Catholike Christians; either in the time of Antichrist or before, shal refuse to obey the same, but for that neere to the tumour of Antichrist and the consummation of the vworld, there is like to be a great reuolt of kingdoms, peoples, and Prouinces from the open external obedience and communion thereof. Vvhich reuolt hauing been begunne and continued by Heretikes of diuers ages, refusing & hating the Seate of Peter (vvhich they called castram pestilentie, the chaire of pestilence, * in S. Augustines daies) because it is Christes fort erected against Hel gates and al Heretikes, and being now v wonderfully increased by these of our daies the next precursors of Antichrist as it may seeme, shal be fully archieued a litle before the end of the vworld by Antichrist him self, though euen then also, vvhon for the fevv daies of Antichristes reigne the external state of the Romane Church and publike entercourse of the faithful vwith the same may cease, yet the due honour and obedience of the Christians toward it, and communion in hart vwith it, and practise thereof in secrete, and open confelling thereof if occasion require, shal not cease, no more then it doth now in the Christians of Cypres and other places vvhon open entercourse is forbidden.

The wonderfull prouidence of God in preserving the See of Rome more then al other states, notwithstanding manifold dangers and scandals.

This is certaine and v wonderful in al wise mens eies, and must needes be of Gods prouidence, & a singular prerogatiue, that this Seate of Peter standeth, vvhon al other Apostolike Sees be gone: that it stood there for certaine ages together vwith the secular seate of the Empire: that the Popes stood vwithout vwealth, pover, or humane defenie, the Emperours knowing, vvitting, and seeking to destroy them, and putting to the sword about thirtie of them one after an other, yea and being as much afraid of them as if they had been amuli imperij, Competitors of their Empire, as S. Cyprian noteth (epist. 52 ad Antonianum. num. 3) of S. Cornelius Pope in his daies, and Decius then Emperour: againe, that the Emperours after vward yielded vp the citie vnto them, continuing for al that in the Emperial dignitie still: that the successors of those that persecuted them, laid downe their crownes before their Seate and sepulchres, honouring the very memories and Relikes of the poore men vvhom their predecessors killed: that now vvel neere these 1600 yeres this Seat standeth, as at the beginning in continual miserie, so now of long time for the most part in prosperitie, vwithout al mutation in effect, as no other kingdom or State in the vworld hath done, euery one of them in the laid space being manifoldly altered. It standeth (vve say) al this vvhile (to vie S. Augustines vvordes de util. cred. c. 17.) Frustra circumiatriansibus hereticis, the Heretikes in vaine barking about it, not the first Heathen Emperours, not the Gothes and Vandals, not the Turke, nor any iackes or massakers by Alaricus, Genfericus, Attila, Borbon, and others, not the emulation of secular Princes, vvere they kings or Emperours, not the Popes ovne diuisions among them selues and manifold difficulties and dangers in their elections, not the great vices vvhich haue been noted in some of their persons, nor al these nor any other endeuour or scadal could yet preuaile against the See of Rome, nor is euer like to preuaile til the end of the vworld draw neere, at vvhich time this reuolt (here spoken of by the Apostle) may be in such sort as is laid before, and more shal be said in the Annotations next folovving.

Many Antichrists, as forerunners of the great Antichrist.

1. The man of sinne. These vvets many euen in the Apostles time (as vve see by the 4 Chapter of S. Iohns first epistle and in the vvritings of the aücient fathers) that vvete forerunners of Antichrist, and for impugning Christes truth and Church vvete called antichristes, vvhether they did it by force and open persecution, as Nero and others either Heathen or Heretical Emperours did, or by fallie teaching and other decites, as the Heretikes of al ages, in vvhich common and vulgar acceptiõ S. Hierom saith, al belonged to Antichrist that vvete not of the communion of Damasus then Pope of Rome. Hiero. ep. 57 ad Damas. and in another place, al that haue nev names after the peculiar calling of Heretikes, as Arians, Donatistes (and as vve say novv, Caluinistes, Zuiniglians, &c.) al such (saith he) be Antichristes. *Dial. cont. ὁ ἀντιχρίστῳ.
ὁ υἱὸς ἀπο-

ὁ ἀδούρατος ἀμαρτίας,
ὁ ἀνικείμενος

And this is the moſt common ſentence alſo of al aúcient fathers. Onely Heretikes make no doubt but Antichriſt is a vvhole order or ſucceſſion of men. vvhich they hold againſt the former euident Scriptures and reaſons, onely to eſta bliſh their ſoliſh and vvicked paradoxe, that Chriſtes cheefe Miniſter is Antichriſt, yea the vvhole order. Vvherein Beza ſpecially pricketh ſo high, that he maketh Antichriſt (euen this great Antichriſt) to haue been in S. Paules daies, though he vvvas not open to the vvorld. Vvho it ſhould be (except he meane S. Peter, becauſe he vvvas the firſt of the order of Popes) God knovveth. And ſure it is, except he vvvere Antichriſt, neither the vvhole order, nor any of the order can be Antichriſt, being al his lavvful ſucceſſors both in dignitie and alſo in truth of Chriſtes religion. Neither can al the Heretikes aliuie proue that they or any of them vved any other regiment or iurisdiction Eccleſiaſtical in the Church, or forced the people to any other faith or vvorſhip of God, then Peter him ſelf did preach and plant. Therefore if the reſt be Antichriſt, let Beza boldly ſay that S. Peter vvvas ſo alſo, and that diuers of the aúcient Catholike fathers did ſerue and vvorke (though vvvvares) tovvardes the ſetting vp of the great Antichriſt, for ſo doth that blaſphemous penne boldly vvrite in his Annotations vpon this place: and an Engliſh printed booke of late comming forth out of the ſame ſchoole, hath theſe vvordes: As for Leo and Gregorie Biſhops of Rome, although they vvvere not come to the ſul pride of Antichriſt, yet the myſterie of iniquitie hauing vvrought in that Seate neere five or ſixe hundred yeres before them, and then greatly increaſed, they vvvere deceived vvith the lang conſuance of error. Thus vvriteth a malapert ſcholer of that impudent ſchole, placing the myſterie of Antichriſt as vvorking in the See of Rome euen in S. Peters time, and making theſe vvvo holy fathers great vvorkers and furtherers of the ſame, vvhereas an other Engliſh Rabbinie doubted not at Paules croiſe to ſpeake of the ſelf ſame fathers as great Docters and Patrones of their nev & old Goſpel, thus: O Gregorie, o Leo, if vvve be deceived, you haue deceived vs. Vvhereof vve giue the good Chriſtian Reader vvarning more diligently, to bevvare of ſuch damnable bookes and Maiſters, carying many vnaduiſed people to perdition.

The Caluiniſtes place Antichriſt in the See of Rome, in S. Paules daies.

They make S. Leo & S. Gregorie, great furtherers of Antichriſtes pride.

4. Extolled.] The great Antichriſt vvhich muſt come neere the vvorldes end, ſhal abolifh the publike exerciſe of al other religions true and falſe, and pull downe both the B. Sacrament of the altar, vvherein coſiſteth ſpecially the vvorſhip of the true God, and alſo al Idols of the Gentils, and ſacrifices of the Ievves, generally al kinde of religious vvorſhip, ſauiug that vvhich muſt be done to him ſelf alone, vvhich vvvas partly prefigured in ſuch kings as publiſhed that no God nor man but them ſelues ſhould be praied vnto for certaine daies, as * Darius and ſuch like. Howv can the Proteſtants then for ſhame and vvithout euident cōtradiction, auouch the Pope to be Antichriſt, vvho (as vve ſay) honoureth Chriſt the true God vvith al his povver, or (as they ſay) honoureth Idols, and chalengeth no diuine honour to him ſelf, much leſſe to him ſelf onely, as Antichriſt ſhal do? He hūbly praieſt to God, & lovvely kneeleth downe in euery Church at diuers altars erected to God in the memories of his Sainctes, and praieſt to them. He ſaieſt or heareth Maſſe daily vvith al deuotion, he confeſſeth his tinnes to a Prieſt as other poore men do, he adoreth the holy Euchariſt vvhich Chriſt affirmed to be his ovvne body, the Heretikes call it an Idol (no maruel if they make the Pope his Vicar Antichriſt, vvhen they make Chriſt him ſelf an Idol:) Theſe religious dueties doth the Pope, vvhereas Antichriſt ſhal vvorſhip none, nor pray to any, at the leaſt openly.

Antichriſt ſhal ſuffer no vvorſhip or adoration, but of him ſelf onely. therefore the Pope can not be Antichriſt.

4. In the temple.] Moſt aúcient vvriters expound this of the Temple in Hieruſalem, vvhich they thinke Antichriſt ſhal build vp againe, as being of the Ievves ſtocke, and to be acknowledged of that obſtinate people (according to our Sauours prophetic Io. 5) for their expected and promued Meſſias. *Iren. ii. 5 in ſine. Dan. c. 6.

Dan. 9. Mat. 24. Mach. 1.

The abomination of desolation consisteth chiefly in abolishing the sacrifice of the altar.

Worship of the true God by prophanation of that Temple, specially by abrogating the daily sacrifice, which was a figure of the only sacrifice and continual oblation of Christes holy body and bloud in the Church, as the abolishing of that, was a figure of the abolishing of this, which shall be done principally & most vniuersally by Antichrist him self (as now in part by his forerunners) through out all Nations and Churches of the world (though then also Masse may be had in secret, as it is now in nations where the secular force of some Princes prohibiteth it to be said openly.) For although he may haue his principal seate and honour in the Temple and cite of Hierusalem, yet he shall rule ouer the vvhole world, and specially prohibite that principal worship instituted by Christ in his Sacraments, as being the proper Aduersarie of Christes petition, name, law, and Church, the prophanation and desolation of vvhich Church by taking avay the sacrifice of the altar, is the proper abomination of desolation, and the worke of Antichrist onely.

How Antichrist shall sit in the Church.

S. Augustine therefore li. 20 de ciuit. e. 19. and S. Hierom q. 11 ad Algisiam. do thinke, that this sitting of Antichrist in the temple, doth signifie his sitting in the Church of Christ, rather than in Salomons temple. Not as though he should be a cheefe member of the Church of Christ, or a special part of his body mystical, and be Antichrist and yet vwithal continuing vwithin the Church of Christ, as the Heretikes feine, to make the Pope Antichrist (vvheryby they plainly confesse and agnise that the Pope is a member of the Church, & in ipso sinu Ecclesie, and in the very Beza. base of the Church, say they:) for that is ridiculous, that all Heretikes vvhom S. Iohn calleth Antichrists as his precursors, should go out of the Church, and the great Antichrist him self should be of the Church, & in the Church, & continue in the same. and yet to them that make the vvhole Church to reuolt from God, this is no absurditie. But the truth is, that this Antichristian reuolt here spoken of, is from the Catholike Church: and Antichrist, if he euer were of or in the Church, shall be an Apostata and a renegate out of the Church, and shall vsurpe vpon it by tyrannie, and by chalounging worship, religion, & gouernement thereof, so that him self shall be adored in all the Churches of the world which he list to leaue standing for his honour. And this is to sitte in the temple or * against the Temple of God, as some interprete. If any Pope did euer this, or shall do, then let the Aduersaries call him Antichrist.

Antichrist (by interpretation, One against Christ) why so called.

And let the good Reader obserue, that there be two special causes vvhich this great man of sinns is called Antichrist. The one is, for impugning Christes kingdom in earth, that is to say, his spiritual regiment vvhich he constituted and appointed in his Church, and the forme of gouernement ordained therein, applying all to him self by singular tyrannie and vsurpation, in vvhich kinde S. Athanasius (ep. ad Solit. vit. desertis.) is bold to call the Emperour Constantius being an Arian Heretike, Antichrist, for making him self Principem Episcoporum, Prince ouer the Bishops and President of Ecclesiastical iudgements &c. The other cause is, for impugning Christes Prielthod, vvhich is only or most properly exercised in earth by the sacrifice of the holy Masse, instituted for the commemoration of his death, & for the external exhibition of godly honour to the B. Trinitie, vvhich kinde of external worship by sacrifice no lawfull people of God euer lacked. And by these two things you may easily perceiue, that the Heretikes of these daies do more properly and neerely prepare the way to Antichrist and to extreme desolation, then euer any before, their special heresie being against the spiritual Primacie of Popes and Bishops, and against the sacrifice of the altar, in vvhich two the soueraintie of Christ in earth consisteth.

Protestants & Calvinists the neere forerunners of Antichrist.

S. Augustins humilitie in interpreting the scriptures

6. What letteth. S. Augustine (li. 20 e. 19 de ciuit. dei.) protesteth plainly that he vnderstandeth not these wordes, nor that that foloweth of the mysterie of iniquitie, and least of all that vvhich the Apostle adderth, Only that he vvhich holdeth now, do hold &c. Vvhich may humble vs all and stay the confident raiunes of this time, namely of Heretikes, that boldly feine hereof vvhatsocuer is agreeable to their heresie and phantasie. The Apostle had told the Thessalonians before by vvhord of mouth a secret point vvhich he vvhould not vtter in vvvriting, and therefore referreth them to his former talke. The mysterie of iniquitie is commonly referred to Heretikes, vvhom worke to the same, and do that that Antichrist shall do, but yet not openly, but in couert and vnder the cloke of Christes name, the Scriptures, the vvhord of the Lord, the vvhord of holines, &c. Vvhereas Antichrist him self shall openly attempt and achiue the foresaid desolation, and Satan now seruuing his turne by Heretikes vnderhand, shall toward the last end vtter, reueale, & bring him forth openly. and that is here, to be reuealed, that is, to appeare in his owne person.

The mysterie of iniquitie is the couert working of heretikes toward the manifest reuelation of Antichrist himself.

These other wordes, Only that he vvhich now holdeth, hold: Some expound of the Emperour, during vvhose continuance in his state, God shall not permit Antichrist to come, meaning that the very Empire shall be vvholy desolate, destroyed, and taken avay before or by his coming: vvhich is more then a defection from the same, vvhereof was spoken before: for there shall be a reuolt from the Church also, but it shall not be vtterly destroyed. Others say, that it is an admonition to all faithful, to hold fast their faith and not to be beguiled by such as vnder the name of Christ or Scriptures seeke to deceiue them, til they that now pretend religion and the Gospel, end in a plaine breach, reuolt, and open apostasie by the appearance of Antichrist, vvhom all Heretikes seate in mysterie, that is, couertly and in the Diuels meaning, though the world see it not, nor them selues at the beginning thought it, as now euery day more & more all men perceiue they send to plaine Atheisme and Antichristianisme.

9. In al power.] Satan whose power to hurt is abridged by Christ, shall then be let loose, and shall alitt Antichrist in al maner of signes, vonders, and false miracles, vther by many shall be seduced, not only lewes: But al such as be deceived and caried avay by vulgar speache only, of Heretikes that can worke no miracles, much more shall folovv this man of sinne doing to great vonders. And such both novv do tolovv Heretikes, and then shall receiue Antichrist, that deserue so to be forsaken of God, by their forsaking of the vnitie and happie fellowvship of Saints in the Catholike Church, vvhese onely is the Charitie of truth, as the Apostle here speaketh.

What kinde of men shall follow Antichrist.

15. Traditions.] Not onely the things vwritten and set dovvne in the holy Scriptures, but al other truthe and pointes of religion vtered by vvord of mouth and deliuered or giuen by the Apostles* to their scholers by traadition, be so here approued and els vvhere in the Scripture itself, that the Heretikes purposely, guiltully, and of il conscience (that belike reprehendeth them) refuse in their translations, from the Ecclesiastical and most vsual vvord, Traadition, cuer more vvhen it is taken in good part, though it expresse most exactly the signification of the Greeke vvord: but vvhen it foundeth in their fond phantasie against the traditions of the Church (as in deede in true sense it neuer doth) there they vie it most gladly. Here therfore and * in the like places, that the reader might not so easly like of Traditions vvvritten, here commended by the Apostle, they translate it, Instruitions, Constitutions, Ordinances, and vvhat they can inuent els, to hide the truth from the simple or vvvarye Reader, vvwhose translations haue no other end but to beguile suoh by art and conuiance.

Heretical tradition.

Traditions vvvritten.

But S. Chrylostom (ho. 4. in 1 Thes. 2.) and the other greeke scholies or commentaries say herevpon, both vwritten and vvvritten precepts the Apostles gaue by tradition, and both be vvorthy of obseruation. S. Basil (De Sp. Sancto c. 29. in principio.) thus, I account it Apostolike to continue vvhat is in vvritten traditions. and to proue this, he allegeth this place of S. Paul. In the same booke c. 17 he saith, If vvho once go abouts to reuill vvritten customs as things of no importance, vve shall, ere vve be aware, doe damage to the principal partes of the faith, and bring the preaching of the Gospel to a naked name. And for example of these necessarie traditions, he nameth the signe of the Crosse, praying towards the east, the vvords spoken at the eleuatiō or shevvng of the holy Eucharist, vvith diuerse ceremonies vsed before & after the consecration, the halovving of the font, the blessing of the oile, the anointing of the baptized vvith the same, the three immersions into the font, the vvordes of abrenuntiatiō and exorcismes of the partie that is to be baptized &c. Vvhat scripture (saith he) taught these and such like? none truly, al coming of secret and silent tradition, vvherewith our fathers thought it meete to couer such mysteries.

Their authoritie & estimation, & examples of some peculiar traditions out of the fathers.

S. Chrylostom

S. Basil.

S. Hierom (Dialog. cont. Lucif. c. 4. et ep. 28 ad Liciniū.) reckoneth vp diuers the like traditions, vvilling men to attribute to the Apostles such customs as the Church hath received in diuers christian countries. S. Augustine esteemeth the Apostolike traditions so much, that he plainely affirmeth in sundrie places, not onely the obseruation of certaine festiuities, fastes, ceremonies, & vvhatsoeuer other solemnities vsed in the Catholike Church, to be holy, profitable, and Apostolike, though they be not vwritten at al in the Scriptures: but he often also vvriteth, that many of the articles of our religion and pointes of highest importance, are not so much to be proued by Scriptures, as by tradition. namely auouching that in no vvise vve could beleue that children in their infancie should be baptized, if it vvhere not an Apostolical tradition. De Gen. ad lit. li. 10 c. 23. Tradition caused him to beleue that the baptized of heretikes should not be rebaptized, not vvithstanding S. Cyprians authoritie and the manifold Scriptures alleaged by him, though they seemed neuer so pregnant. De bap. li. 2. c. 7. By tradition onely, he and others condemned Heluidius the heretike for denying the perpetual virginitie of our Lady. And vvithout this, be the Scriptures neuer so plaine, no Arian, no Macedonian, no Eutychian, no Pelagian, no Zuinglian vvill yield. We must vse tradition, (saith S. Epiphanius her. 61 Apostolicorum.) For the Scripture hath not al things: and therefore the Apostles deliuered certaine things in vvriting, certaine by tradition. and for that he allegeth this place also of S. Paul. And againe her. 55. Melchised. There be boundes set dovvne for the foundation and building up of our faith, the tradition of the Apostles, and holy Scriptures, and succession of doctrine, so that truth is euery vvay sented.

S. Hierom.

S. Augustine.

S. Epiphanius.

S. Irenæus.

S. Irenæus (li. 3. c. 4.) hath one notable chapter, that in al questions vve must haue recourse to the traditions of the Apostles: teaching vs vvithal, that the vvay to trie an Apostolike tradition and to bring it to the fountaine, is by the Apostolike succession of Bishops, but specially of the Apostolike See of Rome: declaring in the same place that there be many barbarous people, simple for learning, but for constancie in their faith most vvise, vvich neuer had Scriptures, but learned onely by tradition. Tertullian (li. de corona miliu. nu. 1.) reckoneth vp a great number of Christian obseruations or customs (as S. Cyprian in many places doth in maner the same) vvhereof in fine he concludeth, Of such and such if thou require the rule of Scriptures, thou shalt finde none. Tradition shall be alleaged the authoritie of the confirmer, and saith the obseruer. Origen also of this matter vvriteth in plaine termes, that there be many things done in the Church (vvhich he there nameth) vvhich of there is no easier reason to be giuen then tradition from Christ and the Apostles. ho. 5. in Numer. S. The Scriptures giuen vs by tradition, and the sense thereof.

The Creede an Apostolical tradition.

An inuincible argument for the credite of Traditions.

Vve might adde to al this, that the Scriptures them selues, euen al the bookes and partes of the holy Bible, be giuen vs by tradition: els vve should not nor could not take them (as they be in deede) for the infallible vvord of God, no more then the vvorkes of S. Ignatius, S. Clement, S. Denys, and the like. The true sense also of the Scriptures (vvhich Catholikes haue & heretikes haue not) remaineth stil in the Church by tradition. The Creede is an Apostolike traditiō. Ruffin. in expo. Symb. in principio. Hiero. ep. 61. c. 9. Ambros. Ser. 38. Aug. de Symb. ad Catechum. li. 3. c. 1. And vvhich Scriptures haue they to proue that vve must accept nothing not expressly vvritten in Scriptures? Vve haue to the contrary, plaine Scriptures, al the fathers, most eident reasons, that vve must either beleue traditions or nothing at al. And they must be asked vvhether, if they vvere assured that such and such things (vvhich be not expressed in Scriptures) vvere taught and deliuered by vvord of mouth from the Apostles, and they vvould beleue them or no? If they say no, then they be impious that vvill not trust the Apostles preaching: if they say they vvould, if they vvere assured that the Apostles taught it: then to proue vnto them this point, vve bring them such as liued in the Apostles daies, and the testimonies of so many fathers before named neere to those daies, and the vvhole Churches practise and asseueratiō descending dovvne from man to man to our time. vvhich is a sufficient prooue (at least for a matter of fact) in al reasonable mens judgement. specially vvhen it is knouen that S. Ignatius the Apostles equal in time, vvrote a booke of the Apostles traditions, as Eusebius vvitnesseth li. 3. Ec. hist. c. 30. And Tertullians booke of prescriptiō against Heretikes, is to no other effect but to proue that the Church hath this vantage about Heretikes, that she can proue her truth by plaine Apostolike tradition, as none of them can euer do.

CHAP. III.

He desireth their prayers, & and inculcates his precepts and traditions, namely of vvorking quietly for their ouerue liuing, commaunding to excommunicate the disobedient.

Here also (as is noted before 2 Thess. 2. 15) the aduersaries in their translatiōs auoid the vvord, Tradition, being plaine in the Greeke, lest them selues might seeme to be noted as men vvalking inordinately, and not according to Apostolical Tradition, as al Schismatikes, Heretikes, and Rebels to gods Church doe.

CHAP. III.

10. Neither let them ease.] It is not a general precept or rule, that euery man should liue by his handvvorke, as the Anabaptistes argue falsely against Gentlemen, and the Calvinistes applie it peruersely against the vacant life of the Clergie, specially of Monkes and other Religious men. But it is a natural admonitiō onely, giuen to such as had not vvherevvith to liue of their ovvne, or any right or good cause vvhy to challenge their finding of others, and to such as vnder the colour of Christian libertie did passe their time idly, curiously, vnprofitably, and scandalously, refusing to do such vvorkes as vvere agreeable to their former calling and bringing vp. Such as these vvere not tolerable, specially there and then, vvhen the Apostle and others (that might lawfully haue liued of the altar and their preaching) yet to disburden their hearers, and for the better aduancement of the Gospel, vvrought for their liuing: * protesting neuertheles continually, that they might haue done othervvise, as vvell as S. Peter and the rest did, vvho vvrought not, but vvere found othervvise iustly and lawfully, as at sortes of the Clergie preaching or seruing the Church and the altar, be and ought to be, by the law of God and nature. Vvhose spiritual labours far passe al bodily trauailes, where the duties and functions of that vocation be done accordingly: as S. Augustine affirmeth of his ovvne extraordinarie paines incident to the Ecclesiastical affaires and regiment: in steede of vvhich, if the vse of the Church and his infirmitie vvould haue permitted it, he vvisheth he might haue laboured vvith his handes some houres of the day. as some of the Clergie did euer voluntarily occupie them selues in teaching, vvriting, grauing, painting, planting, sowing, embroidering, or such like seemely and innocent labours.  rour of certaine disordered Monkes that abused these vvordes, (Notis esse solliciti, bene careful &c. and Respicite volatilia cali, behold the foules of the aire &c.) to proue that they should not labour at al, but pray only and commit their finding to God: not only so excusing their idienes, but preferring them selues in holines aboue other their fellowes that did worke, and erroneously expounding the said Scriptures for their defence: as they did other Scriptures, to proue they should not be shauen after the manner of Monkes. Vvwhich letting their heads to grow he much blameth also in them. See *li. 2. Retract. c. 21. & de op.

 difference betvvene the auncient Fathers and the newv Protestants. And as for hand labours, as S. Augustine in the booke alleaged, vvould not haue Religious folke to refuse permit or require them: so he expressly vvriteth, that al can not nor are not bound to

THE ARGUMENT OF THE
FIRST EPISTLE OF S. PAUL TO TIMOTHEE.

AFTER the Epistles to the Churches, now follow his Epistles to particular persons, as to Timothee, to Titus, who were Bishops: and to Philemon.

Of Timothee we reade Act. 16. how S. Paul in his visitation tooke him in his traine at Lystra, circumciding him before, because of the Iewes. he was then a Disciple, that is to say, a Christian man. Afterward the Apostle gaue him holy Orders, and consecrated him Bishop, as he testifieth in both these Epistles vnto him. 1. Tim. 4. v. 14. and 2. Tim. 1. v. 6.

He writeth therefore vnto him as to a Bishop, and him self expresseth the scope of his first Epistle, saying: These things I writte to thee, that thou maiest know how thou oughtest to conuerse in the House of God, which is the Church. And so he instructeth him (and in him, al Bishops) how to gouerne both him self, & others. and touching him self, to be an example & a spectacle to al sortes, in al vertue. as touching others, to prohibit al such as goe about to preach othervise then the Catholike Church hath receined, and to inculcate to the people the Catholike faish: to preach vnto yong and old, men and women: to seruants, to the riche, to euery sort conueniently. Vnto what circumspection to giue orders, & to what persons: for whom to pray: whom to admit to the voye of vidovvhood &c.

This Epistle was written, as it seemeth, after his first emprisonmēt in Rome, when he was dismissed and set at libertie. and thereupon it is, that he might say here, I hope to come to thee quickly. so vis vnto Ephesus, where he had desired him to remaine. although in his voyage to Hierusalem, before his being at Rome, he said at Miletum to the Clergie of Ephesus, vpo probable feare: And now behold I know, that you shal no more see my face.

Where it was written, it is vncertaine: though it be commonly said, at Laodicia. Which seemeth not, because it is like he was neuer there, as may be gathered by the Epistle to the Colossians, written at Rome in his last trouble, when he was put to death.

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PAUL TO TIMOTHEE.

ANNOTATIONS

CHAP. I.

3. Not to teach otherwise.] The proper marke of Heretikes & false preachers, is, to teach otherwise or contrarie to that vvhich they found taught and beleeued generally in the vnitie of the Catholike Church before their time: al doctrine that is odde, singular, new, differing from that vvhich vvas first planted by the Apostles, and descēded downe from them to al nations and ages folowing vvi hout contradiction, being assuredly erroneous.
 * The Greeke vword vvhich the Apostle here vseth, expresseth this point to effectuallie that in one compound terme he giueth vs to vvit, that an Heretike is nothing els but an after-teacher, or teacher-otherwise. vvhich euen it self alone is the easiest rule euen for the simple to discern a false prophet or preacher by, specially vvhē an heresie first beginneth. Luther found al Nations Christian at rest and peace in one vniforme faith, and al preachers of one voice and doctrine touching the B. Sacrament and other Articles: so that vvhāt so euer he taught against that vvhich he found preached and beleeued, must nee-des be an other doctrine, a later doctrine, an after-teaching or teaching-otherwise, and therefore consequentiv must needs be false. And by this admonitiō of S. Paul, al Bishops are vvarned to take hēde of such, and specially to provide that no such odde teachers arise in their dioceses.

4. Te fables.] He speaketh specially of the Iewes after-doctrines and humane constitutions repugnant to the lawes of God, vvhē of Christ giueth Warning Mt. 23 and in other places, vvhich are contained in their Cabala and Talmud: generally of al heretical doctrines, vvhich in deede, how so euer the simple people be beguiled by, the are nothing old: by the brethren of loue, Furitans, Anabaptistes, and Calvinistes of our time. For which cause Theodoret entitleth his booke against Heretikes, Hereticarum fabularum, Of Heretical fables.

Curious questioning in religion.

4. Questions.] Let our louing brethren consider whether these contentious and curious questionings and disputes in religion, vvhich these vnhappie heresies haue ingendered, haue brought forth any increase of good life, any deuotion, or edification of faith and religion in our daies. and then shal they easily iudge of the truth of these new opinions, and the end that wil folow of these innouations. In truth al the world now seeth they edifie to Atheisme and no otherwise.

Charitie the very formal cause of our iustification.

5. The end Charitie.] Here againe it appeareth, that Charitie is the cheefe of al vertues, and the end, consummation, and perfection of al the law and precepts. and yet the Aduersaries are so fond as to preferre faith before it, yea to exclude it from our iustification. Such obstinacie there is in them that haue once in pride & stubbernes forsaken the euident truth. Charitie doubtles which is here commended, is iustice it self, and the very formal cause of our iustification, as the vvorkes proceeding thereof, be the vvorkes of iustice. Charitas inchoata (saith S. Augustine) inchoata iustitia: Charitas prouecta, prouecta iustitia: Charitas magna, magna iustitia: Charitas perfecta, perfecta iustitia est. Charitie nouw beginning, is iustice beginning: Charitie grovvven or increased, is iustice grovvven or increased: great Charitie, is great iustice: perfect Charitie, is perfect iustice. Li. de nas. & gras. c. 70.

Heretikes great boasters, but vnlearned.

7. Desirous to be Doctors.] It is the proper vice both of Iudaical and of Heretical false teachers, to professe knowledge and great skill in the Law and Scriptures, being in deede in the sight of the learned most ignorant of the vvord of God, not knowing the very principles of diuinitie, euen to the admiration truely of the learned that reade their bookes or heare them preach.

Libertines al- leage scripture.

9. The law not made to the iust.] By this place and the like, the Libertines of our daies vvould discharge them selues (vvhom they count iust) from the obedience of lawes. But the Apostles meauing is that the iust man doth vvell, not as compelled by law or for feare of punishment due to the transgressors thereof, but of grace & mere loue tovvard God & al goodnes, most vvillingly, though there were no law to commaund him.

Excommuni- cation of He- retikes, and the effect thereof.

13. Delivered to Satan.] Hymenezus and Alexander are here excómmunicated for falling from their faith & teaching heresie: an example vnto Bis hops to vse their spiritual power vpon such. In the primitiue Church, corporal affliction through the ministerie of Satan vvvas ioyned to excommunication. V where we see also the diuels readines to inuade them that are cast out by excommunication, from the fellowship of the faithful, and the supereminent povver of bis hops in that case. V whereof S. Hierom (ep. 1. ad Heliod. c. 7) hath these memorable vvordes: God forbid (saith he) I should speake sinistrously of them, vvho succeding the Apostles in degree, make Christes body vvith their holy mouth, by vvhom we are made Christians: vvho having the keies of heauen, do after a sort iudge bevvore the day of iudgements: vvho in sobrietas and Chastitas haue the keeping of the spouse of Christ. And a litle after, They may deliuer me up to Satan, to the destruction of my fles h, that the spirit may be saued in the day of our Lord Iesus. And in the old Law vvho soeuer vvvas disobedient to the Priests, vvvas either cast out of the campe and so stoned of the people, or laying downe his necke to the sword, expiated his offense by his bloud: but nouw the disobedience is cut vvith the spiritual sword, or being cast out of the Church, is torne by the furious mouth of Diuels. So saith he. Vvvhich vvordes vvould God euery Chriitiã man vvould vveigh.

The Priests high authoritie of Excommuni- cation.

1. Obsecrations.] This order of the Apostle S. Augustine (ep. 59) findeth to be fulfilled specially in the holy celebration of the Masse, vvhich hath al these kindes, expressed here in foure diuers vvordes pertaining to foure sortes of praier. the difference vvhich he exactly seeketh out of the proper signification and difference of the Greeke vvordes. And he teacheth vs that the first kind of praier vvhich here be called, obsecrations, are those that the Priest saith before the consecration : that the second called, Praiers, be al those vvhich are said in and after the Consecration, & about the Receiuing, including specially the Pater noster, vvhich with the vvhole Church (saith he) in maner enderth that part, as S. Hierom also affirmeth, that Christ taught his Apostles to vse the Pater noster in the Masse. Sic docuit, &c. c. So taught he his Apostles, that daily in the Sacrifice of his body the faithful should be bold to say, Pater noster &c. Li. 3. cont. Pelag. cap. 5. Where he alludeth to the very vvordes now vsed in the preface to the said Pater noster in the said Sacrifice, audemus dicere, Pater noster. The third sort called here in the text, Postulaciōs, be those vvhich are vsed after the Communion, as it vvere for dimissing of the people vwith benediction, that is, vwith the Bishops or Priestes blessing. Finally the last kinde, vvhich is Thankes-givings, concludeth al, * vvhich the Priest and people giue thanks to God for so great a mysterie then offered and receiued. Thus the said holy father handleth this text ep. 59 to Paulinus.

S. Epiphanius also insinuateth these vvordes of the Apostle to pertaine to the Liturgie or Masse, vvhich he thus vvriteth to Iohn Bishop of Hierusalem. Vvhen vve accomplish our praier after the rise of the holy Mysteries, vve pray both for al others, and for thee also. ep. 60 c. 2 ad lo. Hierosolym. apud Hieronymum. And most of the other fathers expoid the foretold vvordes, of publicke praier made by the Priest, vvhich are said in al Liturgies or Masses both Greeke and Laun, for the good estate of al that be in high dignitie, as kings and others. See S. Chryf. ho. 6. in 1 Tim. & S. Ambros. in hunc loc. Prosper de vocat. li. 1. c. 4. So exactly doth the practise of the Church agree vwith the Precepts of the Apostle and the Scriptures, and so profoundly do the holy fathers seeke out the proper sense of the Scriptures, vvhich our Protestants do so prophanely, popularly, and lightly (I kinne ouer, that they can neither see nor endure the truth.

God vvill no mans perditio but the saluation of al.

4 Utho vvil al men] The perishing or damnation of men must not be imputed to God, who delighteth not in any mans perdition, but hath provided a general medicine & redemption to saue al from perishing that vvil accept it, or that haue it applied vnto them by his Sacraments and other meanes by him ordained, and so vvould haue al saued by his conditional vvil and ordinance: that is, if men vvil them selues, by accepting, doing, or hauing done vnto them al things requisite by Gods lauv. for God vseth not his absolute vvil or povver tovvardes al in this case. But he that list see the manifold senses (al good and true) that these vvordes may beare, let him see S. Augultine, Ad articul. sibi falso impo. resp. 3. to. 7. Ench. c. 103, Ep. 107. De cor. & grat. c. 15, and S. Damasene li. 2 de orthod. fide c. 29.

Howv there is but one Mediator, Christ, and vvhat it is to be such a Mediator.

5 One mediator.] The Protestants are to peuissh and pitifully blind, that charge the Catholike Church & Catholikes, vvith making moe Mediators then one, vvhich is Christ our Sauour, in that they desire the Saincts to pray for them, or to be their patrones and intercessors before God. Vve tel them therefore that they vnderstand not vvhat it is to be a Mediator, in this sense that S. Paul taketh the vvord, and in vvhich it is properly and onely attributed to Christ. For, to be thus a Mediator, is, * by nature to be truely both God and man, to be that one eternal Priest and Redeemer, vvhich by his sacrifice and death vpon the Crosse hath reconciled vs to God, and paid his bloud as a full and sufficient rauntion for al our sinnes, him self vvithout neede of any redemption, neuer subiect to possibilitie of sinning: againe, to be the singular Aduocat and Patron of mankind, that by him self alone and by his ovvne merites procureth al grace & mercie to mankind in the sight of his Father, none making any intercession for him, nor geuing any grace or force to his praiers, but he to al: none asking or obtaining either grace in this life, or glorie in the next, but by him. In this sort then (as S. Augultine truely saith, Cont. ep. Parm. li. 2. c. 8.) neither Peter nor Paul, no nor our B. Lady, nor any creature vwhatsoever, can be our Mediator. The aduersaries thinke to basely of Christes mediation, if they imagine this to be his onely prerogative, to pray for vs, or that vve make the saincts our Mediators in that sort as Christ is, vvhen vve desire them to pray for vs. vvhich is to far inferior to the singular mediation of him, that no Catholike euer can or dare thinke or speake so basely vnto him, as to desire him to pray for vs: but vve say, Lord haue mercie vpon vs, Christ haue mercie vpon vs: & not, Christ pray for vs, as vve say to our Ladie and the rest. Therefore to inuocate Saincts in that sort as the Catholike Church doth, can not make them our Mediators as Christ is, vvhom vve must not inuocate in that sort. And as vve make vve the faithful yet liuing, our Mediators (by the Aduerfaries arguments) vvhen vve desire their praiers, as the departed Saincts.

The different maner of praying to Christ, and to Saincts.

Howv there be many mediators, as there be many fauours, and redeemers, eue in the Scriptures.

But novv touching the vvord Mediator, though in that singular sense proper to our Saviour, it agreeth to no mere creature in heauen or earth, yet taken in more large and common sort by the vse of Scriptures, doctors, and vulgar speach, not onely the Saincts, but good men liuing, that pray for vs and help vs in the vvay of saluation, may and are rightly called Mediators. As S. Cyril li. 12 Theaur. c. 10 proueth, that Moyses according to the Scriptures and Ieremie and the Apostles and others be Mediators. Read his ovvne vvordes, for they plainly refuse al the Aduerfaries cauillations in this case. And if the name of * Saviour and redeemer be in the Scriptures giuen to men, vvithout derogation to him that is in a more excellent and incomparable maner the onely Saviour of the vvorld: vvhat can they say, vvhy there may not be many Mediators, in an inferior degree to the onely and singular Mediator? S. Bernard saith, Opus est mediatore ad Mediatorem Christum, nec alter nobis utilior quam Maria. that is, We haue neede of a mediator to Christ the Mediator, and there is none more for our profite then our Ladie. Bernard. Scr. qui incipit, Signum magnum apparuit &c. post Ser. 5 de Assumps. S. Basil also in the same sense, vvriting to Iulian the Apostata, desireth the mediation of our Ladie, of the Apostles, Prophets, and Martyrs, for procuring of Gods mercie and remission of his sinnes. His vvordes are cited in Conc. Nic. 2. act. 4. pag. 110 & 111. Thus did and thus beleueed al the holy fathers, most agreably to the Scriptures, and thus must al the children of the Church do, be the Aduerfaries neuer so importunare and vvilfully blinde in these matters.

Women great talkers of Scripture, and promoters of heresie.

12. I permit nos.] In times of licentioufines, libertie, and heretic, vvomen are much giuen to reading, disputing, chatting, and iangling of the holy Scriptures, yea and to teach also if they might be permitted. but S. Paul vterly forbiddeh it, and the * Greeke Doctors vpon this place note that the vvoman taught but once, that vvvas vvhen after her reasoning vvith Satan, she persuaded her husband to transgression, and so she vndid al mankind. And in the Ecclesiastical vvriters vve find that vvomen haue been great promoters of euery sort of heresie (vvwhereof see a notable discourse in S. Hieron ep. ad Cresipp. cont. Pelag. c. 2.) vvhich they vvould not haue done, if they had according to the Apostles rule, folovved pietie and good vvorkes, and liued in silence and subiection to their husbands.

ANNOTATIONS
CHA P. III.

The great charge, & great merit, of Ecclesiastical functions,

1. A good worke.] Nothing (saith S. Augustine) in this life, and specially in this time, is easier, pleasanter, or more acceptable to men, then the office of a Bishop, Priest, or Deacon, if one thing be done onely for fashion sake and flatteringly: but nothing before God more miserable, more lamentable, more damnable. Againe, There is nothing in this life, and specially at this time, harder, more laborious, or more dangerous, then the office of a Bishop, Priest, or Deacon: but before God nothing more blessed, if they vuarre in such sort as our Captaine commaundeth. Augult. ep. 148.

The Apostle vnder the name of Bishop instructeth Priests also-

2. A Bishop.] That vvhich is here spoken of a Bishop (because the vvorde Bishop & Priest in the new Testament be often taken indifferently for both or either of the twaine, as is noted in an other place) the same is meant of euery Priest also: though the qualities here required, ought to be more singular in the Bishop, then in the Priest, according to the difference of their degrees, dignities, and callings.

The heretike opinion concerning Priests marriage.

3. Of one vviue.] Certaine Bishops of Vigilantius sect (vvwhether vpon false construction of this text, or through the filthines of their fleshly lust) vvould take none to the Cleargie, except they vvould be married first, not beleeming (saith S. Hierom aduers. Vigilant. c. 1.) that any single man liueth chastly, shewing how holily they liue them selues, that suspect il of euery man, and vvill not giue the Sacrament (of Order) to the Cleargie, vnles they see their vviues haue great bellies, and children vvailling as their mothers breastes. Our Protestants though they be of Vigilantius sect, yet they are scarce come so farre, to commaund euery Priest to be married. Neuertheles they mislike them that vvill not marrie, so much the vvorse, and they suspect il of euery single person in the Church, thinking the gift of chastitie to be very rare among them, & they do not onely make the state of marriage equal to chaste single life, vvith the Heretike Iouinian, but they are bold to say sometimes, that the Bishop or Priest may do his duty and charge better married, then single: expressly against S. Paul, 1 Cor. 7. vvho affirmeth that the vvarried thinke of the things that belong to God, and that the married be diuerely distracted and intrangled vvith the vvorld.

S. Pauls place, of one vviue, excludeth bigamos from holy Orders.

The Apostle then, by this place vve nowv treat of, neither commaundeth, nor counsellith, nor vvisheth, nor vvould haue Bishops or Priests to marrie, or such onely to be receiued as haue been married: but, that such an one as hath been married (so it vvere but once, and that to a virgin) may be made Bishop or Priest. Which is no more then an inhibition that none hauing been twice married or being bigamus, should be admitted to that holy Order. And this exposition onely is agreable to the practise of the vvhole Church, the definition of auncient Councils, the doctrine of al the fathers vvithout exception, and the Apostles tradition. Vvhich sense S. Chryostom vvholly folovveth vpon the Epistle to Titus (though here he folovv not vvholly the same sense.) Ho. 2 in ep. ad Tit. S. Ambrose also vpon this place, and most plainely and largely in his 82 Epistle post med. giuing the cause why bigamus can not be made Bishop or Priest, in fine affirmeth, not onely the Apostle but the holy Couacel of Nice to haue taken order that none should be receiued into the Cleargie, that vvere twice married. S. Hierom Ep. 83, ad Oceanum c. 2. & ep. 2. c. 18. ep. 11. c. 2 expressly vvriteth that the Cleargie is made of such as haue had but one vviue, at least after Baptisme: for he thought that if one vvere often married vvhen he vvvas yet no Christian, he might not vvithstanding be ordered Bishop or Priest. But S. Ambrose *ep. 82. S. Augustine de bono Coniug. c. 18. S. Innocentius the first ep. 2. c. 5. 6. to. 1. Concil. S. Leo, ep. 87. S. Gregorie, & after them the vvhole Church, exclude those also vvwhich haue been twice married vvhen so euer. vvhereof S. Augustine giueth goodly reason and example in the place alleaged. S. Leo ep. 87 addeth further, & proueth that the mā is counted bigamus, & not the husband of one vviue, in respect of holy Orders, not onely if he hath had two vviues, but if his one vviue vvere not a virgin. vvwhich being obserued in the high Priests of the old law, must needs be much rather kept now. See also the booke Louis. 10. de Ecclesiasticis dogmatibus c. 72. in S. Augustines vvorkes.*

Vvho are counted bigami.

The Heretical clergie nothing regardeth the Apostles prescription of one vviue.

And by these fevv you may see howv shamefully the state of the new heretical Cleargie of our time is fallen from the Apostolike and al the fathers practise and doctrine here- in. Vvho do not onely take men once or twice married before, but (vvwhich vvvas neuer heard of before in any person or part of the Catholike Church) they marrie after they be Bishops or Priests, once, twice, and as often as their lustes require. vvwhereas it vvvas neuer lawfull in Gods Church to marrie after Holy Orders. Neither is there one authentical example thereof in the vvorld. For those of vvvhom Nice Couacel speaketh, vvere married before, & vvere bus tolerated onely to vse their vvives: the fathers in the same Couacel prouiding expressly at the same time, that none from thence forth should marrie after they came to holy Orders, and that according to the auncient tradition of the Church, as Socrates and Sozomenus declare in most plainie vvordes. See Suidas in the vvord Paphnutius. And in vvwhat countrie so euer they haue been permitted to haue carnal dealing euen vvith their vvives vvhom they had before, it vvvas not according to the exact rule of the Apostles & Churches tradition, by vvvhich al that be in holy Orders, should vvholly abstinence, not onely from marrying, but euen from their vvives before married. Vvvhenceof thus vvriteth S. Epiphanius

None euer married after holy Orders.

They that vvere made Priests of married men, abstained from their vvives.

Socrat. lib. 1 c. 8. Sozom. lib. 1 c. 22.

Epiphanius

nus baref. 59 cent. Castoras. The holy preaching of God receiveth not, after Christ, them that marrie S Epiphanius. againe after their wives departure, by reason of the great dignitie and honour of Priesthood. And this the holy Church of God observeth with al sinceritie. Tea she doth not receive the once married person that yett weth his wife and begetteth children: but onely such an one she taketh to be Deacon, Priest, Bishop, or Subdeacon, as abstaineth from his one wife, or is a widower, specially where the holy canons be sincerely kept. But thou wilt say unto me, that in certaine places Priests, Deacons, and Subdeacons do yett beget children (belike this holy father never heard of any Bishop that did so, and therefore he leaueh out that order, which he named with the other in the former part of the sentence) but that is not done according to order and rule, but according to mans minde, which by time slacketh, and for the great multitude (of Christian people) when there were not found sufficient for the ministerie. &c. the rest of his vvordes be goodly for that purpose.

Eusebius also Euang. demonstr. li. 1. c. 9 saith, that such as be consecrated to the holy ministerie, should abstaine vvholly from their wives which they had before. S. Hierom Apolog. ad Pammach. c. 8 proueth, that such of the Apostles as were married, did so, and that the Clergie ought to do the same by their example. Yea in his time he testifieth (Cons. Vigil. c. 1.) that they did liue single in maner through the world, eue in the East Church also. What, saith he, shall the Churches of the East do, what shall they of Egypt, of the See Apostolike: which take to the Clergie, either virgins, or the continent and unmarried, or such as if they have wives, cease to be husbands? And againe he saith in Apolog. ad Pammach. c. 3. (See also c. 8.) If married men like not vvell of this, let them not be angry with me, but with the holy Scriptures, with al Bishops, Priests, Deacons, and the vvhole companie of Priests and Levites, that know they can not offer sacrifices if they use the aid of marriage. S. Augustine de adult. Coniug. li. 2. c. 20. maketh it so plaine a matter that al Priests should liue chaste, that he writeth, that euen such as were forced (as many were in the primitive Church) to be of the Clergie, were bound to liue chaste, yea and did it with great ioy and felicitie, neuer complaining of these necessitites and intolerable burdens, or impossibilities of liuing chaste, as our fleshly companie of new Ministers and Superintendents do novv, that thinke it no life vvithout vvomen. much like to S. Augustine before his conuersion, vvhen he was yett a Manichee, vvho (as him self reporteth Confessi. li. 6. c. 2.) admiring in S. Ambrose al other his incomparable excellencies, yett counted al his felicities lesse, because he lacked a vvoman, vvithout vvich he thought (in time of his infidelitie) no man could liue. But after his conuersion thus he said to God of S. Ambrose: What hope he had, and against the tentations of hu excellencie what a fight he felt, or rather what a comfort and solace in tribulation, and his secrete mounth which was vvithin in his hart, what sauourie and iuvene ioyes is tasted of thy bread, neither could I coniecture, neither had I tried.

See Tertullian li. 1 ad uxorem. S. Cyprian de singul. Clericor. the first Council of Nice can. 3. Conc. Toles. 2 can. 3. Conc. Aurelian. 3 can. 2. of Carthage the second cap. 2, or Neocesarea cap. 1, of Ancyra cap. 10. and you shall find that this was generally the Churches order euen from the Apostles time, though in some places by the licentiousnes of many, it was sometime not so religiously looked vnto. Vvhereby you may easily refute the impudent clamors of Heretikes against Siricius, Gregorius 7, and others, vvhom they falsely make the authors of the Cleargies single life.

6. Neophyte.] That vvich is spoken here properly and principally of the newly baptized (for so the vvord Neophyte doth signifie) the fathers extend also to al such as be but newly retired from prophane occupations, ciuil gouernement, vvare, or secular studies, of vvhom good trial must be taken before they ought to be preferred to the high dignitie of Bishop or Priest. though for some special prerogative and excellencie, it hath in certaine persons been otherwise, as in S. Ambrose and some other notable men. Tertullian (li. de praescript.) noteth Heretikes for their lightnes in admitting euery one vvithout discretion to the Cleargie. Their Orders (saith he) are rash, light, inconstant: novv in place Neophytes, then secular men, then our Apostataes, that they may tie them by glorie and preferment, vvithin vvich the truth they can not. Na vvhere may a man sooner prosper and come forth vvard, then in the campe of rebelles, vvhere to be onely, is to deserue much. therefore one to day a Bishop, to morrow sime vvhat els: to day a Deacon, to morrow Lectur, that is, a Reader: to day a Priest, to morrow a lay man. for to laie men also they enioyne the functions of Priestes. And S. Hierom ep. 83 ad Oceanum c. 4. saith of such, Yesterday a Catechumene or newly conuerted, to day a Bishop: yesterday in the theatre, to day in the Church: at night in the place of games and maisteries, in the morning at the altar: a vvhile ago a great pastore of stageplasers, novv a consecrator of holy virgins. And in an other place, Out of the bosome of Plato and Aristotianes they are chosen to a Bishoprike, vvose care is, not how to sucke out the marrow of the Scriptures, but how to soothe the peoples eares vvith florishing declamations. Dialog. cont. Lucifer. c. 5.

2. Deacons.] Vnder the name of Deacons are here contained Subdeacons, as before vnder the name of Bishop, Priests also were comprehended. for to these foure pertaineth the Apostles precept and order touching one vvife, and touching continencie and chastite, as by the alleged Councils and fathers (namely by the vvordes of S. Epiphanius) doth appeare. for they onely be in holy Orders, as seruing by their proper function about the Altar and the B. Sacrament: in respect of

None rashly to be admitted to the Clergie

Heretikes admitted al sortes vvithout exception.

The three holy orders, only bound to chastite.

The 4 inferior orders not bound to chastitie.

All the seven orders ancient, eue from Christ and the Apostles time.

S. Ambrose calleth the B. of Rome Rector of the vvhole Church. The heretikes say directly contrary to the Apostie, that the Church is not the pillar of truth.

That the Church is the pillar of truth and can not erre, is proued by many reasons.

The meaning of this article, I beleue the Cath. Church.

vvhwhereof, the law of chastitie pertaineth to them, and not to the foure inferior Orders of Acolyti, Exorciste, LeHaras, and Ofiarij. Vvho neither by precept nor vovv be bound to perpetuall chastitie, as the others of the holy and high Orders be bound, both by precept and promis or soleinne assent made vvhen they tooke Subdeaconship.

All these degrees and orders to haue been euer since Christes time in the Church of God, it might be proued by al antiquitie: but for as much as the Apostles purpose is not here to reckon vp al the Ecclesiastical Hierarchie, it neede not be treated of in this place. But we vvish the learned to reade the 3. 4. 5. 6. 7. 8. 9. chapters of the 4 Council of Carthage, vvhereat S. Augustine vvvas present: vvwhere they shal see the expresse callings, offices, and maner of ordering or creating al the said sortes, and shal vvell perceiue these things to be most ancient and venerable. Let them read also Eusebius historie, the 35 Chapter of the 6 booke, vvwhere for al these orders he reciteth Cornelius epistle to Fabius, concerning Nouatus. Likewise S. Cyprian in many places, namely ep. 55. nu. 1. Where see the notes vpon the same, S. Hiero. ep. 2. c. 6. Of Subdeacon there is mention in S. Augustine. ep. 74. and ep. 20 de epistolis 22 in edit. Parisi. S. Epiph. har. 59. S. Cyprian ep. 24. S. Ignatius ep. 9 ad Antiochenos. and in the 43 canon of the Apostles. Conc. Tolet. 2. can. 1 & 3. Conc. Laodicen. can. 21. Epist. Epiph. apud Hiero. 60. c. 1.

13. In the house of God.] Al the world being Gods, yet the Church onely is his house, the Rector or Ruler vvwhereof at this day. (saith S. Ambrose vpon this place) is damasus. Where let our louing brethren note vvvel, how cleere a case it vvvas then, that the Pope of Rome vvvas not the Governour onely of one particular See, but of Christes vvhole house, vvwhich is the Vniuersal Church, vvwhose Rector this day is Gregorie the thirteenth.

15. The pillar of truth.] This place pincheth al Heretikes vvonderfully, and so it euer did, and therefore they oppose them selues directly against the very letter and confessed sense of the same, that is, cleane contrarie to the Apostle. some saying, the Church to be lost or hidden: some, to be fallen avvay from Christ these many ages: some, to be driuen to a corner onely of the vvorld: some, that it is become a stewes and the seate of Antichrist: lastly the Protestants most plainly and directly, that it may and doth erre, and hath shamefully erred for many hundred yeres together. And they say herein like them selues, and for the credit of their ovvne doctrine, vvwhich can not be true in very deede, except the Church erre, euen the Church of Christ, vvwhich is here called the house of the liuing God.

But the Church vvwhich is the house of God, vvwhose Rector (saith S. Ambrose) in his time vvvas Damasus, and novv Gregorie the thirteenth, and in the Apostles time S. Peter, is the pillar of truth, the establisment of al veritie: therefore it can not erre. It hath the Spirit of God to lead it into al truth till the vvorldes end: therefore it can not erre. It is builded vpon a rocke, hel gates shal not preuaile against it: therefore it can not erre. Christ is in it til the end of the vvorld, he hath placed in it Apostles, Doctors, Pastors, and Rulers, to the consummation and ful perfection of the vvwhole body, that in the meane time we be not caried about vvith euery blast of doctrine: therefore it can not erre. He hath praised for it, that it be sanctified in veritie, that the faith of the cheefe Governour therof faile not: it is his house, his spouse, his body, his lotte, kingdom and inheritance, giuen him in this vvorld: he loneth it as his ovvne flesch, and it can not be diorced or separated from him: therefore it can not erre. the nevve Testament, Scriptures, Sacraments, and sacrifice can not be changed, being the euerlasting dourie of the Church, continued and neuer rightly occupied in any other Church but in this our Catholike Church: therefore it can not erre. And therefore al those pointes of doctrine, faith, and vvworship, vvwhich the Arians, Manichees, Protestants, Anabaptistes, other old or nevve Heretikes, vvtruelly thinke to be errors in the Church, be no errors in deede, but them selues most shamfully are deceiued, and so shal be still, til they enter againe into this house of God, vvwhich is the pillar and ground of al truth: that is to say, not onely it self free from al error in faith and religion, but the pillar and stay to leane vnto in al doubttes of doctrine, and to stand vpon against al heresies and errors that il times yeld, vvwithout vvwhich there can be no certaintie nor securitie. And therefore the holy Apostles, and Councils of Nice and Constantinople, made it an article of our Credo, to beleue the ΚΑΤΗΛΙΚΗ ΚΑΙ ΑΠΟΣΤΟΛΙΚΗ ΕΚΚΛΗΣΙΑ. Vvwhich is, not onely to acknowledge that there is sush a Church, as heretikes falsely say: but that vvwhich is called the Catholike Church, & knowven so to be, and vvcommunicate vvith the See Apostolike, is the Church: and that vve must beleue, heare, and obey the same, as the touch stone, pillar, and firmament of truth. For, al this is comprised in that principle, I beleue the Catholike Church. And therefore the Coucel of Nice said, I beleue in the Church, that is, I beleue and trust the same in al things.

Neither can the Heretikes escape by fleeing from the knowven visible Church, to the hid congregation or companie of the Predestinate. For that is but a false phantastical apprehension σείας apprehension of Vvicleffe and his folowers. The companie of the Predestinate maketh not any one Societie among them felues, many of them being yet vnborne, and many yet Infidels and heretikes, and therefore be not of the one house of God vvhich is here called, the pillar of truth. And those of the Predestinate that be already of the Church, make not a seueral companie from the knowven Catholike Church, but are baptized, houseled, taught, they liue and die in the common Catholike visible Church, or els they can neither receiue Sacraments, nor saluation. S. Paul instructeth not Timothee how to teach, preach, correct, and conuerse in the inuisible societie of the Predestinate, but in the visible house of God. So that it must needs be the visible Church which can not erre.

If any make further question, how it can be that any companie or societie of men (as the Church is) can be void of error in faith, seing al men may erre: he must know that it is not by nature, but by priuilege of Christes presence, of the Holy Ghosts assistance, of our Lordes promis and praier. See S. Augustine vpon these vvordes of the 118 Psalm Cone. 13. Ne auferas de ore meo verbum veritatis usquequaque. Vvhere he hath goodly speeches of this matter. For the same purpose also the vvordes of Lactantius are very notable. It is the Catholike Church onely, that keepeth the true vvorship of God, this is the fountaine of truth, this the house of faith, this the Temple of God: whither if any man enter not, or from vvhich if any man go out, he is an aliene and stranger from the hope of euerlasting life and saluation. No man must by obstinate contention flatter him self, for it standeth vpon life and saluation. &c. S. Cyprian faith, The Church neuer departeth from that vvhich she once hath knowven. Ep. 55 ad Cornel. nu. 3. S. Ireneus faith, That the Apostles haue laid vp in the Church as in a rich treasurie, al truth. And, that she keepeth vvith most sincere diligence, the Apostles faith and preaching. li. 3 c. 4. & 40. & li. 1. c. 3. It vvere an infinite thing to recite al that the fathers say of this matter, al counting it a most pernicious absurditie to affirme, that the Church of Christ may erre in religion.

It is the visible Church that is the pillar or truth and can not erre.

Vvhen the Church hath this priuilege neuer to erre.

ANNOTATIONS
CHAP. III.

At Heretikes are apostataes from the faith.

1. Shal depart.] It is the proper description of Heretikes, to forsake their former faith, and to be Apostataes, as the Greeke vvord importeth: to giue care to particular spirites of error & deception, rather then to the Spirit of Christ in his Church, to folovv in hypocrisie and shewv of vertue the pernicious doctrine of Diuels, vvho are the suggesters and prompters of al Sectes, and are lying spirites in the mouthes of al Heretikes and false preachers: men that haue put their conscience to silence and made it senseles to the holy Churches admonition: the Apostle noting * once before also in this same Epistle, that Heretikes haue no conscience, vvwhich is the cause both of their fall and of their obduration in heresie.

The old Heresies against matrimonie.

1. Forbidding to marrie.] He speaketh (saith S. Chrysoftom) of the Manichees, Encrautes, and Marcionistes. ho. 12 in 1 Tim. S. Ambrose vpon this place, addeth to these Paritians also. S. Irenzus li. 1 c. 30. S. Epiphanius har. 45. 26. 61. 30. S. Hierom 1 cont. Iovin. c. 1. & ep. 50 c. 1 & 3. S. Augustine har. 25. 40. and generally al antiquitie assume the same both of them, and also of the Heretikes called Apostolici, Ebionitz, and like like. Their heresie about mariage vvas, that to marrie or to vse the act of matrimonie, is of Satan, as S. Irenzus vvitnesseth li. 1 c. 22: and that the distinction of male and femal and the creation of man and vvoman for generation, came of an il God. They taught their hearers, * (saith S. Augustine, that if they did vic vvomen, they should in any vvise prouide that they might not conceiue or beare children. Clemens Alexandrinus (li. 3. har. 46. Strom. in principio) vvriteth, that such admit no mariage nor procreation of children, lest they should bring into the vvorld creatures to suffer miserie and mortalitie. And this is the damnable opinion concerning mariage, noted here by the Apostle.

The old Heresies about abstinence from meates.

For the second point consisting in the prohibition of meates or vse of certaine creatures made to be eaten, the said Heretikes or diuers of them (for they vvore not al or one sect touching these points) taught, that men might not eat certaine sortes of meates, specially of beastes and liuing creatures, for that they vvore not made (say they) of the good God, but of the euil. And vvine they called the gall of the Prince of darkenes, and not to be drunke at al, and the Vine vvhereof it came, to be of the Diuels creation. And diuers other creatures they condemned as things by nature and creation polluted and abominable. August. her. Manich. 46. & har. 25 Asian. & toto libro de mor. Manich. 10. 1. Lo these vvore the Heretikes and their heresies vvwhich S. Paul here propheticerth of, that forbid mariage and meates as you haue heard, for vvwhich they and their folovvers vvore condemned in diuers Councils.

The Catholikes impudently charged vvith the said old heresies.

Is it not nowv an intolerable impudencie of the Protestants, vvho for a smal similitude of vvordes in the cases of the simple, apply this text to the fastes of the Church, and the chastitie of

of Priests and Religious? As though either by appointing or vsing some daies of abstinence from certain meates, the Church or any Catholike man condemned the said meates. vnles the Rechabites Hierom. 35. or the Nazarites Num. 6. or the Niniuites Ion. 3. or Moyles Exod. 34. or Elias 3 Reg. 19. or holy Anna the vvidow Luc. 2. or Iohn Baptist Mat. 3 & 9. or Christ him self Mat. 4: commending, vsing, and folovving a prescript number of fasting daies, or God him self that in the very beginning, in Paradise, prescribed abstinence from the fruite of one certaine tree, and after appoiuted so many fastes in the Law, vnles he therfore, condēned his ovvne creatures, & the rest, those creatures from vvhich they abstained. No, there be many good and lawfull causes to forbid some or to abstaine frō some meates: as, for obedience, as in Paradise: for significatiō, as the Levites: for that they haue been offered to Idols, as in the Epistle to the Corinthians: for chastening the bodie and penance, for health also: and onely those causes are vnlawfull for vvhich the Manichees and other Heretikes abstained.

Concerning marriage likewise, they may as vvel charge God or the Church for forbidding the father to marrie the daughter, or the brother the sister, or other prohibited persons in the Law: as vvel might they charge Christ and the Apostle for prohibiting the man to marrie, during his vvives life: and appointing vvidowes that serue the Church, is no condemnation to liue vnmarried, and not admitting a married Woman as vvel as vvidow, nor her that hath had moe husbands, as vvel as her that hath beē married but once: as they charge the Church for not admitting married persons to the altar, and for forcing vvhich persons to keepe their promis of chasticie. No, the holy Church is so farre from condemning wedlocke, that she honoureth it much more then the Protestants, accounting it an holy Sacrament, vvhich they do not, who onely vse it to lust as the Heathen doe, and not to religion.

But it is an old deceitful practise of Heretikes to charge Catholike men vvhith old condemned heresies. The Eutychemians slandered the Council of Chalcedon and S. Leo to be Nestorians, and to make two persons in Christ, because they said there vv ere two natures. Vigilius li. 5. cont. Eutychem. Arius charged Alexander his Bishop of Sabellianisme, for auouching the vnicie of substance in Trinitie. Socrat. li. 1. c. 3. Iulianus accused S. Augustine of the heresie of Apollinaris. li. 5. cont. Iulian. c. 15. Other Pelagians chalenged him for condemning marriage. Retrait. li. 2. c. 53. And that our Protestants bragge not too much of their goodly inuention, Iouinian the old Heretike, their Maister in this point, accused * the holy doctors and Catholikes vpon this same place, to be Manichees, and to condemne meates and marriage, as both S. Hierom and S. Augustine do testifie. And they both answer to the Heretike, that the Church in deede & Catholikes do abstaine frō some for euer, and some for certaine daies, and euery Christian man lightly al the Lent fast: not for that they thinke the meates vncleane, abominable, or of an ill creation, as the Manichees do: but for punishment of their bodies and taming their concupiscences. Hiero. li. 2. cont. Iouin. c. 11. Aug. cont. Adimantum c. 14. Li. de mor. Cash. Es. Hiero. in c. 4. ad Galat. And as for marriage, the said doctors answer, that no Catholike man condemneth it for vnlawfull, as the old Heretikes did, but onely preferreth virginie and continencie before it, as a state in it self more agreable to God and more meete for the Cleargie. See S. Augustine against Faustus the Manichee li. 30 c. 5. 6. and her. 25 in the name, Apostolici. S. Hierom ep. 50. c. 1. & 3. Al this the Catholikes continually tel the Aduersaries, and they can not but see it. Yet by accustomed audacitie and impudencie they beare it out still.

4. Wish shankes giuing. By the most auncient custom of the faithful both before Christ and sithence, men vie to blesse their table and meates, by the hand and word of a Priest, if any be present, other vvise by such as can conueniently do it. And in husbandinens houses vvhich they haue no other meanes, they should at least blesse Gods giftes and them selues vvith a Pater noster or the signe of the Crosse: not onely to acknowledge from whom they haue their continual sustenance, but also to blesse their meate and sanctifie it. For the Greeke vvord vsed of S. Paul, by Ecclesiasticall vse, vvich it concerneth meates, signifieth not onely thanks giuing, but blesing or sanctifying the creatures to be receiued, as being al one vvith ευχριστια, and in English vve call it grace, not onely that after meate, which is onely thanks to God, but that before meate, vvhich is alwaies a benediction of the creatures, as it is plaine in the prescript and vsual formes of grace. For vvhich cause a Priest should euer do it rather then a lay man or any of inferior order in the Cleargie. In so much that S. Hierom (ep. 85) reprehendeth certaine Deacons vvhom he saw say grace or blesse the meate and the companie, in the presence of a Priest. Vvho also recordeth in the life of S. Paul the holy Eremitte) the great curtesie and humilitie of him and S. Antonie, yielding one to the other the preeminence of blesing their poore dinner. For to blesse is a great thing, and a Priestly prerogatiue, as the Apostle vvitnesseth, declaring the preeminence of Melchisedec in that he blessed Abraham. Read the note following.

Hebr. 7.

1. Sanctified

Abstinence from certaine meates is no condemnation of the meates.

Diners good causes of abstinence.

Forbidding certaine persons to marrie is no condemnation of matrimonie. Catholikes esteeme matrimonie more then the Protestants doe.

The Protestants objections answered long ago by S. Hierom and S. Augustine.

Blesing of the table or of meates, specially by a Priest.

To blesse is a preeminence of the better person.

5. Sanctified.] Al creatures be of Gods creation, none of the Diuel, or of any other cause and beginning, as the Manichees blasphemed: and therefore none are il, abominable, or vnclane by creation, nature, and condition, but al good and made for mans vse, though al be not alike holy nor equally sanctified. God made seven daies, but he sanctified onely one of them. he made al places, but he sanctified none but the Temple and such like deputed to his seruice, as the Arke, the altar, and the rest vvhich were by sacred vse both holy them selues, and gaue also holines and sanctification to things that touched them or were applied vnto them. So our Saviour saith, that the Temple sanctified the gold, and the altar the gift, and generally al creatures seuered from common and profane vse, to religion and vvorship of God, are made sacred thereby. So the places and daies of Gods apparition or vvorking some special vvonders or benefites toward the people, were holy, as Bethel, Sinai, and others. And much more those times and places of Christes Natiuite, Passion, burial, Resurrection, Ascension: vvhich is so plaine a case, that the hill vvhere he vvas transfigured onely, is called therefore by S. Peter, the holy mount.

These therefore be holy memories and monuments of al sortes sanctified, besides that creatures (as vve see here) be sanctified also by the vvord of God and praier, that is to say, by benediction & inuocation of our Lordes holy name vpon them, specially by the signe of the Crosse, as S. Chrysostom noteth on this place, ho. 12 in 1 ad Tim. by the vvich the aduersarie povver of Satan vsurping vniustly vpon Gods creatures through mans sinne, and seeking deceitfully in or by the same to annoy mans body or soule, is expelled, and the meates purged from him and made wholesome. S. Gregorie (li. 1 Dialog. c. 4) recordeth that the Diuel entered into a certaine religious wvoman by eating the herbe lettuce vnblest. And S. Augustine li. 18 de ciu. Dei. c. 18. sheweth at large, vvhath vvaies he hath by meates and drinks and other vsual creatures of God, to annoy men: though his povver be much lesse then it vvas before Christ. but still much desire he hath on al sides to molest the faithful by abusing the things most neere and necessarie vnto them, to their hurt both bodily and Ghostly. for remedie vvhereof, this sanctification vvich the Apostle speaketh of, is very soueraine, pertaining not onely to this common and more vulgar benediction of our meates and drinks, but much more (as the proprietie of the Greeke vvord vsed by the Apostle for sanctification, doth import) to other more exact sanctifying and higher applying of some creatures, and blessing them to Christes honour in the Church of God, and to mans spiritual and corporal benefites.

For as S. Augustine vvriteth li. 2 de pee. meris. c. 26. besides this vsual blessing of our daily foode, the Cathecumens (that is, such as were taught toward Baptisme) are sanctified by the signe of the Crosse, and the bread (saith he) vvich they receiue, though it be not the body of Christ, yet is holy, and more holy then the vsual bread of the table. He meaneth a kinde of bread then halovved, specially for such as were not yet admitted to the B. Sacrament: either the same, or the like to our holy bread, vsed in the Church of England and France on Sundaies. And it vvas a common vse in the primitiue Church to bleste loaves, and send them for sacred tokens from one Christian man to another, and that not among the simple and superstitious (as the Aduersaries may imagine) but among the holiest, learnedst, and vvifest. Such halovved breads did S. Paulinus send to S. Augustine and Alipius, and they to him againe, calling them blessings. Read S. Hierom in the life of Hilarion (post medium): how Princes and learned Bishops & other of al sortes came to that holy man for holy bread, panem benedictum. In the primitiue Church the people commonly brought bread to the Priests to be halovved. Author ep. imp. ho. 14 in Ms. The 3 Coucel of Carthage cap. 24. maketh mention of the blessing of milke, honie, grapes, and corne. See the 4 Canon of the Apostles. And not onely diuers other creatures vied at certaine times in holy Churches seruice, as vvaxe, fire, palmes, ashes, but also the holy oile, Chrisme, and the vvater of Baptisme, that also vvich is the cheefe of al Priestly blessing of creatures, the bread and vvine in the high Sacrifice, be sanctified, for vvithout sanctification, yea (as S. Augustine affirmeth tracl. 118 in Ioan.) vvithout the signe of the Crosse, none of theie things can rightly be done.

Can any man novv marvel that the Church of God by this vvarrat of S. Paules vvord expou- ded by so long practise and tradition of the first fathers of our religion, doth vse diuers elements and bleste them for mans vie and the seruice of God, expelling by the inuocatio of Christes name, the aduersarie povver from them, according to the authoritie giuen by Christ, Super omnia demonia. Luc. 9. over al Diuels: and by praier, vvich importeth as the Apostle here speaketh, desire of help, as it were by the vertue of Christ to combat vvith the Diuel, and so to expel him out of Gods creatures, vvich is done by holy exorcisme, and euer beginneth, Adiutorium nostrum in nomine Domini, as vve see in the blessing of holy vvater and the like sanctification of elements. Vvhich exorcismes, namely of chii dren before they come to Baptisme, see in S. Augustine *li. 6 cons. Iulian. c. 5. Et de Ec. dogmat. c. 31. Furnish your selues vvith such examples and groundes of Scriptures and antiquitie, and you shall contemne the Aduersaries cauillations and blasphemies against the Churches practise in such things, and further also finde, these sacred actions and creatures, not only by increase of faith, feruor, and deuotion, to purge the impuritie of our soules, and procure remission of our daily infirmities, but that the cheefe Ministers of Christes Church, by their soueraigne authoritie graunted of our Lord, may ioyne vnto the same, their blessing and remission of our venial Remission of sinnes or spiritual dettes: as vve see in S. Iames, remission of al sinnes to be annexed to the vncion venial sinnes vvith holy oile, vvhich to the Catholikes is a Sacrament, but to the Protestants vvas but a tempo- annexed to ha- ral ceremonie, and to some of them not of Christes institution, but of the Apostles onely. In their louved creatu- ovne sense therefore they should not maruel that such spiritual effectes should procede of the res. vse of sanctified creatures, vvhereas venial trespasses be remitted many vvaies, though mortal ordinarily by the Sacraments onely. S. Gregorie did commonly send his benediction and remission of sinnes, in and vvith such holy tokens as vvere sanctified by his blessing and touching of the Apostles bodies and Martyrs Relikes, as novv his successors do in the like halovved remembrances of religion. See his 7 booke, epistle 126: and 9 booke, epistle 60. Thus therefore and to the effectes aforelaid the creatures of God be sanctified.

14. The grace.] S. Augustine declareth this grace to be the giit of the holy Ghost giuen vnto him by receiuing this holy Order, vvhereby he vvas made fite to execute the office to his ovvne Grace giuen in saluation and other mens. And note vvithal, that grace is not onely giuen in or vvith the Sacra- the Sacramēt of ments, by the receiuers faith or deuotion, but by the Sacrament, per impositionem, by imposition of Orders. handes. for so he speaketh 2 Tim. 1. Which is here said, cum impositione, vvith imposition.

Hierom also (as is noted before) saith, that the ordering of Priests is, by imposition of handes and imprecation of voice.

14. Of Priesthood.] The practise of the Church giueth vs the sense of this place, vvhich the Holy Orders a- ancient Council of Carthage doth thus set dovvne. When a Priest taketh orders, the Bishop blessing Sacrament. him and holding hu hand vpon his head, let al the Priests present lay also their hands on his head by the Bishops hands &c. Vvho seeth not novv, that holy Orders giuing grace by an external ceremonie and vvorke, is a Sacrament? So al the old Church counteth it. And S. Augustine (cons. ep. Parmen. li. 2 c. 13.) plainly saith that no man doubteth but it is a Sacrament. and lest any man thinke that he vseth not the vvord Sacrament proprely and precisely, he ioyneth it in nature and name vvith Baptisme. Againe vvho seeth not by this vse of imposition of hands in giuing Orders and other Sacraments, that Christ, the Apostles, and the Church may borovv of the Ievvish rites, certaine conuenient ceremonies and Sacramental actions, seing this same (as * the Heretikes can not deny) vvas receiued of the maner of Ordering Aaron and the Priests of the old Iavv or other heads of the people? See Exod. 39. Num. 27. 23.

3. Widowes in deede.] S. Ambrose calleth them vvindowes and desolate in deede, that might marie, but to make them selues better and more vvorthy of God, refuse mariage, vvwhich they knowv to be bur once blessed, imitating * holy Anne, vvho in fasting and praies serued God night and day, neuer knowving but one husband. Such professed vvindowes then are to be honoured and suc-coured. Neither doth he speake onely of the Churches vvindowes (of vvhom specially aftervvard) but of al that by profession kept their vvindowhod, exhorting them to passe their time in prair and fasting, v. 5. Vvwhich vvvas an honorable and holy itate much vvritten of, and commended in the primitive Church, namely by S. Ambrose and by S. Augustine, vvho vvrote bookes intituled thereof, and make it next to virginitie. Ambr. de viduu. August. de bono viduisatu.

Widowhod.

8. He hath denied.] Not that by this or by any other deadly sinne (except incredulitie or doubtfulnes in beleefe) they lose their faith: but that their factes be not ansvverable to their faith and to Christian religion, vvwhich precribeth al such duties.

9. Let a vvindow be chofen.] Novv he speaketh more particularly and specially of such vvdowes as vvvere nourished and found by the oblaions of the faithful & the almes of the Church, and did vvithal some necessārie seruices about vvomen that vvvere to be professed or baptized, for their instruction and addreiling to that and other Sacraments, and also about the sicke and impotent: and vvithal sometimes they had charge of the Church goods or the disposition of them vnder the Deacons: in respect vvhereof they also and the like are called Diaconisse. Eusebius li 6 c 35 reciteth out of Cornelius Epistle, that in the Church of Rome there is one Bishop, 40 Priests, fixe Deacons, seuen Subdeacons, Acoluthi 42, Exorcistes, Lectors, and Oltiarij 52, vvindowes together vvith the poore 150, al vvvhich God nourisheth in his Church. See Act. Apost. c. 6. S. Chrysostom li. 3 de Sacerdotio propius finem. S. Epiphanius in heresi 79 Collyridianorum. Novv then, vvhat maner of vvomen should be taken into the fellowship of such as vvvere found of the Church, he further declareth.

Widowes called Diaconisse, & their office.

1. The vvife of one husband.] If you vvould haue a plaine paterne of Heretical fraude, corruption, and adulteration of the natiue sense of Gods vvord, and an inuincible demonstration that these nevv Glosiers haue their consciences seared and hartes obdurate, vvillingly perverting the Scriptures against that vvvhich they knowv is the meaning thereof, to the maintenance of their factes: marke vvvel their handling of this piace about these vvindowes of the Church. S. Paul prescribeth such onely to be admitted as haue been the vvviues of one husband, that is to say, once onely married, not admitting any that hath been twice married. By vvvhich vvordes the Catholikes proue fust, that the like phraic *vved before of Bishops and Deacons, that they should be the husbands of one vvwife, must needes signifie that they can not be twice married, nor admitted to these and the like functions, if they vvvere more then once married before. Secondly, vve proue by this piace against the Aduersaries, that the state of vvwindowhod is more vvworthy, honorable, decent, and pure in respect of the seruice of the Church, and more to be relieued of the reuenues thereof, then the state of married folkes, and that not onely (as the Aduersaries perhaps may ansvver) for their greater necessitie, or more leisure, freedom, or expedition to serue, in that they be not combered vvith husband and houshold, but in respect of their vidual continencie, chastitie, and punie. for els such as vvvere vvindowes vvith intention and freedom to marie aftervvard, might haue been admitted by the Apostle, as vvvel as those that vvvere neuer to marie againe.

These vvidowes must haue had but one husband: vvherof many Catho-like cōclusions are deduced.

c. 3, 2.

Thirdly, vve proue that second marriage not onely alter admission to the almes or seruice of the Church, but before also, is disagreeable and a signe of incontinencie or more lust and fleshlines then is agreeable or comely for any person belonging to the Church: and consequently, that the Apostle in the last chapter treating of the holy functions of Bishops, Priests, Deacons, and of the Churches refusing generally bigamos or twiſe married persons, must needs much more meane that no man twiſe married should be receiued to holy Orders: and further, that as none were admitted to be widowues of the Church, that euer intended to marie againe, ſo none should euer be receiued to minifter the Sacraments (which is a thing infinitely more, and requireth more puritie; and continencie; then the office or state of the ſaid widowues,) that intended to marie againe. To receiue the body of Chriſt (ſaith S. Hierom in Apolog. pro lib. cont. Iouin. ep. 50. c. 6.) is a greater and holier thing then praier, and therefore Priests that must both continually pray and also be occupied about the receiuing or ministring the holy Sacrament daily, must liue continently.

Fourthly, we proue that it is not vnlawfull to annexe, by precept or the parties promis, single life or chastitie to a whole state or order of the faithful, because the Apostle & the vvhole Church in his time ioynd to this state of the Churches widowues, perpetual continencie. Fifthly, we proue hereby that to refuse and not to accept the twiſe married or such as vvil not liue single, into the state of widowues or holy Orders, is not to condemne or forbid second marriage, or once & often marrying, vvith the Manichees according to the doctrine of Diuels, as the Protestants (and before them the old condemned Iouinianistes) do blaſpheme the Church. for then did S. Paul allow and teach doctrine of Diuels, vvho refuseth a twiſe married vvoman, and bindeth others by their entering into this state, not to marie againe: as no doubt he did the Cleargie mea much more in the 3 chapter before. Thus loe we Catholikes cōferre & conſter the Scriptures, & for this meaning we haue al the Doctors vvithout exception. Vvhat shift then haue the Heretikes here? for marie and remarie they must, let the Scriptures & al the Doctors in the vvorld say nay to it. In truth they do not expound the vvord of God, but flee from the euidence of it, some one vvay & some an other.

And of al other, their extremest and most shameful tergiverſation is, that the Apoſtle here forbiddeth * nor the admission of such widowues as haue been twiſe married, but onely them that haue had tvvo husbands at once. vvwhich vvas a very vnprobable and extorted expolition before, concerning Bishops and Deacons, c. 3. and (as S. Hierom ſaith ep. 83.) malo nodo malus cunens: but here that an exception should be made onely against widowues that had had tvvo husbands together (vvwhich vvas a thing neuer lawfull nor neuer heard of) that is a most intolerable impudencie, and a cōstruction that neuer came to any vvite mans cogitation before: and yet these their vvancies must be Gods vvord, and bigamus or bigamia must against their old natures and vse of al vvriters, be al one vvith Polygamus and Polygamia. They giue an example of such widowues, in vvomen diuorced iustly from their husbands in the old iaw. As though S. Paul here tooke order for the lewes widowues onely, or that had been such a cōmon caſe among the lewes also, that the Apoſtle needed to take ſo careful order for it. finally, they let not to say that if the Apoſtle should be vnderſtood to refuse a widowv twiſe married at sundrie times, it were vnreasonable & iniurious to ſecond marriages, vvwhich haue no more indecencie or ſigne of incontinencie (ſay they) then the first. Thus bold they are vvith the Apoſtle and al antiquitie.

Which is to Waxe vvanton in Chriſt, or against Chriſt, κατὰ χριſτὸν. * The Greeke vvord ſignifieth to caſt of the raines or bridle, that is, the bond or promis of continencie which they had put vpon them.

The very vvil to breake the vvovv of chaſtitie, is damnable.

11. They vvil.] In the chaſtitie of widowhood or Virginitie (ſaith S. Auguſtine) the excellencie of a greater gift is ſought for. Which being once deſired, choſen, and offered to God by vvovv, it is not onely damnable to enter aftervvard into marriage, but though it come not actually to marriage, onely to haue the vvil to marie is damnable. Aug. li. de bono viduit. cap. 9.

12. Having damnation.] It ſignifieth not blame, checke, or reprehension of men, as some to makè the fault ſeeme leſſe, vvould haue it: but * iudgement or eternal damnation, which is a heauy ſentence. Auguſtine in exceding many places: al theſe expound the Apoſtles vvordes of the vvovv of Chaſtitie or the faiſh and promis made to Chriſt to liue continently. What is to breake their firſt faiſh? ſaith S. Auguſtine. They vvovved, and performed not. In pl. 75. prope finem. Againe in an other place, They breake their firſt faiſh, that ſtand not in that vvhiſh they vvovved. Li. de Santa virgyn. c. 33. Againe he and al the fathers vvith him in Carthage Council before named: If any vvidowues, how long ſo euer they vvore left of their husbands deceaſed, haue vvovved them ſelues to God, left their laical habite, and vnder the teſtimonie of the Biſhop and Church haue appeared in religious vvoods, and aftervvard goe any more to ſecular marriage, according to the Apoſtles ſentence

sentence they shal be damned, because they were so bold to make void the faith or promise of Chastitie which they vowed to our Lord. So saith he and 215 fathers moe in that Council.

And this promise of chastitie is called, faith, because the fidelitie betwixt married persons is ordinarily called of holy Writers, faith: and the vow of chastitie made to God, ioyneth him & the persons so vowing, as it were in marriage, so farre, that if the said persons breake promise, they are counted and called in the last alleaged Council, Gods adulterers. In the 3 to the Romanes also and often els vvhether, faith is taken for promise or fidelitie. And that it is so taken here, the vvordes irritum facere (to frustrate and make void) do proue. for that terme is commonly vsed in matter of vovv, promise, or compacte. Gen. 17. Num. 30. This promise is called here prima fides (the first faith) in respect of the later promise vvhich vovvbreakers make to them vvith vvhom they pretend to marrie. So saith S. Augustine li. de bono viduis. c. 8. & 9. and Innocentius 1 ep. 2. cap. 13. to. 1. Conc. And this is the onely natieue, evident, and agreeable sense to the circumstance of the letter. And the vaine euasion of the Heretikes to saue the Apostate-Monkes, Friers, Nunnes, and Priests from damnation for their pretended mariages, is friuolous: to vvith, that first faith here signifieth the faith of Baptisme or Christian beleefe, & not the promise or vovv of Chastitie. But vve aske them if this faith of Baptisme be broken by marriage or no. For the text is plaine that by intending to marie, they breake their faith, and by breaking their faith they be damned, if they die vvithout repentance. In truth vvich vvay so euer they vvrite them selues to defend their sacrilege or pretended mariages, they lose their labour and struggle against their ovvne conscience and plaine Scripture.

14. Of vvil the yonger.] He speaketh of such yong ones as were yet free. For such as had already made vovv, neither could they vvithout damnation marie, were they yong or old, nor he vvithout sinne commaund or counsell them to it. Neither (as S. Hierom proueth to * Gerontia, and S. Chrysostom vpon this place) doth he precisely commaund or counsell the yong ones that were free, to marie, or absolutely forbid them to vovv chastitie: God forbid, say they. But his speech containeth onely a vvise admonition to the frailer sort, that it were farre better for them not to haue vovved at all, but to haue married againe, then to haue fallen to aduourie and Apostacie after profession. Vvhich is no more but to preferre second marriage before fornication: and a good warning, that they vvich are to profess, looke vvell vvhat they do. S. Pauls experience of the fall of some yong ones to marriage, caused him to giue this admonition here: as also that before, that none should be receiued to the Churches aimes vnder threescore yeres of age. Not forbidding the Church for euer, to accept any vvoves of vvidvves or virgins til that age, as the Heretikes falsely affirme: but shewing vvhat was meete for that time and the beginning of Christianitie, vvhen as yet there were no Monasteries builded, no prescript rule, no exact order of obedience to Superiors: but the professed (as S. Paul here noteth) coursed & wandered vp and downe idly, as novv our professed virgins or Nunnes do not, neither can do. Of vvhom therefore, vvhere discipline is obserued, there is no cause of such danger. Besides that vvidvves hauing had the vse of carnal copulation before, are more dangerously tempted, then virgins that are brought vp from their tender age in pietie and haue no experience of such pleasures. See S. Ambrose li. de viduis, prouing by the example of holy Anna, vvho liued a vvidvve euen from her youth til 80 yeres of age, in fasting and praying night and day, that the Apottle doth not here vvithout exception forbid al yong vvidvves to vovv, yea he esteemeth that profession in the yonger Women much more laudable, glorious, and meritorious. See his booke de Viduis in initia.

15. After Satan.] Vve may here learne, that for those to marie vvich are professed, is to turne backe after Satan. For he speaketh of such as were married contrary to their vovv. And herevpon vve call the Religious that marie (as Luther, Bucer, Peter martyr and the rest) Apostataes. More vve learne, that such yong ones haue no excuse of their age, or that they be vehemently tempted and burne in their concupiscences, or that they haue not the gift of Chastitie. For notwithstanding al these excuses, these yong professed vvidvves if they marie, go backvard after Satan, and be Apostataes, & damned, except they repent. For as for the Apottles vvordes to the Corinthians, It is better to marie then to burne, Vve haue before declared out of the fathers, and here vve adde, that it pertaineth onely to persons that be free and haue not vovved to the contrary. as S. Ambrose li. ad virg. laps. c. 5. S. Augustine de bono vid. c. 8. and S. Hierom li. 1. cont. Iouin. c. 7. expound it.

The Heretikes of our time thinke there is no remedie for fornication or burning, but marriage. and so did S. Augustine vvhen he was yet a Manichee. Putabam me miserum &c. I thought (saith he li. 6. Confes. c. 11.) that I should be an unhappie and miserable man if I should lacke the companie of a vvoman, and the medicine of my mercie to heale the same infirmisie I thought not upon, because I had not tried it: and I imagined that continencie was in a mans ovvne povver and libertie, vvich in my self I did not feele: being so foolish not to vnderstand that no man can be continens vnles thou

Why this vovv is called faith or fidelitie.

Vvhy the first faith.

The heretikes exposition of this first faith, impossible & against the text.

S. Paul meaneh not that vvidvves professed should marie.

It is better for the frailer sort, that are in danger of falling, to marie rather then to vovv.

Yong vvomen may be professed & taken into religion.

To marie after the vovv of Chastitie, is to goe after Satan.

The heretikes only remedie against concupiscence is marriage.

gine it. Verely thou wouldest gine it, if vvish inward mourning I would knocke at thy eares, and vvisish found faith vould cast my care vpon thee.

By al vvhich you may easly proue, that chastitie is a thing that may lawfully be vowed, that it is not impossible to be fulfilled by praier, fasting, and chastisement of mens concupiscence, that it is a thing more grateful to God then the condition of married persons: for els it should not be required either in the Cleargie or in the Religious. finally, that it is most abominable to perswade the poore virgins or other professed to such sacrilegious vvedlocke, which S. Augustine auoucheth to be vvorse then aduoutrie. de bon. vidu. c.

Iouinians heresie in this point, condemned of old, is called of the Protestants, Gods vword.

4. 11. Iouinian vvas the first that euer made mariage equal vwith vvirginie or chaste life, for vvhich he vvas condemned of heresie. Aug. in argumta li. de bono Coniugali. De pec. maris li. 1. c. 7. Li. de heref. bar. 82. He vvas the first that perswaded professed virgins to marie, which S. Augustine saith vvas so clerely and vwithout question vwicked, that it could neuer in fact any Priest, but certaine miserable Nunnes. Yea for this strange perswasion he calleth Iouinian a monster, saying of him thus Li. 2. Retract. cap. 22. The holy Church that is there (at Rome) most faithfully and stoutly resisted this monster. S. Hierom calleth the said Heretike and his complices, *Christian epicures. li. 2. cont. 17. In vword and doctrine.] Such Priests specially and Prelates are vworthy of double, that is, of the more ample honour, that are able to preach and teach, and do take paines therein. Vvhere vve may note, that al good Bishops or Priests in those daies vvere not so vvel able to teach as some others, and yet for the miniterie of the Sacraments, and for vvisedom and gouernement, vvere not vnmeete to be Bishops and Pastors. for though it be one high commendation in a Prelate, to be able to teach, as the Apostle before noted: yet al can not haue the like grace therein, and it is often recompented by other singular giftes no lesse necessarie. S. Augustine laboured in vword and doctrine, Alipius and Valerius vvere good Bishops, and yet had not that gift. Possid. in vit. Aug. c. 5. And some times and countries require preachers more then other. Al vvinich vve note, to discouer the pride of Heretikes, that contemne some of the Catholike Priests or Bishops, pretending that they can not preach as they do, vwith meretricious and painted eloquence.

Many good & vworthie Bishops, that haue not the gift of preaching and teaching.

21. Water.] You see how vlawful and how holy a thing it is, to fast from some meates or drinckes, either certaine daies, or alwayes, as this B. Bishop Timothee did: vvhv vvas hardly induced by the Apostle to drinke a litle vvine vwith his vwater in respect of his infirmities. And marke vvhath, vvhath a calumnious and stale cauillation it is, that to abstaine from certaine meates and drinckes for punishment of the body or deuotion, is, to condemne Gods creatures. See an homilie of S. Chrylostom vpon these vvordes, to. 5.

CHA P. VI.

What to teach seruants. 3 If any teach against the doctrine of the Church obstinately, he doth it of pride and for lucre. 11 But the Catholike Bishop must follow vertue, having his eye alwayes to life euerlasting and to the coming of Christ. 17 Vvas to commaund the riche. 20 Finally, to keepe most carefully the Catholike Churches doctrine, vwithout mutation.

WHOSOEVER are seruantes vnder yoke, let¹ them counte their maisters vworthie of al honour: lest the name of our Lord and his doctrine be blasphemed. † But they that haue faithful² maisters, let them not contemne them because they are brethren, but serue the rather, because they be faithful and beloued, vvhich are partakers of the benefite. ANNOTATIONS
CHAP. VI.

4. Languishing.] Euen these be the good disputes of our new Se&-maisters, and the world hath to long proued these inconueniences here named, to be the fruites of such endles altercations in religion as these vnhappie sectes haue brought forth.

Depositum, is the Catholike truth descending from the Apostles by succession of Bishops, euen vnto the end.

20. Depositum.] The vvhole doctrine of our Christianitie being taught by the Apostles, and deliuered to their successors, and comming downe from one Bishop to an other, is called the Depositum, as it were a thing laid into their hands, and committed vnto them to keepe. Vvhich because it passeth from hand to hand, from age to age, from Bishop to Bishop without corruption, change, or alteration, is al one vwith Tradition, and is the truth giuen vnto the holy Bishops to keepe, and not to lay men. See the notable discourse of Vincentius Lirinensis vpon this text. li. cont. profan. her. Nouationes. And it is for this great, old, and knowen treasure committed to the Bishops custodie, that S. Irenzus calleth the Catholike Church Depositarium diuine, the rich treasure of truth. li. 5. c. 4. And as Clemens Alexandrinus vviteth li. 2 Strom. this place maketh so much against al Heretikes vvhich do al change this Depositum, that for it onely such men in his daies denied this Epistle. The Heretikes of our daies challenge also the truth, and say it is the old truth, but they leape 14 or 15 hundreth yerres for it ouer mens heads to the Apostles. But we call for the Depositum, and aske them in vvhose hands that truth vvhich they pretend, was laid vp, and how it came downe to them. for it can not be Apostolical, vnles it were Depositum in some Timothees hand, so to continuev from one Bishop to an other vntil our time and to the end.

The Protestants can shew no such depositum.

20. Profane nouelties.] Non dixit antiquitates (saith Vincentius Lirinensis) non dixit vetustates, sed profanas nouitates. Nam si vitanda est nouitas, tenenda est antiquitas: si profana est nouitas, sacra est vetustas. that is, He said not, ANTIQVITIES: he said not, AVNCIENTNES: but PROFANE NOVELTIES. For if noueltie is to be auoided, antiquitie is to be kept: if noueltie be profane, auuncientnes is holy and sacred. See his vvhole booke against the profane nouelties of heresies.

Profane nouelties of vvordes how to be tried and examined.

Ve may not meazure the newnes or oldnes of wordes and termes of speaking in religion, by holy Scriptures only: as though all those or only those were new and to be reiected, that are not expressely found in holy vvrite: but we must eiteeme them by the agreeablenes or disagreeablenes they haue to the true sense of Scriptures, to the forme of Catholike faith and doctrine, to the phrase of the old Christians, to the Apostolike vse of speache come vnto vs by tradition of all ages and Churches, and to the prescription of holy Councils and Schooles of the Christian World: vvhich haue giuen out (according to the time and questions raised by heretikes and contentious perions) very fit, artificiall, and significant vvordes, to discern and defend the truth by, against falshod.

Catholike termes not expressely in the Scriptures, but in sense, are no such nouelties of vvordes.

These termes, Catholike, Trinitie, Person, Sacrament, Incarnation, Masse, and many moe, are not (in that sense vvherein the Church vsech them) in the Scriptures at all, and diuers of them were spoken by the Apostles before any part of the new Testament was vvvritten, some of them taken vp straight after the Apostles daies in the vvvrittings and preachings of holy Doctores, and in the speech of all faithfull people, and therefore can not be counted Nouelties of vvordes. Others beside these, as, Consubstantial, Deipara, Transubstantiation, and the like, vvhich are neither in expresse termes found in Scriptures, nor yet in sense (if we should follow the iudgement of the speciall sectes against vvhich the said vvordes were first inuented, the Arians crying out against Nicene Council, for the first: the Nestorians against the Ephesine Coucel, for the second: the Lutherans & Calvinists against the Laterã and the later Councils, for the third) these vvordes also notwithstanding, by the iudgement of holy Church and Councils approued to be consonant to Gods vvord, and made authentically among the faithfull, are found and true vvordes, and not of those kinde vvhich the Apostle calleth Nouelties.

Heretical nouelties of vvordes.

The vvordes then here for bidden, are the new profane termes and speeches inuented or specially vsed by heretikes, such as S. Irenee recordeth: the V. flentiniens had a number moit monstruous: as the Manichees had also diuers, as may be seene in S. Augustine: The Arians had their  Similiu substantia,* and Christ to be ex non existentibus: the other heretikes after those daies had their  Christiparam,* and such like, agreeable to their sectes. But the Protestants passe in this kinde, as they exceed moit heretikes in the number of new opinions: as their Seruum arbitrium, their sole faith, their fiduce, their apprehension of Christe in-justice, their impusatiue righteousnes: their horrible termes of terrors, anguities, distresses, distrust, feares and feeling of hell paines in the soule of our Sauour, to expresse their blasphemous fiction of his temporal damnation, vvhich they call his descending to hell: Their markes, tokens, and badges Sacramentall, their Companation, Imoanation, Circumpanation, to auoid the true conuersion in the Eucharist: their presence in figure, in faith, signe, spiris, pledge, shew.

The Protestants profane nouelties of vvordes.

effect, to auoid the reall presence of Christes body. These and such like innumerable vvhich they occupie in euery part of their false doctrine, are in the sense that they vse them, all false, captious and deceitfull vvordes, and are nouitates vocum here forbidden.

And though some of the said termes haue been by some occasion obiter vvithout il meaning spokē by Catholikes before these Heretikes arose, yet now knowing the to be the prope speeches of Heretikes, Christiā men are bound to auoid them. Wherein the Church of God hath euer been as diligent to resist Nouelties of vvordes, as her Aduerfaries are busy to inuent them. for vvich cause she vvil not haue vs communicate vvith them, nor folow their fashion and phraze nevvly inuented, though in the nature of the vvordes sometime there be no harme. In S. Augustines daies vvhen Christiā men had any good befallē them, or entered into any mans house, or met any frind by the vvay, they vsed alvvayes to say, Deo gratias. The Donatistes and Circumcellions of that time being nevvfangled, forsooke the old phraze and vvould alvvayes say, Lauo Deo: from vvich the Catholike men did so abhorre (as the said Doctor vvriteth) that they had as leese mette a theefe as one that said to them, Lauo Deo, in steede of Deo gratias. As novv vve Catholikes must not say, The Lord, but, Our Lord: as vve say, Our Lady, for his mother, not, The Lady. Let vs keepe our forefathers vvordes, and vve shal easily keepe our old and true faith that vve had of the first Christians. Let them say, Amendement, abstinence, the Lordes Supper, the Communion table, Elders, Ministers, Superintendent, Congregation, so be it, praise ye the Lord, Morning-Praier, Evening-praier, and the rest, as they vvill: Let vs auoid those Nouelties of vvordes, according to the Apostles prescript, and keepe the old termes, Penance, Fasting, Priest, Church, Bishop, Masse, Mattins, Euen-song, the B. Sacrament, Altar, Oblation, Host, Sacrifice, Alleluia, Amen, Lent, Palme-Sunday, Christmas, & the very vvordes vvil bring vs to the faith of our first Apostles, and condemne theie nevv apostatacs nevv faith and phraze.

Catholikes must abhorre from heretical phraze and vvordes.

in Ps. 132.

so. Falsely called knowledge.] It is the propertie of al Heretikes to arrogate to them selues great knowledge, and to condemne the simplicitie of their fathers the holy Doctors and the Church. but the Apostle calleth their pretended skill, a knowledge falsely so called, being in truth high and deepe blindness. Such (saith S. Irenæus li. 5 c. 17.) as forsake the preaching of the Church, argue the holy Priests of vnskillfulness, not considering how far more vvorth a religious idiote is, then a blasphemous and impudent sophister, such as al Heretikes be. And againe Vincentius Lirinensis speaking in the person of Heretikes saith, Come o ye falsish and miserable men, that are commonly called Catholikes, and learne the true faith vvich hath been hid many ages heresofore, but is reuealed and shewred of late. &c. See his whole booke concerning these matters.

Heretikes arrogate knowledge falsely so called.

THE ARGUMENT OF THE SECOND EPISTLE OF S. PAUL

TO TIMOTHEE.

HE cheefe scope of this second to Timothee, is, to open vnto him that his martyrdom is at hand. Vvich yet he doth not plainly before the end: preparing first his minde vvith much circumstance, because he knew it vvould grieue him sore, and also might be a temptation vnto him. Therefore he talketh of the cause of his trouble, & of the revvard: that the one is honorable, and the other most glorious: and exhorteth him to be constant in the faith, to be ready alvvayes to suffer for it, to fulfil his ministerie to the end, as him self novv had done his.

Vvhereby it is certaine, that it vvvas vvritten at Rome, in his last apprehension and emprisonment there: as he signifieth by these vvordes Cap. 1: Onesiphorus vvvas not ashamed of my chaine, but when he was come to Rome, carefully sought me, &c. And of his martyrdom, thus: For I am novv ready to be offered, and the time of my resolution (or death) is at hand. cap. 4.

ANNOTATIONS
 CHAP. I.

† In thy grandmother.] Though God shew mercie to many that be of incredulous, heretical or il parents, yet it is a goodly benediction of God to haue good education and to haue good faithful progenitors and Catholike parents. And it is a great sinne to forsake the faith of our fathers that be Catholikes, or contrarie to our education in the Church to folovv strange doctrines, abandoning not onely our next natural parents faith, but the aūcient faith and beleefe of al our proge-nitors for many hundred yeres together. And if to folovv the faith of mother and grandmother onely, the Christian religion being then but nevvly planted, vvvas so commendable euen in a Bishop, hovv much more is it novv laudable to cleave fast to the faith of so many our progenitors and ages that continued in the same Christian religion vvhich they first received?
 A great blessing, to haue Catho-like progenitors: and very cōmendable to cleave fast to their faith.

 Vvhich is a demonstration that their faith is not true, and that it is impossible our Catholike faith to be false, supposing the Christian religion to be true.

4 No man being a souldiar.] First of al, the Apostle (1 Cor. 7.) maketh marriage & the needful cares, sollicitude, and distractions therevpon euer depending, special impediments of al such as should employ them selues vvholly to Gods seruice, as Bishops & Priests are bound to do. He that is vvith a vvife (saith he) is careful for the vvorld, howv to please his vvife, and is distracted or deuided. 1 Cor. 7.

Secondly, the practise of Physicke, merchandise, or any other profane facultie and trade of life to gather riches, and much more to be giuen to hunting, hauking, gamening, sheeves, enterludes, or the like pastimes, is here forbidden.

Thirdly, the seruices of Princes and manifold base offices done to them for to obtaine dignities and promotions, are disagreeable to Priestly functions, not so, to be their chaplens for this purpose to preach vnto them, to heare their confessions, to minister the Sacraments vnto them, to say Diuine seruice before them, and such other spiritual dueties. for, al such seruices done to principal persons both of the Clergie and Laitie, be godly and cōsonant to Priestly vocation. And S. Augustine, S. Ambrose, S. Bernard, and other holy Bisshops of old vvere much occupied therein, as vve see in S. Augustines booke de opere Monachorum c. 29. & Posid. in vit. c. 19.

Catholikes only, right hādlers of the Scripture.

15. Rightly.] The Scriptures or chalenge of the vvord of God is common to Catholikes and Heretikes, but al is in the handling of them. these later handle them guilefully, adultering the vvord of God, as * els vvhere the Apostle speaketh: the other sincerely after the maner of the Apostles and doctōrs of Gods Church. Vvhich the Greeke expresseth by a significant vvord of cutting a thing straight by a line, ὀρθοῦς νοῦν.

Heretical boo-

17. Their speache.] The speaches, preachings, and vvritings of Heretikes be pestiferous, contagious, and creeping like a canker. therefore Christian men must neuer heare their sermons nor read their bookes. For such men haue a popular vvay of taik vvhereby the vnlearned, and specially vvomen loden vvith sinne, are easily beguiled. Nothing is so easy (saith S. Hierom) as vvith voluble and rolling tong to deceiue the rude people, vvhich admire vvhatsoeuer they vnderstand not. Ep. 2. ad Nepot. c. 10.

Who are out of the Church or vvithin it.

20. In a great house.] He meaneth not that Hymenezus and Philētus (of vvho he spake immediately before) or other heretikes, be properly vvithin the Church, as catholike men are, though greuous sinners: but that euil men vvho for the punishment of their sinnes become heretikes, vvere before they fell from their faith as vessels of contumelie, vvithin the Church. Yea and often also after they be seuered in hart and in the sight of God, so long as they stand in external profession and vse of the same Sacraments, and in the outward fellowship of Catholikes, not yet either separated of them selues, nor cast out by the gouernours of the Church, so long (we say) they be after a sort in the Church: though properly and in deede they be out of the compasse of Gods house. Many of those that are openly seuered in Sacraments, Seruice, and communion, there is no question but they are out of the Church.

Free vvil.

21. Cleanse him self.] Man then hath free vvil to make him self a vessell of saluation or damnation: though saluation be attributed to Gods mercie principally, the other to his iust iudgement: neither of both being repugnant to our free vvil, but vvorking vvith and by the same, al such effectes in vs as to his prouidence and our deserts be agreable.

CHAP. III.

*He prophesieth of Heretikes to come, 6 and noteth certaine then also for such, bidding him to auoid them, 10 and (vvhat so euer persecution befall for us) to continue

CHAP. III.

2. Mens shal be.] Al these wordes S. Cyprian expoundeth of such as by pride and disobedience resist Gods priests. Let no faithful man, faith he, that keepeth in minde our Lordes and the Apostles admonition, marvel if he see in the later times some proud and stubburne fellows and the enemies of Gods priests, goe out of the Church or impugne the same: vvhhen both our Lord and the Apostle foretold vs that such should be. Cypr. ep. 55. nu. 3.

6. Women loden.] Women loden with sinnes, are for such their deseruings, and through the frailtie of their sexe, more subiect to the heretikes deceives, then men: the enemy attempting (as he did in the fall of our first parents) by them to ouerthrow men. See 2. Hieron. vpon the 3 chapter of Ieremie. Where he addeth that euery heretic is first broched propter guiam & ventrem, for gluttonie and belly-cheere.

9. Folly manifest.] Al heretikes in the beginning seeme to haue some shew of truth, God for iust punishment of mens sinnes permitting them for some vvhile in some persons and places to preuaile: but in short time God detecteth them, and openeth the eyes of men to see their deceives: in so much that after the first brunt they be maintained by force onely, as wise men in maner seeing their fallhood, though for troubling the state of such common weales vvhere vnuckeily they haue been receiued, they can not be so suddenly extirped.

12. Al that vvil liue.] Al holy men suffer one kinde of persecutiō or other, being greued and molested by the vvicked, one way or another: but not al that suffer persecution, be holy, as at malefactors. The Church and Caesars Princes persecute heretikes, and be persecuted of them againe, as S. Augustine often declareth. See ep. 48.

13. Pruiſer.] Though heretikes and the authors of them be after a vvhile discovered & by time and tide forsaken generally of the honest, discrete, and men careful of their owne saluation saluation, yet their authors and other great sinners proceede from one errour and heresie to an other, and finally to plaine Atheisme and al Diuelish disorder.

The great profit of reading the Scriptures. 16. Al Scripture.] Besides the Apostles teaching and tradition, the reading of holy Scriptures is a great defense and helpe of the faithful, and specially of a Bis hop, not onely to auoid and condemne al heresies, but to the guiding of a man in al iustice, good life and vvorkes. Vvwhich commendation is not here giuen to the bookes of the new Testament onely (vvhereof he here speaketh not, as being yet for a great part not vvritten) but to the Scripture of the old Testament also, yea and to euery booke of it. For there is not one of them, nor any part of them, but it is profitable to the end aforesaid, if it be read and vnderstood according to the same Spirit vvherevvith it vvas vvritten.

The Heretikes folish argumēt: Al Scripture is profitable, ergo only Scripture is necessarie & sufficient.

The Heretikes vpon this commendation of holy Scriptures, pretend (very simply in good sooth) that therefore nothing is necessarie to iustice and saluation but Scriptures. As though euery thing that is profitable or necessarie to any effect, excluded al other helpe, and vvere onely ynough to attaine the same. By vvwhich reason a man might as vvell proue that the old Testament vvere ynough, and so exclude the new: or any one peece of al the old, and thereby exclude the rest. For he affirmeth euery Scripture to haue the foresaid vtilities. and they might see in the very next line before, that he requireth his constant perseuerance in the doctrine vvwhich he had taught him ouer and about that he had learned out of the Scriptures of the old Testament, vvwhich he had read from his infancie, but could not thereby learne al the mysteries of Christian religion therein. Neither doth the Apostle affirme here that he had his knowledge of Scriptures, by reading onely, vvithout helpe of maisters and teachers, as the Aduertaries herevpon (to committe the holy Scriptures to euery mans presumption) do gather: but affirmeth onely that Timothee knewv the Scriptures and therefore had studied them by hearing good readers and teachers, as S. Paul him self did of Gamaliel and the like, and as al christian students doe, that be trained vp from their youth in Catholike vniuersities in the studie of Diuinitie.

And vvhhen you heare or read any thing in the Scriptures, that may seeme to derogate from mans vvorkes in this case, it is alwaies meant of vvorkes considered in their ovvne nature and valure, not implying the grace of Christ, by vvvhich grace it cometh, & not of the vvorke in it felt that vve haue a right to heauen & deterue it vvorthily: vvvhich the Apostle in the 6 to the Hebrues more then inlinuateth, saying these vvordes, God is not vnjust. to forget your vvorke & loue vvvhich you haue shewed in his name &c. As though he vvould say, that he vvere vnjust if he did forget to recompente their vvorkes. * The parable also of the men sent into the vineyard, proueth that heauen Mat. 20. is our ovvne right, bargained for and vvrought for, and accordingly paid vnto vs as our hire at the day of iudgement, for that is merces and μισθός vvhereby the Scripture so often calleth it. It is the goale, the marke, the price, the hire, of all striuing, running, labouring, due both by promis and by couenant and right dette. See a notable place in S. Augutline in Psal. 83 in fine: and 100 in initio. & ho. 14 c. 2. in 50 hom: S. Cyprian also, and namely the later end of his booke de opere & elemosina: and thou shalt easily contenne the contrafie fals-hod, vvvhich doth not so much derogate from mans vvorkes, as from Gods grace vvvhich is the cause and ground of al vvorthines in mans merites. S. Augutlines vvordes be these, Marke that he to vvvhom our Lord gaue grace, hath our Lord also his dette. He found him a giuer, in the time of mercie: he hath him his dette in the time of iudgement. See the place and the rest here coted, vvwhere he examineth and explicateth the matter at large.

To such good vvorkes heauē is due: to say the contrarie, is to derogate from Gods grace.

THE ARGUMENT OF THE EPISTLE OF S. PAUL TO TITVS.

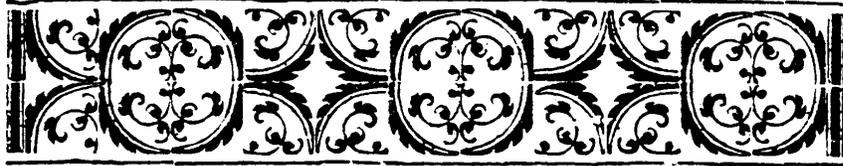

H AT Titus vvvas a Gentil, and not a Iew, and that he vvvas in S. Pauls traine, at the least the 14 yere after his conuersion, if not before, vve vnderstand by the Epistle to the Galatians c. 2. And that he continued vvwith him to the very end, appeareth in the second to Timothee c. 4. Vvwhere he maketh mention that he sent him from Rome into Dalmatia, vvwhen him self vvvas shortly after to be put to death.

And therefore although S. Luke neuer name him in the Actes, as neither him self, yet no doubt he comprehendeth him commonly, vvwhen he speaketh thus in the first person plurall: Forthvvwith vve sought to goe into Maccdonia. Act. 16. For S. Paul also sent him to Corinth, betvvvene the vvriting of his 1 & 2 to the Corinthians (vvvhich time concurrerth vvwith Act. 19) by occasion vvwhereof he maketh much and honorable mention of him in the said second Epistle c. 2. & c. 7. and againe * he sent him vvwith the same Epistle: both times about great matters: so that no doubt he vvvas euen then also a Bis-hop, and receiued accordingly of the Corinthians. vvwith feare and trembling. 2. Cor. 7, v. 15. But the same is plainer in this Epistle to him self c. 1. v. 5. Vvwhere the Apostle saith: for this cause I left thee at Crete, &c. By vvvhich vvordes it is manifest also, that this Epistle vvvas not vvritten during the storie of the Actes (seing that no mention is there of S. Pauls being in the ile of Crete) but after his dismission at Rome out of his first trouble, and before his second or last trouble there, as is euident by these vvordes: Vvwhen I shall send to thee Artemas or Tychicus, make halt to come to me to Nicopoliis, for there I haue determined to vvwinter. Tit. 3.

Therefore he intruiceth him (and in him, all Bis-hops) much like as he doth Timothee, vvwhat qualities he must require in them that he shall make priests and Bis-hops, in vvwhat sort to preach, and to reach al sortes of men, to commend good vvorkes vnto them: finally, him self to be their example in all goodnes.

And that the ordering of Priests or imposition of hands to that purpose, belongeth onely to Bishops, and to no inferior Priests or other persons, it is plaine by the Apostolike practise set downe in the Scriptures, namely in the Actes, and in the Epistles to Timothee and Titus. Ignatius ep. 6 ad Philadelph.* faith of the said Iohn, and of Timothee, Titus, Euodius, Clement, that they liued and died in chastitie, reckening vp of the old Testament diuers notable personages that did the same, as Elias, Iesus Naue (otherwise called Iosue) Melchisedec, Elifzus, Hieremie, Iohn Baptist. No man is ignorant that al the notable fathers of the Greeke and Latin Church liued chaste: Athanasius, Basil, Nazianzene, Chryostom, Cyprian, Hilarie (vvhō entered into holy Orders after his viues death) Ambrose, Hierom, Augustine, Leo, Gregorie the great. Certaine other notable fathers had once viues, but no holy men euer vied them, much lesse married, after they vvere in holy Orders. A maruelous thing, that so many heretofore should haue the gift of chastitie then, and now so few, if the Protestants say true, that I karte one among them in our age of al their sectes, euen of their principal Superintendents, hath had it.

Only the Protestants complain that they haue not the gift of chastitie.

ANNOTATIONS
CHAP. III.

10. A man that is an Heretike.] Not euery one that erreth in religion, is an Heretike, but he onely that after the Churches determination, vvilfully and stubburnely standeth in his false opinion, not yielding to decree of Council or the cheefe Pastors of the Church therein. They (saith S. Augustine ep. 162.) that defend their sentence though false and peruerse vvith no stubburne stomake or obstinate hart, specially if it be such as them selues by bold presumption broched not, but received it of their deceived parents, and do seeke the truth vvaryly and carefully, being ready to be reformed if they finde it, such are not to be reputed among Heretikes. And againe, li. 18 de Ciuit. c. 51. They that in the Church of Christ haue any crazed or peruerse opinion, if being admonished to be of a sound and right opinion, they resist obstinately, and vvill not amend their pestiferous opinions, but persist in defense of them, are thereby become Heretikes, and going forth out of the Church, are counted for enemies that exercise 74. Againe li. 4 de Bapt. cont. Donat. c. 16. He is an Heretike that, vvhen the doctrine of the Catholike faith is made plaine and manifest vnto him, had rather resist it, and chooie that vvhich him self held &c. And in diuers places he declareth that S. Cyprian, though he held an error, yet vvvas no Heretike, because he vvould not haue defended it after a general Council had declared it to be an error. li. 2 de bapt. c. 4. So Possidonius in the life of S. Augustine reporteth, howv, after the determination of the See Apostolike that Pelagius opinion vvvas heretical, almen esteemed Pelagius an Heretike, and the Emperour made lawes against him as against an Heretike. Againe S. Augustine saith, He is an Heretike in my opinion, that for some temporal commoditie, and specially for his glorie and principallitie, coineth or els foloweth false or newv opinions. de vtilit. credendi cap. 1.

vho is properly an Heretike, & vho is not.

Descriptions or markes howv to knowv an Heretike.

Let our Protestants behold them selues in this glasse, and vvithal let them marke al other preties that old Heretikes euer had, and they shal finde al definitions and markes of an Heretike to fall vpon them selues. And therefore they must not maruel if vve vvarne al Catholike men by the vvordes of the Apostle in this place, to take heede of them, and to thinne their preachings, bookes, conuenticles and companies. Neither neede the people be curious to knowv vvhat they say, much lesse to confute them: but they must trust Gods Church, vvhich doth refute and condemn them. And it is ynough for them to knowv that they be condemned, as S. Augustine teacheth in the later end of his booke de hereticibus. And S. Cyprian saith notably to Antonianus demanding curiously vvhat heresies Nouatianus did teach: No master, & he, Vvhat heresies he hath or teacheth, vvhen he teacheth vvithout. that is to say, out of the Church.

The former markes agree to the Protestants.

Their bookes, seruice, & preaching must be auoided.

11. Subuerted.] Heretikes be often incorrigible, yet the Church of God ceaseth not by al meanes possible to reuoke them. therefore S. Augustine saith ep. 162. The Heretike him self though vvelling vvish odious and detestable pride, and made vvith the frouardnes of vvicked contention, as vve admonish that he be auoided lest he deceiue the vvweaklings and litle ones, so vve refuse not by al meanes possible to seeke his amendment and reformation.

The Church seeke the amendment of the most obstinate Heretikes.

11. By his ovvne iudgement.] Other greuous offenders be separate by excommunication from the communion of Saints and the fellowvship of Gods Church, by the sentence of their Superiors in the same Church: but Heretikes more miserable and infortunate then they, runne out of the Church of their ovvne accord, and so giue sentence against their ovvne soules to damnation.

Heretikes cut them selues frō the Church.

THE ARGVMENT OF THE EPISTLE OF S. PAVL TO THE HEBREVVES.

HAT the Hebrevvcs vvcre not all the Ievves, but only a part of them, it is manifest Act. 6: vvhere the primitive Church of Hierusalem, although it consisted of Ievves only, as vve reade Act. 2. yet is said to consist of two sortes, Greekes & Hebrues. Vvchich againe is manifest Phil. 3. vvhere S. Paul coparing him self vvith the Iudaical false-Apostles, saith, that he also is, an Hebruc of Hebrucs. Finally, they seeme to haue been those Ievves vvchich vvcre borne in Iurie, vvchich for the most part dwelled also there. Therefore to the Christian Ievves in Hierusalem and in the rest of Iurie, S. Paul vvriteth this Epistle, out of Italic: saying therevpon, The brethre of Italic salute you. Heb. 13. By vvchich vvordes, & by these orber in the same place, Knowv ye our brother Timothee to be dimissed, vvith vvhom (if he come the sooner) I vvil see you, it is euident, that he vvrote this, not only after he vvvas brought prisoner to Rome, vvherein S. Luke endeth the Actes of the Apostles: but also after he vvvas set at libertie there againe.

Many causes are given of the Doctors, vvhy vvriting to the Ievves, he doth not put his name in the beginning, Paul an Apostle & c. as he doth lightly in his Epistles to the Churches and Bishops of the Gentils. The most likely cause is, for that he was the preacher and Apostle and Maister of the Gentils. And againe in an other place he saith, that him self was appointed the Apostle of the Gentils, as Peter of the Iewes. Gal. 2. Only S. Peter therefore writing to the Iewes, doth use this stile: Peter an Apostle of I E S V S Christ & c. because he was more peculiarly their Apostle, as being the vicar of Christ, who was also him self * more specially the minister of the Circumcision, that is (as him self speaketh) not sent but to the sheepe which were lost of the house of Israel. Mat. 15.

* Yet was Christ head of the Gentils also. So likewise his vicar S. Peter, notwithstanding his more peculiar Apostleship over the Iewes.

The Argument of the Epistle S. Paul him self doth tell vs in two wordes, calling it verbum solatij, the word of solace and comfort. Which also is plaine in the whole course of the Epistle, namely in the tenth chapter. v. 32. & c. Where he exhorteth them to take great comfort and confidence in their manifold tribulations sustained of their owne countrie men the Iewes, whereof the Apostle also maketh mention to the Thessalonians. 1. Theff. 2. v. 14. Those persecutions then of the obstinate incredulous Iewes their countrie men, was one great temptation vnto them. An other temptation was, the persuasions that they brought vnto them out of Scriptures, to cleave vnto the Law, and not to beleue in I E S V S the dead man.

And where as the Iewes did magnifie their Law, by the Prophetes, and by the Angels by whom it was giuen, and by Moyses, and by their land of promise, into which Iosue brought them, and by their father Abraham, and by their Aaronicall or Leuiticall priesthod and sacrifices by their Tabernacle, & by their Testament: he sheweth, that our Lord IESVS, as being the natural sonne of God, passeth incomparably the Prophetes, the Angels, and Moyses: that the Rest or quietnes which God promised, was not in their earthly land, but in heauen: that his figure Melchisedec far passed Abraham: and that his priesthod, Sacrifice, Tabernacle, and testament, far passed theirs. In all which he sheweth often at these three markes: to take away the scandal of Christes death, by giuing them sundrie good reasons & testimonies of it: to erect their mindes from visible and earthly promises (to which only, the Iewes were wholly bent) to inuisible and heavenly: and to insinuate that the Ceremonies should now cease, the time of their correction by Christ being now come.

The Epistle may be denided into these partes: the first, Of Christes excellencie aboute the Prophetes, Angels, Moyses, and Iosue: c. 1. 2. 3. 4. The second, of his priesthod and excellencie thereof aboute the priesthod of the old Testament: c. 5. vnto the middest of the 10. The last part is of exhortation c. 10. v. 9. to the end of the Epistle.

3. The figure.] To be the figure of his substance, signifieth nothing els but that vvhich S. Paul speaketh in other vvordes to the Philippians c. 2. v. 6. that he is the forme and moit expresse resemblance of his fathers substance. So S. Ambrose and others expound it, and the Greeke vvord μορφὴ κατανόησις Character is very significant to that purpose. Note also by this place, that the Sonne, though he be a figure of his Fathers substance, is notwithstanding of the same substance. So Christes body in the Sacrament and his mystical death and sacrifice in the same, though called a figure, image, or representation of Christes visible body and sacrifice vpon the Crosse, yet may be and is the self same in substance.

6. Let al the Angels adore.] The Heretikes marvel that vve adore Christ in the B. Sacrament, vvhhen they might learne by this place, that vvhersoeuer his person is, there it ought to be adored both of men and Angels. And vvhether they say it vvas not made preicar in the Sacrament nor instituted to be adored, vve answer that no more vvas he incarnate purposely to be adored: but yet straight vpon his descending from heauen, it vvas the duty both of Angels and al other creatures to adore him.

CHAP. II.

He inferreth of the foresaid, that it shal be incomparably more damnable for them to neglect the new Testament then the old, 3 considering the irrefragable authoritie of the Apostles also. 5 Then he prosecueth the excellencie of Christ aboue the Angels, 9 vvhoneuertheles, vvas made lesse then Angels, to suffer and die for men, to destroy the dominion of the Diuel, 15 to deliuar men from feare of death. 17 and to be a fitte Priest for men.

By example of Christ (vwho is incomparably more excellent then Moyses also) he exhorteth them to be faithful vnto God. 7 Their reeward shal be, to enter into euerlasting rest, if they perseuere, as contrariewise to be excluded (as vvas shadoWed in their forefathers in the wildernes) if they sinne and become incredulous.

The excellencie of Christ about Moyses.

WHEREFORE holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly vocation, consider the Apostle, & high priest of our confession I E S U S: † vwho is faithful to him that made him, as also * Moyses in al his house. † For, this man is esteemed vworthie of more ample glorie about Moyses, by so much as more ample glorie then the house, hath he that framed it. † For euery house is framed of some man. but he that created al things, is God. † And Moyses in deede vvas faithful in al his house as a seruant, for a testimonie of those things vvhich vvere to be said: † but Christ as the Sonne in his ovvne house: which house are vve, if vve keepe firme the confidence and glorie of hope vnto the end.

† Vvherefore, as the holy Ghost saith, To day if you shal heare 7 his voice, † harden not your hartes as in the exacerbation according to the day of tentation in the desert, † vvhich your fathers tempted me: proued & saw my workes † fourtie yeres. For the vvhich cause I vvas offended vwith this generation, and said, They doe alwaies erre in hart. And they haue not knowen my vvaies. † to vvhom I svvare in my vvrath, if they shal enter into my rest.

† Bevvare brethren, lest perhaps there be in some of you an euil hart of incredulitie, to depart from the liuing God. † but exhort your selues euery day, vvhiles to day is named, that none of you be obdurate vwith the fallacie of sinne, † For vve be made partakers of Christ: yet so if vve keepe the beginning of his substance firme vnto the end. † Vvwhile it is said, To day if you shal heare his voice, do not obdurate your hartes as in that exacerbation. † For some hearing did exasperate: but not al they that vvent out of Ægypt by Moyses. † And vwith vvhom vvas he offended fourtie yeres? vvas it not with them that sinned, * vvhose carcasses vvere ouerthrowen in the desert? † And to vvhom did he svvare that they should not enter into his rest: but to them that were incredulous? † And vve see that they could not enter in, because of incredulitie.

∴ Faith is the groundworke of our creatiō in Christ, which if we hold not fast, al the building is lost.

CHAP. III.

That they must feare to be excluded out of the foresaid rest (vvhich he prometh out of the psalme) 12 considering that Christ seeth their most inward secretes. 14 And that he (as their Priest vwho also him self suffered) is adie and ready to strengthen them in confession of their faith.

1 LET vs feare therefore lest perhaps forsaking the promis of entring into his rest, some of
 2 you be thought to be vwanting. † For to vs also it hath been denounced, as also to them,
 3 but the vvord of hearing did not profit them, not mixt vvith faith of those things vvich
 4 they heard. † For vve that haue belecued, shal enter into the rest: as he said, As I sware in my vvraith, if they shal enter into my rest:
 5 and truely the vvorkes from the foundation of the vvorld being perfited. † For he said in a certaine place of the se-
 6 uenth day, thus: And God rested the seuenth day from al his vvorkes. † And againe in this, If they shal enter into my rest. † Because then it remaineth that certaine enter into it, and they to vvhom first it
 7 vvas preached, did not enter because of incredulitie: † againe he limiteth a certaine day: To day, in Dauid saying, after so long
 8 time, as is aboue said, To day if you shal heare his voice: doe not obdurate your hartes. † For if ^c Iesus had giuen them rest: he vvould
 9 neuer speake of an other day aftervvard. † Therefore there is left a sabbatisme for the people of God. † For he that is 10 entred into his rest, the same also hath rested frō his vvorkes, as God from his.
 11 † Let vs hasten therefore to enter into that rest: that no
 12 man fal into the same example of incredulitie. † For :: the vvord of God is liuely and forcible, and more persing then any vvwo edged svvord: and reaching vvnto the diuision of the soule and the spirit, of the ioyntes also and the marowes, and a discerner of the cogitations and intentes of the hart.
 13 † And there is no creature inuisible in his sight, but al things are naked and open to his eyes, to vvhom our speache is.
 14 † Hauing therefore a great high Priest that hath entred the heauens, I E s vs the sonne of God, let vs hold the confession.
 15 † For vve haue not a high priest that can not haue compassion on our infirmities: but tempted in al things by similitude, except sinne. † "Let vs goe therefore vvith confidence to the throne of grace: that vve may obtaine mercie, and finde grace in seasonable aide.

monished to come to him with confidence as to a most merciful Mediator and Bishop. But by that argument they may as well take away the helps and prayers of the living one for an other. And we do not require the help either of the Saints in heaven, or of our brethren in earth, for any mistrust of Gods mercie, but for our owne unvorthines: being assured that the prayer of a iust man availeth more with him, then the desire of a greuous sinner: and of a number making intercession together, rather then of a man alone. which the Heretikes can not deny except they reprove the plaine Scriptures. Neither do we come lesse to him, or with lesse confidence, when we come accompanied with the prayers of Angels, Saints, Priests, or iust men ioyning with vs, as they fondly imagine and pretend: but with much more assistance in his grace, mercie, and merites, then if we prayed our selues alone.

ANNOTATIONS
CHAP. V.

1. Every high Priest. By the description of a Priest or high Priest (for to this purpose al is one matter) he proueth Christ to be one in most excellent sort. First then, a Priest must not be an Angel, or of any other nature but mans. Secondly, euery man is not a Priest, but such an one as is specially chosen out of the rest, and preferred before other of the community, seuered, assumed, and exalted into a higher state and dignitie then the vulgar. Thirdly, the cause and purpose vvhy he is so sequestred and piked out from the residue, is to take charge of Diuine things, to deale as a mediator betvvixt God and the people, to be the Deputie of men in such things as they haue to craue or to receiue of God, and to present or giue to him againe. Fourthly, the most proper and principal part of a Priests office is, to offer oblations, giues, and sacrifices to God for the sinnes of the people: vvithout vvhich kind of most soueraine dueties, no person, people, or Commonvvwealth can appertaine to God: and vvhich can be done by none, of vvhat other dignitie or calling soeuer he be in the vvorld, that is not a Priest: diuers Princes (as vve read in the Scriptures) punished by God, and king Saul deposed from his kingdom, specially for attempting the same.

The description of a Priest, and his office.

3 Reg. 13.
2 Par. 26.
1 Reg. 13.

And generally vve may learne here, that in vs qua sunt ad Deum, in all matters touching God, his seruice, and religion, the Priest hath onely charge and authority: as the Prince temporal is the peoples gouernour, guider, and soueraine, in the things touching their vvorldly affaires: Vvch must for al that by him be directed and manneged no othevvise, but as is agreeable to the due vvorship and seruice of God, against vvhich if the terrene Poyvers commit any thing, the Priests ought to admonish them from God.

The Princes temporal authority how far it extendeth.

Vve learne also hereby, that euery one is not a Priest, and that the people must alvvaiues haue certaine persons chosen out from among them, to deale in their sutes and causes vvith God, to pray, to minister Sacraments, and to sacrifice for them. And vvhereas the Protestants vvill haue no Priest, Priesthood, nor sacrifice, but Christ and his death, pretending these vvordes of the Apostle to be verified onely in the Priesthood and Seruice of the old law, and Christs person alone, and after him of no moe: therein they shew them selues to be ignorant of the Scriptures, and of the state of the new Testamēt, and induce a plaine Atheisme and Godleinesse into the vvorld. for, so long as man hath to doe vvith God, there must needes be some deputed, and chosen out from among the rest, to deale according to this declaration of the Apostle, in things pertaining to God, and those must be Priests. for els, if men neede to deale no more, but immediatly vvith Christ, vvhat doe they vvith their Ministers? Vvhy let they not euery man pray, and minister for him self, and to him self: Vvhat doe they vvith Sacraments, seeing Christs death is as vvell sufficient vvithout them, as vvithout sacrifice? Vvny standeth not his death as vvell vvith Sacrifice, as vvith Sacraments: as vvell vvith Priesthood, as vvith other Ecclesiastical function? There is no other cause in the vvorld, but that (Sacrifice being the most principal act of religion that man ovveth to God, both by his Law, and by the law of nature) the Diuel by these his ministers, vnder pretence of deterring or attributing the more to Christs death, vvould abolish it.

There is a peculiar order & calling of Priests of the new Testamēt.

Priests and sacrifice necessarie in the new Testamēt, & nothing derogatorie to Christs priesthood or sacrifice.

This definition of a Priest and his function, vvith al the properties thereto belonging, holdeth not onely in the law of Moyses, and order of Aarons Priesthood, but it was true before, in the law of nature, in the Patriarches, in Melchisedec, and now in Christ, and all his Apostles, and Priests of the new Testamēt: sauing that it is a peculiar excellencie in Christ, that he onely offered for other mens sinnes, and not at all for his ovvne, as all other doe.

The difference and excellencie of Christs Priesthood.

4. Take not to him self. A special prouiso for all Priests, preachers, and such as haue to deale for the people in things pertaining to God, that they take not that honour or office at their ovvne hands, but by lawfull calling and consecration, euen as Aaron did. By vvhich claue if you examine Luther, Calvin, Beza, and the like, or if al such as now a daies intrude them selues into sacred functions, looke into their consciences, great and foul matter of damnation vvill appeare.

All true priests and preachers must be lawfully called thereto.

5. Did not glorifie him self. The dignitie of Priesthood must needes be passing high and soueraine, vvhen it was a promotion and preferment in the sonne of God him self according to his manhood, and vvhen he vvould not vvurpe, nor take vpon him the same, vvithout his fathers ex-

Chriſt both Prielt & king: but his Prielt-hod more excellent of the two.

Chriſt a Prielt as he is man, not as he is God.

6. A Prielt for euer.] In the 109 Pſalme, from vvaunce this teſtimonie is taken, both Chriſtes kingdom and Prielt-hod are ſet fourth. but the Apoſtle vrgeth ſpecially his Prielt-hod, as the more excellent and pre eminent ſtate in him, our Redemption being vvrought & atchieued by ſacrifice, vvwhich vvas an act of his Prielt-hod, and not of his kingly povver. though he vvas properly a king alſo, as Melchizedec vvas both Prielt, and king, being a reſemblance of Chriſt in both, but much more in his Prielt-hod. And our Lord had this excellent double dignitie (as appeareth by the diſcourſe of S. Paul, and his allegations here out of the Pſalmes) at the very firſt moment of his conception or incarnation. for you muſt bevare of the vvicked heretic of the Arians and Caluinifts (except in theſe later it be rather an error proceeding of ignorance) that ſticke not to ſay, that Chriſt vvas a Prielt, or did ſacrifice, according to his Godhead. Vvwhich is to make Chriſt, God the fathers Prielt, and not his ſonne, and to doe ſacrifice and homage to him as his Lord, and not as his equal in dignity and nature. Therefore S. Auguſtine ſaith in Pſal. 109. That as he vvas man, he vvas Prielt: as God, he vvas not Prielt. And Theodoret in Pſal 109. As man, he did offer ſacrifice: but as God, he did receive ſacrifice. And againe, Chriſt touching his humanity vvas called a Prielt, and he offered no other hoſt but his owne body. &c. Dialog. 1 circa med. Some of our nev Maitters not knowing ſo much, did let fall out of their penes the contrarie, and being admoniſhed of the error, and that it vvas very Arianiſme, yet they perſiſt in it or mere ignorance in the groundes of Diuinitie.

7. Wish a ſtrong criſe.] Though our Sauour make interceſſion for vs, according to his humane nature, continually in heauen alſo: yet he doth not in any external creatures make ſacrifice, nor vie the praiers ſacrificall, by vvwhich our redemption vvas atchieued, as he did in the time of his mortal life, and in the act of his Paſſion, and moſt principally, vvhen vvith a loud voice, and vvith this praier, In manu ſuas commendo ſpiritum meum, he voluntarily depoled his ſoul, yelding it in moſt proper ſort for a ſacrifice. for in that laſt point of his death, conſiſteth ſpecially his high Prieltly office, and the very vvorke and conſummation of our redemption.

Prieſts praiers more effectual.

Obſerue more ouer, that though commonly euery faithful perſon pray both for him ſelf and others, and offer his praiers to God, yet none offereth by office, and ſpecial deputation, and appointment, in the perſon of the vvhole Church and people, ſaving the Prielt. Vvhoſe praiers therefore be more effectual in them ſelues, for that they be the voice of all faithful men together, made by him that is appointed and receiued of God for the peoples legare. And of this kind vvere all Chriſtes praiers, in all his life and death, as all his other actions vvere: his faſting, vvatching, preaching, inſtituting, miniſtring, or receiuing Sacraments: euery one being done as Prieltly actions.

Notorious Heretical traſtatiō to mainteine Caluins horrible blaſphemie.

7. For his reuerence.] Theſe vvordes haue our Engliſh Translators perniciously and moſt preſumptuouſly corrupted, turning them thus, In ſtat vvwhich he feared, contrarie to the verſion and ſenſe of al antiquity, and to Eraimus alſo, and contrarie to the ordianare vſe of the Greeke vvord, as Beza him ſelf dehneith it Luc. 2 v. 25: and contrarie to the propriety of the Greeke phraſe, as not onely the Catholikes, but * the beſt learned Lutherans do thevv and proue by many examples. They ſolovv herein the ſingular preſumption of Caluin, vvho vvas the firſt (as his fellowv Beza confeſſeth) that euer found out this interpretation. Vvwhich neither S. Chryſoſtom, nor any other, as perfect Gracians as they vvere, could euer eſpie. Vvhere, onely to haue made choiſe of that impious and arrogant Sectaries ſenſe, before the ſaid fathers and all the Churches beſides, had been ſhameful ynough: but to ſet the ſame dovne for very Scripture of Gods bleſſed vvord, that is intolerable, and paiſeth al impiety. And vve ſee plainly that they haue no conſcience, indifferencie, nor other purpoſe, but to make the poore Readers beleevue, that their opinions be Gods ovvne vvord, and to dravv the Scriptures to ſound after the fanatic of their herelies. But if the good Reader knevv, for vvhat point of doctrine they haue thus framed their tranſlation, they vvould abhorre them to the depth of Hel. forſooth it is thus: they vvould haue this Scripture meane, that Chriſt vvas in horrible teare of damnation, and that he vvas not onely in paines corporal vpon the Croiſe (vvwhich they hold, not to haue been ſufficient for mans redemption) but that he vvas in the very ſorovves & diſtreſſes of the damned, vvithout any difference, but that it vvas not euerlaſting, as theirs is.

ἀπό τὴν λαβείαν. Plac. 11. v. vpon τὴν place.

Caluins blaſphemie that Chriſt ſuffered hel paines vpo the croſſe, and that his death othervvife were inſufficient.

For this horrible blaſphemie (vvwhich is their interpretation of Chriſtes deſcending into Hel) Gods holy vvord muſt be corrupted, and the ſacrifice of Chriſtes death (vvwhereof they talke ſo preſumptuouſly) muſt not be ynough for our redemption, except he be damned for vs alſo to the paines of Hel. Vvo be to our poore Countrie, that muſt haue ſuch bookes, and read ſuch tranſlations. self did diuers things, and now doth in heauen, and our selues also must vse many meanes, for the application thereof to our particular necessities. See the next Annotation.

9. Was made to all.] The Protestants vpon pretence of the sufficiency of Christes Passion, and his onely redemption, oppose them selues guilefully in the sight of the simple, against the inuocation of Sainets, and their intercession, and help of vs, against our penitential vvorkes or suffering for our ovne sinnes, either in this life or the next: against the merites of fasting, praying, almes, and other things commended to vs in holy Vvritte, and against most things done in the Church, in sacrifice, Sacrament, and ceremonie. But this place and many other shew, that Christes Passion, though it be of it self far more sufficient and forcible, then the Protestants in their baseness of vnderstanding can consider, yet profiteth none but such, as both doe his commaundements, and vse such remedies and meanes to apply the benefite thereof to them selues, as he appointeth in his vvord, or by the Holy Ghost in his Church. And the Heretikes that say, faith onely is the thing required to apply Christes benefites vnto vs, are hereby also easily refuted. for vve do not obey him onely by beleeuing, but by doing vvhatsoeuer he commaundeth. Lastly, vve note in the same vvordes, that Christ appointeth not by his absolute and eternal election, men so to be partakers of the fruite of his redemption, vvithout any condition or respect of their ovne vvorkes, obedience, or free vvill: but vvith this condition alvvayes, if men vvill obey him, and do that vvich he appointeth. See S. Augustine (or Prosper) to. 7 Respons. Prosperi li. 2. articulo 1 ad obiectiones Vincentij, vvhere he saith of the cup of Christes pailion, It hath in deede in it self, to profite al: but if it be not drunken, it healeth not.

Christes Passiō sufficient for al, but profitable to them only vvich obey, not by faith only, but by doing as he and his Church commaund.

11. Inexplicable.] Intending to treat more largely and particularly of Christes or Melchisedeks Priesthod, he forvvarneth them that the mysterie thereof is far passing their capacitie, and that through their feeblenes in faith and vveakenes of vnderstanding, he is forced to omit diuers deepe points concerning the Priesthod of the nevvlavv. Among vvich (no doubt) the mysterie of the Sacrament and Sacrifice of the altar, called M A S S E, vvas a principal & pertinent matter: vvich the Apostles and Fathers of the primitiue Church vied not to treat of so largely and particularly in their vvritings, vvich might come to the hands of the vnfaithful, vvho of al things tooke soonest scandal of the B. Sacrament; as vve see Io. 6. He spake to the Hebrues (saith S. Hierom ep 126) that is, to the Iewes, and not to faithful men, to vvhom he might have been bold to vtter the Sacrament. And in deede it vvas not reasonable to talke much to them of that sacrifice vvich vvas the resemblance of Christes death, vvhen they thought not right of Christes death it self. Vvich the Apostles vvifedom and silence our Aduerſaries vvickedly abuse against the holy Masse.

The Apostle omitteth to speake of the B. Sacrament as a mysterie then to deepe for the Iewes capacitie.

1. The foundation of penance.] Vve see hereby, vvhat the first groundes of Christian insti-came to the Scriptures : vvvhich could not treat of things so particularly, as vvvas requisite for the teaching of al necessarie groundes. Among these points were the 12 Articles contained in the Apottles Creede : the doctrine of penance before Baptisme : the maner and

4. Impossible. How hard the holy Scriptures be, and how dangerously they be read of the vnlearned, or of the proud be they neuer so well learned, this one place might teach vs. * Whereat the Nouatians of old did so stumble, that they thought, and heretically taught, that none falling into any mortal sinne after Baptisme, could be receiued to mercie or penance in the Church: and so to a contentious man, that would folow his owne sense, or the bare vvordes, without regard of the Churches sense and rule of faith (after vvhich euery Scripture must be expounded) the Apostles speach doth here sound. Euen as to the simple, and to the Heretike that submiteth not his sense to the Churches iudgement, certaine places of this same Epistle, seeme at the first sight, to stand against the daily oblation or sacrifice of the Masse: vvhich yet in truth make no more for that purpose, then this text we now stand on, serueth the Nouatians: as vvhen we come to the places, it shall be declared.

Ambr. loco cit. & in ep. ad Heb. Chry. ho. 9 in c. 6 ad Hobr.

And let the good Readers beware here also of the Protestants exposition, for they are herein worse then Nouatians, specially such as precisely folow Caluin: holding impiously, that it is impossible for one that forsaketh entirely his faith, that is, becommeth an Apostata or an Heretike, to be receiued to penance or to Gods mercie. To establish vvhich false and damnable sense, these fellowes make nothing of S. Ambroses, S. Chrysostoms, and the other fathers exposition, vvhich is the holy Churches sense, That the Apostle meaneth of that penance vvhich is done before and in Baptisme. vvhich is no more to say, but that it is impossible to be baptized againe, and thereby to be renouated and illuminated, to die, be buried, and rise againe the second time in Christ, in so easie and perfect penance and cleansing of sinnes, as that first sacrament of generation did yield: vvhich applieth Christes death in such ample maner to the receiuers, that it taketh avay al paines due for sinnes before committed: and therefore requireth no further penance aftervvard, for the sinnes before committed, al being vvashed away by the force of that Sacrament duely taken. S. Augustine calleth the remission in Baptisme, Magnam indulgentiam, a great pardon. Enchirid. c. 64.

Hiero. ep. 3 ad Demetriad. c. 6.

The Apostle therfore warneth them, that if they fall from their faith, and from Christes grace and lavv vvhich they once receiued in their Baptisme, they may not looke to haue any more that first great and large remedie applied vnto them, nor no man els that sinneth after Baptisme: though the other penance, vvhich is called the Second table after shipvracke, vvhich is a more painful medicine for sinne then Baptisme, requiring much fasting, praying, and other afflictions corporal, is open not onely to other sinners, but to al once baptized, Heretikes, or oppugners of the truth maliciously and of purpose or what way so euer, during this life. See S. Cyprian ep. 52. S. Ambrose vpon this place. S. Augustine cons. ep. Parm. li. 2. c. 13. and ep. 50. S. Damascene li. 4. c. 10.

10. God is not iniust. It is a vvorld to see, vvhat vvringing & vvritting the Protestants make, to shirte them selues from the euidence of these vvordes, vvhich make it most cleere to all not blinded in pride and contention, that good vvorkes be meritorious, and the very cause of saluation, so far that God should be iniust, if he rendered not heauen for the same. Reuera grandu iniustitia Dei (saith S. Hierom) Si tantum peccata puniret. & bona opera non susciperet. That is, In deepe great vvore Gods iniustice, if he vvould onely punish sinnes, and vvould not receiue good vvorkes. Li. 2. cont. Iovin. c. 2.

The Nouatians (as al Heretikes) made Scripture the ground of their heresie. Other places make no more for the Protestants then this doth for Nouatus. Caluins heresie vpon this place, vvorse then the Nouatians.

C H A P. VII.

1. Melchisedec.] The excellencie of this person vvas so great, that some of the antiquity tooke him to be an Angel, and some the holy Ghost. Vvhich opinion not onely the Hebrues, that auouch him to be Sem the sonne of Noe, but also the cheefe fathers of the Christians do condemne: not doubting but he vvas a mere man and a Priest and a king, vvhofoeuer he vvas. for els he could not in office and order and sacrifice haue been so perfect a type and resemblance of our Sauour, as in this Chapter and other is shewed.

3. Without father.] Not that he vvas vvithout father and mother, saith S. Hierom ep. 126: for Christ him self vvas not vvithout father, according to his diuinity, nor vvithout mother, in his humanity: but for that his pedigree is not set out in the Genesis, as the genealogie of other Patriarches is, but is sodenly induced in the holy historie, no mention made of his stocke, tribe, beginning, or ending, and therefore in that case also resembling in a sort the sonne of God, vvwhose generation vvas extraordinarie, miraculous, and inefable, according to both his natures, lacking a father in the one, and a mother in the other. his person hauing neither beginning nor ending, and his kingdom, and Priesthod specially, in him self and in the Church, being eternall, both in respect of the time past, and the time to come: as the said Doctor in the same epistle vvriteth.

The resemblance of Melchisedec to Christ, in many points.

4. Behold.] To proue that Christs Priesthod far passeth the Priesthod of Aaron: and the Priesthod of the new Testamēt, the Priesthod of the old lavv: and consequently that the sacrifice of our Sauour and the sacrifice of the Church doth much excel the sacrifices of Moyes lavv, he disputeth profoundly of the preeminences of Melchisedec about the great Patriarch Abraham, vvho vvas father of the Leuites.

By the sundrie excellencies of Melchisedecs Priesthod is proued the excellencie of the Priesthod & sacrifice of the new Testamēt.

4. Tithes.] The first preeminence, that Abraham paid tithes, and that of the best and most cheefe things that he had, vnto Melchisedec, as a duety and homage, not for him self onely in person, but for Leui, vvho yet vvas not borne, and so for the vvhole Priesthod of Leuies stocke, acknowledging thereby, Melchisedec not onely to be a Priest, but his Priest and Superior, and so chief the Leuitical order. And it is here to be obserued, that vvhereas in the 14 of Genesis, vvhen this holy narration is taken, both in the Hebrue, and in the 70, it standeth indifferent or doubtfull, vvwhether Melchisedec paid tithes to Abraham, or tooke tithes of him: the Apostle here putteth al out of controuertie, plainly declaring that Abraham paid tithes to the order, as the inferiour to his Priest and Superior. And touching payment of tithes, it is a natural duety, that men owe to God in all lavves, and to be giuen to his Priests in his behalfe, for their honour and liuelihod. Iacob promised or vowed to pay them, Gen. 28. Moyes appointed them Leuit. 27. Num. 18. Deut. 12. 14. 26. Christ confirmeth that duety Mat. 23: and Abraham specially here giueth them to Melchisedec

He received tithes of Abraham, & consequently of Leui & Aarō.

Tithes.

fedec: plainly thereby approving them or their equivalent to be due to Christ and the Priesthood of the new Testament, much more then either in the law of Moyses, or in the law of Nature. Of which tithes due to the Clergie of Christes Church see S. Cyprian ep. 66. S. Hierom ep. 1 c. 7. and ep. 2 c. 5. to Heliodorus and Nepotianus. S. Augustine ser. 119 de tempore.

He blessed Abraham.

Blessing a great preeminence, especially in Priests.

7. is blessed of the better.] The second preeminence is, that Melchisedec did besse Abraham: which we see here S. Paul maketh a great and soueraine holy thing, grounding our Sauours prerogatiue about the vvhole order of Aaron therein: and we see that in this sort it is the proper act of Priesthood: and that without al controuersie as the Apostle saith, he is greater in dignitie, that hath authority to besse, then the person that hath not, and therefore the Priests vocation to be in this behalfe far about any earthly king, vvhich hath not pouer to giue benediction in this sacred maner, neither to man, nor other creature. As here Melchisedec, to Christ blessed much more, and so haue the Bishops of his Church done, and do. Vvhich no man can maruel that our forefathers haue so highly esteemed and fought for, if he marke the vvhonderful mysterie and grace thereof here expressed. This Patriarch also vvhich here taketh blessing of Melchisedec, him self (though in an interior sort) blessed his sonnes, as the other Patriarches did, and fathers do their children by that example.

The full accomplishment of mans redemption was not by Aarons but by Melchisedecs Priesthood.

11. If consummation.] The principal proposition of the vvhole epistle and al the Apostles discourse, is inferred & grounded vpon the former prerogatiues of Melchisedec about Abraham and Leui: that is, that the end, perfection, accomplishment, and consummation of al mans dueties and debtes to God, by the general redemption, satisfaction, full price and perfect ransom of al mankind, was not atchieued by any or al the Priests of Aarons order, nor by any sacrifice or act of that Priesthood, or of al the law of Moyses, vvhich was grounded vpon the Leuitical Priesthood, but by Christ and his Priesthood, vvhich is of the order and rite of Melchisedec.

The Apostle to confute the Ievves false persuasion of Aarons Priesthood and sacrifices, speaketh altogether of the sacrifice of the Crosse.

11. What necessitie.] This disputation of the preeminence of Christes Priesthood about the Leuitical order, is against the erroneous persuasion of the Ievves, that thought their law, Priesthood, and sacrifices to be euerlasting, and to be sufficient in them selues, without any other Priest then Aaron and his successors, and without al relation to Christes Passion or any other redemption or remission, then that vvhich their Leuitical offices did procure: not knowing that they were all figures of Christes death, and to be ended and accomplished in the same. Vvhich point well vnderstood and kept in mind, will cleere the vvhole controuersie betwixt the Catholikes and Protestants, concerning the sacrifice of the Church. for, the scope of the Apostles disputation being, to auouch the dignity, preeminence, necessitie, and eternal fruite and effect of Christes Passion, he had not to treat at all of the other, vvhich is a sacrifice depending of his Passion, specially writing to the Hebrues, that were to be instructed and reformed first touching the sacrifice of the Crosse, before they could fruitfully heare any thing of the other. though in couert and by most euident sequels of disputation, the learned and faithfull may easily perceiue vvherevpon the said Sacrifice of the Church (vvhich is the Masse) is grounded. And therefore S. Hierom saith, ep. 126: that al these commendations of Melchisedec are in the type of Christ, cuius profectus Ecclesie sacramenta sunt.

No lawful state or people without an external Priesthood.

12. Translated.] Note well this place, and you shall perceiue thereby, that euery lawful forme and manner of law, state, or gouernement of Gods people dependeth on Priesthood, nieth, standing, or alteration with the Priesthood. In the law of Nature, the state of the people hanged on one kind of Priesthood: in the law of Moyses, of another: in the state of Christianity, of another: and therefore in the former sentence the Apostle said, that the Ievvish people or Commonwealt had their law vnder the Leuitical Priesthood, and the Greeke more properly expresseth the matter, that they were legitimated, that is to say, made a lawful people or communitie vnder God, by the Priesthood. for there is no iust nor lawful Commonwealt in the world, that is not made legal and Gods peculiar, and distinguished from vnlawful Commonweales that hold of false goddes, or of none at al, by Priesthood. Vvherevpon it is cleere, that the new law, and al Christian peoples holding of the same, is made lawful by the Priesthood of the new Testament, and that the Protestants shamefully are deceived, and deceive others, that would haue Christian Commonweales to lacke an external Priesthood, or Christes death to abolish the same. for, this is a demonstration, that if Christ haue abolished Priesthood, he hath abolished the new law, vvhich is the new Testament and state of Grace, vvhich al Christian Commonweales liue vnder. Neither were it true, that the Priesthood were translated with the Law, if al external Priesthood ended by Christes death, vvhich the new law began. for to the law should not depend on Priesthood, but dure vvhich al Priesthood were ended: vvhich is against S. Pauls doctrine.

External Priesthood necessarie for the state of the new Testament.

External sacrifice also necessarie for the same.

Furthermore it is to be noted, that this legitimation or putting Communities vnder law, and Priesthood, of what order soeuer, is no other vve, but by ioyning one vvhich an other in one homage of sacrifice external, vvhich is the proper act of Priesthood: for, as no lawful state can be without priesthod, so no priesthod can be without sacrifice. And we meane alwaies of Priesthod & sacrifice taken in their ovne proper signification, as here S. Paul taketh them. for, the constitution difference, alteration, or translation of states and lawes rise not vpon any mutation of spiritual or metaphorically taken Priesthod, or sacrifice: but vpon those things in proper acceptation, as it is most plaine.

Lastly, it foloweth of this, that though Christ truly sacrificed him self vpon the Crosse (there also a Priest according to the order of Melchisedec) and there made the full redemption of the world, confirmed, and consummated his compact, and Testament, and the law and priesthod of this his new and eternal state, by his blood: yet that can not be the forme of sacrifice into which the old Priesthod and sacrifices were translated, vvhich vpon the Apostle inferreth the translation of the Law. For they all were figures of Christs death, and ended in effect at his death, yet they were not altered into that kind of sacrifice, vvhich was to be made but once, and was executed in such a sort, that peoples and nations Christened could not meete often to worshipping at it, nor haue their law and Priestes constituted in the same. though for the honour and duty, remembrance and representation thereof, not onely we Christians, but also al peoples faithful both of Iewes & Gentiles, haue had their priesthod and sacrifices according to the difference of their states. Vvhich kind of Sacrifices were translated one into an other: and so no doubt is the Priesthod Leuitical properly turned into the Priesthod and sacrifice of the Church, according to Melchisedecs rite, and Christs institution in the formes of bread and vvine. See the next note.

The translation of the old Priesthod & sacrifices, must needs be into the said Priesthod and sacrifice of the Church.

17. A Priest for euer. Christ is not called a Priest for euer, onely for that his person is eternal, or for that he sitteth on the right hand of God, and perpetually praiech or maketh intercession for vs, or for that the effect of his death is eueralting: for al this proueth not that in proper signification his Priesthod is perpetual: but according to the iudgement of al the fathers grounded vpon this deepe and diuine discourse of S. Paul, and vpon the very nature, definition, and propriety of Priesthod, and the excellent act and order of Melchisedec, and the state of the new law, he is a Priest for euer according to Melchisedecs order, specially in respect of the sacrifice of his holy body and blood, instituted at his last supper, and executed by his commission, commaundement, and perpetual concurrence vvhich his Priestes, in the formes of bread and vvine: in vvhich things onely the said high Priest Melchisedec did sacrifice. I or though S. Paul make no expresse mention hereof, because of the depth of the mysterie, and their incredulity or feeblenesse to vvhom he vvrote: yet it is euident in the iudgement of all the learned fathers (vvhithout exception) that euer vvrote either vpon this epistle, or vpon the 14 of Genesis, or the 1 salme 109, or by occasion haue treated of the sacrifice of the altar, that the eternity and proper act of Christs Priesthod, and consequently the immutability of the new law, consisteth in the perpetual offering of Christs body and blood in the Church.

How Christ is a Priest for euer.

Christs eternal Priesthod consisteth in the perpetual sacrifice of his body & blood in the Church.

Which thing is so well known to the Aduersaries of Christs Church and Priesthod, and so graunted, that they be forced impudently to cauill vpon certaine hebrue particles, that Melchisedec did not offer in bread and vvine: yea and vvhich that will not serue, plainly to deny him to haue been a Priest: vvhich is to giue checkmate to the Apostle, and to ouerthrow all his discourse. Thus vvhich these vvicked men pretend to defend Christs onely Priesthod, they in deede abolish as much as in them lieth, the whole order, office, and state of his eternall law and Priesthod.

The Protestants cauilling vpon particles, against Melchisedecs sacrifice & Priesthod, directly against the Apostle.

Ep. 126. * That is, from Adā to the end of the world, represented by sacrifice.

And our sauiour expresseth so much in the very institution of the Sacrament of his body and blood; specially when he calleth the later kind, the new Testament in his blood, signifying that as the old law was established in the blood of beastes, so the new (vvhich is his eternal Testament) should be dedicated and perpetual in his owne blood: not onely as it was shed on the Crosse, but as giuen in the Chalice. And therefore into this sacrifice of the altar (saith S. Augustine li. 17 de Ciuit. c. 20. S. Leo ser. 8 de Passione, and the rest) were the old sacrifices to be translated. See S. Cyprian ep. 63 ad Cuius. nu. 2. S. Ambrose de Sacram. li. 5. c. 4. S. Augustine in Psal. 33. Cant. 2. and li. 17. de Ciuit. c. 17. S. Hierom ep. 17. c. 2. & ep. 126. Epiph. her. 35. Christs eternal Priesthod and sacrifice in the Church is produced out of the fathers.

Finally if any of the fathers, or all the fathers, had either vvisedom, grace, or intelligence of Gods vvord and mysteries, his is the truth. If nothing vvil serue our Aduersaries, Christetus confound them, and defend his eternal Priesthod, and state of his new Testament citabillied in the same.

The old commandement, and the new.

Maundy thursday why so called.

The introduction of a new Priesthood.

The eternitie of the new Priesthood confirmed by the fathers othe, & Christs passion.

By the comparison of many priests, & one, is not meant that there is but one Priest of the new Testament.

The meaning is, that the absolute sacrifice of eternal redemption could not be done by those many Aaronical priests but by one onely, Christ Iesus: who liueth a Priest for euer, hath no successor, and as cheefe priest, worketh and concurrereth vvith al Priests in their priestly functions.

18. Of the former commandements.] The vvhole law of Moyses conteining all their old Priesthood, sacrifice, sacraments, and ceremonies, is called the Old commandement: and the new Testament conteining the sacrifice of Christs body and blood, and al the sacraments and graces giuen by the same, is named the New mandatum: for vvhich our forefathers called the Thursday in the holy vveeke, Maundy thursday, because that in it, the new law and Testament was dedicated in the Chalice of his blood: the old mandatum, law, Priesthood, and sacrifices, for that they vvere insufficient and vnperfect, being taken avvay: and this new sacrifice, after the order of Melchisedec, giuen in the place thereof.

19. The introduction.] Euer obserue, that the abrogation of the old law, is not an abolishing of al Priesthood, but an introduction of a new, conteining the hope of eternal things, vvhere the old had but temporal.

21. With an othe.] This othe signifieth the infallible and absolute promis of the eternitie of the new Priesthood and state of the Church: Christ by his death, and blood shed in the sacrifice of the Crosse, confirming it, sealing it, and making himselfe the surety and pledge thereof. For though the new Testament vvas instituted, giuen, and dedicated in the Supper, yet the vvarrant, confirmation, and eternal operation thereof, vvas atchieued vpon the Crosse, in the one oblation and one general and euerlasting redemption there made.

23. Being many.] The Protestants not vnderstanding this place, feine very folishly, that the Apostle should make this difference betvvixt the old state and the new: that in the old, there were many Priests: in the new, none at all but Christ. Which is against the Prophet Esay, specially prophecyng of the Priests of the new Testament (as S. Hierom Esa. c. 61. declareth vpon the same place) in these vvordes, *You shall be called the * Priests of God: the * i ueris * ministers of our God, shall it be said to you:* & it taketh away al visible Priesthood, & consequently the lawfull state that the Church and Gods people haue in earth, vvith al Sacraments and external vvorship. * λ ι ο υ γ - γ ο ι .

The Apostle then meaneth first, that the absolute sacrifice of consumption, perfection, and vniuersal redemption, vvas but one, once done, and by one onely Priest done, and therefore it could not be any of the sacrifices, or al the sacrifices of the Iewes law, or vvrought by any or by all of them, because they vvere a number at once, and succeeding one an other, euery of their offices and functions ending by their death, and could not vvork such an eternal redemption as by Christ onely vvas vvrought vpon the Crosse. Secondly, S. Paul insinuateth therevpon, that Christ neuer loseth the dignitie or practise of his eternal Priesthood, by death nor otherwise, neuer yeldeth it vp to any, neuer hath successors after him, that may enter into his roome or right of Priesthood, as Aaron and al other had in the Leuitical Priesthood, but that him self vvorketh and concurrereth vvith his ministers the Priests of the new Testament, in al their actes of Priesthood, as vvell of sacrifice as Sacrament, blessing, preaching, praying, and the like vvhat so euer.

This therefore vvas the fault of the Hebrues, that they did not acknowledge their Leuitical sacrifices and Priesthood to be reformed and pertited by Christs sacrifice on the Crosse: and against them the Apostle onely disputeth, and not against our Priests of holy Church, or the number of them, vvho al confesse their Priesthood and al exercises of the same, to depend vpon Christs onely perpetual Priesthood.

27. This aid he once.] This is the special preeminence of Christ, that he offereth for other mens finnes onely, hauing none of his owne to offer for, as al other Priests both of the old and new law haue. And this againe is the special dignitie of his owne person, not communicable to any other of vvhat order of Priesthood so euer, that he by his death (vvhich is the onely oblation that is by the Apostle declared to be irriterable in it self) paid the one full sufficient ransom for the redemption of all finnes.

CHAP. VIII.

Out of the same Psalme 109 he vrgeth this also, Sit thou on my right hand. shewing that the Leuitical tabernacle on earth, vvas but a shadow of his true Tabernacle in beaumen: vvithout vvhich he should not be a Priest at all: & vvhereas he is of a better Priesthood then they, as also he prometh by the excellencie of the new Testament above the old.

^{cc} Christ liuing and reigning in heauē, continueth his priestly function stil, and is minister not of Moyse's Sancta & tabernacle, but of his ovvne body & blood, vvhich be the true holies, and tabernacle, not formed by mā, but by Gods ovvne hand.

vvherfore it isⁿ necessarie that he also haue some thing that he may offer: †ⁿ if then he vvere vpon the earth, neither vvere he a priest: vvhereas there vvere that did offer giftes according to the Lavv, † that^c serue the exemplar & shadow ofⁿ heavenly things. As it vvvas answered Moyse, vvhen he finished the tabernacle, * See (quod he) that thou make al things according to the exemplar vvhich vvvas shewed thee in the mount.

† But novv he hath obtained a better ministerie, by so much as he is mediatour of a better testament, vvhich is established in better promises. † For^{cc} if that former had been void of fault, there should not certes a place of a secōd been sought. † For blaming them, he saith: Behold the daies shal come, saith our Lord: and I vvil consummate vpon the house of Israel, and vpon the house of Iuda a new Testament: † not according to the testament vvhich I made to their fathers in the day that I tooke their hand to bring them out of the Land of Egypt: because they did not continue in my testament: and I neglected them, saith our Lord. † For this is the testament vvhich I vvil dispose to the house of Israel after those daies, saith our Lord: Giving my lawesⁿ into their minde, & in their hart vvil I superscribe them: and I vvil beⁿ their God, and they shal be my people: † and eueryoneⁿ shall not teach his neighbour, and euery one his brother, saying Know our Lord: because al shal know me from the lesser to the greater of them: † because I vvil be merciful to their iniquities, & their sinnes I vvil not now remember. † And in saying a nevv, the former he hath made old. And that vvhich growveth auncient and vvaxeth old, is nigh to vtter decay.

^{cc} The promises and effectes of the Law were temporal, but the promises and effectes of Christes Sacraments in the Church be eternal.

ANNOTATIONS
CHAP. VIII.

3. Necessarie that he also. Euen now being in heauen, because he is a Bishop and Priest, he must needs haue somewhat to offer, and vvherein to do sacrifice: and that not in spiritual soe onely, for that could not make him a Priest of any certaine order. And it is most false and vvicked, to hold vvith the Caluinistes, * that Melchisedecks Priesthod vvvas vvholly spiritual. For then Christs death vvvas not a corporal, external, vvible, and truly named sacrifice: neither could Christ or Melchisedec be any other vvise a Priest, then euery faithful man is: which to hold (as the Calvinists following their owne doctrine must needs do) is directly against the Scriptures, and no lesse against Christes one oblation of his body vpon the Crosse, then it is against the daily sacrifice of his body vpon the altar. Therefore he hath a certaine host in external and proper maner, to make perpetual oblation thereby in the Church: for, visible and external act of sacrificing in heauen he doth not exercise.

Christs priesthod & sacrifice is external, not spiritual onely.

How Christes body is made fit to be sacrificed and eaten perpetually.

4. If vpon the earth.] It is by his death, and resurrection to life againe, that his body is become apt and fitte in such diuine sort to be sacrificed perpetually. For if he had liued in mortal sort still, that vway of mystical representation of breaking his body and separating the blood from the same, could not have been agreeable. and so the Church and Christian people should haue lacked a priesthood and sacrifice, & Christ him self should not haue been a Priest of a peculiar order, but either must haue offered in the things that Aarons Priests did, or els haue been no Priest at all. For, to haue offered onely spiritually, as all faithful men do, that could not be enough for his vocation, and our redemption, and state of the new Testament. How his flesh was made fit to be offered and eaten in the B. Sacrament, by his death, see Iſychius li. 1. in leuit. cap. 2.

Kingdom of heauen, and heauily things, spoke of the Church.

5. Heauenly things.] As the Church or state of the new Testament is commonly called Regnum calorum & Dei, in the Scriptures, so these heauenly things be probably taken by learned men, for the mysteries of the new Testament. And it seemeth that the paterne given to Moyses to frame his tabernacle by, was the Church, rather then the heauens them selues: as S. Pauls discourse tending to shew the difference betwixt the new Testament and the old, and not to make comparison betwene the state of heauen and the old law. Though incidently, because the condition of the new Testament more neerely resembleth the same, then the old state doth, he sometime may speake somewhat thereof also.

Grace, the effect of the new Testament.

10. Into their minds.] This also and the rest following is fulfilled in the Church, and is the proper effect of the new Testament, which is the grace and spirit of loue, graffed in the hartes of the faithful by the holy Ghost, vworking in the Sacraments and sacrifice of the new law to that effecte.

The new Testament or covenant betwene God & man.

10. Their God.] This mutual couenant made betwixt God and the faithful, is that which was dedicated and established, first in the chalice of his blood, called therefore the new Testament in his blood: and which was straight after ratified by the death of the testator, vpon the Crosse. Luce. 22.

Scriptures abused for phantastical inspirations.

11. Shal not teach.] So it was in the primitiue Church, in such specially as were the first founders of our new state in Christ. And that which was verified in the Apostles and other principal men, the Apostle speaketh generally as though it were so in the vwhole. as S. Peter applieth the like out of Ioei, and our Saviour so speaketh, when he saith that such as beleue in him, shal vvorke miracles of diuers sortes. Christian men then must not abuse this place to make challenge of new inspirations and so great knowledge that they neede no Scriptures or teaching in this life, as some Heretikes doe: which much like reason and shew of Scriptures as the Protestants haue to refuse external sacrifice. And it is no lesse phantastical madnesse to deny external sacrifice, sacraments, or Priesthod, then it is to abolish teaching and preaching. Mat. 23. 10. 14. v. 12.

CHAP. IX.

In the old Testament, the secular Sanctuary had two partes: the one signifying the same, with the ceremonies thereof for the emundation of the flesh: the other signifying heauen. which then was flint, until our High priest Christ entered into it, and that with his owne blood, shed for the emundation of our consciences. Whereupon he concludeth the excellencie of his tabernacle and host above the old. 25. Making also the difference, that he entered but once (so effectual was that one bloody offering of himself, for euer) whereas the Levitical High priest entered euery yere once.

The sepulchres of Christ and his Saints.

4. A golden potte.] The Protestants count it superstitious to keepe vvith honour and reuerence the holy memories or monuments of Gods benefices and miracles, or the tokens of Christes Passion, as his Crosse, garments, or other things appertaining to him or his Saints, and thinke it impoſſible that such things should dure so long: when they may here see the reuerent and long reuerence of Manna, vvich of it self vvvas moſt apt to putrefie, and of Aarons rodde, onely for that it todenly flourishē by miracle, the tables of the Testament &c. See a notable place in S. Cyril li. 6. cont. Iulian. vvhere he defendeth against Iulian the Apoitares eiaſphemie, the keeping and honouring of that Crosse or vvood vvich Christ died on. See also S. Paulinus ep. 11. and vvhat reuerence S. rather follow Vigilantius, Iulianus the Apostata, and such Masters, then the holy Doctors and euident practise of the Church in all ages.

5. Cherubim.] You see it is a fond thing, to conclude vpon the first or second commandement, that there should be no sacred images in the Church, vvhhen euen among these people that were most prone to idolatrie, and grosse in imagination of spiritual things such as Angels are, and to vvhom the precept was specially giuen, the same God that forbade them grauen idols, did commaund these images of Angels to be made and set in the fourceine holiest place of al the Tabernacle or Temple. By vvhich it is plaine, that much more the images of Christ and his B. mother and Saints, that may be more truly pourtered then mere spiritual substances can be, are not contrarie to Gods commaundement, nor against his honour, or repugnant to any other Scripture at all, vvhich condemne onely the Idols or pourtraies of the Heathen made for adoration of false Gods.

Images in Salomons temple commaunded by God.

10. Until the time of correction.] Al those grosse and carnal sacrifices, ceremonies, and obseruations instituted to cleanse and purifie the flesh from legal irregularities and impurities onely, and not reaching to the purging of the soules & consciences of men, being commaunded not for euer, but till Christes coming, ceased then: and better, more forcible, and more spiritual Sacraments were instituted in their place. For we may not imagine Christ to haue taken avway the old, and put none in their place: or to alter the sacraments onely into other sacraments external, and not also to transilare the sacrifices to some other more excellent. for it is called, tempus correctionis, non abolitionis sacrificij aut legu: the time of correction not of abolishing sacrifice or law. Neither haue they more reason to affirme Christes one oblation vpon the Crosse to haue rather taken avway al kind of sacrifice, then al manner of Sacraments. The time and state of the new Testament is not made lawlesse, hostlesse, or vwithour sacrifice, but it is the time of correction or reformation and abettering al the foresaid things.

Sacrifice not taken avway by the new Testament, but changed into a better.

12. Eternal redemption.] No one of the sacrifices, nor al the sacrifices of the old law, could make that one general price, ransom, and redemption of all mankind, and of al sinnes, sauing this one highest Priest: Christ, and the one sacrifice of his blood once offered vpon the Crosse. Vvhich sacrifice of redemption can not be often done, because Christ could not die but once. though the figures also thereof in the law of nature and of Moyses, were truly called sacrifices, as specially this high and maruelous commemoration of the same in the holy Sacrament of the altar, according to the rite of the new Testament, is most truly and singularly (as S. Augustine calleth it) a sacrifice. But neither this sort, nor the other of the old law, being often repeated and done by many Priests (al vvhich were and are sinners them selues) could be the general redeeming and consummating sacrifice: nor any one of those Priests, nor al the Priests together, either of the law of Nature, or of Aarons, or Meichisedecks order (except Christ alone) could be the general redeemers of the vvorlde.

One only sacrifice on the Crosse the redemption of the vvorlde: and one onely Priest (Christ) the redeemer thereof.

Li. de Sp. & lit. c. 11.

And this is the Apostles meaning in al this comparison and opposition of Christes death to the old sacrifices, and of Christ to their Priests: and not that Christes death or sacrifice of the Crosse should take avway al sacrifices, or proue that those Aaronical offices were no true sacrifices at al, nor those Priests, verily Priests. They were true Priests & true sacrifices, though none of those sacrifices were the high, capital, and general sacrifice of our price and redemption: nor none of them, or of those Priests, could vwithour respect to this one sacrifice of Christes death, vvorke any thing to Gods honour, or remission of sinnes, as the Ievves did falsely imagine, not referring them at al to this general redemption and remission by Christ, but thinking them to be absolute sacrifices in them selues. And that to haue been the error of the Hebrues, you may read in S. Augustine li. 3. de d. Christ. c. 6. And this, we tel the Protestants, is the onely purpose of the Apostle.

The Apostles disputatiō being only against the error of the Iewes concerning their sacrifices and priests: the Protestants applying it against the sacrifice of the Masse & priests of the new Testament.

But they be so grosse, or ignorant in the Scriptures, and so maliciously set against Gods and the Churches truth, that they peruersely and foolishly turne the vvhole disputation against the sacrifice of the B. Masse, and the Priests of the new Testament: as though we held, that the sacrifice of the altar were the general redemption or redeeming sacrifice, or that it had no relation to Christes death, or that it were not the representation and most liuely resemblance of the same, or were not instituted and done, to apply in particular to the vse of the partakers, that other general benefite of Christes one oblation vpon the Crosse. Against the Ievves then onely S. Paul disputeth, and against the false opinion they had of their Priests and sacrifices, to vvhich they attributed al remission and redemption, vwithour respect of Christes death.

15. Of those prevarications.] The Protestants do vnlearnedly imagine, that because al sinnes be remitted by the force of Christes passion, that therefore there should be no other sacrifice after his death. Vvhich in deede they might as well say, there ought neuer to haue been sacrifice appointed by God, either in the law of Nature, or of Moyses: as al their argumets made against the Sacrifice of the Church vpon the Apostles discourse, proue as well, or rather onely, that there were no sacrifices of Aarons order or Leuitical law at all. For against the Ievves false opinion concerning them, doth he dispute, and not a vword touching the sacrifice of the Church, vnto vvhich in al this discourse he neuer opposeth Christes sacrifice vpon the Crosse: al Christian men vvel knowving that the host & oblation of those tivo, though they differ in maner and external forme, yet is in deede al one.

The Apostle then sheweth here plainly, that al the sinnes that euer vvere remitted since the beginning of the vvorlde, vvere no otherwise forgiuen, but by the force and in respect of Christes Passion. Yet it folovveth not therevpon, that the oblations of Abel, Abraham, Aaron, &c vvere no sacrifices, as by the Heretikes foolish deduction it should do: S. Paul not opposing Christes Passion to them, for the intent to proue them to haue been no sacrifices, but to proue, that they vvere not absolute sacrifices, nor the redeeming or consummating Sacrifice, vvhich could not be many, nor done by many Priests, but by one, and at one time, by a more excellent Priest than any of them, or any other mere mortal man.

And that you may see the blasphemous pride and ignorance of Caluin, and in him, of al his fellowves: read (so many as may read Heretical bookes) his commentarie vpon this place, and there you shal see him gather vpon this, that Christes death had force from the beginning & vvas the remedie for al sinnes since the creation of the vvorlde, therefore there mult be no moe but that one sacrifice of Christes death. Vvhich must needs by his deduction hold (as it doth in deede) no lesse against the old sacrifices than the nevv sacrifice of the Church, and so take avway al, vvhich is against the Apostles meaning and al religion.

mēt against the sacrifice of the altar, maketh no lesse against the sacrifices of the old Lavv.

The correspon-dēce of vvorde in dedicating both Testaments proueth the real presence of bloud in the Chalice.

20. This is the bloud.] Christes death vvas necessarie for the full confirmation, ratification, and accomplishment of the nevv Testament, though it vvas begonne to be dedicated in the sacrifice of his last supper, being also within the compassse of his Passion. Vvhich is euidēt by the vvorde pronounced by Christ ouer the holy chalice, vvhich be correspondent to the vvorde that vvere spoken (as the Apostle here declareth) in the first sacrifice of the dedication of the old lavv, hauing also expresse mention of remission of sinnes thereby, as by the bloud of the nevv Testament. Vvhereby it is plaine, that the B. Chalice of the altar hath the very sacrificall bloud in it that vvas shed vpon the Crosse, in & by vvhich, the nevv Testament (vvhich is the lavv of spirit, grace, and remission) vvas dedicated, and doth consist. And therefore it is also cleere, that many diuine things, vvhich to the Heretikes or ignorant may seeme to be spoken onely of Christes sacrifice vpon the Crosse, be in deede verified & fulfilled also in the sacrifice of the altar. Vvhereof S. Paul for the causes aforesaid vould not treat in plaine termes. See Isychius li. 1 in Louis. c. 4 paulo post initium, applying al these things to the immolation of Christ also in the Sacrament.

In the old Testament vvere figures of the nevv: in the nevv, is resemblance of the heavenly state.

23. The examplers.] Al the offices, places, vessels, and instruments of the old lavv, vvere but figures and resemblances of the state and sacraments of the nevv Testament, vvhich are here called celestials, for that they are the liuely image of the heavenly state next ensuing: vvhich be therefore specially dedicated and sanctified in Christes bloud, sacrificed on the altar, and sprinkled vpon the nevv: in the same maner, as the old figures and people vvere cleansed by the bloud of beasts. And therefore by a transition vsual in the holy Scriptures, the Apostle sodenly passeth in the sentēce immediatly folovving, and turneth his talke to Christes entrance into heauen, the state vvhich heereof, both by the Sacraments of the old lavv, and also more specially by them of the nevv, is prefigured.

Christ once offered in blouddy sort, but vn-bloudedly oftē, namely in the sacrifice of the altar.

25. Offer him self often.] As Christ neuer died but once, nor neuer shal die againe, so in that violent, painful, and bloody sort he can neuer be offered againe, neither needeth he so to be offered any more: hauing by that one action of sacrifice vpon the Crosse, made the full ransom, redemption, and remedie for the sinnes of the vvhole vvorlde. Neuarthelesse, as Christ died and vvas offered after a sort in all the sacrifices of the Lavv and Nature, since the beginning of the vvorlde (al vvhich vvere figures of this one oblation vpon the Crosse) so is he much rather offered in the sacrifice of the altar of the nevv Testament, incomparably more neerely, diuinely, and truly expressing his death, his body broken, his bloud shed, then did any figure of the old lavv, or other sacrifice that euer vvas: as being in deede (though in hidden, sacramental, and mysticall, and vnblooddy maner) the very self same B. body and bloud, the self same host, oblation and sacrifice, that vvas done vpon the Crosse.

The sacrifice of the altar & that on the Crosse, both one.

And this truth is most euidēt by the very forme of vvorde vsed by our Sauour in the institution and consecration of the holy Sacrament, and by the profession of all the holy Doctors. Our sacrifice, saith S. Cyprian, is correspondent to the Passion of Christ. And, The sacrifice that vve offer, is the Passion of Christ. ep. 63. nu. 4. & nu. 7. S. Augustine de fid. ad Pet. c. 19. In those carnal sacrifices vvas the prefiguring of the flesh of Christ, vvhich he vvas to offer for sinnes, and of the bloud, vvhich he vvas to shed. but in this sacrifice is the commemoration of the flesh of Christ vvhich he hath now giuen, and of the bloud vvhich he hath shed: in illis prænuntiabatur occidendus, in hoc annuntiat occisus. In them he vvas forshewred as to be killed: in these he is shewred, as killed. And S. Gregorie Nazianzene saith, orat. in morbum, that the Priest in this sacrifice, immiscet se magni Christi Passioni- bus. S. Ambrose li. 3. Offic. c. 48, Offertur Christus in imagine quasi recipiens passionem. Alexander the first. ep. ad omnes Orthodox. nu. 4. to. 1. *Conc. Comment. And the said fathers and others, by reason of the difference in the maner of Christes presence The fathers call and oblation in respect of that on the Crosse, called this the vnbloudy sacrifice, as Caluin him self it the vnbloud- in y Hebr. confesseth, but answereth them in the pride of hereticall spirit, vvith theee vvordes: Nihil moror quod sic loquantur vetusti scriptores. that is, I passe not for it, that the auncient vvriters do so speake: calling the distinction of blouddy and vnbloudy sacrifice, scholasticall and frivolous, and diaboicum commentum, a diuelish deuise. ANNOTATIONS
CHAP. X.

1. As shadow.] The sacrifices and ceremonies of the old law, vvere so far from the truth of Christs Sacraments, and from giuing spirit, grace, remission, redemption, and iustification, and therevpon the entrance into heauen and ioyes celestiaall, that they vvere but mere shadowes, vvaperfectly and obscurely representing the graces of the new Testament and of Christs death: vvhereas all the holy Churches rites and actions instituted by Christ in the Priesthod of the new law, conteine and giue grace, iustification, and life euerlasting to the faithful and vvorthy receiuers: and therefore they be not shades or darke resemblances of Christs passion, vvhich is the fountaine of all grace and mercie, but perfect images and most liuely representations of the same, specially the sacrifice of the altar, vvhich because it is the same oblation, the same host, and offered by the same Priest Christ Iesus (though by the ministerie of man and in mysterie) is the most pure and neere image, character, and correspondence to the sacrifice of Christs passion, both in substance, force, and effect, that can be.

The old sacrificces obscurely shadovved, but the sacrifice of the altar most plainely repre-senteth the sacrifice on the Crosse.

2. They should have ceased.] If the hostes and offerings of the old law had been of them selues perfect to all effectes of redemption and remission, as the Hebrues (against vvhom the Apostle disputeth) did thinke, and had had no relation to Christs sacrifice on the Crosse or any other absolute and vniuersal oblation or remedie for sinne, but by and of their owne efficacy could haue generally purged and cleansed man of all sinne and damnation: then they should neuer haue needed to be so often repeated and reiterated. For being both generally available for all, by their opinion, and particularly applied (in as ample sort as they could be) to the seueral infirmities of euery offender, there had been no sinnes left. But sinnes did remaine, euen those sinnes for vvhich they had offered sacrifices before, notwithstanding their sacrifices vvere particularly applied vnto them. For, offering yerely they did not onely offer sacrifices for the new committed crimes, but euen for the old, for vvhich they had often sacrificed before: the sacrifices being rather recor-des and attestations of their sinnes, then a redemption or full remission, as Christs death is. Vvhich being once applied to man by Baptisme, vvipeth away all sinnes past, God neuer remembering them any more, nor euer any sacrifice or sacrament or ceremonie being made or done for them any more, though for new sinnes other remedies be daily requisite. Their sacrifices then could not of them selues remitte sinnes, much lesse make the general redemption vvithout relation to Christs Passion. And so you see it is plaine euery vvhere, that the Apostle proueth not by the often repetition of the Iewish sacrifices, that they vvere no sacrifices at all, but that they vvere not of that absolute force or efficacy, to make redemption or any remission, vvithout dependance of the one vniuersal redemption by Christ: his vvhole purpose being, to inculcate vnto them the necessitie of Christs death, and the oblation of the new Testament. As for the Churches holy sacrifice, it is cleane of another kinde then those of the Iewes, and therefore he maketh no opposition betwixt it, and Christs death or sacrifice on the Crosse, in all this Epistle: but rather as a sequele of that one general oblation, couertly alwayes inferreth the same: as being in a different maner the very selfsame host and offering that vvvas done vpon the Crosse, and continually is vvrought by the selfsame Priest.

The Iewes sacnices vvere not absolute & independēt, because they vvere often repeated.

The Apostle
proueth by the often repeating of the Iewes sacrifices, not that they vvere none, but that they vvere not absolute & sufficient.

4. impossible.] The hostes and sacrifices of the old law, vvhich the carnal Iewes made

Kkkk ij all

The old sacrifices remitted not finnes, but were only signes thereof.

God refuseth the Jewes sacrifices, not al sacrifice.

That Christ should haue a body, was necessarie for his Priesthod, and sacrifice.

The body of Christ is the sacrifice of the altar.

The Jewes sacrifices refused, not al sacrifice.

We must often note that the Apostles speache of many Priests and often sacrificing, concerneth only the Jewes Priests and sacrifices, not the Priests and sacrifice of the new Testament.

The Calvinists arguments against Christs body often offered, and in many places answered by the fathers long agoe.

all the count of, without relation to Christes death, were not onely not perfect and absolute sufficient in them selues, but they did not, nor could not remit any finnes at all, being but onely signes thereof, referring the offenders for remission in deede, to Christes Passion. For the blood of bruite beastes could haue no other effect, nor any other element or creature, before Christes death. the fruite vvhwhereof, before it was extant, could be no otherwise properly applied vnto them, but by beleefe in him.

5. Host and oblation.] He meaneth not that God would no host nor sacrifice any more, as the Protestants falsely imagin: for that were to take away not onely the sacrifice of Christes body vpon the altar, but the sacrifice of the same body vpon the Crosse: also. Therefore the Prophet speaketh onely of the legal and carnal sacrifices of the Jewes, signifying that they did neuer of them selues please God, but in respect of Christ, by vvhose oblation of his owne body they should please.

5. But a body.] If Christ had not had a body, he could not haue had any vvorthy matter or any matter at all to sacrifice in visible maner, other then the hostes of the old law. Neither could he either haue made the general redemption by his one oblation vpon the Crosse, nor the daily sacrifice of the Church: for both vvhich, his body was fitted by the diuine vvisedom. Which is an high conclusion, not vnderstood of Iewes, Pagans, nor the Heretikes of our time, that Christes humane nature was taken to make the Sonne of God (vvhich in his diuine nature could not be either Priest or host) fitte to be the sacrifice and Priest of his father, in a more vvorthy sort, then all the Priests or oblations of the old law. And that this body was giuen him, not onely to be the sacrifice vpon the Crosse, but also vpon the altar, S. Augustine affirmeth in these vvordes. The table vvhich the Priest of the new Testament doth exhibit, is of his body and blood: for that is the sacrifice vvhich succeeded at those sacrifices that were offered in shadow of that to come. For the vvhich also we acknowledge that voice of the same Mediasour in the psalme, BUT A BODY THOU HAST FITTED TO ME, because in steede of all those sacrifices and oblations his body is offered, and is ministred to the partakers or receivers. Li. 17 Ciuit. Dei. c. 20. And againe li. 4. de Trin. c. 14. Who so iust and holy a Priest, as the onely sonne of God? What might so conueniently be offered for men, of men, as mans flesh? and vvhich so fitte for the immolation or offering, as mortal flesh? vvhich so cleane for cleansing the vices of mortal men, as the flesh borne of the virgins wombe? and vvhich can be offered and receiued so gratefully, as the flesh of our sacrifice, made the body of our Priest?

8. Neither did they please thee.] By that he saith, the things offered in the Law, did not please God, and likewise by that he saith, the former to be taken away, that the second may haue place, it is euident, that all hostes and sacrifices be not taken away by Christ, as the Heretikes foolishly conceiue: but that the old hostes of brute beastes be abrogated to giue place to that vvhich is the proper host of the new law, that is, Christes owne body.

11. Often offering the same hostes.] As S. Paul is forced often to inculcate that one principle of the efficacie and sufficiencie of Christes death, because of the Hebrewes to much attributing to their legal sacrifices, and for that they did not referre them to Christes onely oblation: so we, through the intolerable ignorance and importunity of the Heretikes of this time (abusing the vvordes of the Apostle spoken in the deueve defence and declaration of the valure and efficacie of Christes Passion about the sacrifices of the Law) are forced to repeat often, that the Apostles reason of many Priests and often repetition of the self same sacrifices, concerneth the sacrifices of the Law onely, vnto vvhich he opposeth Christes sacrifice and Priesthod: and speakeeth no vvord of or against the Sacrifice of the new Testament, vvhich is the sacrifice of Christes owne Priesthod, Law, and institution, yea the same sacrifice done daily vnblouddily, that once was done blouddily: made by the same Priest Christ Iesus, though by his ministers hands: and not many hostes, as those of the old law were, but the very self same in number, euen Christes owne body that was crucified. And that you may see that this is the iudgement of all antiquity, and their exposition of these and the like vvordes of this Epistle, and that they seeing the very same arguments that the Protestants now make so much a doe vvithall among the simple and vnlearned, yet vel perceived that they made nothing against the daily oblation or sacrifice of the altar, and therefore answered them before the Protestants were extant, 1200 yeres: we vvill set downe some of their vvordes, vvhose autoritie and exposition of the Scriptures must preuaile in all that haue vvisedom or the feare of God, about the false and vaine gloses of Caluin and his folowers.

Thus then first saith S. Ambrose: *Quid ergo nos? etc. What we then? do not we offer every day? we offer surely: but this sacrifice is an exemplar of that: for we offer alvvayes the self same, and not now one lambe, so morrow an other, but alvvayes the self same thing: therefore it is one sacrifice. otherwise, by this reason because it is offered in many places, there should be many Christes. not so, but it is one Christ in every place, here whole, and there whole, one body. But the vvhich we doe, is done for a commemoration of that vvhich was done. for we offer not an other sacrifice, as the high Priest of the old law, but alvvayes the self same. etc. Primatius S. Augustines icholer doth also ibidem. preoccupate these Protestants obiections thus: *What shall we say then? do not our Priests daily offer

Penance.

31. It is horrible.] Let al Christian people do satisfaction and penance for their finnes in this life. for the iudgements of God in the next life done by God him self, of vvhhat sort soeuer, vvhether temporall as in Purgatorie, or eternal as in Hell, be exceding greuou.

Mercie to the emprisoned for religion.

34. You had compajion.] To be merciful to the afflicted for religion, & to be partakers of their miseries, is a very meritorious vvorke, and giueth great confidence before God in the day of re- payment or remuneration for the same.

Losse of goods for religion.

34. Wish ioy.] If all Christian men vould consider this, they vwould not thinke it so great a matter to lose their land or goods for defense of the Catholike faith.

Faith is the cofort of the afflicted.

38. Liuech of faith.] Faithful men afflicted in this life, haue their comfort in their assured faith and hope of Christi'es comming to deliuer them once from all these miseries; & so by that faith and comfort they liue, vvhereas otherwise this miserable life vvere a death.

A N N O T A T I O N S CHAP. XI.

1. Faith is.] By this description of faith; and by all the commendation thereof through the vvhoie chapter. you may vv ell perceiue that the Apostle knewe not the forged special faith of the Protestants, vv hereby euery one of these new Sectmasters & their folowers beleeue their sinnes are remitted, and that them selues shal be saued, though their sectes be cleane contrarie one to an other.

1. Not appearing.] This is the praise of faith, saith 2. Augustine, if that vv hich is beleeued, be not seen. For vv hat great thing is it, if it has be beleued, vv hich is seen? according to that sentence of our Lord vv hen he rebuked his disciple, saying: Because thou hast seen me Thomas, vv ou hast beleued: blessed are they that haue not seen and haue beleued. Aug. in euang. 10. tract. 79. Vvhich may be a rebuke also and a checke to al those faithies tpeaches, I vvould see him, tast him, touch him and seeie his very flesh in the Sacrament, othervv ise I vv il not beleeue.

6. He that commeth.] Faith is the foundation and ground of all other vertues and vv orship of God, vvithout vv hich no man can please God. Therefore if one be a Iewe, a heathen, or an heretike, that is to say, be vvithout the Catholike faith, al his vvorkes shal profit him no vv hit to saluation.

21. Adored

21. Adored the toppe of his rod.] The learned may see here that the Apostle doth not tie him self to the Hebrue in the place of Genesis vnnence it is alleaged, but foloweth the Septuaginta, though Gen. 47. v. 31. it differ from the Hebrue, as also the other Apostles and Euangelists and our Sauour him self did: neither were they curious (as men now daies) to examine all by the Hebrue only, because they * Aug. de Aug. de riu. Dei. li. 15 a. 14. holy Ghost also, and as true, and as directly intended as the other: and therefore also that translation continued alwaies authentical in the Greeke Church, notwithstanding the diuersitie thereof from the Hebrue. Euen so we that be Catholikes, folovv with all the Latin fathers the authentical Latin translation, though it be not alwaies agreeable to the Hebrue or Greeke that now is. But Calvin is not onely very saucie, but very ignorant, vwhen he saith that the Septuaginta were deceiued, and yet that the Apostle without curiosity vvas content to folovv them: because it is euident, that * the Hebrue being the without pointes, * might be translated the one vvas as vvel as the other. Vvhich they vnderstood so vvel (and therefore were not deceiued) that within three lines after, in the beginning of the next chapter, they translate the same vword, as he vwould haue it in this place.

The citations in the new Testament, not only according to the Hebrue, but to the Septuagita.

the vulgar latin translation.

מטה * that * the Hebrue being the without pointes, * might be translated the one vvas as vvel as the other. Vvhich they vnderstood so vvel (and therefore were not deceiued) that within three lines after, in the beginning of the next chapter, they translate the same vword, as he vwould haue it in this place.

Again e obserue in those vwordes, He adored the toppe of his rod, that adoration (as the Scripture * Ios. 7, 6. vsith this vword) may be done to creatures, or to God at and before a creature: as, at or * before the Arke of the Testament in old time, now at or before the crucifixe, reliques, images: and in the Psalmes 9 131. Adore ye his foote stoole. Adore ye toward his holy mount. We will adore toward the place where his feete stood: or (vvhich by the Hebrue phrase is al one) Adore ye his holy mount. We will adore the place where his feete stood. as also * the Greeke fathers, S. Damaicene li. 1 de imaginibus, and Leontius cited of him, yea S. Chrysostom also do handel these places, and namely that of the Apostle vvhich we nowv speake of, interpreting the Greeke as our Latin hath, and as we do, He adored the rod or the toppe of his rod, that is, the scepter of Ioseph now Prince of Egypt, so fulfilling Iosephs dreames vvhich foretold the same Gen. 37: and vvitthal signifying as it were by this propheticall fact, * the kingdom of Israel or of the ten tribes that vvas to come of Ioseph by Ephraim his younger soune in the first king Ieroboam. thus the Greeke fathers. Vvherevnto may be added, that al this vvas done in type and figure of Christs scepter and kingdom, vvhom he adored by and in his Crosse, as he did Ioseph by or in his rod and scepter: and therefore the Apostle saith, he did it by faith, as hauing respect toward things to come. By al vvhich it is euident, that it is false vvhich the Calvinists teach, that we may not adore image, crucifixe, or any visible creature, that is, we may not adore God at or by such creatures, nor kneele before them: and therefore their corrupt translation of this place for the same purpose is intolerable, saying thus, (LEANNIN E) upon his staffe he adored (G O D), adding no lesse then two vwordes more then is in the Greeke. Which though it might be the sense of the place, and S. Augustine so expoundeth it, yet they should not make his exposition the text of holy Scripture, specially vvhereas he only or al the auncient fathers (as Beza confesseth) so expoundeth it.

Adoration of creatures, and namely of holy things.

Corrupt translation against Dutia.

33. Wrought iustice.] Men are not iust by beleefe onely, as the Protestants affirme, but by vworking iustice. And we may note that in all this long commendation of faith in the fathers and holy persons, their good vworkes are also spectally recounted, as Rahabs harbouring the spies; Abrahams offering his sonne (vvhich their vworkes S. James doth inculcate); Noes making the Arke Gen. 6. Abels better oblation then Cains Gen. 4. & Hebr. 11. v. 4. and so forth, therefore S. Clement Alexandrinus saith, that the said persons and others were iust by faith and obedience by faith and hospitality, by faith and patience, by faith and humility.

Not faith onely.

Iac. 1. Abrahams offering his sonne (vvhich their vworkes S. James doth inculcate): Noes making the Arke Gen. 6. Abels better oblation then Cains Gen. 4. & Hebr. 11. v. 4. and so forth, therefore S. Clement Alexandrinus saith, that the said persons and others were iust by faith and obedience by faith and hospitality, by faith and patience, by faith and humility.

The Apostles purpose then is nothing els, but to proue to the Hebrues (vvhom made so great account of their Patriarches and forefathers and their famous actes) that all these glorious performances and their vworkes were commendable and acceptable onely through the faith they had of Christ, without vvhich faith none of all their liues and vworkes should haue profited them any vvhite: the Gentiles doing many noble actes (as Heretikes may also doe) vvhich are of no estimation before God, because they lacke faith. And that is the scope of S. Pauls Epistle to the Romanes, and of al other passages vvhich he commendeth faith: further prouing specially in this Epistle to the Hebrues, that all their sacrifices were nothing els but figures and attestations of the Christian faith in Christ and his death. Al vvhich high resolution & conclusion against the Ievves and Gentiles, that the Christian faith is the true faith & religion, the Heretikes of our time ignorantly and brutishly abute against Christian vworkes, sacrifice, and Sacraments, vvhich the Apostle meant specially to commend and establish by his high commendation of the faith in Christ.

No vworkes of the Patriarkes or any other profitable, but by their faith in Christ. Which is alwaies the Apostles meaning in comending faith.

40. Without vs should see.] The fathers before Christ could not be accomplished, that is, not admitted to the heauenly ioyes, vision, and fruition of God, till the Apostles and other of the new law were associate to them, and the vway to euerlasting glorie opened by our Lordes death and Ascension. Neither shal either they or we be fully perfected in glorie both of body and soul, till the general resurrection: Gods prouidence being so, that we should not one be consummated, vvitthout an other, all being of one faith, and redeemed by one Lord Christ.

The Patriarkes and other iust not in heauen before Christ.

2. Hospitality.] Hospitality, that is, receiuing and harbouring of poore pilgrimes, persecuted and desolate persons, is so acceptable to God and so honorable, that oftentimes it hath been mens good happe to harbour Angels in steede of poore folke vnawares. Vvwhich must needs be cuer a great benediction to them and their families, as vve see by Abraham and Lot Gen. 18. & 19. (and the like fell also to S. Gregorie, as Io. Diaconus vvriteth, to vvwhose ordinarie table of poore men, not onely Angels but Christ also came in Pilgrimes vveede. In vit. li. 1.6. 10. & li. 2. c. 22. 23.) vvherof if vve had not example and vvarrant by S. Pauls vvordes in this place, and many other expresse Scriptures of the old Testament, these scorneful miscreants of this time making so little account both of good vvorkes and such miraculous enterance of Christ and his Angels into holy mens harbour, vvould make this also seeme fabulous, as they do other like things.

Hospitalitie.

4. Marriage honorable.] The Apostle (saith a holy doctor) saith, Marriage honorable in all, and the bed undefiled. And therefore the seruants of God in that they are not married, thinke not the good of marriage to be a fault, but yet they doubt not perpetual continencie to be better then good marriage, specially in thur time when is is said of continencie, He that can take, let him take. De fid. ad Pet. c. 3. apud Aug. in fine. Marke the doctrine of the fathers and of the Catholike Church concerning matrimonie, that it is honorable, and so honorable, that it is a holy sacrament, but yet * inferiour to virginity and perpetual continencie: honorable in all, that is, all such as may lawfully marie and are lawfully married: not in brother and sister, not in persons that haue vowed the contrarie, to vvhom the same Apostle saith it is damnable. 1. Tim. 5. v. 11. And this were the meaning of this place, if it were to be read thus, Marriage is honorable.

Howv marriage is honorable in all, if the Apostle did so say, as he doth not.

* 1 Cor. 7.

But to see how the Protestants in all their translations, to abuse the simple, do falsifie this sentence of the Apostle, to make it serue for the marriage of Votaries, it is notorious. First, they vse deceit in supplying the verbe subitantiue that vvanteth, making it the Indicatue moode thus, Marriage is honorable &c. as though the Apostle affirmed al marriage to be honorable or lawfull, vvhere the verbe to be ſupplied ought rather to be the Imperatiue moode, Let marriage be honorable, that ſo the ſpeache may be an exhortation or commaundement to them that be or vvill be married, to vſe them ſelues in that ſtate in al fidelity, cleanlineſſe, and coniugal continencie one toward another : as vvhen S. Peter alſo and this A- poſtle exhorte married men to giue honour to their vvives as to the vv weaker veſſels, and to poſſeſſe their veſſel in honour, not in the paſſions of ignominie and vn cleanlineſſe: this is honorable or chaſt marriage, to vv which he here exhorteth. And that it is rather an exhortation, then an affirmation, it is euident by the other partes and circumſtances of :his place both before & after: al vv which are exhortations in their owne tranſlations. this only being in the middes, and as indifferent to be an exhortation as the reſt (by their owne confeſſion) they reſtraine of purpoſe. Our text therfore and al Catholike tranſlatiōs leaue the ſentence indifferent * as it is in the Greeke, and as true tranſlatours ought to do, not preſuming to addiſt it to one ſide, leſt they ſhould reſtraine the ſenſe of the holy Ghoſt to their owne particular fantaſie.

Againe, * our new Tranſlatours corrupt the text in that they tranſlate, in omnibus, among al men, becauſe ſo they thinke it vvould ſound better to the ignorant, that Priests, Religious, and al vvhoſoever, may marie : vvhere they can not tell either by the Greeke or Latin, that in omnibus ſhould be the maſculine gendre, rather then the neutre (as not only Eraſmus, but * the Greeke doctōrs alſo take it) to ſignifie that marriage ſhould be honorably kept betweene man and vvife in al pointes and in al reſpectes. See S. Chryſ. and Theophyl. in hunc locum. For there may be many filthy abuſes in vv edlocke, vv which the Apoſtle vv arneth them to take heede of, and to keepe their marriage- bed vvndefiled. But the third corruption for their purpoſe aforeſaid, and moſt impudent, is, * that ſome of the Caluiniftes for, in omnibus, tranſlate, inter quosuis, vvith a marginal interpretation to ſignifie al orders, conditions, ſtates, and qualities of men. And vvhen vve reade in the pialme and other places of the olde Testament, of the best of praise, it may be thought to be a prophetic of the new Sacrifice, & not of every vulgar thanks giuing. And so the old fathers in the primitive Church to hide the mysteries from the vnworthy or heathen, often speake. What is (saith S. Augustine) a more holy sacrifice of praise, then that which consisteth in thanks giuing, all which the faithful do know in the sacrifice of the Church. Li. 1. cont. aduers. leg. & proph. c. 18. Again, c. 20. The Church from the times of the Apostles by the most certaine successions of Bishops, offereth to God in the body of Christ the Sacrifice of praise. And a litle afterward, Now Israel according to the spirit, that is, the Church offereth a singular Sacrifice according to the spirit: of whose house he will not take calves nor goates, but will take the Sacrifice of praise, not according to the order of Aaron, but according to the order of Melchisedec. See op. 120. c. 19. & ep. 57. ad q. 1. in fine. Thus you see, when the holy fathers handle the Scriptures, they finde Masse and Sacrifice in many places, where the ignorant heretikes or the simple might thinke they speake onely of a common thanks giuing.

16. God is promerited.] This latin vvord promeretur, cannot be expressed effectually in any one English vvord. It signifieth, Gods fauour to be procured by the foresaid vvorkes of almes and charitie, as by the deserts and merites of the doers. Which doctrine and vvord of merites the Aduersaries like so ill, that they flee both here and els vvhere from the vvord, translating here for, promeretur Deus, God is pleased, more neere to the Greeke, as they pretend. Which in deede maketh no more for them then the latin, vvwhich is agreeable to most auncient copies, as vve see by Primatius S. Augustines scholer. For if God be pleased vvith good vvorkes and shew fauour for them, then are they meritorious, and then only faith is not the cause of Gods fauour to men.

The Protestants avoid the vvord meritorious.

Good vvorkes meritorious.

17. Obey your Prelates.] There is nothing more inculcated in the holy Scriptures, then obedience of the lay people to the Priests and Prelates of Gods Church, in matters of soule, conscience, and religion. Vvhereof the Apostle giueth this reason, because they haue the charge of mens soules, and must answer for them: vvwhich is an infinite preeminence and superiority, ioyned vvith burden, and requireth maruelous submission and most obedient subiection of al that be vnder them and their gouernement. From this obedience there is no exception nor exemption of kings nor Princes, be they neuer so great. If they haue soules, and be Christian men, they must be subiect to some Bishop, Priest, or other Prelate. And vvhatsoever he be (though Emperour of all the vvorld) if he take vpon him to prescribe and giue lawes of religion to the Bishops and Priests, vvhom he ought to obey and be subiect vnto in religion, he shal be damned vndoubtedly, except he repent, because he doth against the expresse vvord of God and law of nature. And by this you may see the difference of an heretical and a disordered time, from other Catholike Christian daies. For heresie and the like damnable reuoltes from the Church of God, is no more but a rebellion and disobedience to the Priests of Gods Church, vvhen men refuse to be vnder their discipline, to heare their doctrine, and interpretation of Scriptures, to obey their lawes and counsels. This disobedience and rebellion from the Spiritual Gouernour, vnder pretence of obedience to the Temporal, is the bane of our daies, and specially of our Countrie, vvhere these new Sectes are properly maintained by this false principle, That the Prince in matters of soule and religion may commaund the Prelate: vvwhich is directly and euidently against this Scripture and all other, that commaund the sheepe of Chrittes fold to obey their spiritual Officers.

The Apostle doth inculcate obedience to the Priests and Bishops of Gods Church.

No person exempted from this obediēce, in matters of religion.

THE ARGUMENT OF THE EPISTLE OF S. IAMES.

HIS Epistle (as the rest following) is directed specially, as S. Augustine saith, against the error of only faith, which some held at that time also, by misconstruing S. Pauls wordes. Yea not only that, but many other errors (which then also were annexed vnto it, as they are now) doth this Apostle here touche expressly.

He saith therefore, that not only faith, but also good workes are necessarie: that not only faith, but also good workes do iustifie: that they are actes of Religion, or seruice and worship of God: that to keepe al the commaundements of God, and so to abstaine from al mortal sinne, is not impossible, but necessarie: that God is not author of sinne, no not so much as of temptation to sinne: that we must stay our selues from sinning, with feare of our death, of the Iudgement, of hel: and stirre our selues to doing of good, with our reuerd that we shall haue for it in heauen. These pointes of the Catholike faith he commendeth earnestly vnto vs, inueighing vehemently against them that teach the contrary errors. Howbeit he doth withal admonish not to neglect such, but to seeke their conuersion, shewing them how meritorious a thing that is. Thus then he exhorteth generally to all good workes, & deborteth from al sinne. but yet also namely to certaine, & from certaine: as, from acceptiō of persons, from detraction and rash iudging, from concupiscēce and loue of this world, from swearing: and, to prayer, to almes, to humilitie, confession and penance: but most copiously to patience in persecution.

Which Iames wrote this epistle.

Now, who this Iames was: It is not he, whose feast the Church keepeth the 25 of Iulie, which was S. Johns brother, and whose martyrdom we reade Act. 12. but he, whom the Church worshippeth the first of Maie, who is called Frater Domini, our lordes brother, and brother to Iude, and which was the first Bishop of Hierusalem, of whom we reade Act. 15 & 21. and also Gal. 2. of whose wonderful austeritie and puritie of life, the Ecclesiasticall stories do report. Euseb. li. 2. c. 12. Hiero. in Catalogo.

Therefore as the old High-priest had power and charge ouer the Iewes, not only in Hierusalem and Iurie, but also dispersed in other Countries (as we vnderstand Act. 9. v. 1. & 2.) so S. Iames likewise, being Bishop of Hierusalem, and hauing care not only of those Iewes with whom he was resident there in Iurie, but of al the rest also, writeth this Epistle, To the twelue tribes that are in dispersion. and in them, to al Christians vniuersally dispersed through the world.

Catholike Epistle. The vword Catholike though in the title of this Epistle & the rest folowving (called The Catholike Epistles) it be not vvholy in the same sēse, as it is in the Creede: yet the Protestants so feare and abhorre the vword altogether, that in some of their Bibles they leaue it cleane out, although it be in the Greeke, and in some they had rather translate ridiculously thus, The general Epistle &c. vvhereas these are famously knowven and * specified in antiquitie, by the Euseb. li. name of Catholike Epistles, for that they are vwritten to the vvhole Church, not to any peculiar

We haue to reioyce in persecution (but if we be patient, and wishal absteine from al mortal sinne) 9 considering how we shal be exalted and crownded for it, vvhē the persecutor (who enricheth him self vwith our spoiles) shal fade away. 13 But if any be tempted to fall, or to any other euil, let him not say, God is the author of it, who is the author of al good onely. 19 Such points of the Cath-faith we must be content to learne vwithout contradiction and anger, and to doe accordingly. 26 Because otherwvise we may talke of Religion, but in deeeds it is no Religion.

CHAP. I.

6. Aske in faith nothing doubting.] The Protestants vwould proue by this, that no man ought to pray vwithout assurance that he shall obtaine that vvhich he asketh. Where the Apostle meaneth nothing els, but that the asker of lawfull things may not either mistrust Gods povver and hability, or be in diffidence and despaire of his mercie: but that our doubt be onely in our ovvne vnwortbiness or vndue asking.

V what faith is required in prayer.

13. Let no man say that he is tempted of God.] Vve see by this, that vvhhen the Scriptures (as in the Pater noster and other places) seeme to say, that God doth sometimes tempt vs, or leade vs into tentation: they meane not, that God is any vvayes the author, causer, or mouer of any man to sinne, but onely by permission, and because by his gracious povver he keepeth not the offender from tentations. Therefore the blasphemie of Heretikes, making God the author of sinne, is intolerable. See S. August. ser. 9 de diuers. c. 9.

God is not author of euil.

13. God is not a tempter of euils.] The Protestants as much as they may, to diminish the force of the Apostles conclusion against such as attribute their euil tentations to God (for other tentations God doth send to trie mens patience and proue their faith) take and translate the vvord passiuely, in this sense, that God is not tempted by our euils. Vvhhere more consonantly to the letter and circumstance of the vvordes before & after, & as agreeably to the Greeke, it should be taken actiuely as it is in the Latin, that God is no tempter to euil. for being taken passiuely, there is no coherence of sense to the other vvordes of the Apostle.

Partial and vnwillful translation.

*ἀπειρά-τος κακῶν.

15. Concupiscence vvhen it hath conceived.] Concupiscence (vve see here) of it self is not sinne, as Heretikes falsely teach: but vvhhen by any consent of the minde vve do obey or yeld to it, then is sinne ingendred and formed in vs.

Concupiscence of it self no sinne.

15. Sinne consummate ingendred death.] Here vve see that not al sinne nor al consent vnto concupiscence is mortal or damnable, but vvhhen it is consummate, that is, vvhhen the consent of mans minde fully and perfectly yeldeth to the committing or liking of the acte or motion vvherevnto concupiscence moueth or inciteth vs.

Not euery sinne mortal.

25. The lawv of perfect libertie.] The lawv of the Gospel and grace of Christ, is called the lawv of libertie, in respect of the yoke and burden of the old carnal ceremonies, and because Christ hath by his blood of the newv Testament deliuered all that obey him, from the seruitude of sinne and the Diuel. But not as the Libertines and other Heretikes of this time vwould haue it, that in the newv Testament euery man may followv his ovvne liking and conscience, & may choosē vvwhether he vvill be vnder the lawves and obedience of Spiritual or Temporal Rulers, or no.

V what is the lawv of libertie in the Newv Testament.

27. Religion cleane.] True religion standeth not onely in talking of the Scriptures, or onely faith, or Christes iustice: but in puritie of life, and good vvorkes, specially of charitie and mercie done by the grace of Christ. This is the Apostolical doctrine, and far from the Heretical vanitie of this time.

Good vvorkes a part of mans iustice.

CHAP. II.

Against acception of persons. 10 From al and every sinne vve must abstaine, hauing in al our vvordes and deedes, the Iudgements before our eyes: vvherin vvorkes of mercie shall be required of vs, 14 and onely faith shall not auaille vs. 18 And that the Catholike by his vvorkes sheweth that he hath faith: vvheras the Heretike hath no more faith then the Diuel, talke he of faith neuer so much: and of iustification thereby onely, by the example of Abraham Re. 4. For Abraham in deedes vvas iustified by vvorkes also: 25 and likewise Rahab.

A N N O T A T I O N S
C H A P. II.

1. In acception of persons.] The Apostle meaneth not, as the Anabaptists and other seditious persons sometime gather hereof, that there should be no difference in Commonveales or assemblies, betvvixt the Magistrate and the subiect, the free man and the bond, the riche and the poore, betvvixt one degree and an other. for, God and nature, and the necessitie of man, haue made such distinctions, and men are bound to obserue them. But it is meant onely, or specially, that in spiritual gistes and graces, in matters of faith, Sacraments, and saluation, and bestovving the spiritual functions and charge of soule, vve must esteeme of a poore man or a bond man, no leise then of the rich man and the free, then of the Prince or the Gentleman : because as Christ him self calleth all, and endueth al forts vvith his graces: so in such and the like things vve must not be partial, but count al to be fellowes, brethren, and members of one head. And therefore the Apostle saith vvith a special clause, That vve should not hold or haue the Christian faith vvith or in such differences or partialities.

Scripture abused by the Anabaptistes to make no distinction of persons. V what the Apostle meaneth by acception of persons.

10. Is made guilty of al.] He meaneth not, that vvhofoeuer is a theefe, is also a murderer, or that euery murderer is an aduouterer also : or that al sinnes be equal, according to the Stoikes and the Heresie of Iouinian: much lesse, that he shal haue as great damnation that transgresseth one commaundement, as if he had offended against euery precept. but the sense is, that it shal not auaille him to saluation, that he seemeth to haue kept certaine and not broken al the commaundements: seeing that any one transgression of the Lavv, proueth that he hath not obserued the vvhole, vvich he vvas bound to do, so far as is required, and as is possible for a man in this life. S. Augustine disputing profoundly in his 29 Epistle to S. Hierom, of this place of S. Iames, expoundereth it thus: that he vvich offendeth in one, that is, against the general and great commaundement of loue or charitie (because it is in maner al, as being the summe of al, the plenitude of the lavv, and the perfection of the rest) breaketh after a sort and transgresseth al, no sinne being committed but either against the loue of God, or of our neighbour.

How he that offendeth in one commaundement, is guilty of al.

13. Iudgement vvithout mercie.] Nothing giueth more hope of mercie in the next life, then the vvorkes of almes, charitie, and mercie, done to our neighbours in this life. Neither shal any be vsed vvith extreme rigour in the next vvorld, but such as vsed not mercie in this vvorld. August. de pec. merit. li. 2 c. 3. Vvich is true, not onely in respect of the iudgement to euerlasting damnation, but also of the temporal chastisement in Purgatorie, as S. Augustine signifieth, declaring that our venial sinnes be vvashed avay in this vvorld vvith daily vvorkes of mercie, vvich othervvise should be chastised in the next. See epist. 29 aforesaid in fine. and li. 21 de Ciu. Dei c. 17 in fine.

Vvorkes of mercie excluding grateful to God.

14. What shal it profite, if a man say he hath faith?] This vvhole passage of the Apostle is so cleere against iustification or saluation by onely faith, damnably defended by the Protestants, and so euident for the necessitie, merite, & concurrence of good vvorkes, that their first author Luther and such as exactly folovv him, boldly (after the maner of Heretikes) vvhen they can make no shift nor false glose for the text, denie the booke to be Canonical Scripture. But Calvin and his companions disagreeing vvith their Masters, confesse it to be holy Scripture. but their shifts and fond gloses for answer of so plaine places, be as impudent as the denying of the Epistle was in the other. vvhoo would neuer haue denied the booke, thereby to shev them selues Heretikes, if they had thought thoe vulgar euasions that the Zuinglians and Caluinists do vie (vvhreeof they were not ignorant) could haue serued. In both sortes the Christian Reader may see, that al the Heretikes vaunting of expresse Scriptures & the vvord of God, is no more but to delude the vvorld. vvhereas in deede, be the Scriptures neuer so plaine against them, they must either be vvreited to found as they say, or els they must be no Scriptures at all. And to see Luther, Caluin, Beza, & their fellowves, fitte as it were in iudgement of the Scriptures, to allow or disallow at their pleasures, it is the most notorious example of Heretical pride & miserie that can be. See their prefaces and censures vpon this Canonical Epistle, the Apocalypie, the Machabees, and other.

Only faith, an old heretic.

S. James & the rest inculcare good vvorkes against the error of only faith falsely gathered of S. Paul. les vvordes.

S. Augustines vvhole disputation in this point very notable, & directly against only faith.

21. Abraham vvas he nos iustificed by vvorkes? It is much to be noted that S. Augustine in his booke de fide & operibus c. 14 vvriteth, that the heresie of onely faith iustificing or sauing, vvas an old Heretic euen in the Apostles time, gathered by the false interpretation of some of S. Pauls profound disputation in the Epistle to the Romans, vvherein he commended so highly the faith in Christ, that they thought good vvorkes were not auailable: adding further, that the other three Apostles, James, Iohn, and Iude, did of purpose vvrite so much of good vvorkes, to correct the said error of onely faith, gathered by the misconstruction of S. Pauls vvordes. Yea vvhen S. Peter (Ep. 2 c. 3.) vvarneth the faithful that many things be hard in S. Pauls vvritings, and of light vnlearned men mistaken to their perdition: the said S. Augustine affirmeth, that he meant of his disputation concerning faith, vvich so many Heretikes did mistake to condemne good vvorkes. And in the preface of his commentarie vpon the 31 Psalme, he vvarneth al men, that this deduction vpon S. Pauls speache, Abraham vvas iustificed by faith, therefore vvorkes be nos necessarie to saluation: is the right vvay to the gulfe of Hel and damnation.

And lastly (vvhich is in it self very plaine) that vve may see this Apostle did purposely thus commend vnto vs the necessitie of good vvorkes, and the inanity aud insufficiencie of onely faith, to correct the error of such as misconstrued S. Pauls vvordes for the same: the said holy Doctour noth that of purpose he tooke the very same example of Abraham, vvhom S. Paul said to be iustificed by faith, and declareth that he vvas iustificed by good vvorkes, (specifying the good vvorkes for vvich he vvas iustificed and blessed of God, to vvitte, his obedience and immolation of his onely sonne. But hovv S. Paul saith that Abraham vvas iustificed by faith, see the Annotations vpon that place. Rg. 4. v. 1.

Heresies against good vvorkes.

Workes cocurre vvith faith as cause of iustification.

Workes make vs iust in deede before God.

The Protestants say, by faith onely: S. James cleane contrarie, Nos by faith onely.

* See the annot. vpon the epistle to the Romans c. 2. v. 13.

The manifold meaning of certaine fathers, vvhen they say, Only faith.

22. Faith did vvorke vvish. Some Heretikes hold, that good vvorkes are pernicious to saluation and iustification: other, that though they be not hurtful but required, yet they be no causes or vvorkes of saluation, much lesse meritorious, but are as effectes and fruites issuing necessarily out of faith. Both vvich fictions, falsehoods, and flights from the plaine truth of Gods vvord, are refuted by these vvordes, vvhen the Apostle saith, That faith vvorketh together vvith good vvorkes: making faith to be a coadiutor or cooperatoor vvith vvorkes, and so both ioyntly concurring as causes and vvorkes of iustification: yea aftervvard he maketh vvorkes the more principal cause, vvhen he resembleth faith to the body, and vvorkes to the spirit or life of man.

23. The friend of God. By this also another false and friuolous euasion of the Heretikes is ouertaken, vvhen they feine, that the Apostle here vvhen he saith, vvorkes do iustifie, meane. h that they shevv vs iust before men, and auaille not to our iustice before God. For the Apostle evidently declareth that Abraham by his vvorkes vvas made or truly called the friend of God, and therefore vvas not (as the Heretikes say) by his vvorkes approued iust before man onely.

24. Not by faith onely. This proposition or speache is directly opposite or contradictory to that vvhich the Heretikes hold. For the Apostle saith, Man is iustificed by good vvorkes, and not by faith onely. but the Heretikes say, Man is not iustificed by good vvorkes, but by faith onely. Neither can they pretend that there is the like contradiction or contrarietie betwixt S. James speache and S. Pauls. for though S. Paul say, man is iustificed by faith, yet he neuer saith, by faith onely, nor euer meaneth by that faith vvhich is alone, but alvvayes by that faith vvhich vvorketh by charitie, * as he expoundeth him self. Though concerning vvorkes also, there is a difference betwixt the first iustification, vvhereof S. Paul specially speaketh: and the second iustification, vvhereof S. James doth more specially treat. Of vvich thing * els vvhere there is ynough said.

* Gal. 5.

The fathers in deede vse sometimes this exclusive, sola, onely: but in far other sense then the Protestants. For some of them hereby exclude onely the vvorkes of Moyses law, against the Iewes: some, the vvorkes of nature and moral vertues vvithout the grace or knowledge of Christ, against the Gentiles: some, the necessitie of external good vvorkes vvhere the parties lacke time and means to doe them, as in the case of the penitent thereto: some, the false opinions, sectes, and religions contrarie to the Catholike faith, against Heretikes and miscreants: some exclude reason, sense, and arguing in matters of faith and myteric, against such as vvill beleeeue nothing but that they see or vnderstand: some, the

merite of vvorkes done in sinne before the first iustification: some, the arrogant Pharisaiical vaunting of mans ovne proper vvorkes and iustice, against such as referre not their actions and good deedes to Gods grace. To these purposies the holy Doctores say sometimes, that only faith saueth and serueth: but neuer (as the Protestants vvould haue it) to exclude from iustification and saluation, the cooperation of mans free vvill, dispositions and preparations of our hartes by praier, penance, and sacraments, the vertues of hope and charitie, the purpose of vvell-vvorking and of the obseruation of Gods commaundements: much lesse, the vvorkes and merites of the children of God, proceeding of grace and charitie, after they be iustified and are now in his fauour: vvhich are not only dispositions and preparations to iustice, but the meritorious cause of greater iustice, and of saluation.

25. Rahab.] This Apottle alleageth the good vvorkes of Rahab by vvhich she vvvas iustified, and S. Paul (11 Hebr.) saith she vvvas iustified by faith. Vvwhich are not contrarie one to the other. for both is true, that she vvvas saued by faith, as one saith: and that she vvvas saued by her vvorkes, as the other saith. But it vvvere vvtruely said, that she vvvas saued either by onely faith, as the Heretikes say: or by onely good vvorkes, as no Catholike man euer said. But because some Ievves and Gentil Philosophers did affirme: they, that they should be saued by the vvorkes of Moyse lavv: these, by their moral vvorkes: therefore S. Paul to the Romans disputed specially against both, proving that no vvorkes done vvithout or before the faith of Christ, can serue to iustification or saluation.

S. Paul nameth faith, & S. Iames vvorkes, causes of iustification: but neither the one, faith only: nor the other, vvorkes only.

26. Faith vvithout vvorkes is dead.] S. Iames (as the Protestants feine) saith that faith vvithout good vvorkes is no faith, and that therefore it iustifieth not, because it is no faith. for he saith that it is dead vvithout vvorkes, as the body is dead vvithout the soule, and therefore being dead hath no actiuitie or efficacie to iustifie or saue. But it is a great difference, to say that the body is dead, and to say that it is no body. euen so it is the like difference, to say that faith vvithout vvorkes is dead, and to say that faith vvithout vvorkes is no faith. And if a dead body be not vvithstanding a true body, then according to S. Iames comparison here, a dead faith is not vvithstanding a true faith, but yet not available to iustification, because it is dead, that is, because it is onely faith vvithout good vvorkes.

Faith vvithout vvorkes is a true faith, but not available: as the body vvithout the spirit is a true body, though it be dead.

And therefore it is a great impudencie in Heretikes, and a hard shift, to say that the faith of vvhich the Apottle disputeth at this vvwhile, is no true or properly called faith at all. It is the same faith that S. Paul defined and commended in al the 11 chapter to the Hebrues, and the same vvwhich is called the Catholike faith, and the same vvwhich being formed & made alieue by charitie, iustifieth. Many true it is, that it is not that special faith vvwhich the Heretikes feine onely to iustifie, to vvhit, vvhen a man doth firmly beleuee as an article of his faith, that him self shall be saued. this special faith it is not vvwhereof the Apottle here speaketh. for neither he, nor S. Paul, nor any other sacred vvriter in al the holy Scriptures euer speake or knevve of any such forged faith.

Vvhat faith the Apottle speaketh of: & that he knev no special faith.

ANNOTATIONS
CHAP. V.

4. The hire.] To vvithhold from the poore or labourer the hire or vvages that is due or promised to him for his seruice or vvorke done, is a great iniquitie, and one of those five sinnes vvich in holy vvrite be said to call for vengeance at Gods hand, as vve see here. They be called in the Catechisme, Sinnes crying to heauen. The other foure be, Murder, Gen. 18. v. 20. Vsurie, Exod. 22. v. 27. The sinne against nature, Gen. 18. v. 20. The oppression and vexation of vvidorves, pupilles, strangers, and such like. Ib. & Exod. 3. v. 9.

12. Svveare not.] He forbiddeth not al othes, as the Anabaptists falsely say. for in iustice and iudgement vve may be by our lawfull Magistrate put to svveare, and may lawfully take an othe, as also for the aduantage of any necessarie truth vvhen time and place require. but the custome of svvearing, and al vaine, light, and vnecessarie othes in our daily speache do displease God highly, and are here forbidden by the Apostle, as also by our Sauour. Mat. 5.

14. Let him bring in the Priestis. The Protestants for their special hatred of the holy order of Priestthod, as els vvhere often, so here they corrupt the text evidently, translating Presbyteros, elders. As though the Apostle had meant men of age, and not such as vvere by holy office, Priestis. S. Chrysostom vvho knew the sense and signification of the Greeke vvord according to the Ecclesiastical vse and the vvhole Churches iudgement, better then any Protestant aliuie, taketh it plainely for Sacerdotes, that is, Priestis li. 3 de Sacerdotio prope initium. And if they confesse that it is a vvord of office vvith them also, though they call them Elders, and not Priestis: then vve demaund vvwhether the Apostle meane here men of that iunction vvich they in their nevv Churches call Elders. If they say no, as they must needes (for Elders vvith them are not deputed specially to publike praying or administration of the Sacraments, such as the Apostle here requireth to be sent for) then they must needes graunt, that their Elders answer not to the iunction of those vvich in the nevv Testament are called Presbyteri in Greeke and Latin, and therefore both their translation to be false and fraudulent, and also their naming of their nevv degrees or orders to be fond and incongruous.

If they say their Ministers be correspondent to such as vvere called Presbyteri in holy vvrite and in the Primitive Church, and that they are the men vvhom the Apostle vvillett to be called for to anoile the sicke & to pray for him, vvhy do they not then translate Presbyteros, Ministers? Which they might doe vwith as good reason, as call such as they haue taken in steede of our Catholike Priests, Ministers. Vvwhich vvord being in large acceptation common to all that haue to doe about the celebration of diuine things, vvvas neuer appropriated by the vse either of Scripture or of the holy Church, to that higher function of publike administration of the Sacraments and Seruice, vvwhich is Priesthod: but to the order next vnder it, vvwhich is Deacons hip. And therefore if any should be called Ministers, their Deacons properly should be so termed. And the Protestants haue no more reason to keepe the auncient Greeke vvord of Deacon, appropriated to that office by the vse of antiquity, then to keepe the vvord Priest, being made no lesse peculiar to the state of such onely as minister the holy Sacraments, & offer the Sacrifice of the Altar. But these fellowves folovv neither Gods vvord nor Ecclesiastical vse, nor any reason, but mere phantasie, noueltie, and hatred of Gods Church. And hovv lide they folovv any good rule or reason in these things may appear by this, that here they auoid to translate Priests, and yet in their Cōmunion booke, in their order of visting the sicke, they commonly name the Minister, Priest.

Nnnn ij anoile

They haue no reason to call their Ministers by that name.

14. Anoiling vvith oile.] Here is the Sacrament of extreme Vnction so plainly promulgated (for it vvvas instituted, as al other Sacraments of the nevv Testament, by our Sauour Christ him self, and, as Venerable Bede thinketh and other auncient vvriters, the anoiling of the sicke vvith oile Marc. 6. pertaineth therevnto) that some Heretikes, for the euidence of this place also (as of the other for good vvorkes) deny the Epistle. Other (as the Calvinists) through their confidence of cunning snites and gloses, confessing that S. Iames is the author, yet condemne the Church of God for vsing and taking it for a Sacrament. But vvbat dishonour to God is it (vve pray them) that a Sacrament should be instituted in the matter of oile, more then in the element of vvater? Vvhy may not grace & remission of finnes be annexed to the one as vvvel as to the other, vvwithoute derogation to God?

But they say, Sacraments endure for euer in the Church, this but for a season in the Primitiue Church. Vvhat Scripture telleth them that this general and absoluz prescription of the Apostle in this case, should endure but for a season? vvhenn vvvas it taken avvay, abrogated, or altered? They see the Church of God hath alvvayes vsed it vpon this vvarrant of the Apostle, vvho knevve Christs meaning and institution of it better then these deceiued men, vvwho make more of their ovvne fond ghesse and cōiectures, grounded neither on Scripture nor vpon any circumstance of the text, nor any one authentical author that euer vvrote, then of the expresse vvord of God. It vvvas (say they) a miraculous practise of healing the sicke, during onely in the Apostles time, and not long after. Vve aske them vvwhether Christ appointed any certaine creature or external element vnto the Apostles generally to vvork miracles by. Him self vsed sometimes clay and spittle, sometimes he sent them that vvvere diseased, to vvash them selues in vvwaters. but that he appointed any of those or the like things for a general medicine or miraculous healing onely, that vve reade not, for in the beginning, for the better inducing of the people to faith and deuotion, Christ vvould haue miracles to be vvrought by sundry of the Sacraments also. Vvwhich miraculous vvorkes ceasing, yet the Sacraments remaine still vnto the vvorldes end.

Againe vve demaund, vvwhether euer they read or heard that men vvvere generally commaunded to seeke for their health by miraculous meanes. Thirdly, vvwhether al Priests, or (as they call them) Elders, had the gift of miraeles in the primitiue Church? No, it can not be, for though some had, yet al these indifferently of vvhom the Apostle speaketh, had not the gift: and many that vvvere no Priests, had it, both men and vvomen, vvwhich yet could not be called for, as Priests vvvere in this case. And though the Apostle and others could both cure men and reuiue them againe, yet there vvvas no such general precept for sicke or dead men, as this, to call for the Apostles to heale or restore them to life againe. Lastly, had any external element or miraculous practise, vnles it vvvere a Sacrament, the promise of remission of al kinde of actual finnes ioyned vnto it? or could S. Iames institute such a ceremonie him self, that could saue both body and soule, by giuing health to the one, and grace and remission to the other? At other times these contentious vvranglers raile at Gods Church, for annexing onely the remission of venial finnes to the element of vvater, made holy by the Priests blessing thereof in the name of Christ, and his vvord: and loe here they are driuen to held that S. Iames prescribed a miraculous oile or creature vvwhich had much more pover and efficacie. Into these straites are such miscreants brought that vvvil not beleue the expresse vvord of God, interpreted by the practise of Gods vniuersal Church.

Venerable Bede in 9. Luc. saith thus. It is cleere that this custome vvvas deliuered to the holy Church by the Apostles them selues, that the sicke should be anoined vvwith oile consecrated by the Bishops blessing. See for this, and for the assertion & vie of this Sacrament, S. Innocentius ep. 1. ad Decentium Engubinum cap. 8. to. 1. Conc. & Lib. 2. de vvisitatione infirmorum in S. Augustine cap. 4. Concil. Cabilonense 2. cap. 48. Conc. Wormatiense cap. 72. to. 3. Conc. Aquisgrana. c. 8. Florentinum, and other later Councils. S. Bernard in the life of Malachie in fine. This holy oile becaute the faithful sawv to haue such vertue in the primitiue Church, diuers caried it home and occupied it in their infirmities, not vsing it in the Sacramental sort vvwhich the Apostle prescribed, as the Aduersaries vnlearnedly obiekt vnto unto vs: but as Christians now do (and then also did) concerning the water of Baptisme, which they vsed to take home with them after it was halloved, and to giue it their diseased to drinke.

15. The praier of faith.] He meaneth the forme of the Sacrament, that is, the vvordes spoken at the same time vvhhen the partie is anoiled, vvhich no doubt are most auacient and Apostolike. Not that the vvord or praier alone should haue that great effect here mentioned, but ioyned vvvith the foresaid vnction, as is plaine.

The sacramental vvordes.

15. Shal saue.] The first effect of this Sacrament is, to saue the soule, by giuing grace and comfort to vvithstand the terrours and tentations of the enemy, going about (specially in that extreme of death) to driue men to desperation or distresse of minde and other damnable inconueniences. the vvhich effect is signified in the matter of this Sacrament specially.

The three effects of this Sacrament.

15. Shal life him vp.] Vvhen it shal be good for the saluation of the partie, or agreeable to Gods honour, this Sacrament restoreth also a man to bodily health againe, as experience oftē teacheth vs. Vvwhich yet is not done by vvay of miracle, to make the partie sodenly vvhole, but by Gods ordinarie prouidence and vsē of second causes, vvhich othervvise should not haue had that effect, but for the said Sacrament. This is the second effect.

15. They shal be remitted him.] Vvhat finnes soeuer remaine vnremitted, they shal in this Sacrament and by the grace thereof be remitted, if the persons vvorthely receiue it. this is the third effect. S. Chryostom of this effect saith thus: They (speaking of Priests) do not onely remis finnes in baptisme, but aftervvard also, according to the saying of S. James, If any be sicke, let him bring in the Priests etc. Li. 3 de Sacerd. prope inisitiū. Let the Protestants marke that he calleth Presbyteros, sacerdotes: that is, Priests, and maketh them the onely ministers of this Sacrament, and not elders or other lay men. By al vvhich you see this Sacrament of al other to be marvelous plainly set forth by the Apostle. Onely sicke men and (as * the Greeke vvord giueth) men very vveake must receiue it: onely Priests must be the ministers of it: the matter of it is holy oile: the forme is praier, in such sort as vve see now vsed: the effects be as is aforesaid. Yet this so plaine a matter and so profitable a Sacrament, the enemy by Heretikes vvould vvholly abolish.

Priests (and not Elders) are the ministers of this Sacrament.

* 1^o 2^o 3^o 4^o 5^o 6^o 7^o 8^o 9^o 10^o 11^o 12^o 13^o 14^o 15^o

In hunc locum.

16. Confesse therefore.] It is not certaine that he speaketh here of sacramental Confession: yet the circumstance of the letter vvē beareth it, and very probable it is that he meaneth of it: and Origen doth so expound it bo. 2 in Lemit. & Venerable Bede vvriteth thus, In this sentence (saith he) there must be this discretion, that our daily and litle finnes vve confesse one to an other, vnto our equals, and beleue to be saued by their daily praier. but the vncleanmes of the greater leprosie let vs according to the law open to the Priest, and as his pleasure in vvhat maner and how long time he shal commaund, let vs be careful to be purified. But the Protestants fleeing from the very vvord confession in despite of the Sacrament, translate thus, Acknowledge your faulces one to an other. They do not vvē like to haue in one sentence, Priests, praying ouer the sicke, anoiling them, forgiuing them their finnes, confession, and the like.

Confession

17. He praied.] The Scriptures to vvhich the Apostle alludeth, make no mention of Elias praier. therefore he knew it by tradition or reuelation. Vvhereby vve see that many things vvvritten be of equal truth vvvith the things vvvritten.

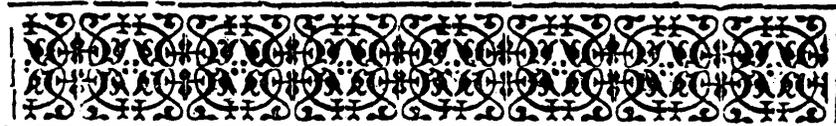

Truthe vvvritten and knowven by tradition.

20. Maketh to be conuerted.] Here vve see the great reppard of such as seeke to conuert Heretikes or other finnes from error and vvickednes: and how necessarie an office it is, specially for a Priest.

Conuerting of soules

20. Shal saue.] Vve see, it derogateh not from God, to attribute our saluation to any man or Angel in heauen or earth, as to the vvorkers thereof vnder God, by their praiers, preaching, correction, counsel, or othervvise. Yet the Heretikes are so folish and captious in this kinde, that they can not heare patiently, that our B. Lady or others should be counted meanes or vvorkers of our saluation.

Our saluation attributed to men, vvithout derogation to Christ.

THE ARGVMENT OF BOTH THE EPISTLES OF S. PETER, THE FIRST, AND THE SECOND.

P S. Peter we reade at large, both in the Gospels, and in the Actes of the Apostles: and namely, that Christ designed him, and also made him his vicar (as S. Marten for that cause in the catalogue of the Apostles, calleth him Primus, the first, and all antiquitie, Princeps Apostolorum, the Prince of the Apostles) and that he accordingly executed that office after Christes departure, placing the Church first among the Iewes in Hierusalem and in al that countrey and coastes about, as Christ also him self, before had, preached to the Iewes alone.

But preaching at length to the Gentiles also, according to Christes commission (Mat. 28. 7. 19.) and being now come to Rome, the head citie of the Gentiles, from thence he writeth this Epistle to his Christian Iewes, hausing care of them in his absence, no lesse then when he was present: and not to the Iewes that were at home, (belike because they had S. Iames, or his successor S. Simon Cleopha, resident with them.) but * to them that were dispersed in Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, and Bithynia.

* See the Annotation & Pet. 5. v. 13.

And that he writeth it from Rome, him self signifieth saying: The Church that is in Babylon saluteth you. * Where by Babylon he meaneth Rome, as all antiquitie doth interpret him: not, that he so calleth the Church of Rome, but the heauenly state of the Romane empire, which then, and 300 yeres after, vnto the conversion of Constantinus the Emperour, did persecute the elect Church of Rome, in so much that the first 33 Bishops thereof vnto S. Siluester, were all Martyrs.

* See the Annotation vpon S. Iames epistle c. 2. v. 21.

For the matter whereof he writeth, him self doth signifie it in these wordes: This loe the second Epistle I write to you, my deereft, in which (Epistles) I stirre vp by admonition, your sincere minde, that you may be mindeful of those wordes & c. So he saith there of both together. And againe of the first to the same purpose, in another place: I haue breuely written, beseeching and testifying that this is the true grace of God, wherein you stand. For, there were at that time certaine Seducers (as * S. August. also hath told vs) who went about to teach Onely faith, as though good workes were not necessarie, nor meritorious. there were also great persecutions, to compel them with terrour to denie Christ & al his religio. He therefore exhorteth the accordingly, neither for persecution, neither by seduction to forsake it: though in the first, his exhortation is more principally against persecution: and in the second, more principally against seduction. The first epistle is noted to be very like to S. Pauls epistle to the Ephesians, in wordes also, and so thicke of Scriptures, as though he spake nothing els.

The time when the first was written, is uncertaine: the second was written a litle before his death, as is gathered by his wordes in the same. c. 1. 7. 14.

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF PETER THE APOSTLE.

CHAP. I.

He comforteth them in their persecutions (being not by Baptisme made the children of God) with the hope of their heauenly inheritance: 6 shewing how meritorious it is for them to be so constant in faith; 10 and confirming them therein with the authoritie of the Prophets and of the Holy Ghost. 15 Exhorting them to live also accordingly in all holines, 15 considering the holines of God, the uprightnes of his iudgement, the price of their redemption by Christ, 22 and the vertues of the seede in them. (Which is grace regeneratus in Baptisme) foretold by the Prophet also.

CHAP. II.

Spiritual hostes and Priests.

x. Spiritual hostes.] Here vve see, that as he speaketh of spiritual hostes, vvhich every Christian man offereth, so he speaketh not properly of priesthod, vwhen he maketh al Priest: but of a spiritual, priesthod. Which spiritual priesthod vvas also in al the Lewes: but the priesthod (properly so called) vvas onely in the sonnes of Aaron, and they offered the sacrifices (properly so called) vvhich none besides might offer.

Obedience to temporal princes.

13. Be subiect.] Not onely our Maister Christ, but the Apostles and al Christians vvere euer charged by such as thought to bring them in harred vwith Princes, vwith disobedience to kings and temporal Magistrates. therefore both * S. Paul and this Apostle do specially vvarne the faithful, that they giue no occasiō by their ill demēanure to tecular Princes, that the Heathen should count them diobedient or seditious vworkers against the States of the vworld. Ro. 13.

God instituted the Spiritual gouernemēt in more excellent maner then the temporal.

13. To every humane creature.] So he calleth the temporal Magistrate elected by the people, or holding their Souerainty by birth & carnal propagation, ordained for the vworldly vwealth, peace, and prosperiē of the subiects: to put a difference betvixt that humane Superiority, and the spiritual Rulers and regiment, guiding and gouerning the people to an higher end, and instituted by God him self immediatly. for Christ did expressly constitute the forme of regiment vied euer since in the Church. He made one the cheefe, placing Peter in the Supremacie: he called the Apostles and Disciples, giuing them their seueral authorities. Aftervvard * God guided the lot for choise of S. Martias in Iudas place: and the Holy Ghost expressly and namely seuered and chose Paul and Barnabas vnto their Apostolical function: and generally the Apostle saith of al spiritual Rulers, The holy Ghost hath placed you to rule the Church of God. AB. 1.

And although al pover be of God, and kings rule by him, yet that is no otherwise, but by his ordinarie concurrence, and prouidence, vwhereby he procureth the earthly comodity or vwealth of men, by maintaining of due superiority and subiectiō one to vwards another, and by giuing pover to the people and Commonvwealth to choose to them selues some kinde or forme of Regiment, vnder vvhich they be content to liue for their preferuation in peace and tranquillity. But Spiritual superiority is far more excellent, as in more excellent sort depending, no: of mans ordinance, election, or (as this Apostle speaketh) creation, but of the Holy Ghost, vwho is alwaies resident in the Church (vvhich is Christs body mystical, and therefore an other manner of Commonvwealth AB. 20.

Eph. 4. monvwealth then the earthly) concurring in singular sort to the creation of al necessarie Officers in the said Church, euen to the vvorlde end, as S. Paul vvriteth to the Ephesians.

Hebr. 13. Lest therefore the people, being then in so precise sort alwaies vvarned of the excellencie of their Spiritual gouernours * and of their obedience tovvard them, might neglect their dueties to Temporal Magistrates, specially being infidels, and many times tyrants and persecutors of the faith, as Nero and other vvere then: therefore S. Peter here vvarneth them to be subiect, for their bodies and goods and other temporal things, euen to the vvorldly Princes both infidels and Christians, vvhom he calleth humane creatures.

15. To the king as excellig.] Some simple heretikes & others also not vnlearned, at the beging, for lacke of better places, vvould haue proued by this, that the king vvvas head of the Church, and aboute al Spiritual rulers: and to make it sound better that vvay, they falsely translated it, To the king as to the cheefe head. in the Bible of the yere 1562. But it is euident that he calleth the king, the precellent or more excellent, in respect of his Vicegerents vvvhich he calleth Dukes or Gouernours that be at his appointment: and not in respect of Popes, Bishops, or Priests, as they haue the rule of mens soules: vvho could not in that charge be vnder such Kings or Emperours as the Apostle speaketh of: no more then the kings or Emperours then, could be heads of the Church, being Heathen men and no members thereof, much lesse the cheefe members. See a notable place in S. Ignatius ep. ad Smyrneses, vvhere he exhorteeth them first to honour God, next the Bishop, & then the king.

Heret. translation.

The Kings excellencie of power is in respect of the nobilitie and lay magistrates vnder him.

This is an inuincible demōstration, that this text maketh not for any spiritual claime of earthly kings, because it giueth no more to any Prince then may and ought to be done and graunted to a Heathen Magistrate. Neither is there any thing in al the new Testament that proueth the Prince to be head or cheefe gouernour of the Church in spiritual or Ecclesiastical causes, more then it proueth any heathen Emperour of Rome to haue been. for they vvere bound in temporal things to obey the heathen being lawfull kings, to be subiect to them euen for conscience, to keepe their temporal lawes, to pay them tribute, to pray for them, and to doe al other natural duties: and more no scriptures bidde vs to doe to Christian kinges.

Christiā Princes haue no more right to be supreme heads in spiritual causes, then the Heathen.

16. Not as hausing.] There vvere some Libertines in those daies, as there be now, that vnder pretence of libertie of the Gospel, sought to be free from subiection and lawes of men as now vnder the like vvicked pretence, Heretikes refuse to obey their spiritual rulers and to obserue their lawes.

Libertines.

18. But also the vvaiuuward.] The Vviclestites and their folovvers in these daies, sometimes to moue the people vnto sedition, hold and teach that maisters and magistrates loie their authoritie ouer their seruants and subiects, if they be once in deadly sinne, and that the people in that case neede not: in conscience obey them. Vvhich is a pernicious and false doctrine, as is plaine by this place, vvhere vve be expressly commaunded to obey euen the ill-conditioned, vvvhich must be alwaies vnderstood, if they commaund nothing against God. for then this rule is euer to be folloved. Vve must obey God rather then men. Act. 5, 29.

Deadly sinnes of Princes or Superiors exempt not the subiectes fro obedience, as vviclestie held.

CHAP. III.

ANNOTATIONS
CHAP. III.

19. To them that were in prison.] S. Augustine in his 99 Epistle in principio, confesseth this place to be exceeding hard to vnderstand, & to haue many difficulties vvhich he could neuer explicate to his owne satisfaction. Yet vnto Heretikes this and al other textes be casie, not doubting but that is the sence vvhich them selues imagin, vvhatsouer other men deeme thereof. S. Augustine onely findeth him self sure of this, that Christs descending into Hel in soule after his death, is plainly proued hereby. Vvhich thing he declareth there, to be conformable to diuers other expresse vvordes of holy Vvrite, and namely to this same Apostles sermon Act. 2. And at length he concludeth thus, Quis ergo nisi infidelis negauerit fuisse apud inferos Christum? that is, Therefore vvhobus an infidel, vvill deny that Christ vvvas in Hel? Calvin thē (you see) vvith al his folovvers are infidels, vvho in steede of this descending of Christ in soule after his death, haue inuented an other desperate kinde of Christs being in Hel, vvhe he vvvas yet aliue on the Crosse. S. Athanasius also in his epistle cited by S. Epiphanius kar. 77 in principio, and in his booke de Incarnacione Verbi propiu inisio, S. Cyril de vera fide ad Theodosium, Oecumenius, and diuers others vpon this place, proue Christs descending to Hel. As they likewise declare vpon the vvordes folovving, that he preached to the spirites or ioules of mē deteined in Hel or in Prison.

Christ in soule descended vnto hel, vvwhiles his body lay in the graue.

But vvwhether this vvord Prison or Hel be meant of the inferiour place of the damned, or of Limbus patrum called Abrahams bosome, or some other place of temporal chastisement: and, to vvhom he preached there, and vvho by his preaching or presence there vvvere deliuered, and vvho they vvvere that are called, Incredulou in the daies of Noë: al these things S. Augustine calleth great profundities, confessing him self to be vnable to reache vnto it: onely holding fast and assured this article of our faith, that he deliuered none deputed to damnation in the lowest hel, and yet not doubting but that he released diuers out of places of paines there, vvvhich can not be out of any other place then Purgatorie. See the said Epistle, vvhere also he insinuateth other expositions for explication of the manifold difficulties of this hard text, vvvhich vvvere to long to reherse, our special purpose being onely to note briefly the things that touche the controuersies of this time.

The Calvinists denying the same, are (by S. Augustines judgement) infidels.

20. Incredulou sometime.] They that take the former vvordes, of Christs descending to Hel, and deliuering certaine there deteined, do expound this, not of such as died in their infidelitie or vvithout al faith in God, for such vvvere not deliuered: but either of some that once vvvere incredulous, and afterwards repented before their death: or rather and specially of such as othervvise vvvere faithful, but yet trusted not Noës preaching by his vvvorke and vvword, that God vvould destroy the vvorld by vvater. Vvho yet being otherwise good men, vvhen the matter came to passe, vvvere sorie for their errour, and died by the flood corporally, but yet in state of saluation, and being chastised for their fault in the next life, vvvere deliuered by Christs descending thither, and not they onely, but al others in the like conditiō. For the Apostle giueth these of Noës time but for an example.

Certaine difficulties vvhereof S. Augustine doubteth.

Purgatorie.

Vvhat vvwere the incredulous persons of vvhom the Apostle here speaketh.

21. Of the like forme.] The vvater bearing vp the Arke from sinking, and the persons in it from drowning, vvvas a figure of Baptisme, that likewise saueth the vvorthie receiuers from euerlasting perishing. As Noë (saith S. Augustine) vvith his, vvvas deliuered by the vvater and the vvood, so the familie of Christ by Baptisme signed vvith Christs Passion on the Crosse. Li. 12. Cont. Faustum c. 14. Again he saith, that as the vvater saued none out of the Arke, but vvvas rather their destruction: so the Sacrament of Baptisme receiued out of the Catholike Church at Heretikes or Schismatikes hands, though it be the same vvater and Sacrament that the Catholike Church hath, yet profiteth none to saluation, but rather vvorketh their perdition. Vvhich yet is not meant in case of extreme necessitie, vvhen the partie should die vvithout the said Sacrament, except he tooke it at an Heretikes or Schismatikes hand. Neither is it meant in the case of infants, to vvhom the Sacrament is cause of saluation, they being in no fault for receiuing it at the hands of the vvfaithful, though their parents and frendes that offer them vnto such to be baptized, be in no small fault. S. Hierom to Damasus Pope of Rome, compareth that See to the Arke, & them that communicate vvith it, to them that vvvere saued in the Arke: al other Schismatikes and Heretikes, to the rest that vvvere drowned.

Noës Arke & the vvater, a figure of christs Crosse & Baptisme.

Baptisme receiued of Heretikes or Schismatikes, vvhen damnable, vvhaen not.

Ep. 57.

21. The examination of a good conscience.] The Apostle seemeth to allude here to the very forme of Catholike Baptisme, conteining certaine interrogatories and solemne promises made of the articles of the Christian faith, and of good life, and of renouncing Satan and al his pompes and vvorkes. vvvhich (no doubt) howvvocuer the Calvinists esteeme of them, are the very Apostolike ceremonies vsed in the ministratiō of this Sacrament. See S. Denys in sine Ec. hierarchia. S. Cyril li. 12 in 10. c. 64. S. Augustine ep. 23. S. Basil de Sp. sancto c. 12 and 15. S. Ambrose de ys. qui mysieris initiantur c. 2. 3. 4.

ANNOTATIONS
 CHAP. IIII.

9. Charitie quereth.] Faith onely cannot iustife, seeing that charitie also doth cause remission of sinnes. And saying charitie, he meaneth loue and charitable vvorkes toward our neighbours, vnto vvhich vvorkes of mercie the Scriptures do specially attribute the force to extinguish al sinnes. See S. Augustine c. 69 Enchiridij and tract. 1. in ep. 1. 10. c. 1. and venerable Bede vpon this place. And in the like sense the holy Scriptures commonly commend vnto vs almes and deedes of mercie for redemption of our sinnes. Prouerb. c. 10. Ecclesiastici 12. v. 2. Danielis c. 4. v. 24.

 faith.
 Vvorkes of mercie.

17. Th. at iudgement begin.] In this time of the new Testament, the faithful and al those that meane to liue gooly (specially of the Clergie) must first and principally be subiect to Gods chastisemen: and temporal afflictions, vvhich are here called iudgement. Vvich the Apostle recordeth for the comfort and confirmation of the Catholike Christians, vvho vvere at the time of the vvriting hereof, exceedingly persecuted by the heathen Princes & people.

The better me most afflicted
 in this life.

18. If the iust.] Not that a man dying iust and in the fauour of God, can afterward be in doubt of his saluation, or may be rejected of God: but that the iust being both in this life subiect to assaults, tentations, troubles, and dangers of falling from God and losing their state of iustice, & also oftentimes to make a strait count, & to be temporally chastised in the next life, cannot be saued vvithout great vvatch, fears, and trembling, and much labouring and chastisement. And this is far contrarie to the Protestants doctrine, that putte:h no iustice but in faith alone, maketh none iust in deede and in truth, teacheth men to be so secure and assured of their saluation, that he that hath liued vvickedly al his life, if he onely haue their faith at his death, that is, if he beleue stedfastly that he is one of the elect, he shal be as sure of his saluation immediatly after his departure, as the best liuer in the vvorld.

The iust man him self is hardly saued.

Against the vaine securitie of only faith.

CHAP. V.

He exhorteth Priests to feede their flockes, onely for Gods sake and reward of heauen, vvithout al lordshimes. 5 the laie to obey: al to be humble one to vvards an other. 8 to be constant in the Catho. faith, considering it is not man, but that lion the Diuel that persecuseth them, 9 as he doth the vvhole Church also, & that God vvil after a vvhile make them seoure in heauen.

ANNOTATIONS CHAP. V.

Senior in the 1. Seniors.] Though the Latin, Senior, be not appropriated to holy order by vſe of vulgar tranſla- ſpeache, neither in the Latin nor in our language: yet it is plaine that the Greeke vvord tion is often Prefbyter, vvwhich the Apoſtle here vſeth, is here alſo (as commonly in other places of the Prieſt or Bi- new Teſtament) a vvord of Eccleſiaſtical office, and not of age, and is as much to ſay as ſhop. See Act. Frieſt or Biſhop. For the Apoſtle him ſelf being of that order, ſpeaketh (as by his vvordes 13- it is plaine) to ſuch as had charge of ſoules, ſaying, Feede the ſlocke of God vvhiſh: is among you. becauſt

Because vve folow the vulgar latin translation, vve say Seniors and Senior: vvh whereas other- vwise vve might and should say according to the Greeke, The Priests therefore I beseech, my selfe followe - priest wish them. So doth S. Hierom read (Presbyteros comprey byter) and expound ep. 85. So translateth Erasmus, and Beta him self.

3. Overruling.] Not superiority, preeminence, souerainity, or rule on the one side, nor obedience, subiection, and inferiority on the other side, be forbidden in the Clergie: but tyrannie, pride, and ambitious domination be forbidden, and humility, meekenes, moderation are commended in Ecclesiastical Officers. the Greeke vword here of ruling or ouerruling, being the same that our Sauour vseth in the Gospel of the tyrannical rule of secular Heathen Princes, saying to his Apostles, that it shall not be so among them: according as here the prince of the Apostles teacheth his brethren the Ecclesiastical rulers.

Not Superioritie but tyrannie and lordlines is forbidden in the Clergie.

3. The Clergie.] Some of the English new translations turne it corruptly, Farishes: others, heritages: both, to auoid the most knowen, true, and common vword in al Christian languages, to vvit, Clergie, a vword, by vse of al antiquity, & agreeably to the holy Scriptures, made proper to the Spirituality or Clergie. though in an other more vulgar acceptation it may agree to al Christs choise heritage, as vvel of lay people as Priests. vvhich the Protestants had rather folovv, because they vwill haue no difference betuene the laity & the Clergie. But the holy fathers far other vwise euen from the beginning. Vvhereof see S. Cyprian ep. 4. 5. 6. &c. And S. Hierom ep. 2 to Nepotianus c. 5. vvhich he interpreteth this vword. Therefore (saith he) Clericus, that is, a Clergie man, vulicis seruus the Church of Christ, let him first interpret his name, and the signification of the name being declared, let him endeavour to be that vvhich he is called. If κληρος (Clerus) in Greeke, be called in Latin, Sors, therefore are they called Clerici, that is, Clergie men, because they are of the lot of our Lord, or because our Lord him self is the lot or portion of Clergie men &c.

4. Crowne of glorie.] As life euerlasting shall be the reeward of al the iust, so the preachers & Pastors that doe vvel, for their doing shall haue that reeward in a more excellent degree, expressed here by these vwordes, Crowne of glorie. according to the saying of Daniel c. 12. They that sleepe in the dust of the earth, shall awake, one sort to life euerlasting, others to euerlasting rebuke. but such as be learned, shall shine as the brightness of the firmaments: and such as instruct many to iustice, shall be as starrs, during al eternitie.

The heavenly crowne of Doctors and preachers.

31. That is in Babylon.] The Protestants shew them selues here (as in al places vvhich any controuersie is, or that maketh against them) to be most vvhonett and partial handlers of Gods vword. The auctient fathers, namely S. Hierom in Catalogo de scriptoribus Ecclesiasticis, verbo Marcus: Eusebius li. 2. c. 14. hist. Oecumenius vpon this place: and many moe agree, that Rome is meant by the vword Babylon, here also as in the 16 and 17 of the Apocalypse: saying plainly, that S. Peter vvrote this Epistle at Rome, vvhich is called Babylon for the resemblance it had to Babylon that great citie in Chaldæa (vvhich the Iewes vvore captiues) for magnificence, Monarchie, effort and confusion of al peoples and tongues, and for that it vvas before Christ and long after, the seate of al Ethnike superstition & idolatrie, & the slaughter house of the Apostles & other Christian men, the Heathen Emperours the keeping their cheete residẽce there. See S. Leo Ser. 1 in Nati. Petri & Pauli.

S. Peter vvri- teth from Ba- bylon, that is, Rome.

This being most plaine, and consonant to that vvhich folovveth of S. Marke, vvhom al the Ecclesiastical histories agree to haue been Peters scholer at Rome, and that he there vvrote his Gospel: yet our Aduersaries fearing hereby the sequelle of Peters or the Popes supremacy at Rome, deny that euer he vvas there, or that this Epistle vvas vvritten there, or that Babylon doth here signifie Rome: but they say that Peter vvrote this Epistle at Babylon in Chaldæa, though they neuer reade either in Scriptures or other holy or profane historie, that this Apostle vvas euer in that towne. but see their shameles partiality. here Babylon (say they) is not taken for Rome, because it vould folovv that Peter vvas at Rome & c. but in the Apocalypse vvhich al euil is spoken of Babylon, there they vwill haue it signifie nothing els but Rome, and the Romane Church also, not (as the fathers interpret it) the temporal state of the Heathen Empire there. So do they folovv in euery vword no euil thing but the aduantage of their ovvne heresie. See the Annotation vpon the last of the Romans v. 16. and vpon the 17 of the Apocalypse. v. 5.

Vvwhy Rome vvas called Babylon.

The Prote- stants vvil haue Babylon to signifie Rome in other places but not here.

And as for their vvragling vpon the supputation of the time of his going thither, and the number of years that he vvas there, & the diuersitie that seemeth to be in the Ecclesiastical vvriters concerning the same, read B. Fisher and other that substantially answer al such caules. And if such contentions reasoning might take place, vve should hardly beleue the principal things recorded eith in Ecclesiastical histories, or in the Scriptures them selues. Concerning the time of

The Prote- stants vvragle about the time of Peters being at Rome.

Many things most true (euen in the Scriptures) are not agreed vpon concerning the time.

Christe fleeing into Egypt, of the comming of the Sages to adore him, yea of the yerres of his age, & time of his death, al auncient vvriters do not agree. and concerning the day of his last supper and institution of the holy Sacrament, there is diuersitie of opinions. Shal we therefore inferre that he neuer died, and that the other things neuer vvere? Can the Heretikes accord al the histories that seeme euen in holy Scripture to haue contradiction? Can they tel vs certainly, vvhhen Dauid first came to Saul, and the like? doubt they vvwhether the vvorld vvas euer created, because the count of the yerres is diuers? Do they not beleeu that Paradise euer vvas, because no man knoweth vvhere it is? and such other like things infinite to rehearse? Vvhich vvhen they vvere done, vvere plaine and knowen things in the vvorld: and novv for vs to call them to an account, after so many yerres, ages, and vvorldes, is but sophistication and plaine infidelitie. And this sect of the Protestants standing onely vpon destruction, and negatiues, & dealing vvith our religion euen as Iulian, Porphyrie, and Lucian did, it is an ealie thing for them to bestow their time in picking of quazels.

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF PETER THE APOSTLE.

CHAP. I.

How much God hath done for them, making them Christians: & and that they againe must doe their part, not hauing onely faith, but al other vertues also and good vvorkes, that so they may haue the more assurance to enter into the kingdom of heauen. 13 And that he is so careful to admonish them, knowing that his death is at hand, and, knowing also most certainly the comming of Christ by the vvitness of the Father him self, as also by the Prophets. Concerning vvhom he vvearneth them that they follow not private vvrites, but the holy Ghost (speaking novv in the Church.)

of that concupiscence vvhich is in the vvorlde. † And you

7 vertue, knowvledge: † and in knowvledge, abstinence: and in 8 abstinence, patience: and in patience, pietie: † and in pietie,

ANNOTATIONS
CHAP. I.

10. By good vvorkes.] Here vve see, that Gods eternal predestination and election consisteth vvith good vvorkes: yea that the certainty and effect thereof is procured by mans free vvill and good vvorkes, and that our vvell doing is a meane for vs to attaine to the effect of Gods predestination, that is, to life euerlasting and therefore it is a desperate folly and a great signe of reprobate persons, to say, If I be predestinate, doe vvhat I vvill, I shal be saued. Nay, the Apostle saith, If thou hope to be one of the predestinate (for knowv it thou canst not) do vvell, that thou maist be the more assured to attaine to that thou hopest: or, make it sure by good vvorkes. The Protestants in such cases not much liking these vvordes, by good vvorkes, though the Latin haue it vniuersally, and some Greeke copies also, as Beza confesseth, leaue them out in their translations, by their vvonted pollicie.

15. After my decease also.] These vvordes though they may be easily altered by construction into diuers senses not vnttrue, yet the correspondēce of the partes of the sentēce going before and folowving, giue most plaine this meaning, that, as during his life he vvould not omit to put them in memorie of the things he taught them, so after his death (vvhich he knew should be shortly) he vvould not faile to endeouour that they might be vvindful of the same. Signifying that his care ouer them should not cease by death. & that by his intercession before God after his departure, he vvould doe the same thing for them, that he did before in his life by teaching and preaching. This is the sense that the Greeke Scholies speake of, and this is most proper to the text, and consonant to the old vse of this Apostle and other Apottolike Saincts and fathers of the primitive Church.

S. Clement in his Epistle to S. James our Lordes brother, vvitnesseth, that S. Peter encouraging him to take after his decease the charge of the Apostolike Romane See, promised that after his departure he vvould not ceate to pray for him & his flocke, thereby to protectiō of ease him of his Pastoral burden. To. 1. Concil. ep. 1. S. Clem. in initio. And S. Leo the Great the Church after one of his successors in the said See, often attributeth the good administration and gouernement thereof to S. Peters prayers and assistance: name y in these goodly vvordes Ser 3 in annuerci. die assumps. ad Pontif. We are much bound (saith he) to giue thanks to our Lord and Redeemer Iesus Christ, that hath giuen so great pouer to him vvom he made the Prince of the vvirole Church: as if in our time also any thing be done vvell & be rightly ordered by vs, it is to be imputed to his vvorkes and his gouernement, to vvhom it vvvas said, And thou being conuerted, confirme thy brethren: ana to vvom our Lord after his resurrection said I shal be Ieede my sheepe. Which vvords also vvithout doubt the goodly Pastor doeth execute, confirming vs vvith his exhortations, and not ceasing to pray for vs, that vve be ouercome vvith no tentation. &c.

The Saincts in heauen pray for the liuing. Yea it vvvas a common thing in the primitiue Church among the auncient Christians, and alvvayes since among the faithfull, to make couenant in their life time, that vvwhether of them vvvent to heauen before the other, he should pray for his friend and fellow yet aliue. See the Ecclesiastical historie of the holy virgin and Martyr Potamiana, promising at the houre of her Martyrdom, that after her death she vvould procure mercie of God to Bauides one of the fouldiars that ledde her to execution, and so she did. Euseb. li. 6. c. 4. Also S. Cyprian ep. 57 in fine. Let vs (saith he) pray mutually one for an other, and vvwhether of vs vvho shal by Gods clemencie be first called for, let his loue continue, and his prayer not cease for his brethren ana sisters in the vvorld. So said this holy Martyr at that time vvhen Chvillias vvvere so far from Caluinnie (vvhich abhorreth the prayers of Saincts & praying to them): that to be sure, they vvorgained before had to haue the martyrs & other Saincts to pray for them. The same S. Cyprian also in his booke De disciplina & habitu virginum, in fine, after a godly exhortation made to the holy Virgins or Nonnes in his time, speaketh thus vnto them: Tantum tunc memerosse nostri, cum inopis in vvobis virginitas honorari. that is, Onely them haue vs in remembrance, vvhen your virginities shal be in so be honoured. that is, after their departure. Vvhere he insinuateth the vse of the Catholike Church in keeping the festiual daies and other duettes toward the holy Virgins in heauen. S. Hierom also in the same manner speaketh to Heliodorus, saying, that vvhen he is once in heauen, then he vvill pray for him that exuorted and incited him to the blessed state of the Monastical life. Ep. 1. c. 2.

Inuocation of Saincts. And so doth he speake to the vertuous matrone Paula after her death, desiring her to pray for him in his old age, affirming that she shall the more easily obtaine, the neerer she is now ioyned to Christ in heauen. in Epist. Paula in fine. It vvwere to long to report, howv S. Augustine desireth to be holpen by S. Cyprians prayers (then and long before a Sainct in heauen) to the vvnderstanding of the truth concerning the peace and regiment of the Church. li. 5 de Bapt. cont. Donatistas c. 17. And in an other place the same holy Doctor allegeth the said S. Cyprian saying, that great numbers of our parents, brethren, children, frendes, and other, expect vs in great sollicitude and care-fulnes of our saluation, being sure of their ovvne. li. 2 de predest. Sanctorum c. 14. S. Gregorie Nazianzene in his orations of the praise of S. Cyprian in fine, and of S. Basil also in fine, declareth how they pray for the people. vvhich two Saincts he there inuocateth, as al the auncient fathers did, both generally al Saincts, and (as occasion serued) particularly their special Patrones. Among the rest see how holy Ephrem (in oras. de laud. S. Deipara) praied to our B. Ladie vvith the same termes of Aduocast, Hope, Reconciliatrix, that the faithful yet vie, and the Protestants can not abide. S. Basil ho. de 40 Martyribus in fine. S. Athanasius Ser. in Euang. de S. Deipara in fine. S. Hilarie in Psal. 124. S. Chrylostom ho. 66 ad po. Antiochenum in fine. Theodorete de curas. Gracorum affe-ctuum li. 2 in fine. Finally al the fathers are ful of these things: vvho better knew the meaning of the Scripture and the tenie of the Holy Ghost, then these newv interpreters doe.

20. Private.] The Scriptures can not be rightly expounded of euery priuate spirit or phantasie of the vulgar reader: but by the same spirit vvherevvith they were vvritten, vvhich is resident in the Church.

16. Certaine things hard.] This is a plaine text to conuince the Proteſtants, vvho (as al heretikes lightly doe and did from the beginning) ſay the Scriptures be eaſie to vnderſtand, and therefore may be not onely read ſafely, but alſo expounded boldly of al the people, as vvell vnlearned as learned: and conſequently euery one by him ſelf and his pri-uate ſpirit, vvithout reſpect of the expoſitions of the learned fathers, or expectation of the Churches, their Paſtors and Prelates iudgment, may determine and make choiſe of ſuch ſenſe as him ſelf liketh or thinketh agreeable. For this is partly their ſaying, partly the neceſſarie ſequēle of their ſoliſh opinion, vvhich admitteth nothing but the bare Scriptures. And Luther ſaid that the Scriptureſ were more plaine then al the fathers anſvver, that S. Peter ſaith not, S. Pauls epiſtles be hard, but that many things in them are hard. Vvhich may be to the Catholikes an example of their ſophiſtical euasions from the euidence of Gods vvord. As though it vvete not al one to ſay, *Such an author or vvriter argument and matter be high and paſt vvulgar capacitic, as that of prædeſtination, reprobation, vocation of the Gentiles, and iuſtifying faith: or vvwhether his manner of ſtile and vvriting be obſcure: al proueth that his epiſtles be hard, and other Scriptureſ alſo: becauſe

S. Peter here affirmeth that by reason of the difficulties in them, vvhether in the style, or in the depth of the matter, the ignorant and vnstable (such as Heretikes be) do peruert his vvritings, as also other Scriptures, to their ovvne damnation. Vvheryby it is plaine that it is a very dangerous thing for such as be ignorant, or for vvilde vvitted fellowes, to reade the Scriptures. For such conditioned men be they that become Heretikes, and through ignorance, pride, and priuate phantastic, meeting vvith hard places of S. Paules epistles or other Scriptures, breede Hæretics.

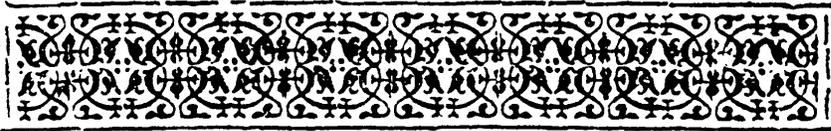

And that not onely the things treated of in the holy Scriptures, but also that the very manner of vvriting and enditing thereof, is high and hard, and purposely by Gods prouidence appointed to be vvritten in such sort, see S. Augustine li. 2. de doct. Christi. c. 6. and ep. 119. S. Ambrose ep. 44 in principio. S. Hierom to Paulinus ep. 103 c. 5. 6. 7. vvho also (ep. 65. c. 1.) saith, that in his old age vvhen he should rather haue taught then be taught, he vvent as far as Alexandria, onely to heare Didymus, and to haue his helpe for the vnderstanding of the Scriptures, and confessed vvith great thanks to the said Didymus, that he learned of him that vvich before he knewe not. Dauid saith, Giue me vnderstanding, and I vvill searcho thy law. The Eunuch in the Actes said, Hovv can I vnderstand vvith out an interpreter? The Apostles, til Christ opened their sense to vnderstand the scriptures, could not vnderstand them. The holy Doctōrs by continual studie, vvatching, fasting, and praying, had much a doe to vnderstand them: that great clerke S. Augustine cōfessing in the foresaid epistle 119. c. 21. that there vvere many moe things that he vnderstood not, then that he vnderstood. The Heretikes say the fathers did commonly erre, and hovv could such great vvise learned men be deceiued in reading and expounding the Scriptures, if they vvere not hard? and if they vvere hard to them, hovv are they easie to these nevv maisters the Hæretikes? finally, vvny do they vvrite so many nevv glosses, scholies, commentaries, as a cart cannot carrie? Vvhy do Luther, Zuinglius, Caluin, and their Companions agree no better vpon the interpretation of the Scriptures, if they be not hard? vvhereat stumbled al the old heretikes & the nevv, Arius, Maccedonius, Vigilantius, Nestorius, Eutyches, Berengarius, Vvicleffe, Protestants, Puritanes, Anabaptists, and the rest, but at the hardnes of the Scriptures? They be hard then to vaderstand, and Heretikes peruert them to their ovvne damnation.

The Greeke copies, haue both, some in ἁγία, in vvich things: some in ἁγία, in vvich epistles.

Not only the matter, but the style of the Scriptures is hard.

THE ARGUMENT OF S. IOHNS THREE EPISTLES.

* Higinus ep.
1. to. 1. Cōcil.
August. li. 2.
Euang. quæst.
9. 39.

F S. Iohn was said in the Argument before his Gospel. Now here follow his three Epistles: one to all Catholikes (though * some auncients do call it, Ad Parthos:) the other two being very short, vnto a certaine Ladie, & to one Gaius. The effect of all is, to write vnto them the certaintie of the Catholike faith, and to exhort them to continue still in it: also to loue the Catholike Church. and so, neither to become heretikes, nor Schismatikes: but rather to auoid all such, as the forerunners of Antichrist, and to remember, that Catholikes neede not to goe to schole to any such Masters, hauing at home in the Catholike Church, the doctrine of the holy Ghost him self, who was giuen to the Church visibly in the beginning, to leade her into all truth, and to continue visibly her for euer. Therefore he saith:

1. Ioh. 2. v. 24. That which you haue heard from the beginning, let it abide in you. Likewise a litle after. v. 27. and ep. 2. v. 6. This is the commaundement, that as you haue heard from the beginning, you walke in the same, because many seducers are gone out into the world. and v. 8. & 9.

And not only thus in general, but also in particular he expresseth the pointes which the heretikes did then call in question. Some were about Christ him self. for they denied that Iesus is Christ, that he is the very sonne of God, that he is incarnate. Ep. 1. c. 2. v. 22. and Ep. 2. v. 7. And against such it was that he wrote his Gospel also, as he there signifieth. Ioh. 20. v. 31. Other pointes are about our iustification, against onely faith, and for good workes, as also S. Aug. noted, De fid. & op. c. 14. whose words were cited before. Hereupon he saith: If we say we haue societie with God, and walke in darkenes, we lie. Ep. 1. c. 1. Againe, He that saith he knoweth God, and keepeth not his commaundements, is a lier. Againe, This is the charitie of God, that we keepe his commaundements, and his commaundements are not heauie. Finally, Children let no man seduce you, he that doth iustice, is iult, euen as he is iust. Ep. 1. c. 3. v. 7. 8. 9. likewise c. 2. v. 29. and in deepe in all the three Epistles brought out, he doth inculcate good workes and keeping the commaundements, against the heresie of onely faith.

THE APOSTLE.

CHAP. I.

Good cause there is to beleeue the Apostles preaching. And this is one point of their preaching, that to haue participation vvith God, vve must not onely beleeue, but also abstaine from al mortall sinne, & though vve al sinne venially.

 there is no darkenesse. † If vve shal say that we haue societie

ANNO TATIONS
CHAP. I.

3. You may haue societie.] S. Iohn shevveth manifestly, that vvhosoeuer desire to be partakers vvith God, must first be vnited to the Churches societie, learne that faith, and receiue those Sacraments, vvich the Disciples receiued of the Truth it self, conuertant vvith them in flesh. So saith Venerable Bede vpon this place, Vvhereby vve see there is no societie vvith God in seales or schismes, nor any vvhere but in the vnitie, fellowvs hip, and communion of that Church vvich can proue it self to descend from the Apostles.

7. The blood of Iesuu.] Vvwhether sinnes be remitted by praier, by fasting, by almes, by faith, by charitie, by sacrifice, by Sacraments, & by the Priests, (as the holy Scriptures do plainly attribute remission to euery of these) yet none of al these do othervvise remit, but in the force, by the merite & vertue of Christs blood: these being but the appointed meanes & instruments by vvich Christ vvil haue his holy blood to vvorke effectually in vs. vvich meanes vvhoioeuer conuinneth, depriueeth him self of the comoditie of Christs ovvne blood, & contiaueeth still in sinne and vncleanesse, vaunt he him self neuer so much of Christs death. Vvich point let the Protestants marke vvell, and cease to beguile their poore deceiued follovers, periuading them, that the Catholikes derogate from Christs blood, or teeke remission othervvise then by it, for that they vse humbly the meanes appointed by Christ to apply the benefite of his holy blood vvnto them.

7. From al sinne.] From original and actual, venial and mortal, a culpa & pama, that is, from the fault and the paine due for the same. V. Bede saith, that Christs Passion doth not onely remit in Baptisme the sinnes before committed, but al other atterrvvard also done by frailtie: yet so, if vve vie for the remission of them, such meanes as be requisite and as Christ hath appointed, vvhereof he reckoneth some. Bede vpon this place. See S. Augustine also vpon this place to. 9. and S. Hierome li. 2. con. Pelag. c. 3.

8. That vve haue no sinne.] Vve gather by these vvordes and the former, that there be vvotortes of sinnes: one mortal, excluding vs from light and the societie of God: an other venial, vvich is found euen in those that vvalk in the light, and are in the societie of God. Alvv we note against the Pelagians, that vve be truly called the sonnes of God, and so iust in deede, though vve be not vvithout al sinnes, euery one of vs, as vvell iust as vsult, being taught and bound to confesse our offenses, and to aske pardon day of God, by this petition of the Kater noster, Forgiue vs our debtes. Therefore S. Augustine li. de natura & grat. c. 36. teeketh vp al the holy Patriarches, Prophets, and reuouvvmed iust persons, to haue been sinners, euen vvhen they vvere in grace and iustice: excepting alvvayes our B. Ladie, de qua propter honorem Domini, nullam prorjus, cum de peccatis agitur, habere volo questionem. of vvhom, saith he, for the honour of our Lord, vvhen vve talke of sinnes, I vvil haue no question. And Pelagius asking vvhat sinnes Abel & such iust men did commit, S. Augustine answereth, that they might laugh some time immoderately, or iell to much, or couet somevvhat intemperatly, or plucke fruite ouer greedily, or in eating take somevvhat more then atterrvvard vvvas vvell digested, or haue their intention in time of praier somevvhat distracted, and such like: thus in sense S. Augustine. Vvhereby vve may learne vvich be venial sinnes, that consist vvith true iustice & can not alvvayes be auoided euen of holy men in this life. In the booke de fide ad Petrum c. 41. are excepted from this common rule of sinners, the children vvich be nevvelly baptized and haue not yet vie of reason to sinne either mortally or venially.

* de dono perseverans. c. 2.

CHAP. II.

If any sinne mortally, he must not dispaire. 3 To know God rightly, is not to beleue onely, but to keepe his commaundements: 7 and that this is no nevru doctrine, but the very primitiue, though a nevru life it is. 9 Therefore he that beleueth must also loue his brethren: 12 and that men must not loue the vvorld, but doe that vvich God vvilleth. 18 Many are gone out of the Church: and become Seducers, al the ministers of Anticrist: but true Christians must continue in their old faith, considering the revvard, and that they neede not goe to seile to any Heretike, the Holy Ghost himself being the scholemaster of the Church. 29 he doth earnestly inculcate iustice and good vvorkes.

ANNOTATIONS CHAP. II.

1. That you sinne not.] S. Iohn (saith V. Pede vpon this place) is not contrarie to him self, in that he seeketh here to make them vvithout sinne, vvhom he said in the last chapter could not be vvithout al sinnes. but in the former place he vvarned vs onely of our frailty, that vve should not arrogate to our selues perfect innocencie: here he prouoketh vs to vvatchfulnes and diligence in resisting and auoiding sinnes, specially the greater, vvhich by Gods grace may more easily be repelled.

How Christ is our only Aduocate.

2. An aduocate.] The calling and office of an Aduocate, is in many things proper to Christ, and in euery condition more singularly and excellently agreeing to him then to any Angel, Saint, or creature liuing. though these also be rightly and truly so called, & that not onely vvithout al derogation, but much to the honour of Christs aduocation. To him soly and onely it agreeth to procure vs mercie before Gods face, by the general ransom, price, & paiement of his bloud for our deliuerie, as is said in the sentence folloving, Antike is the propitiacion for our sinnes, and not for ours onely, but for the vvhole vvorlds. In vvvhich sort he is our onely aduocate, becauie he is our onely redeemer. and herevpon he alone immediatly, by and through him self, and vvithout the aide or assistance of any other, man or Angel, in his ovvne name, right, and merites, confidently dealeth in our causes before God our iudge, & to procureth our pardon, vvvhich is the highestt degree of aduocation that can be.

Al vvvhich notwithstanding, yet the Angels, and Saincts, and our fellowves aliue, may and do pray for vs, and in that they deale vvith God by intercession to procure mercie for vs, may iustly be called our aduocates: not so as Christ is, vvho demaundeth al things immediatly by his ovvne merites, but as secondary intercessors, vvho neuer aske nor obtaine any thing for vs, but per Christum Dominum nostrum, by and through Christ our common Lord, Aduocate, and Redeemer of mankind. And behold hovv S. Augustine (tract. 1 in ep. 10. vpon these very vvordes) prevented the Heretikes caillations. Sed dicit aliquis Ege. But some man vvill say, Do not the Saincts then pray for vs? do not Bishops then or Prelates and Pastors pray for the people? Yes, saith he: Marke the Scriptures, and you shal finde that the Apostles praied for the people, and againe desired the people to pray for them, and so the head praieith for al, and the members one for an other. And likevvise (lett the Heretikes should say, there is a difference betvvixt the liuing and the dead in this case) thus the same holy father vvriteth vpon the 85 Psalme in fine. Our Lord Iesvs Christ doth yet make intercession for vs, al the Martyrs that be vvith him, pray for vs: neither vvill their intercession cease, til vve cease our gronings.

In this sense therefore vvho soeuer praieith for vs, either aliue or dead, is our aduocate, as S. Augustine (ep. 19 to Paulinus circa med.) calleth Bishops, the peoples aduocates, vvhen they giue them their benediction or blessing. So doth the holy Church call our B. Lady our aduocate, by the very vvordes of S. Irenæus, that you may see such speaches be no nevv inuentions of the later age, but Apostolical. The obedient Virgin M A R I E (saith he) is made the aduocate of the disobedient virgin or patronage of Saincts should be iniurious to Christ, remeber that * our Sauour acknowldgeth Angels to be deputed for the protection (vvvhich is nothing els but aduocation) of infants before the face of God, besides the plaine examples in the old Testament Gen. 48. v. 16. Tob. 5. v. 27. & c. 12. v. 12. Dan. 10. And this not onely the Catholike Church, but the very English Protestants them selues in their seruice booke and in the Collect of Michelmass day, profess, and pray for the same protection or aduocation of Angels, and defend the same againtt their yonger brethren the Puritanes.

2. For the vvhole vvorlds. S. Augustine gathereth hereof againtt the Donatistes, and al other Heretikes, that vvould driue the Church into corners or some certaine countries, from the vniuersalitie of al Nations (vvvhich of it vvas named by the Apostles, Catholike) that the true religion, and Church, and consequently the effect of Christs propitiacion, death, and aduocation, pertaineth not to one age, nation, or people, but to the vvhole vvorld. S. Augustine vpon this place 10. 2. tract. 1 in ep. 10.

4. He that saith he knowveth. To knowv God here, signifieth (as it doth often in the Scriptures) to loue, that is, as in the last chapter, to be in societie vvith him, and to haue familiar and experimental knowvledge of his graces. If any vaunt them selues thus to knowv God, and yet keepe not his commaundements, he is a liar, as al Caluinistes and Lutherans, that profess their selues to be in the fauour of God by onely faith: affirming, that they neither keepe, nor possibly can keepe his commaundements.

18. Many antichrists. The holy Apostle S. Iohn (saith S. Cyprian) did not put a difference betvvixt one heretic or schisme and an other, nor means any sort that specially separated them selues, but generally called al vviuous exception, antichrists, that vvere aduersaries to the Church, or vvere gone out from the same. And a litle after, It is euident that al be here called antichrists, that haue seuered them selues from the charitie and vnitie of the Catholike Church. So vvriteth he ep. 76. nu. 1 ad Magnum. Vvhereby, vve may learne, that al Heretikes, or rather Arch-heretikes be properly the precursors of that one and special Antichrist, vvvhich is to come at the last end of the vvorld, & vvvhich is called here immediatly before, ὁ ἄντιχριστός, that peculiar and singular Antichrist.

19. They vvont out from vs. An euident note and marke, vvhereby to conuince al Heretikes and false teachers, to vvit, that being once of the common Catholike Christian fellowvship, they forsooke it, and vvont out from the same. Simon Magus, Nicolas the Deacon, Hymenæus, Alexander, Philétus, Arius, Macedonius, Pelagius, Nestorius, Eutyches, Luther, Caluin, and the like, vvere of the common societie of al vs that be Christian Catholikes, they vvont out from vs vvhom they savv to liue in vnitie of faith and religion together, and made them selues nevv conuenticles, therefore they vvere (as the Apostle here shevveth) antichrists, and vve and al that abide in the auncient fellowvship of Christian religion, that vvont not out of their fellowvship, in vvvhich vve neuer vvere, nor out of any other societie of knowven Christians, can not be Schismatikes or Heretikes, but must needs be true Christian Catholike men. Let our aduersaries tel vs, out of vvhat Church

How Angels, Saincts, & men aliue are our aduocates.

Sainctes in heaven pray for vs.

The B. virgins is our aduocate.

Angels are our protectors.

The Catholike Church is the onely true Church.

Not only faith

Al Heretikes are antichrists the forerunners of the great Antichrist.

The marke of al heretikes is, their going out of the Catholike societie.

Iren. 5. 3. c. 33. & li. 5 post med. D. Hiero. in Mat. c. 18.

The Catholikes can not be proued to haue gone out.

How Heretikes are of the Church, before they fall.

by heresies constant Catholikes are knowen.

Every good Catholike is sufficiently taught by the Church to saluation.

Church vve euer departed, vwhen, and vwhere, and vnder vwhat persons it vvas that vve reuolted, as vve can tel them the vere, the places, the Ringleaders of their reuolt.

19. They were not of us. He meaneth not, that Heretikes were not, or could not be in or of the Church, before they went out or fel into their heretic or schisme: but partly that many of them which afterward fall out, though they were before vvith the rest, and partakers of al the Sacraments vvith other their fellowes, yet in deede vvere of naughtie life and conscience vwhen they were vvithin: and so being rather as il humors and superfluous excrements, then true and liuely partes of the body, after a ior: may be laid not to haue been of the body at al. So S. Augustine expoundeth these vvordes in his commentarie vpon this place. tract. 3. but els vvhere, more agreably as it seemeth, that the Apostie meaneth, that such as vvil not tane in the Church, but finally forsake it to the end, in the prescience of God, and in respect of the small benefite they shal haue by their temporal final abode there, be not of or in the Church, though according to this present state, they are truly members thereof. Li. de correct. & gr. c. 9 & de dono perseuer. c. 8.

19. That they may be manifest. God permitteth heretic to be, that such as be permanent, constant, and chosen members and children of the Catholike Church, onely knowen to God before, may now also be made manifest to the world, by their constant remaining in th: CHURCH, vwhen the vvinde and blait of euey heretic or tentation driueth out the other light and visitable persons.

20. Know all things. They that abide in the vnitie of Christes Church, haue the vnitie, that is, the Holy Ghost, vwho teacheth al truth: not that euey member or man hereof hath al knowledg in him self personally, but that euey one vvich is of that happie societie to vvich Christ promised and gaue the Holy Ghost, is partaker of al other mens giites and graces in the same holy Spirit, to his saluation. Neither neede any to seeke truth at Heretikes handes or others that be gone out, vwhen it is vvithin them selues and onely vvithin them selues in Gods Church. If thou loue vnitie (saith S. Augustine) for thee also hath he, vwho soeuer hath any thing in it. take away enuey, it is thine vvich I haue, it is mine vvich thou hast. &c. Tract. 32 in Euang. Ioan.

CHAP. III.

It is not for the sonnes of God, to sinne mortally, but for the sonnes of the Diuel, vwhereby they are knowen one from an other, & not by onely faith. 11 True faith is, that vve also loue our breshren, giuing both our life and substance for them. 19 Such vnfeined loue may haue great confidence before God. 23 because the keeping of hu comaundements doth much please him, vvich consist in faith and charitie.

ANNOTATIONS
CHAP. III.

Concupiscence remaining after Baptisme is no sinne, without consent.
 4. Sinne is iniquitie] Iniquitie is not taken here for vickednes, as it is commonly vsed both in Latin and in our language, as is plaine by the Greeke vword ανομία, signifying nothing els but a swarving or declining from the straight line of the lavv of God or nature. So that the Apostle meaneth, that euery sinne is an obliquitie or defect from the rule of the lavv: but not contrarie, that euery such swarving from the lavv, should be properly a sinne, as the Heretikes do vntruelly gather, to proue that concupiscence remaining after Baptisme is a very sinne, though vve neuer giue our consent vnto it. And though in the 5 chapter folovving vers. 17. the Apostle turne the speache, affirming euery iniquitie to be a sinne, yet there the Greeke vword is not the same as before, ανομία, but ἀσυνία. by vvhich it is plaine that there he meaneth by iniquitie, mans actual and proper transgression vvhich must needes be a sinne. See S. Augustine cont. Iulian. li. 5 c. 3. S. Ambrose li. de Apologia Dauid c. 13.

Heretical exposition of Scriptures.
No man in grace sinneth mortally.
 6. Sinners not.] Iouinian & Pelagius falsely (as Heretikes vse to doe) argued vpon these vverdes, and thosethat: folovv vers. 9: the one, that the baptized could sinne no more: the other, that no man being or remaining iust could sinne. But among many good senses giuen of this place, this seemeth most agreable, that the Apostle should say, that mortal sinne doth not consist together vvith the grace of God, & therefore can not be committed by a man continuing the sonne of God. and so is the like speache in the 9 verse folovving to be taken. See S. Hierom li. 2 cont. Iouinianum c. 1.

True iustice.
 7. He that doeth iustice.] He doth inculcate this often, that mans true iustice or righteousnes consisteth in doing or vworking iustice, and that so he is iust, and biddeth them not to be seduced by Heretikes, in this point.

Howv the Diuel sinned from the beginning.
 8. Sinnersh from the beginning.] The Diuel vvas created holy and in grace, and not in sinne: but he fel of his ovvne free vvil from God. Therefore these vwordes, from the beginning, may be interpreted thus, from the beginning of sinne, and so the Apostle vvil say, The Diuel committed the first sinne. So S. Augustine li. 11 de civ. Dei c. 15 expoundeth it. The most simple meaning seemeth to be, that he sinned from the beginning of the vvorld, not taking the beginning precisely for the first instant or moment of the creation, but straight vpon the beginning, as it must needes also be taken in S. Johns Gospel c. 8. 44.

Not only faith.
 21. Vve shall receive, because.] Let the Protestants be ashamed to say, that vve obtaine al of God by onely faith; the Apostle here attributing it to the keeping of Gods commaundements. Note here also that Gods commaundements are not impossible to be kept, but vvere then, and are novv obserued of good men.

CHAP. III.

Vve may not beleue al that boast of the spirit, but trie them, whether they teach Catho- like articles of the faith: (namely the incarnation of Christ:) vvwhether their do- ctine be not vvorldly, and them selvs disobedient bearers of the Apostles. 7 Vve must loue one an other, considering the exceeding loue of God in sending his sonne to saue vs. 17 An argument of perfect charitie is, if vve haue nothing in our conscience to feare in the day of Iudgement. 19 And an argument that vve loue God is, if vve loue our breshrom.

A N N O T A T I O N S
C H A P. IIII.

- Heretical boasting of the spirit. 1. Beleeue not euery spirit.] That is, Receiue not euery doctrine of such as boast themselves to haue the spirit. For there be many false prophets, that is to say, Heretikes, which shall goe out of the Church, and challenge the spirit, and vaunt of Gods word, Scripture, and Gospel, vvhich in deede be seducers.
- The Church only, not euery priuate man, hath to proue and discern spirites. 1. Proue the spirites.] It is not meant by this place, as the Protestants would haue it, that euery particular person should of him self examine, trie, or iudge who is a true or false doctor, and which is true or false doctrine. But the Apostle here would euery one to discern these diuersities of spirites, by taking knowlledge of them to vvhom God hath giuen the gift of discerning spirites and doctrines (vvhich S. Paul expressly saith is giuen but to some, and not to euery one, 1 Cor. 12. 10.) and by obeying the Church of God, to whom Christ hath giuen the Spirit of truth. And this is onely the sure way to proue the spirites and doctrines of these daies. And al they that would bring vs from our Pastors and the Churches iudgement, to our owne priuate trial, seeke nothing els but to driue vs to miserable vncertainty in al our beleeues. Caluin doth, who vpon this place saith, that priuate men may examine the general Councels doctrines. 10. 14, 16.
- Caluin. 2. Euery spirit that confesseth.] The Apostle speaketh according to that time, and for that part of Christian doctrine which then was specially to be confessed, taught, & maintained against certaine wicked Heretikes, Cerinthus, Ebion, and the like, that taught wickedly against the person and both natures of Christ Iesus. The Apostle therefore giueth the faithful people this token to know the true teachers of those daies from the false. Not that this marke would serue for al times, or in case of al other false doctrines, but that it was then a necessarie note. As if a good Catholike vvriter, Pastor, or parents would vvarne al theirs, now in these daies, to giue care onely to such teachers as acknowledge Christ our Sauour to be really present, and sacrificed in the E. Masse, & that al such are true preachers and of God, the rest to be of the Diuel, or to be counted the spirit of Antichrist. Vvhich spirit of Antichrist (he saith) was come euen then, and is no doubt much more now in al Heretikes, al being precursors of that great Antichrist which shall come towards the later end.
- Many old heresies that dissolved Christ. 3. That dissoluesh.] To dissolue, loose, or separate Iesus a sunder, was proper to al those old Heretikes that taught either against his Diuinitie, or Humanitie, or the Vnitie of his person, being of two natures, as Cerinthus, Ebion, Nestorius, Eutyches, Manes or Manichæus, Cerdon, Apelles, Apollinaris and the like. And this is one place by vvhich we may see that the common Greeke copies be not euer authentical, and that our old approved translation may not alwaies be examined by the Greeke that now is, vvhich the Protestants onely folow: but that it is to be presupposed, vvhich our old Latin text differeth plainly from the Greeke, that in old time either al or the more approved Greeke reading was othervvise, and that often the said Greeke was corrupted then or since by Heretikes or othervvise. For of the Greekes, S. Irenæus li. 3. c. 18.: among the Latin fathers, S. Augustine tract. 6. in fine, S. Leo ep. 10. c. 5., and Venerable Bede did reade as we doe. and this reading maketh more against the said Heretikes, then that vvhich the common Greeke now hath, to vviz, Euery spirit that confesseth not Christ to haue come in flesh, is not of God. vvhich is also in effect said before vers. 2. And that therefore it was corrupted and altered by Heretikes, see the vvordes of Socrates also a Greeke vvriter, very agreable to this purpose. Nestorius (saith he) being eloquent by nature, vvhich is often in Heretikes, accounted him self therefore learned, & disdaind to study the old interpreters, counting him self better than them all: being ignorant that in S. Iohns Catholike epistle the old (Greeke) copies had, EVERY ONE THAT DISSOLVETH IESUS, IS NOT OF GOD. So saith he, adding moreover that such as would separate the diuinitie from the, dispensation of Christs humanitie, tooke out of the old copies this sense. for vvhich the old expositours noted that these which would loose Iesus, had corrupted this Epistle. See also the Tripartite li. 12. c. 4. li. 7. c. 30.
- The Greeke text corrupted by old heretikes. 6. In this you know.] This is the most sure & general-marke to know the true spirites and prophets from the false: that those vvhich be of God, will heare and obey their Apostles and lawfull pastors succeeding the Apostles, and submit themselves to the Church of God: the other, that be not of God, will not heare either Apostle, pastor, or Church, but be their owne iudges.
- A sure marke of true or false teachers. 17. That you may haue confidence.] Confidence called in Latin Fiducia, is neither al one with faith, nor a persuasion infallible that maketh a man no lesse secure and certaine of his saluation, then of the things that we are bound to beleeue, as the Protestants falsely teach.
- Against the Protestants speciall saith and teach: but it is onely a hope wel corroborated, confirmed, and strengthened vpon the promises and grace of God, and the parties merites. And the vvordes both folowing & going before, proue also evidently against the Protestants, that our confidence and hope in the day of iudgement dependeth not onely vpon our apprehension of Christs merites by faith, or vpon his grace and mercie, but also vpon our consoemtie to Christ in this life, in charitie and good vvorket. And that is the doctrine of S. Peter vwhen he said, Labour, that by good vvorkes you may make sure your vocation and election. and S. Pauls meaning, vwhen he said, I haue fought a good fight, there is laid up for me a crowne of iustice, which our Lord will render to me in that day, a iust iudge.

18. Fear is not in charitie.] The Heretikes very falsly vnderstand this place so, that Christian godly men ought to haue no doubt, mistrust, or feare of hel and damnation. V which is most evidently against the Scriptures, commending euery where vnto vs the awe and feare of God and his iudgements. Fear him (saith our Sauour Mat. 10) that can cast body and soul into hel. And Psal. 113. Fearfe my flesh vvish thy feare. V which feare of Gods iudgements caused S. Paul & al good men to chastise the ^{the} bodies, lest they should be reprobate and damned. And the vvise man for this cause affirmeth him to be happie, that uer feareful. And holy Iob saith, I feared al my vvorkes. And the Apostle, Vvish feare and trembling vvorke your saluation. V which kinde of feare is euen in the iustest men and most ful of charitie, consisting wel with the same vertue, and is called Filiatilis timor, because it is such as the good childe ought to haue toward his father.

But there is a kinde of feare vv which standeth not with charitie, and is cleane against hope also, that vv which bringeth such perplexitie and anxietie of conscience, that it induceth a man to mistrust or despaire of Gods mercies. That seruile feare also vv which maketh a man often to leaue sinning and to doe the external vvorkes of iustice, not for any loue or delight he hath in God or his lawes, but onely for feare of damnation, though it be not it in it self, but very profitable, as that vv which helpeth toward the loue of God, yet it standeth not with charitie neither, but is daily more and more lessened, and at length quite driuen out by charitie. Of these kinde of feares then the Apostle speaketh, and (as some expound) of the feare of men also, of vv which our Sauour saith, Fear not them that hel the body.

presumptuous securitie of saluation.

7. Thres vvhich giue testimonie.] An expresse place for the distinction of three persons, & the vnitie of nature and essence in the B. Trinitie: against the Arians and other like Heretikes, vvhich haue in diuers ages found them selues to preside vwith these plaine Scriptures, that they haue (as it is thought) altered and corrupted the text both in Greeke and Latin many vvaies: euen as the Protestants handle those textes that make against them. But because vve are not now troubled vwith Ariantisme so much as vwith Caluinisme, vve neede not stand vpon the varietie of readings or expositions of this passage. See S. Hierom in his epistle put before the 7 Canonical or Cathouke Epistles.

16. A sinne to death.] A sinne to death is an other thing then a morral sinne. for it is that morral sinne onely, vvhich of a man is neuer penitent before his death, or in vvhich he continueth til death, and dieth in it. I affirme (saith S. Augustine de correptione & gratia c. 12) that a sinne to death is to leaue faith vvorshiping by charitie euen til death. So likevvise in the vvordes before, a sinne not to death, is not that vvhich vve call a venial sinne, but any that a man committeth and continueth not therein til death.

16. For that I say not.] If the sinne to death vvhich he speaketh, be the sinne vvhich a man dieth vwithout repentance, according to S. Augustines vvordes before renerced: then the praier vvhich he speaketh of, must needes be praier for the dead. because he speaketh of praying, or not praying, for them that died in deadly sinne, exhorting vs to pray, and encouraging vs to doe it vwith confidence to be heard, if vve pray, for them that departed this life not in deadly sinne: and contrariwise in maner dissuading & discouraging vs from praying for such as continued in vickednes euen til their liues end. And S. Augustine setteth downe the Churches practise agreeable to the Apostles meaning, li. 21 c. 14 de Ciuit. Dei. If there be any (saith he) that persist til death in impietie of hart, doth the Church not pray for them, that is, for the soules of them that so are departed? So saith he. And this is the cause, that Concilium Bracharense primum cap. 34. foriddeth to pray for such as die in deiperation, or kil them selues: and the reason, vvhich the Church forbeareth to pray for Heretikes that die in their heresie, or maunteine heresie vnto death and by their death.

And that the place is most properly or onely meant of praying for the departed, this conuinceth, that neither the Church nor any man is dehorted here from praying for any sinner yet liuing, nor for the remission of any sinne in this life: al sinnes (of vvhich sort soeuer) being pardonable, so long as the committers of them be in case and state to repent: as they be, so long as they be in this vworld. And vve see that the Church praierth, and is often heard, for Heretikes, Iewes, Turkes, Apostataes, and vvhich other infidels or il men soeuer, during their liues. And it is great blasphemie that the Caluinistes utter vpon this place: to vvith, that Apostasie and certaine other sinnes of the reprobate, can not be forgien at al in this life. Vvich they hold, onely to auoid the sequelle of praiering for the dead vpon these vvordes of S. Iohn. besides that they must take vpon them presumptuously, to know and discern of Gods secretes, vvhich be reprobate, and vvhich be not, and according to that, pray for some, and not for other: some al vvhich is most vicked and absurd presumption.

As for their allegation, that S. Ieremie the Prophet vvas forbidden to pray for the Iewes, and vvarned that he should not be heard, Chap. 7. 11. 14: there is great difference. first, he had a reuelation by the vvordes of God, that they vwould continue in their vickednes, as vve haue not of any certaine person, vvhich of S. Iohn here speaketh. secondly, Ieremie vvas not forbidden to pray for the remission of their sinnes, nor had denial to be heard therein for any mans particular case, vvhich of the Apostle here speaketh: but he vvas told that they should not escape the temporal punishment and affliction vvhich he had designed for them, and that he vwould not heare him therein.

21. From idols.] It is so knowen a treacherie of Heretikes to translate idola images (as here and in a number of places, especially of the English Bible printed the yere 1562) that vve neede not much to stand vpon it. As this also is seen to al the vworld, that they doe it of purpose to seduce the poore ignorant people, and to make them thinke, that vvhich soeuer in the Scriptures is spoken against the idols of the Gentiles (vvhich the Prophet calleth Simulacra Gentium) is meant of pictures, sacred images, & holy memories of Christ and his Saints. Against such seducers the second sacred Council of Nice, called the seuenith Synode, decreeth thus Act. 4. pag. 122. Quicumque sententias sacra scriptura de idolis, contra venerandas imagines adducunt, anathema. Qui venerandas imagines idola appellant, anathema. Qui dicunt qd Christiani adorant imagines vt Deos, anathema. that is, Anathema to al them that bring the sentences of holy Scripture touching Idols, against the venerable images. Anathema to them that call the venerable images, idols. Anathema to them that say, Christians adore images as gods.

But concerning this matter, it is most euident that neither euery idol is an image, nor euery image an idol: and that, howsoeuer the origine or etimologie of the vword, idol, may be taken in the Greeke, yet both the vvordes and the things be in truth and by the vse of al tonges, far differing. The great dragon that the Babyonians adored (Dan. 14) vvas an idol, but not an image: the Cherubins in Salomons temple vvere images, but not idols. and the face of the Queene in her coine or els vvhether, as Cæsars face vpon the coine that Christ called for, is an image, but not an idol. and the Heretikes dare not translate that text of Scripture thus, Whose idol is this superscription? nor call the Queenes image, the idol of the Queene: nor Christ, the idol of his father: nor vvoman, the idol of the man: nor man, the idol of God, al vvich in Scripture be named images for al that, and be so in deede, and not idols. vvich conuinceth, that the Heretikes be false & corrupt translatours in this place and other the like, confounding these two vvordes as if they vvere al one.

Hierom saith ep. 17 c. 3) so great reuerence to the holy place called Sancta sanctorum. If they then vvere vvarranted and comanded to make and haue in so great reuerence the images of mere spirites or Angels, vvho's natural shape could not be expressed: how much more may vve Christians haue and reuerence the images of Christ, his B. mother, the Apostles, and other Saints, being men, vvho's shape may be expressed? So doth the said Nicene Council argue against the Heretikes vvich at that time vvere the Aduerfaries of images.

The antiquitie of holy images.

And note here, that eight hundred yeres agoe, they vvere straight counted Heretikes, that began to speake against images, and that Council vvas called purposely for them, and condemned them for Heretikes, & confirmed the forme antient reuerence and vse of sacred images. vvich began euen in our Saviours time or litle after, vvhen good religious folke for loue and reuerence made his image, namely the vvoman that he healed of the bloudy fluxe. vvich image vvas also approved by miracles, as the Ecclesiastical hiatorie telleth, and namely Eusebius Ecd. hist. li. 7 c. 14. * vvho also vvitnesseth that the images of Peter and Paul vvere in his daies. as you may see also in S. Augustine (li. d. confesj. Euan. gelist. c. 10) that their pictures commonly stode together in Rome. euen as at this day. Of our Ladies image see S. Gregorie li. 7 ep. 5. indict. 2 ad Ianuar. & ep. 53. In vvhom also (li. 7. ep. 109) you may see the true vse of images. & that they are the bookes of the vnlearned, and that the people ought to be instructed and taught the right vse of them, euen as at this day good Catholike folke doe vse them to heipe & increaseth their deuotion, in al Catholike Churches: yea the Lutherans them selues reteineth them still. S. Damascene vvrote three bookes in defense of sacred images against the foresaid Heretikes.

^b Reuward for keeping fast the Catholike faith.

^c To goe backe or reuolt from the receiued truth and doctrine Apostolical, is damnable.

A N N O T.

^a. From the beginning.] This is the rule of a Christian Catholike man, to vvalke in that faith and vvorship of God vvhich he hath receiued from the beginning. Vvhich is that vvhich vve novv call according to the Scriptures, the tradition of the Apostles: that vvhich is come to vs from man to man, from Bishop to Bishop, and so from the Apostles. So shal a faithful man auoid seducers that rise vp in euery age, teaching nevv doctrine.

To hold fast the old receiued faith.

¹⁰. This doctrine.] The Apostles, and true Pastors their lawfull successors, and the Church of God in holy Councel, vse to set downe the true doctrine in those pointes vvhich Heretikes call into controuersie. Vvhich being once done and declared to the faithful, they neede no other marke or description to know an Heretike or false teacher by, but that he commeth vvith an other doctrine then that vvhich is set downe to them. Neither can the Heretikes shift them selues, as novv a daies they vvould doe, saying, o let vs first be proued Heretikes by the Scriptures, let them define an Heretike. No, this is not the Apostles rule. Many a good honest shepheard knowveth a vvoolfe, that can not define him. but the Apostle saith, If he bring not this set doctrine, he is a seducer. So holy Church saith novv, Christ is really in the B. Sacrament, vnder forme of bread and vvine &c. If therefore he bring not this doctrine, he is a seducer, and an Heretike: and vve must auoide him, vvwhether in his owne definitions and censures he seeme to him self an Heretike or no.

To bring vvilfully an other doctrine then the Catholike Church sette downe, is alvvayes a marke of seducers and Heretikes.

¹⁰. Receiue him not.] Though in such times and places vvhere the communitie or most part be infected, necessitie often forcein the faithful to conuerse vvith such in vvorldly affaires, to salute them, to eate and speake vvith them, and the Church by decree of Councel, for the more quiernes of timorous consciences prouideth, that they incurre not excommunication or other censures for communicating in vvorldly affaires vvith any in this kinde, except they be by name excommuni-

8 of the Gentiles. † Vve therefore ought to receiue such : that vve may be coadiutors of the truth.

9 † I had vwritten perhaps to the Church: but he that loucheth to beare^b primacie among them, Diotrepes, doth not

10 receiue vs. † For this cause, if I come,^c I vvil aduertise his vvorkes vvich he doeth: vvith malicious vvordes chatting

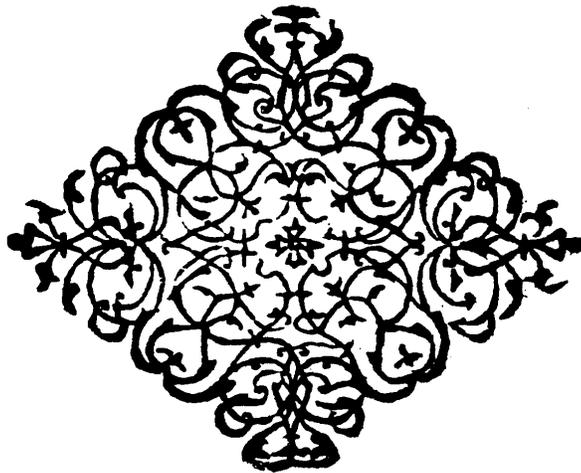

11 against vs. and as though these thinges suffise him not: neither him self doth receiue the brethren, and them that do receiue, he prohibiteth, and casteth out of the Church. † My decreest, do not imitate euil, but that vvich is good. He that doeth vvell, is of God: he that doeth ill, hath not seen God.

12 † To Demetrius testimonie is giuen of al, and of the truth it self, yea and vve giue testimonie: and thou knowvest that our testimonie is true.

13 † I had many thinges to vvrite vnto thee: but I vvould
14 not by inke and penne vvrite to thee. † But I hope forthvvith to see thee, and vve vvil speake mouth to mouth. Peace be to thee. The freendes salute thee. Salute the freendes by name.

^b It seemeth (saith S. Bede) he vvas an Arch-heretike or proud Sect-maister.

^c That is, I vvil rebuke them and make them knownen to be vvicked. Bede.

THE ARGUMENT OF THE EPISTLE OF S. IVDE.

* Euseb. hist.
li. 3. c. 20.

In the Gospel these are called Fratres Iesu, the brethren of Iesus: Iames and Ioseph, and Simon, and Iude. Their father is called Alphæus, where Iames is termed, Iames of Alphæus: and their mother, Maria Iacobi minoris. Marie the mother of Iames the yonger and of Ioseph. Whiche Marie in an other place being called Maria Cleophæ, we perceiue their father was named both Alphæus and also Cleophæ. And that this Cleophæ was brother to Ioseph our Ladies hus band, * Hegezippus telleth vs. Therefore because Ioseph was called the father of Christ, his brothers children, were called the brethren, that is (according to the custome of the scriptures also) the kinsmen of our Lord: and not because they were the children of Ioseph him self by an other wife, much lesse (as Heliudins: the heretike did blaspheme) by our B Ladie: the perpetual virgin M A R I E. Howbeit some good authors say, that their mother Marie was the natural sister of our Ladie, and that therefore they are called, Fratres Domini, the brethren of our Lord.

Howsoever that be, three of them are reckoned among the 12. Apostles, Iames, and Simon Cananæus and Iude. Yea and that they were somewhat more then Apostles, though lesse then Peter, S. Paul signifieth, where he saith speaking of him self and Barnabas: As also the other Apostles, and the brethren of our Lord, and Cephas. 1. Cor. 9.

And as S. Luke calleth this Iude, Iude of Iames, so he calleth him self in this Epistle of his, Iude the seruant of Iesus Christ, and the brother of Iames. S. Matheew and S. Marke do call him Thaddæus, as Lebbæus also in the Greeke. His feast and his brother Simons together, the Church keepeth Octob. 28. called Simon and Iudes day.

His Epistle is an Inuective against al heretikes (as it were a Commentarie of 2 Pet. 2.) and namely (as * S. Aug. hath told vs) against those, which misconfred S. Pauls Epistles and held Only faith, whom he calleth therefore, Men that transerre or peruert the grace of God into riotousnes, v. 4. exhorting Catholikes to be constant and unmoueable from their old faith, and to consent for the keeping thereof, v. 20. For heretikes (saith he) segregate them selues from the Church and from her faith. v. 19.

10. They blaspheme.] He speaketh of Heretikes, who being ignorant in Gods mysteries and the diuine doctrine of his Church, vwhen they can not reprove the things, then they fall to execrations, irrisions, and blasphemies against the Priests, Church, and Sacraments, and vvhatsoeuer is godly. Ignorance maketh Heretikes blaspheme.

11. Cain, Balaam, Corè.] The Apostle vwould haue Heretikes specially to be known by the resemblance they haue, first to Cain, in that for enuy that his brothers seruice and sacrifice was accepted and his reiected, slewe his said brother, and was a fugitiue from the face and citie of God, vvhich is the Church. Secondly, by their resemblance to Balaam, who for money was induced to curse Gods people, as couetousnes is commonly the cause that first maketh Heretikes and false Prophets. Wherevpon S. Augustine saith, He is an Heretike that for temporal commodities sake either coineth or followeth new opinions. S. August. li. de Util. cred. cap. 1. And lastly by the resemblance they haue vwith the auncient and notorious Schismaticke Corè, and his companions, vwho forsooke the ordinarie Priesthod appointed by God, and would needes doe sacrifice them selues without lawfull calling. Heretikes resembled to Cain, Balaam, and Corè.

Such in deede be al Heretikes, and such be al their sacraments, seruice, and offices in their Church, as Cores vvere in his schismatical tabernacles. And as pride vvas the cause of his reuolting from the obedience of Moyses and Aaron his Priests and true Governours: so is intolerable pride the cause of al Heretikes forsaking their lawfull Pastors and Rulers, and namely of forsaking Christes owne Vicar in earth, our true Aaron, as S. Bernard calleth him. De confid. li. 2. cap. 8. To al such forsakers the Apostle here giueth the curse and Va due to the said three, Cain, Balaam, and Corè, and telleth them that the storme of darkenes and eternal damnation is provided for them: most liuely describing al Heretikes (as in some vve to our woe haue experience by their maners in our daies) in al this pailage euen to the end of the epistle.

19. These are they vvhich segregate them selues.] The conditions of Heretikes in the later daies, that is, euer since Christs time, not of these onely of our age. For there were many that forsooke Gods Church and segregated them selues from the fellowship of the faithful euen in the primitiue Church: that vve may the lesse maruel at these mens segregating them selues, and going out from the rest, into seueral sectes, which S. Augustine therefore calleth Segregations. Al Heretikes segregate them selues.

THE ARGUMENT OF THE APOCALYPSE OF S. IOHN.

THAT which the old Testament foretold of Christ him self, the Apostles could report the fulfilling thereof in the new Testament, by way of an historie, euen from his Conception to his Glorification. But of his Church, they could not doe the like: because in their time it did but beginne: being to continue long after them, euen to the end of the world, and then at length to be glorified, as Christ her Spouse already is. Hereupon God would haue S. Luke to report in the Actes of the Apostles, the storie of the Churches beginning. and for the rest of it to the end, (that we might receiue this benefite also by the Apostles handes) he would S. Iohn to tell vs of it in this booke by way of a prophesie.

Hier. ad Paulin.

Of which booke S. Hierome saith: The Apocalypse of S. Iohn hath as many sacraments or mysteries, as wordes. Yea more then that, In euery word there are hid manifold and fundric senses. Therefore it is very litle that can here be noted, in respect. Yet to giue the good Catholike (whose comfort is here) some litle helpe, the booke may be diuided into siue partes.

Ca. 1. 2. 3.

The first (after the Proeme) containeth seuen Epistles from Christ now in glorie, to seuen Churches of Asia, or (for, these he maketh al one) to the seuen Bishops of those Churches: meaning not to those only, but to al his Churches & Bishops throughout the world: saying therefore in euery one of them, to al in general: He that hath an eare, let him heare vvhhat the Spirit saith to the Churches. As also in euery one he exhorteth vs to fight manfully (in this spiritual warfare of ours against sinne) for the victorie, and in euery one accordingly promiseth vs a reward in heauen. But before this, in the beginning of euery one: he partly commendeth, partly reprehendeth, and exhorteth to penance. Where this is much to be noted, and feared, that among so many, he reproveth somewhat in al, saue only in two, which are the second & the sixth. In the beginning also of euery one, he taketh some peece out of the apparition going before, to frame thereof his style agreeably to the matter of eche Epistle.

Ca. 4. to the 8.

After this admonition to Pastors and their flockes: the second part followeth, wherein the Church and vvhole course thereof from the beginning to the end, is expressed in the opening of a booke in Gods hand, and the seuen scales thereof, by Christ. for the vvhich, he seeth praise sung now in heauen and earth, not only to the Godhead, as before. but also (after a new manner) to Christ according to his Manhood. And here, when he is come to the opening of the last scale, signifying Domestday, he letteth that matter alone for a while, and to speake more fully yet of the said course of the Church, he bringeth in an other pagent (as it were) of seuen Angels with seuen Trumpets. The effect of both the Scales & Trumpets, is this: That the Church beginning and proceeding, there should be raised against it, cruel persecutions, and pestilent heresies: and at length after al heresies, a certaine most blasphemous Apostasie, being the next preparatiue to the coming.

Ca. 8. to the 12

coming of Antichrist: After al which, Antichrist him self in person shal appeare in the time of the sixt seale, and sixt trumpet, persecuting and seducing (for the short time of his reigne) more then al before him. The Church notwithstanding shal still continue, and vrade through al, because Christ her Spouse is stronger then al these aduersaries. vvhich also straight after the said sixt time, shal in the seuenth, come in maiestie and iudge al.

3 Of the which iudgement, differing yet a vvhile to speake at large, he doth first in the third part inreate more fully of the Devils working by Antichrist and his companie against the Church. that the iustice of Christ afterward in iudging, may be more manifest. C. 12. 13. 14.

4 At length therefore in the fourth part he commeth to the seuen last plagues, the seuenth of them conteyning the final damnation of the vvhole multitude, societie or corps of the wicked, from the beginning of the world to the end. Vvhich multitude, in the Gospel and first Epistle of this same S. Iohn (as also in the other Scriptures commonly) is often called Mundus, the world. and here he calleth it partly, Meretricem, a vvhore or harlot, because vvvith her concupiscence she enticeth the carnal and earthly men away from God: partly, Ciuitatem Babylon, the Citie of Babylon, because it maketh vvarre against Hierusalem the Citie of God. and labourerth to hold Gods people captiue in sinne, as it was shadowed in Nabuchodonosor & his Babyloniās, leading and holding the Iewes vvvith their Hierusalem, in captiuitie, vntil Cyrus (in figure of Christ) deliuered them. But whether al these seuen plagues should be vnderstood (as the seuenth) of Domesday it self, it is hard to define. More like it is, that the first sixe are to goe before Domesday: but whether corporally and literally, (so as Moyses plagued Egypt) or rather spirituallie, it is more hard to define. Yet it seemeth more easie, to vnderstand them corporally. as also the plagues vvhich vvvith Elias and his fellowes shal in the time of Antichrist plague the wicked (which peraduenture shal be the same last plagues) vvhich are reade in this booke c. 11. v. 6. But not content to haue described thus the damnation of the vvhole adulterous & bloudy societie, he doth also expressly report of their three grad Captaines damnation, which are these, Antichrist, and his Falseprophet, and the Deuil him self the author of al this mischiefe. C. 15. to the 20.

5 Finally, on the other side, in the fifth part he reporteth the vspeakable and euerlasting glorie, that the Church after al this suffering, shal by Christ her glorious Spouse be assumed vnto. And so he concluderth the booke. C. 21. 22.

ANNOTATIONS
 CHAP. I.

1. APOCALYPSE.] Of the Apocalypie thus v writeth the auncient father Denys, Bis hop of An admonition Corinth, as Eusebius alleageth him li. 7 c. 20 hist. Eccl. Of this booke (saith he) this is my opinion, to the reader that the matter thereof is far more profound then my vvis can reache vnto, and I doubt not but almost in ouery sentence of it, there lieth hidden a certaine sense exceeding mystical and marvelous, vvhich though I vnderstand not; yet I conceiue that vnder the vvordes there is a deepe meaning, and I measure not the matter by this booke. reason, but ascribe all to faith, taking it to be more high and diuine, then I can by cogitation comprise: nes reproving that vvhich I vnderstand not, but therefore I admire vwith reuerence, because my vvis can not attaine to it. Againe S. Augultine saith, that in the Apocaltypse many things are obscurely spoken, so exercise the minde of the reader: and as some few things left euident, that through them a man may vwith labour searche out the rest. specially for that the aushor so repeatech the same things in diuers sortes, that seeming to speake of sundry matters, in deede is found but so vnter the same things diuers vvordes. li. 20 de Ciuit. Dei c. 17.

T t t t ij Vvhich

Vvhich vve set downe here in the beginning, to varne the good Christian reader, to be humble and vwise in the reading both of al other holy Scriptures, and namely of this diuine and deepe prophetic: giuing him further to vnderstand, that vve vvil in our Annotations, according to our former trade and purpose, onely or cheefely note vnto the studious, such places as may be vsed by Catholics, or abused by Heretikes, in the controuersies of this time, and some other also: that haue special matter of edification, and that as breiefely as may be, for that the volume groweth great.

Numbers mystical.

4. To the 7 Churches.] That certaine numbers may be obserued as significant and mystical, is plain by many places of holy Scripture, and by the auncient Doctors special noting of the same to many purposes. Vvheroby vve see the rashnes of our Aduersaries, in condemning generally al religious respect of certaine numbers in our prayers, fastes, or actions. Namely the number of Seuen, is mystical, and propheticall, perfect, and vvhich (as S. Augutine saith,) the Church knoweth by the Scriptures, to be specially dedicated to the Holy Ghoit: and to appertaine to spiritual mundation, as in the Prophets appointing of Naaman to vvashe seuen times in Iordan, and the sprinkling of the blood seuen times against the tabernacle. li. 4. quest. in numer. q. 33. See li. 1. c. 5 de Gen. ad lit. & li. 5 quest. in Deuter. q. 42. All these visions stand vpon Seuens. seuen Churches, seuen Angels, seuen starres, seuen spirites, seuen candlestickes, seuen lampes, seuen trumpets, seuen vials, seuen hornes of the Lambe, seuen hills, seuen thunders, seuen heades of the Dragon, signifying the Diuel: seuen of the beaust that is Antichrist: seuen of the beaust that he harlot rid vpon: finally the number also of the visions is specially marked to be seuen, in this booke. and euery time that this number is vsed in this prophetic, it hath a myserie & a more large meaning, then the nature of that number is precisely and vulgarly taken for. As vvhich he writeth to seuen Churches, it is to be vnderstood of al the Churches in the vvorlde: as the seuen Angels, for al the Angels or gouernours of the vvhole Catholike Church: and so forth in the rest, because the number of Seuen, hath the perfection of vniuersalitie in it, as S. Augutine saith li. 5 quest. in Deuter. q. 42.

The number of Seuen mystical: specially in this booke.

Grate & peace from God & the holy Angels.

4. From the 7 spirites.] The Holy Ghoit may be here meant, and to called for his seuentold giftes and graces, as some expositours thinke. but it seemeth more probable that he speaketh of the holy Angels, by comparing this to the like in the 5 Chapter following: vvhich he seemeth to call there, the seuen spirites sent into al the vvorlde, as S. Paul to the Hebrues (c. 1. 14) speaketh of Angels. and so the Protestants take it in their comentaries: vvhich vve note, because therevpon they must needs confesse that the Apottle here giueth or vvisueth grace and peace, not from God onely, but also from his Angels: though that benediction cometh on vway of God, and an other vway of his Angels or Sainctes, being but his creatures. And so they may learne, that the faithfull often ioyning in one speache, God and our Lady, our Lord and any of his Sainctes: to helpe vs or blesse vs, is not superstitious, but an Apostolical speache. and so the Patriarch said (Gen. 48. v. 16.) The Angel that deliuereth me from all euils, blesse these children. See the Annot. Act. 15. 28.

God and our Ladie saue vs, and the like.

How al Christians be both kings & Priests.

6. A kingdom and Priests.] As al that truly serue God, and haue the dominion and superiourie ouer their concupiscences and vvhatoeuer vwould induce them to sinne, be kings: so al that employ their vvorke and them selues to serue God & offer al their actions as an acceptable sacrifice to him, be priests. Neuerthelesse, as if any man vwould therevpon affirme that there ought to be no other earthly powres or kings to gouerne in vvorlde affaires ouer Christians, he vvete a seditious Heretike, euen so are they that vpon this or the like places vvhere al Christians be called priests in a spiritual sort, vwould therefore inferre, that euery one is in proper signification a Priest, or that al be Priests alike, or that there ought to be none but such spiritual priets. for it is the seditious voice of Core, saying to Moytes and Aaron, Let us suffice you, that al the multitude is of holy ones, and the Lord is in them. Vvhy are you excolled ouer the people of the Lord? Num. 16.

Difference of holy daies and vvorke daies.

10. On the Dominical day.] Many notable pointes may be marked here. first, that euen in the Apostles time there vvete daies deputed to the seruice of God, and so made holy and different, though not by nature, yet by vse and benediction, from other profane or (as vve call them) vvorke daies.

Sunday made holiday by the Apostles & the Churches authoritie.

Secondly, that the Apostles and faithful abrogated the Sabbath vvhich vvwas the seuenth day, and made holy day for it, the next day following, being the eight day in count from the creation: and that vvithout al Scriptures, or commaundment of Christ that vve reade of, yea (vvich is more) not onely othervvise then vvwas by the Law obserued, but plainly othervvise then vvwas prescribed by God him self in the second commaundment, yea and othervvise then he ordained in the first creatio, vvhich he sanctified precisely the Sabbath day, & not the day following, such great power did Christ leaue to his Church, and for such causes gaue he the holy Ghoit to be retiaent in it, to guide it into al truthes, euen such as in the Scriptures are not exprest. And if the Church had authoritie & inspiration from God, to make Sunday (being a vvorke-day before) an euertlasting holy day: and the Saturday, that before vvwas holy day, now a common vvorke-day: vvhy may not the same Church prescribe & appoint the other holy feasts of Easter, Vvhitsuntide, Christmas, and the rest? for the same vvarrant he hath for the one, that he hath for the other.

Other feastes ordained by the Church.

As Saturday was in memorie of the creation, so Sunday of Christs resurrection.

Thirdly, it is to be noted that the cause of this change vvwas, for that now vve Christians esteeming more our redemption, then our first creation, haue the holy day vvhich vvwas before for

the

the remembrance of Gods accomplishment of the creation of things, novv for the memorie of the accomplishment of our redemption. Vvvhich therefore is kept vpon that day on vvvhich our Lord rose from life to death, vvvhich vvvas the day after the Sabbath, being called by the Ievves, vna or prima Sabbathi, the first of or after the Sabbath. Mat 28. Act 20. 1 Cor. 16. Fourthly, it is to be marked, that this holy day by the Apostles tradition also, vvvas named Dominicus dies, our Lords day, or, the Dominike, vvvhich is also an old Ecclesiastical vvword in our language, for the name Sunday is a heathenish calling, as al other of the vveeke daies be in our lãguage: some imposed after the names of planets, as in the Romans time: some by the name of certaine Idols that the Saxons did vvvorship, & to vvvhich they dedicated their daies before they vvvere Christians. Vvvhich names the Church vieth not, but hath appointed to call the first day, the Dominike, after the Apostle here: the other by the name of Feries, vvnill the last of the vveeke, vvvhich she calleth by the old name, Sabbath, becaue that vvvas of God, and not by imposition of the heathen. See the marginal Annotation Luc. 24, 1.

The Church vieth not the Heathenish names of daies: but Dies Dominicus, feria, Sabbatum.

Lastly obserue, that God reuealeth such great things to Prophets, rather vpon holy daies, and in times of contemplation, sacrifice, and praier, then on other profane daies. and therefore as S. Peter (Act. 10) had a reuelation at the six: houre of praier, and Zacharie (Luc. 1) at the houre of ieiuenie; and Cornelius (Act. 10) vvhen he vvvas at his praiers the ninthe houre, so here S. Iohn noteth that he had al these maruelous visions vpon a Sunday. prayer & fasting.

13. Vested in a Priestly garments.] He appeared in a long garment or vestment proper vnto Priests (for so the vvword, poderes, doth signifie, as Sap. 18, 24) and that vvvas most agreeable for him that represented the person of Christ the high Priest, and appeared to Iohn being a most holy Priest, and vvwho is specially noted in the Ecclesiastical historie for his Priestly garment called, petalon or lamina. Euseb. li. 3 hist. Escl. c. 25. & li. 5 c. 23.

Priestly garments

20. The seven starres.] The Bishops are the starres of the Church, as the Churches them selues are the golden candlestickes of the vvorld: no doubt to signifie, that Christ preferueth the truth onely in and by the laudul Bishops and Catholike Church, and that Christs truth is not to be sought for, in corners or conuenticles of Heretikes, but at the Bishops handes, and * vpon the candlestick which shineth to al in the house.

The true religie manifest as the light on a candlestick.

Mat. 5, 15

20. The Angels of the Churches.] The vvhoie Church of Christ hath S. Michael for her keeper and Protector, and therefore keepeth his holy day onely by name, among al Angels. And as earthly kingdoms haue their special Angels Protectors, as vve see in the 10 Chapter of Daniel: so much more .he particular Churches of Christedom. See S. Hierom in 34 Ezech. But of those Angels it is not here meant, as is manifest. And therefore Angels here must needes signifie the Priests or Bishops specially of the Churches here, and in them, al the gouernours of the vvhoie & of euery particular Church of Christedom. They are called Angels, for that they are Gods messengers to vs, interpreters of his vvill, our keepers and directors in religion, our intercessors, the carriers and offerers of our praies to him, and mediators vnto him vnder Christ, and for these causes and for their great dignitie they are here and in * other places of Scripture called Angels.

Angels Protectors.

Bishops & Priests are called Angels.

A N N O T A T I O N S
C H A P. II.

1. Holdeth the seven.] Much to be obserued, that Christ hath such care ouer the Church and the Bishops thereof, that he is said here to beare them vp in his right hand, and to vvalk in the middes of them: no doubt to vphold and preterue them and to guide them in al truth.

2. Thy vvorkes, labour, patience &c.] Things required in a Bishop. first, good vvorkes, and great patience in tribulation. next, zeale and sharpe ducipline toward offenders is here comended in them. thirdly, vvifedom & diligence in trial of false Apottles and preachers comming in sheep-skinnes: vvhere is signified the vvatchful prouidence that ought to be in them, that Heretikes enter not into their flockes.

3. Vvil moue.] Note that the cause vvhy God taketh the truth from certaine countries, and remoueth their Bishops or Churches into captiuitie or desolation, is the finne of the Prelates and people. And that is the cause (no doubt) that Christ hath taken avway our golden candlestick, that is, our Church in England. God graunt vs to remember our fall, to doe penance and the former vvorkes of charitie vvwhich our first Bishops and Church vvere notable and renouved for.

6. Because thou hatest.] Vve see here that of al things, Christian people (specially Bishops) should haue great zeale against Heretikes and hate them, that is, their vvicked doctrine and conditions, euen as God hateth them. for vvich onely zeale, our Lord saith here that he beareth vvith some Churches and Prelates, and saucth them from perishing.

Christ's care of his Church.Speciall vertues required in a Bishop.Sinne is the cause that God taketh the Cath-faith from countries.Zeale against Heretikes.

Nicolaites the first Heretikes so called, as a paterne of Ari-ans, Lutherans, and the like peculiar callings.

6. Of the Nicolaites.] Heretikes haue their callings of certaine persons, as is noted at large Act. 11, 26. These had their name of Nicolas, one of the 7 first Deacons that were chosen Act. 6. Vvho is thought to haue taught communie of women or viues, and that it was lawfull to eate of meates offered to idols. Vvhich later point is such a thing, as if one should hold it lawfull to receiue the bread or vvine of the newv Communion, vvich is a kinde of Idolothyea, that is, idolotrous meates. for though such creatures be good by creation, yet they be made execrable by profane blessings of Heretikes or Idolaters. And concerning the name of Nicolaites giuen here by our Lord him self to those Heretikes, it is a very paterne and marke vnto the faithful for euer. vvhat kinde of men they should be, that should be called after the like sort, Arians, Macedonians, Nestorians, Lutherans, Zuinglians, &c. See S. Hierom cont. I. usifer. in fine.

Balaam ouercomming Gods people by persuasion of lecherie and bellichere, was a type of Heretikes.

14. To cast a scandal.] Iosephus vvriteth that vvhen Balaam could not curse Gods people, nor otherwise anoy them, he taught Balac a vvay howv to ouerthrowv them: to vvir, by pretending vnto them their Heathen vvomen very beautiful, and delicate dishes of meate offered to Bel-phégor: that so being tempted they might fall to heathenish maners and displease God. To vvhich craftie counsel of Balaam the Apostle resembleth Heretikes fraude, vvno by offering of libertie of meate, vvomen, Church goodes, breache of vvoves, and such other licentious allurements, cause many moe to fall, then by their preaching.

Zeale against Heretikes.

20. The vvoman Iezabel.] He vvarneth Bishops to be zelous and stout against false Prophets and Heretikes of vvhat sort soeuer, by alluding couertly to the example of holy Elias that in zeale killed 450 false prophets of Iezabel, and spared not Achab nor Iezabel them selues, but told them to their faces that they troubled Israel, that is, the faithful people of God. And vvwhether there were any such great vvoman then, a furtherer and promotour of the Nicolaites, vvhom the Prophete should here meane, it is hard to say.

Achab and Iezabel.

Free vvil. God is not author of euil.

21. She vvil not repent.] See free vvil here most plainly, and that God is not the proper cause of obduration or impenitence, but man him self onely. Our Lord giueth sinners so long life, specially to expect their amendment: but Iezabel (to vvhom the Apostle here alludeth) vvould neuer repent.

They that communicate vvith Heretikes, shall be dāned vvith them.

22. They that comie aduancie vvith her.] Such as communicate vvith Heretikes, shall be dāned (alas) vvith them. for, not onely such as were in their hartes, of Iezabels religion, or invvardly beleued in Baal, but such as externally for feare vvorshipped him (vvhich the Scriptures call, bowving of their knees to Baal) are culpable. as novv many bowv their knees to the Communion, that bowv not their hartes.

Saints also are Patrones, not onely Angels.

26. I vvil giue him pouer.] Obserue that not onely Angels haue pouer and regiment ouer Countries vnder God, but novv for the honour of Christs humane nature, and for his ministerie in the vvorld, the Saints deceased also, being in heauen, haue gouernement ouer men and Prouinces, and therefore haue to doe vvith our affaires in the vvorld. Vvhich is against the Heretikes of these daies, that to take avvay our praiers to Saints, vvould spoile them of many soueraine dignities, vvherein the Scriptures make them equal vvith Angels.

ANNOTATIONS CHAP. III.

Doing vvell in respect of reuward.

5. He that shal ouercome.] In al these speeches to diuers Bishops and their Churches, he continually encourageth them to constancie in faith and good life, by setting before their eies the reuward of the next life. And yet the Calvinists vvould haue no man do good in respect of such reuward.

Adoration of creatures, called Dulia.

9. Adore before thy feete.] You see this vvord of adoration is in Scriptures vsed for vvorship of creatures also, and that to fall before the feete of holy men or Angels for duty and reuerence, is not idolatric, except the proper honour due to God, be giuen vnto them. See the Annotations vpon the 19 & 22 Chapter concerning the Apostles prostration before the Angel. And the Aduersaries euasion, saying that the adoration vvvas of God onely: and that, before the feete of the partie, signifieth nothing els but, in his presence, is false and against the phraze of Scriptures. as 4 Reg. 4. vvhere the Sunamite adored Elisæus, falling dovvne before his feete: and 4 Reg. 2. the sonnes of the Prophets adored him in the same sort. and here this adoration can not be meant but of the Bishop or Angel of Philadelphia, because he promisseth this honour as a reuward, and as an effecte of his loue towards him, saying, And they shal knowe that I haue loued thee. And that vvich he saith in the 22 Chapter, I fel dovvne to adore before the feete of the Angel: the very same he expresseth thus in the 19 Chapter, I fel before his feete to adore him: making it al one, to adore before his feete, and to adore him.

Perséuerance in good & continuing to the end.

11. That no man take thy crowne.] That is, his crowne of euerlasting life and glorie, if he perseuere not to the end in faith & good vvorkes: othervvise an other shal enter into his place, as Matthias did both to the dignitie of the Apostleship, & to the beauenly crowne due for the vvell vsing and executing of the same function: vvich Iudas might and should haue had, if he had perseuèred to the end. and as the Gentiles came into the grace and place of the Iewes. Other difficulties concerning this kinde of speache are resolued in Schoolemen, and are not here to be tooke vpon.

Neuters or indifferents in religion.

16. Lukevvarme.] Zeale and fernour is commendable, specially in Gods cause: and the Neuters that be neither hote nor cold, are to Christ and his Church burdenous and lothsome, as lukevvarme vvater is to a mans stomake, prouoking him to vomite, and therefore he threatneth to void vpon such Neuters out of his mouth.

CHAP. IIII.

The 2 part. first, the booke with 7 seales: secondly, 7 Angels with trumpets.

ANNOTATIONS
CHAP. VI.

9. Under the altar.] Christ as man (no doubt) is this altar, vnder vvhich the soules of al Martyrs liue in heauen, expecting their bodies, as Christ their head hath his body there already. And for correspondance to their place or state in heauen, the Church laieth commonly their bodies also or relikes neere or vnder the altars, vvhich our Saviours body is offered in the holy Masse: and hath a special prouiso that no altars be erected or consecrated vwithout some part of a Saincts body or relikes. Cons. African. can. 50. Carthag. s. can. 14. See S. Hierom cons. vigilans c. 3. S. Augustine de ciuit. li. 8. c. 27. S. Gregorie li. 5. ep. 50. li. 1. ep. 52. li. 2. ep. 58. Vvhervnto the Prophet seemeth here to allude, making their soules also to haue their being in heauen, as in vvhene vnder the altar. But for this purpose note vvel the vvordes of S. Augustine (or vvhich other auncient writer soeuer vvvas the author thereof) Ser. 11 de Sanctis. Under the altar (saith he) of God I saw the soules of the flaine. What is more reuerent or honorable, then to rest vnder the altar on vvhich sacrifice is done to God, and in vvhich our Lord is the Priest: as it is vvritten, Thou art a Priest according to the order of Melchisedec? Rightly do the soules of the iust rest vnder the altar, because vpon the altar our Lordes body is offered. neither vwithoute cause do the iust there call for reuenge of their bloud, vvhich also the bloud of Christ is shed for sinners. and many other goodly vvordes to that purpose.

This place also the vvicked heretike Vigilantius (as S. Hierom vvriting against him vvittnesleth c. 2) abused to proue, that the soules of Martyrs and other Saincts vvvere included in some certaine place, that they could not be present at their bodies and monuments (vvhich Christian people vsed in the primitiue Church to pray vnto them, as Catholike men doe yet) nor be vvhich they list, or vvhich men pray vnto them. To vvhich the holy doctor ansvvereth at large, that they be vvhichesoeuer Christ is according to his humanitie: for vnder that altar they be. Part of his vvordes be these, that you may see how this blessed father refuted in that Heretike the Calvinistes so long before they vvvere borne. Doest thou (saith he) prescribe lawes to God? Doest thou fetter the Apostles, that they may be kept in prison til the day of iudgement, and be kept from their Lord, of vvhom it is vvritten, They shall see the Apoec. 14. Lambe vvhissher soeuer he goeth. If the Lambe be in euery place, then they that be vvith the Lambe, must be euery vvhere. And if the diuel and vvicked spirites gadding abroad in the vvorld vvith passing celeritie, be present euery vvhere: shall holy Martyrs after the heading of their bloud, be kept cloze vnder an altar, that they can not sturre out from thence? So ansvvereth this learned doctor.

Vvhich misliketh our Calvinistes so much, that they charge him of great errour, in that he saith, Christ according to his humanitie is euery vvhere, as though he vvwere an Vbiquitarie Protestant. Vvhich, if they had any iudgement, they might perceiue that he meaneth not, that Christ or his Saincts should be personally present at once in euery place alike, as God is: but that their motion, speede, and agilitie to be vvhich they list, is incomparable, and that their povver and operation is accordingly. vvhich they may learne to be the holy doctors meaning, by the vvordes that folovv of the Diuel and his ministers: vvhich he affirmeth to be euery vvhere no othervvise but by their exceeding celeritie of being and vvorking mischeefe novv in one place, novv in another, and that in a moment. For though they be spirites, yet are they not euery vvhere at once according to their essence. And for our nevv Diuines it vvwere a hard thing to determine, how long Satan (that told our Lord he had circuited the earth) vvvas in his iourney, and in the particular consideration and tentation of Iob: and how many men he assaulted in that his one circuite. No, no. such curious companions knovv nothing, nor beleeeue nothing, but that they see vvith corporal eyes, and teach nothing but the vvay to infidelitie.

10. And they cried.] S. Hierom also against the said Vigilantius reporteth, that he vsed an argument against the prayers of Saincts out of this place, for that these Martyrs cried for reuenge, and could not obtaine. But vve vvill report his vvordes, that you may see how like one heretike is to another, these of our daies to those of old. Thou saiest in thy Hierom probooke (saith S. Hierom c. 3.) that vvholes vve be aliue, one of vs may pray for another: but after vve be dead, no mans prayer shall be heard for another: specially seeing the Martyrs asking reuenge of their bloud, Heretike Vigilantius could not obtaine. So said the Heretike. Against vvhich the holy Doctor maketh a long refutation, prouing that they pray much more after they be in heauen, then they did here in earth:

That Saincts

ueeth against the lantius.

earth:

earth: and that they shal be much sooner heard of God, then when they were in the vworld.

But for the Heretikes argument framed out of these vvordes of the Apocalypse thus, These Martyrs did not obtaine, ergo Saints do not pray for vs: it vvas so friuolous, and the antecedent so manifestly false, that he vouchsaued not to stand about it. For it is plaine that the Martyrs here vvere heard, and that their petition shoud be fulfilled in time appoynted by God (vvherevnto they did and do alwaies conforme them selues:) for it vvas said vnto them, That they should rest yet a litle time, til &c. And that Martyrs praers be heard in this case, our Sauour testifieth Luc 18 saying, And vvil not God reuenge his elect that crye to him day and night? I say to you, he vvil quickly reuenge them. And if God do not heare the Saints sometime nor graunt their requestes, is it therfore consequent that they do not or may not pray? Then Christ him self should not haue praied his father to remoue the bitter cuppe of death from him, because that petition vvas not graunted.

Howv Martyrs
erie for reuenge.

10. Reuengest thou not?] They do not desire reuenge vpon their enemies for hatred, but of charitie and zeale of Gods honour, praying that his enemies and the persecutors of his Church and Saints, that vvil not repent, may be confounded: and that our Lord would accelerate his general iudgement, that so they might attaine the perfect crowne of glorie promised vnto them, both in body and soule: vvich is to desire the resurrection of their bodies, vvich then shal triumph perfectly and fully ouer the persecutors that so cruelly handled the bodies of the elect, vvich shal then appeare glorious to the enemies cofusion.

11. Til their fellow seruantes be complete.] There is a certaine number that God hath ordained to die for the testimonie of truth and the Catholike faith, for conformitie of the members to the head CHRIS T our cheefe Martyr. and til that number be accomplished, the general condemnation of the vvicked persecutors shal not come, nor the general reward of the elect.

THE 4 VISION.

∴ The Priest standing at the altar praying & offering for the people in the time of the high mysteries, Christ him self also being present vpon the altar, is a figure of this thing, & therevnto be alludeth.

c If this be S. Michael or any Angel, and not Christ him self, as some take it, Angels offer vp the prayers of the faithful, as the 24 Elders did chap. 5. for this vvord. Saints, is taken here for the holy persons on earth, as often in the Scripture: though it be not against the Scriptures, that the inferior Saint or Angel in heauē should offer their prayers to God by their superiors there. But hereby vve cōclude against the Protestants, that it derogateth not from Christ, that Angels or Saints offer our prayers to God. as also it is plaine of Raphael Tob. 12. 12.

AND vvhē he had opened the seuenth scale, there vvas made silence in heauen, as it vvere halfe an houre. † And I saw 2 seuen Angels standing in the sight of God: and there vvere giuen to them seuen trompets. † And an other Angel 3 came, and stode ∴ before the altar, hauing a golden censar: and there vvere giuen to him many incenses, that he should giue of the prayers of al saintes vpon the altar of gold, vvhich is before the throne of God. † And 4 the smoke of the incēses^c of the prayers of the saintes ascended from the hand of the Angel before God. † And the An- 5 gel rooke the censar, and filled it, of the fire of the altar, and cast it on the earth, and there vwere made thunders & voices and lightnings, and a great earthquake. † And the seue 6 ngels vvhich had the seuen trompets, prepared them selues to sound vwith the tromper.

† And the first Angel sounded vwith the tromper, and 7 there vvas made haile and fire, mingled in bloud, and it vvas cast on the earth, & the third part of the earth was burnt, & the third part of trees vvas burnt, and al greene graisse vvas burnt.

† And the second Angel sounded vwith the tromper: and 8 as it vwere a great mountaine burning vwith fire, vvas cast into the sea, and the third part of the sea vvas made bloud: † and the third part of those creatures died, vvhich had liues 9 in the sea, and the third part of the shippes perished.

† And the third Angel sounded vwith the tromper, and a 10 great starre fel from heauen, burning as it vwere a torche, and it fel on the third part of the floudes, and on the fountaines of vvaters: † and the name of the starre is called vvormevod. 11 and the third part of the vvaters was made into Worme Vod: and many men died of the vvaters, because they vwere made bitter.

† And the fourth Angel sounded vwith the tromper, and 12 the third part of the sunne vvas smitten, and the third part of the moone, and the third part of the starres, so that the third part of them vvas darkened, and of the day there shined not the third part, and of the night in like maner. † And I looked, 13 and heard the voice of one egle flying through the middes of heauen, saying vwith a loud voice, Vvo, vvo, vvo to the inhabitants

This often insinuation that Antichrists reigne shall be but three yeres & a halfe (Dan. 7, 25. Apoc. 11, 2. 3. & in this chap. v. 6. c. 13. c.) proueth that the heretikes be exceedingly blinded vvith malice, that hold the Pope to be Antichrist, who hath ruled so many ages.

6. The vvoman fled.] This great persecution that the Church shall see from, is in the time of Antichrist, and shall endure but three yeres and a halfe, as is noted v. 14 in the margent. In vvwhich time for al that, she shall not vvant our Lordes protection, nor true Pastors, nor be so secrete, but al faithful men shall know and solovv her: much lesse shall she decay, erre in faith, or degenerate in this time of persecution, because it hath no publike state of regiment nor open free exercise of holy functions, may be said to be fled into the desert, yet it is neither vnknovven to the faithful that solovv it, nor the enemies that persecute it: as the hidde company that the protestants talke of, vvwas for some vvorldes together, neither knovven to their frendes nor foes, because there vvwas in deede none such for many ages together. And this is true, if vve take this flight for a very corporal retiring into vvildernes. Vvhere in deede it may be, and is of most expounded, to be a spiritual flight, by forsaking the ioyes and solaces of the vvorld, and giuing her self to contemplation and penance, during the time of persecution vnder Antichrist. And by enlarging the sense, it may also very vvell signifie the desolauon and affliction that the Church suffereth and hath suffered from time to time in this vvildernes of the vvorld, by al the forerunners and ministers of Antichrist, Tyrants and Heretikes.

7. A great battel.] In the Church there is a perpetual combat betvvixt S. Michael (protector of the Church militant as he vvwas sometime of the Ievves Synagogue Dan. 10, 21) and his Angels, fighting vvith the Deuil and his ministers. the perfect victorie ouer vvhom, shall be at the iudgement. Marke here also the cause vvhy S. Michael is commonly painted fighting vvith a dragon.

15. To be caried avvay.] By great persecution he vvould dravv her, that is, her children from the true faith: but every one of the faithful elect, gladly bearing their part thereof, ouercome his tyrannie. At vvwhose constancie he being the more offended, vvorketh malicious attempts in assauling the frailer sort, vvwho are here signified by the rest of her feede that keepe the commaundements, but are not so perfect as the former.

 CHAP. XIII.

1. A beast comming vp.] This beast is the vniuersal companie of the vicked, vvhose head is Antichrist: & the same is called (Apo. 17) the vvhooore of Babylon. The 7 heades be expounded (Apo. 17) seuen kings: siue before Christ, one present, and one to come. The 10 hornes be also there expounded to be 10 kings that shal reigne a l'hort vvhile after Antichrist. This dragon is the Diuel, by vvhoe pouer the vvhooore or beast or Antichrist vworketh. for in the vvordes folovving (v. 3 & 4) Antichrist is called the beast, to vvhom the dragon, that is, the Deuil giueth that pouer of feined miracles. and as vve adore God for giuing pouer to Christ and his folovvers, so they shal adore the Deuil for assisting Antichrist and giuing him pouer. Many mysteri- es expounded.

7. To make battel vvith the saincts.] He shal kil the saincts then liuing, Elias and Enoch, and infinite moe that professe Christ. vvhereby vve mult learne, not to maruel vvhen vve see the vicked persecute and preuaile against the iust, in this life. Then shal his great persecution and crueltie trie the saincts patience, as his vvonderful meanes to seduce shal trie the stedfastnes of their faith, which is signified by these vvordes folovving, Here is the patience and the faith of saincts. And vvhen it is said, They adored the beast, vvhose names are not vvritten in the booke of life of the Lambe, it giueth great solace and hope to al them that shal not yeld to such persecutions, that they are of Gods elect, and their names vvritten in the booke of life. Great perse- cution by An- tichrist and his ministers. Their blessed- nes that conti- nue cōstant.

14. The image of the beast.] They that novv refuse to vvorship Christs image, vvhould then vvorship Antichrists. And vve may note here, that as the making or honouring of this image vvas not against the honour of Antichrist, but vvholly for it, as also the image erected of Nabuchodo- notor, and the vvorship thereof vvas altogether for the honour of him, so is the vvorship of Christs image, the honour of Christ him self, and not against him, as Protestants madly imagin. The honour of Christs image is for the ho- nour of Christ.

17. The character or the name.] As belike for the puerse imitation of Christ, vvhose image (specially as on the Roode or crucifixe) he seeth honoured and exalted in euery Church, he vvil haue his image adored (for that is Antichrist, in emulation of like honour, aduersarie to Christ) so for that he seeth al true Christian men to beare the badge of his Crosse in their foreheads, he likewise vvil force al his to haue an other marke, to abolish the signe of Christ. By the like emu- lation also and vicked opposition he vvil haue his name and the letters thereof to be sacred, and to be vvorne in mens cappes, or vvritten in solemne places, and to be vvorshipped, as the name of I E S V S is and ought to be among Christian men. And as the ineffable name of God vvas among the Ievves expressed by a certaine number of 4 characters (therefore called Tetragrammaton) so it seemeth the Apostle alludeth here to the number of Antichrists name. Antichrists tri- ple honour a- gainst the ho- nour of Christ.

And here it is much to be noted, that the Protestants plucking dovne the image of Christ out of al Churches, & his signe of the crosse from mens foreheads, and taking avay the honour and reuerence of the name I E S V S, doe make roome for Antichrists image, & marke, and name. And vvhen Christs images and ensignes or armes shal be abolished, and the Idol of Antichrist set vp in steede thereof, as it is already begonne: then is the abomination of desolation vvich vvas foretold by Daniel and our Sauour. The Protestātr by abolishing of Chrites i- mage, & crosse and irreuerēce to the name IESVS, make a ready vway to the honour of Antichrist.

18. Let him count.] Though God vvould not haue it manifest before hand to the vvorld, vvho in particular this Antichrist should be: yet it pleased him to giue such tokens of him, that vvhen he commeth, the faithful may easily take notice of him, according as it is vvritten of the euent of other prophecies concerning our Sauour, That vvhen it is come so passe, you may beleuee. In the meane tyme vve mult take heede that vve iudge not ouer rashly of Gods secretes, the holy vvrite- name secreete. Antichrists name secreete.

Y y y ij here

here signifying, that it is a point of high vnderstanding, illuminated extraordinarily by Gods spirit, to reckon right and decipher truly before hand, Antichrists name and person.

Antichrist shall be one special man, and of a peculiar name. and by S. Paul 2 Thessal. 2. vvhether he is called, the man of sinne. Again, he must be one particular person, & not a nuber, a succession, or vvhole order of any degree of men: because his proper name, and the particular number, and the characters thereof be (though obscurely) intimated. Vvhich reprobeth the vvhicked vanitie of Heretikes, that vvhould haue Christs ovvne Vicars, the successors of his cheefe Apostle, yea the vvhole order of them for many ages together, to be this Antichrist. Vvhose by his description here and in the said Epistle to the Thessalonians, must be one special man, and of a particular proper name, as our Lord I E S V S is. And vvhosoever he be, these Protestants vndoubtedly are his precursors. for as they make his vvvay by ridding avvay Christs images, crosse, and name, so they exceedingly promote the matter by taking avvay Christs cheefe minister, that al may be plaine for Antichrist.

The Pope can not be Antichrist. If the Pope had been Antichrist, and had been revealed no vv a good many yeres sithence, as these fellows say he is to them, then the number of this name vvhould agree to him, and the prophetic being no vv fulfilled, it vvhould evidently appeare that he bare the name and number here noted. for (no doubt) vvhhen he commeth, this count of the letters or number of his name vvhich before is so hard to know, will be easie. for he will set vp his name in every place, euē as we faithful men do no vv aduance I E S V S. And vvhhat name proper or appellatiue of al or any of the Popes do they finde to agree vvith this number, not vvithstanding they boast that they haue found the vvhole order and euery of them these thousand yeres to be Antichrist, and the rest before euen from S. Peter, forevvorkers to vvard his kingdom?

Al framing of letters to expresse Antichrists name, is vncertaine. 18. The number 666. Forasmuch as the auncient expositors and other do thinke (for certaine knowledge thereof no mortal mā can haue vvithout an expresse reuelatiō) that his name consisteth of so many, & such letters in Greeke, as according to their maner of numboering by the Alphabete make 666, and forasmuch as the letters making that number, may be found in diuers names both proper & common: (as S. Irenzus findeth them in Latinos and Teitan, Hippolytus in αργυριουδαι, Tren. li. 5 Aretas in Lampreis, & some of this age in Luderus, vvhich vvas Luthers name in the Alman to gue:) therefore vv: see there can be no certaintie, and euery one frameth and applieth the letters to his ovvne purpose. and most absurd folly it is of the Heretikes, to applie the vvord, Latinos, to the Pope: neither the vvhole order in common, nor euer any particular Pope being so called. and S. Irenzus the first that obserued it in that vvord, applied it to the Empire and state of the Romane Emperour, vvhich then vvas Heathen, and not to yne Pope of his daies or after him: and yet professed the vvord, Teitan, as more agreable, vvith this admonition, that it vvere a very perilous and presumptuous thing to define any certaintie before hand, of that number and name. And truly vvhatsouer the Protestants presume herein of the Pope, vve may boldly discharge Luther of that dignitie. He is vndoubtedly one of Antichrists precursors, but not Antichrist him self.

ANNOTATIONS
CHAP. XIII.

19. From hence forth novv.] This being specially spoken of Martyrs (as not onely S. Augustine seemeth to take it, but the Calvinists them selues, translating, in domino, for our Lords cause) the Protestants haue no reason to vse the place against Purgatorie or prair for the departed. seeing the Catholike Church and al her children confesse, that al Martyrs are straight after their death, in blisse, and neede no praiers. Vvhich of this is S. Augustines knovven sentence, He doeth iniurie to the Martyr, that praicth for the Martyr. Ser. 17. de verb. Apost. c. 1. and againe to this purpose he writeth thus most excellently tract. 84 in Ioan. We keepe not a memorie of Martyrs at our Lords table, as vve doe of other that rest in peace, that is, for the intent to pray for them, but rather that they may pray for vs &c.

But if vve take the vvordes generally for al deceased in state of grace, as it may be also, then vve say that euen such, though they be in Purgatorie and Gods chastisement in the next life, and neede our praiers, yet (according to the foresaid vvordes of S. Augustine) do rest in peace, being discharged from the labours, afflictions, and persecutions of this vvorld, and (vvhich is more) from the daily dangers of sinne and damnation, and put into infallible securitie of eternal ioy vvith vspeakable comfort of conscience, and such in deede are more happie and blessed then any liuing, vvho yet are vsually in the Scriptures called blessed, euen in the middes of the tribulations of this life. Vvhereby vve see that these vvordes, from hence forth they shal rest from their labours, may truely agree to them also that are in Purgatorie, and so here is nothing proued against Purgatorie. Lastly, this aduerbe, á modo, in Latin, as in the Greeke απαρτι, doth not properly signifie, from this present time forvard, as though the Apostle had said, that after their death and so forvard they are happie: but it noteth and ioyneth the time past together vvith the time present, in this sense, that such as haue died since Christs Ascension, vvhen he first entering into heauen opened it for others, goe not to Limbw Parrum, as they vv^ere vvont before Christs time, but are in case to goe straight to blisse, except the impediment be in them selues. Therefore they are here called blessed, that die novv in this state of grace & of the nevv Testament, in comparison of the old faithful and good persons.

ANNO TATIONS CHAP. XVII.

§. Babylon.] In the end of S. Peters first Epistle, vvhere the Apostle dateth it at Babylon, vvhich the auncient vvriters (as vve there noted) affirme to be meant of Rome: the Protestants vvil not in any vvise haue it so, because they vvould not be driuen to confesse that Peter euer vvas at Rome: but here for that they thinke it maketh for their opinion, that the Pope is Antichrist, and Rome the seate and citie of Antichrist, they vvil needes haue Rome to be this Babylon, this great vvhore, and this purple harlot. for such fellowes, in the exposition of holy Scripture, be ledde onely by their preiudicate opinions and heresies, to vvhich they dravv al things vvithout al indifferencie and sinceritie.

But S. Augustine, Aretas, and other vvriters, most cōmonly expound it, neither of Babylon it self a citie of Chaldaea or Ægypt, nor of Rome, or any one citie, vvhich may be so called spiritu- ally, as Hierusalem before chap. 11 is named spiritual Sodom and Ægypt: but of the general so- cietie of the impious, & of those that preferre the terrene kingdō and cōmoditie of the vvorld, before God & eternal felicitie. The author of the Commentaries vpon the Apocalypse set forth in S. Ambrose name, vvriteth thus: This great vvhore sometime signifeth Rome, specially vvhich at that time vvhen the Apostle vvrote this, did persecute the Church of God. but osher vvise it signifeth the vvhole citie of the Diuel, that is, the vvniuersal corps of the reprobate. Tertullian also taketh it for Rome, li. aduers. thus. Babylon (saith he) in S. Iohn is a figure of the citie of Rome, being so great: so proud of the Empire, Iudaean. and the destroyer of the saints. Vvhich is plainly spoken of that citie, vvhen it vvas heathen, the head of the terrene dominion of the vvorld, the persecutor of the Apostles and their successors, the seate of Nero, Domitian, and the like; Christs special enemies, the sinke of idolatrie, sinne, and false called the eight. Or, Antichrist him self, though he be one of the seuen, yet for his extraordinarie wickednes he shal be counted the odde persecutor, or the accomplishment of al other, & therefore is named the eight. Some take this beast called the eight, to be the Diuel.

The double
of Babylon.

18. The great citie.] If it be meant of any one citie, and not of the vniuersal societie of the reprobate (vvhich is the citie of the Diuel, as the Church & the vniuersal fellowship of the faithfull is called the citie of God) it is most like to be old Rome, as some of the Greekes expound it, from the time of the first Emperours, til Constantines daies, vvho made an end of the persecution. for by the authoritie of the old Romane Empire, Christ vvvas put to death first, and aftervvard the vvvo cheere Apostles, & the Popes their successors, and infinite Catholike men through out the vvorld, by lesser kings vvvhich then vvvere subiect to Rome. Al vvvhich Antichristian persecutions ceased, vvhen Constantine reigned, and yelded vp the citie to the Pope, vvho holdeth not the kingdom or Empire ouer the vvorld, as the Heathen did, but the fatherhod and spiritual rule of the Church. Howvvbeit the more probable sense is the other, of the citie of the Diuel, as the author of the homilies vpon the Apocalypse in S. Augustine, declareth.

CHAP. XVIII.

The fall of Babylon, her iudgement, plagues and reuenges: for the vvvhich, 9 the kings, 16 and marchants of the earth thas sometime did cleane vnto her, shal mourne bitterly: 20 but heauen, and the Apostles and Prophets shal reioyce.

AND after these things I saw an other Angel coming downe from heauen, hauing great power: & the earth vvvas illuminated of his glorie. † And he cried out in force, saying, * Fallen fallen is Babylon the great: and it is become the habitation of Devils, and the custodie of euery vnclane spirit, and the custodie of euery vnclane and hateful bird: † because al nations haue drunke of the vvine of the vvvrath of her fornication: and the kings of the earth haue fornicated vvith her: and the marchantes of the earth vvvere made riche by the vertue of her delicacies.

† And I heard an other voice from heauen, saying, Goe out from her my people: that you be not partakers of her sinnes, and receiue not of her plagues. † Because her sinnes are come euen to heauen, and God hath remembered her iniquities. † Render to her as she also hath rendred to you: & double ye double according to her vvorkes: In the cuppe vvherin she hath mingled, mingle ye double vnto her. † As much as she hath glorified her self, & hath been in delicacies, so much giue her torment and mourning: because she faith in her hart, * I sit a queene, & Widow I am not, and mourning I shal not see. † Therefore in one day shal her plagues come, death, and mourning, and famine, and vvwith fire she shal be burnt: because God is strong that shal iudge her.

4. Amen, Alleluia.] These tvvo Hebrue vvordes (as other els vvhere) both in the Greeke & Latin text are kept religiously, & not translated, vnles it be once or tvvise in the Psalmes. Yca and the Protestants them selues keepe them in the text of their English Testaments in many places. and maruel it is vvhy they vse them not in al places, but sometimes turne, Amen, into, Verely, vvhereof see the Annotation Ioan. 8. v. 34: and in their Service booke they translate, Alleluia, into, into, Praise ye the Lord. as though Alleluia had not as good a grace in the acte of seruing God, (vvhere it is in deede properly vsed) as it hath in the text of the Scripture.

Alleluia often vsed in the Church, specially in Easter time. The Church Catholike doth often and specially vse this sacred vvord, to ioynе vvith the Church triumphānt, consisting of Angels and Saincts, vvho here are said to laude and praise God vvith great reioycing, by this vvord Alleluia, and by often repetition thereof: as the Catholike Church also vseth, namely in Easter time euen til Vvhit-fontide, for the ioy of Christs resurrection, vvhich (as S. Augustine declareth ep. ad Ianuarium) vvvas the general vse of the Primitiue Church, making a greater mysterie and matter of it, then our Protestants novv do. At other times of the yere also he saith it vvvas sung in some Churches, but not in al. and S. Hierom numbereth it among the heresies of Vigilantius, That Alleluia could not be sung but at Easter. Aduers. Vigilant. c. 1.

Epist. ad Ian. c. 17. & c. 15.

It signifieth more then (as the Protestants translate it) praise ye the Lord.

The truth is, by the vse of the Scriptures it hath more in it then, Praise ye the Lord, signifying vvith laude, glorifying, and praising of God, a great reioycing vvithal, mirth, and exultation of hart in the singers thereof. and that is the cause vvhy the holy Church saith, Lau tibi Domine, Praise be to thee o Lord, in Lent and times of penance and mourning, but not Alleluia. vvhich (as S. Augustine also declareth) is a terme of signification and mysterie, ioyned vvith that time, and then vsed specially in the Church of God, vvhen she representeth to vs in her Seruice, the ioyes and beatitude of the next life: vvhich is done specially at Easter, by the ioyful celebrating of Christs glorious Resurrection and Ascension, after the penal time of Lent vvhich representeth the miserie of this life. See S. Augustine Ser. 1. & c. 9. & c. 9 de Diuersis to. 10. and his enarration vpon the 148 Psalm. for in the titles and endes of diuerse holy Psalmes this Alleluia is ful of mysterie & sacred signification. Vvhere vve must atke the Protestants, vvhy they haue left it out altogether, being in the Hebrue, saying neither Alleluia, nor, Praise ye the Lord, in the Bible 1577: & that nine times in the sixe last Psalmes.

Amen and Alleluia should not be translated into vulgar tongues.

Moreouer the said holy Doctor (li. 2 de doct. Christ. c. 11) affirmeth that Amen & Alleluia be not translated into any other language, propter sanctiorem auctoritatem, for the more sacred authoritie of the vvordes so remaining. and ep. 178. he saith that it is not lawfull to translate them. Quam sciendum est &c. for it is to be knowen (saith he) that al nations do sing Amen and Alleluia in the Hebrue vvordes, vvhich neither the Latine man nor the Barbarou may translate into his owne language. See S. Hierom also epist. 137. And namely for our Nation, S. Gregorie vvil beare vs vvittnes that our countrie receiued the vvord Alleluia vvith their Christianitie, saying thus li. 27 Moral. c. 6. Lingua Britannia qua nihil aliud nomenat quam barbarum fremere, iam dudum in Diuinis laudibus Hebrarum sapit resonare Alleluia. that is, The Britan tongue, vvhich knew nothing els but to muster barbarously, hath begone of late in Gods diuine laudes and praises to sound the Hebrue Alleluia. And for Iurie, S. Hierom ep. 17. c. 7 vvriteth, that the husbandmen at the plough sang Alleluia, vvhich vvvas not then their vulgar speache. Yea he saith that in Monasteries the singing of Alleluia vvvas in steede of a bel to call them together ad Collectam. in Epitaph. Paula c. 10.

The Protestants profane this vvord by translating it, and diminish the signification thereof.

This vvord is a sacred, Christian, and Angelical song, and yet in the nevv seruice booke it is turned into, Praise ye the Lord, and Alleluia is quite gone, because they list neither to agree vvith the Church of God, nor vvith the vse of holy Scriptures, no uor vvith their owne translations, but no maruel, that they can not sing the song of our Lord and of Angels in a strange countrie, that is, out of the Catholike Church, in the captiuitie of schisme & heretic. Lastly, vve might atke them vvwhether it be al one to say Mat. 21. Hosanna, & Sauu vs vve beseeche thee: vvhereas Hoianna is vvithal a vvord of exceeding congratulation and ioy vvhich they expressed toward our Sauueur. euen so Alleluia hath an other maner of sense and signification in it, then can be expressed by, Praise ye the Lord.

Psal. 136.

8. Iustifications of Saincts. Here the Heretikes in their translations could not alter the vvord Iustifications into ordinances, or constitutions, as they did falsely in the first of S. Luke, vvwhereof see good vvorkes, the Annotation there ver. 6, but they are forced to say in Latin, iustificaciones, as Beza: and in English, righteousnes, (for iustificaciones they vvil not say in any case for feare of inconuenience.) yea and they can not deny but these iustificaciones be the good vvorkes of saincts. but vvhere * they make this stifying, but because them vve haue by onely faith, it is moit eudently false, & against the very text, and nature of the word. selues also vvith him iust. so that, iustificaciones, be the vertues of faith, hope, charitie, and good deedes, iustifying or making a man iust, and not effectes of iustification. neither faith onely, but they al together be the very ornaments and inward garments, beauty, and iustice of the soule, as here it is eudent.

Beza

S. Johns adoring of the Angel, explicated against the Protestants abusing the same.

10. And 1 fel. The Protestants abuse this place, and the example of the Angels forbidding Iohn to adore him being but his fellow seruant, and appointing him to adore God, against al honour, reuerence, and adoration of Angels, Saincts, or other sanctified creatures, teaching that no religious vvorship ought to be done vnto them. But in truth it maketh for no such purpose, but only vvarneth vs that Diuine honour and the adoration due to God alone, may not be giuen to any Angel or other creature. S. August. de vera relig. cap. vltimo. And vvhen the Aduersaries replie that so great an Apostle, as Iohn vvvas, could not be ignorant of that point, nor vvould haue giuen diuine honour vnto an Angel (for so he had been an Idolater) and therefore that he vvvas not

reprehended for that, but for doing any religious reuerence or other honour vvhathoener to his fellow-servant: vve ansvver that by the like reason, S. Iohn being so great an Apostle, if this later kinde of reuerence had been vnlawful and to be reprehended, as the Protestants hold it is no lesse then the other, could not haue been ignorant thereof, nor vwould haue done it.

Therefore they might much better haue learned of S. Augustine (q. 61 in Genes.) howv this facte of S. Iohn vvas corrected by the Angel, and vvherein the errour vvas. In effect it is thus, That the Angel being so glorious and ful of maiestie, presenting Chrifts person, and in his name vsing diuers vvordes proper to God, as, I am the first and the last, and alius and vvas dead, and such like, might vvel be taken of S. Iohn, by error of his person, to be Chrift him self, and that the Apostle presuming him to be so in deede, adored him vvith Diuine honour: vvich the Angel correcting, told him he vvas not God, but one of his fellowes, and therefore that he should not so adore him, but God. Thus then vve see, Iohn vvas neither so ignorant, to thinke that any vndue honour might be giuen to any creature: nor so ill, to commit idolatrie by doing vndue vvorship to any Angel in heauen: and therefore vvas not cuipable at all in his facte, but onely erred materially (as the Scholemen call it) that is, by mistaking one for an other, thinking that vvich vvas an Angel, to haue been our Lord: because he knewe that our Lord him self is also called an Angel, and hath often appeared in the visions of the faithful.

Apo. c. 1.

Esa. 9 in Græco.

Malac. 3.

And the like is to be thought of the Angel appearing in the 22. of the Apocalypse, vvwhether it vvere the same or an other. for that also did so appeare, that Iohn could not tell vvwhether it vvere Chrift him self or no, til the Angel told him. Once this is certaine, that Iohn did not formally (as they say) commit idolatrie, nor sinne at all berein, knowing al dueties of a Christian man, no lesse then an Angel of heauen, being also in as great honour vvith God, yea and in more then many Angels. Vvchich perhaps may be the cause (and consequently an other explication of this place) that the Angel knowing his great graces and merites before God, vwould not accept any vvorship or submission at his handes, though Iohn againe of like humilitie did it, as also immediatly afterward chap. 22. vvchich belike he vwould not haue done, if he had been precisely aduised by the Angel but a moment before, of error & vnduefulness in the facte. Howvsoeuer that be, this is evident, that this the Angels refusing of adoration, taketh not avway the due reuerence and respect vve ought to haue to Angels or other sanctified persons and creatures. and so these vvordes, See show doe it not, signifie rather an earnest refusal, then any signification of crime to be committed thereby.

Aug. de vera relig. c. 55.

And maruel it is that the Protestants making them selues so sure of the true sense of every doubtful place by conference of other Scriptures, folow not here the conference and comparing of Scriptures that them selues so much or onely require. Vve vvil giue them occasion and a methode so to doe, thus. He that doubteth of this place, findeth out three things of question, vvchich must be tried by other Scriptures. The first, vvwhether there ought to be or may be any religious reuerence or honour done to any creatures, taking the vword religion or religious vvorship not for that special honour vvchich is properly and onely due to God, as S. Augustine sometimes vseth it, but for reuerence due to any thing that is holy by sanctification or application to the seruice of God. The second thing is, vvwhether by vse of Scriptures, that honour be called adoration in latin, or by a vword equiualent in other languages, Hebrue, Greeke, or English. Lastly, vvwhether vve may by the Scriptures fall downe prostrate before the things, or at the feete of the persons that vve to adore. I or of ciuil ductie done to our Superiors by capping, kneeling, or other courtesie, I thinke the Protestants vvil not stand vvith vs: though in deede, their arguments make as much against the one as the other.

Pf. 5. 137. Dan. 6. 3 Reg. 8. Ios. 7. Pf. 98. 131.

But for religious vvorship of creatures (vvchich vve speake of) let them see in the Scriptures both old and newv: first, vvwhether the Temple, the tabernacle, the Arke, the propitiatorie, the Cherubins, the altar, the bread of proposition, the Sabboth, and al their holies, vvwere not reuerenced by al signes of deuotion and religion: vvwhether the Sacraments of Chrift, the Priests of our Lord, the Prophets of God, the Gospel, Scriptures, the name of Iesus, such like (vvchich be by vse, signification, or sanctification made holy) are not nowv to be reuerenced: and they shall finde al these things to haue been reuerenced of al the faithful, vvithout any dishonour of God, and much to his honour. Secondly, that his reuerence is named adoration in the Scriptures, these speaches do proue Pf. 95. Adore ye his foote stools, because it is holy. and Hebr. 11. He adored the toppe of his rod. Thirdly, that the Scriptures also vvarrant vs (as the nature of the vword adoration giueth in al three tonges) to bowe downe our bodies, to fall flat on the ground at the presence of such things, and at the feete of holy persons, specially Angels, as Iohn doth here, these exam- ples proue. Abraham adored the Angels that appeared to him, Moyses also the Angel that shewed him self out of the bush, who vvere creatures, though they represented Gods person, as this Angel here did, that spake to S. Iohn. Palaam adored the Angel that stood before him vvith a sword drawn. Num. 22. Iosue adored falling flat downe

Gen. 18. Exod. 3.

Iosue 5.

The Protestants are refelld by their ovvne reason.

S. Iohn erred only in the person, mistaking the Angel to be Chrift him self, and so adoring him as God.

S. Iohn sinned not in this adoration.

An other explication of this place.

The Protestants by conference of Scriptures might finde religious adoration of creatures.

Three points herein examined and proued by Scriptures.

יהוה אחד πρωτογενεον.

1 Religious vvorship of creatures.

2 The same is called adoration.

3 Falling prostrate before the persons or things adored.

Adoring of Angels, before before the feet of the Angel, calling him his Lord, knowing by the Angels owne testimonie, that it was but an Angel. V who refused it not, but required yet more reuerence, commanding him to plucke of his shoes, because the ground was holy, no doubt so made by the presence onely of the Angel.

Adoring of Prophets and holy persons.

Yea not onely to Angels, but euen to great Prophets this deuotion was done, as to Daniel by Nabuchodonosor, v who fell flat vpon his face before him, and did other great offices of religion, vvhich the Prophet refused not, because they were done to God rather then to him, as S. Hierom defendeth the same against Porphyrie, v who charged Daniel vvith intolerable pride therein, and the said holy doctor alleagech the fact of Alexander the great, that did the like to * Ioiadas the high priest of the Iewes. Howsoever that be (for of the sacrifice there mentioned there may be some doubt, vvhich the Church doth alwaies immediatly to God, and to no creature) the fact of the prophets (4 Reg. 2) to Elizeus, is plaine: vvhere they perceiuing that the double grace and spirit of Elias was giuen to him, fell flat dovvne at his feete and adored. So did* the Sunamite, to omit that Achior adored Iudith, falling at her feete, as a vvoman blessed of God, and infinite other places.

All vv hich things, by comparing the Scriptures, our Aduersaries should haue found to be lawfully done to men, and Angels, and soueraine holy creatures. Vv hereby they might conuince them selues, & perceiue, that that thing could not be forbidden S. Iohn to doe to the Angel, vv hich they pretend: though the Angel for causes might refuse euen that vv hich S. Iohn did lawfully vnto him, as S. Peter did refuse the honour giuen him by Cornelius, according to S. Chrystostoms opinion. he. 23 in c 10 A. yea euen in the third chapter of this booke: (if our Aduersaries vvould looke no further) they might see vv here this Angel prophecieth & promieth that the Iewes should fall dovvne before the feete of the Angel of Philadelphia and adore. See the Annot. there.

CHAP. XX.

An Angel casteth the dragon (or diuel) bound, into the depth for a thousand yeres, in vv hich the soules of martyrs in the first resurrection shall reigne vvith Christ. 7 After vv hich yeres, Satan being let loose, shall raise Gog and Magog, an innumerable armie, against the beloved ciitie: 9 but a fire from heauen shall destroy them. 12 Then bookes are opened, and vv he that sitteth vpon the throne, iudgerh al the dead according to their vvorkes.

ANNO TATIONS
CHAP. XX.

2. Bound him.] Christ by his Passion hath abridged the power of the Deuil for a thousand yeres, that is, the whole time of the new Testament, vntil Antichrists time, when he shall be loosed againe, that is, be permitted to deceiue the world, but for a short time only, to wit, three yeres and a halfe.

4. I saw seates.] S. Augustine (li. 20 de Ciuit. Dei c. 9) taketh this to be spoken, not of the last iudgement, but of the Sees or Consistories of Bishops and Prelates, and of the Prelates whom selues; by whom the Church is now governed. As the iudgement here giuen, can be taken no otherwise better, than of what which was said by our Saviour Mat. 18. What soeuer you binde in earth, shall be bound in heauen. and therefore the Apostle saith, What haue I to doe to iudge of them that are writ out?

1. Cor. 5.

4. And the soules.] He meaneth (saith S. Augustine in the place alleaged) the soules of Martyrs, that they shall in the meane time, during these thousand yeres, which is the time of the Church militant, be in heauen without their bodies, and reigne with Christ. for, the soules (saith he) of the godly departed, are Bishops' consistories & iudicial power. During a thousand yeres (that is the time of this militant Church) (saints reigne vvith Christ in soule only.

The rest are dead and damned in soule, during the same time.

The first resurrection, or the soule quality.

Priests, some properly so called, some vaproperly.

The binding and loosing of Satan, explicated by S. Augustine.

The short reigne of Antichrist.

Millenary or Chiliake.

By S. Augustines forecited explication, is evidently deduced against the Proccitatis, that the Church can not erre, and that the Pope can not possibly be Antichrist.

not separated from the Church, which is euen now the kingdom of Christ. for els there should be kept no memorie of them at the altar of God in the communicating of the body of Christ: neither should it auail to hasten to Baptisme in the perils of death, for feare of ending our life vvithout it: nor to hasten to be reconciled, if vve fortune for penance or of ill conscience to be separated from the same body. And vvhy are al these things done, but for that the faithfull departed also be members of the Church? And though for an example the Mar. tyr: be onely named here, yet it is meant of others also that die in the state of grace.

5. The rest lined not.] The rest vvich are not of the happie number aforesaid, but liued and died in sinne, reigne not vvith Christ in their soules during this time of the new Testament, but are dead in soule spiritually, and in body naturally, til the day of iudgement. S. August. ibidem.

3. This is the first resurrection.] As there be vvwo regenerations, one by faith, which is now in Baptisme: and another according to the flesh, vvhen at the later day the body shal be made immortal and incorruptible: so there are vvwo resurrections, the one now of the soules to saluation vvhen they die in grace, vvich is called the first, the other of the bodies at the later day. S. August. li. 20 de Ciuit. c. 6.

6. They shal be Priests.] It is not spoken (saith S. Augustine li. 20 de Ciuit. c. 10) of Bishops and Priests onely, vvich are properly now in the Church called Priests: but as vve call al Christians for the mystical Chrisme or ointment, so al Priests, because they are the members of one Priest, of vvhom the Apostle Peter saith, A holy people, a kingly Priesthood. Vvich vvordes be notable for their learning that thinke there be none properly called Priests now in the new Testament, no othervvise then al Christian men and vvomen, and a confusion to them that therefore haue turned the name Priests into Ministers.

7. Satan shal be loosed.] In the vvhole 8 chapter of the said booke de Ciuitate Dei in S. Augustine, is a notable commentarie of these vvordes. Vvhere first he declarerh, that neither this binding nor loosing of Satan is in respect of seducing or not seducing the Church of God: prouing that vvhen he be bound or loosed, he can neuer seduce the same. The same, saith he, shal be the state of the Church at that time vvhen the Diuel is to be loosed, euen as since it vvvas instituted, the same hath been & shal be as al time in her children that succede eche other by birth & death. And a litle after. This I thought vvvas therefore to be mentioned, lest any man should thinke, that during the litle time vvherein the Diuel shal be loosed, the Church shal not be upon the earth, be either not finding it here vvhen he shal be les loose, or consuming it vvhen he shal by al meanes persecute the same. Secondly he declarerh, that the Diuel to be bound, is nothing els but not to be permitted by God to exercise al his force or fraude in tentations: as to be loosed, is to be suffered by God for a small time, that is, for three yeres and a halfe, to practise and proue al his pover and artes of tentations against the Church and her children, and yet not to preuaile against them. Thirdly this Doctor shewerh by vvhat great mercie our Lord hath tied Satan and abridged his pover during the vvhole millenary or thousand yeres, vvich is al the time of the new Testament: vvtil then: & vvith vvhat vvifedome he permitte him to breake loode that litle time of three yeres and fixe moneths, toward the later day, vvich shal be the reigne of Antichrist. Lastly he shewerh vvhat kinde of men shal be most subiect to the Diuels seductiō, (euen such as now by tentation of Heretikes goe out: of the Church) and vvho shal auoid it.

By al vvich vve may confute diuers false expositiōs of old & late Heretikes. first, the aũcient sect of the Millenaries, that grounded vpon these thousand yeres named by the Prophet, this heresie, that there should be so many yeres after the resurrectiō of our bodies, in vvich vve should reigne vvith Christ in this vvorld, in our bodies, in al delites and pleasures corporal, of meates, drinckes, and such like, vvich they called the first resurrection, of vvich heresie Cerinthus vvvas the author. Epiph. har. 77 in fine. Hiero. Comment. in c. 19 Mas. August. har. 8 ad Quodvultis Deum. Eusebius also (li. 3 historia c. 33) shewerh that some principal men vvere in part (though after a more honest maner concerning those corporal delicacies) of the same opinion, by misconstruction of these vvordes of S. Iohn. Vvhereby vve learne and al the vvorld may perceiue, the holy Scriptures to be hard, vvhen so great clerkes did erre, and that there is no securitie but in that sense vvich the Church allowerh of.

The late Heretikes also by the said S. Augustines vvordes are fully refuted, affirming not only that the Church may be seduced in that great persecution of the Diuels loosing, but that it hath been seduced euen a great pece of this time vvhen the Diuel is bound: holding that the very true Church may erre or fall from truth to errour and idolatrie, yea (vvich is more blasphemie) that the cheefe gouernour of the Church is Antichrist him self, and the very Church vnder him, the vvhoore of Babylon: and that this Antichrist, (vvich the Scriptures in so many places, and here plainly by S. Augustines expolition, testifie, shal reigne but a small time, and that toward the last iudgement,) hath been reuealed long litten, to be the Pope him self, Christs ovne Vicar, and that he hath persecuted the Saints of their secte for these thousand yeres at the least. Vvich is no more but to make the Diuel to be loose, and Antichrist to reigne the vvhole thousand yeres, or the most part thereof, that is, almost the vvhole time of the Churches state in the new Testament: (vvich is against this and other Scriptures evidently, appointing that, to be the time of the Diuels binding:) Yea it is to make Antichrist and the Diuel vvaker toward the day of iudgement then before

Mat. 14.
Lk. 18, 8.

before, and the truth better to be knowen, and the faith more common, the nearer vve come to the same iudgement: vvchich is expresly * against the Gospel. and this prophetic of S. Iohn.

An Inuincible demonstration.

Vve see that the sectes of Luther, Caluin, and other, be more spred through the vvorld then they vvore ener before, and consequently the Pope and his religion lessened, and his pover of punishing (or, as they call it) persecuting the said Sectaries, through the multitude of his aduersaries, diminished. How then is the Pope Antichrist, whose force shal be greater at the later end of the vvorld, then before? or how can it be othervvise, but these Sect-Maisters shoud be Antichrists neere precursors, that make Christs cheefe Ministers & the Churches cheefe gouernours that haue been these thousand yores and more, to be Antichristes: and them selues and their sectes to be true, that come so neere the time of the Diuels loosing and seduction & of the personal reigne of Antichrist?

8. The campe of the Saints.] S. Augustine in the said 20 booke de Ciuit. Dei cap. 12. It is not, saith he, to be taken that the persecutors shal gather to any place, as though the campe of the saints or the beloued citie should be but in one place, vvchich in doods are no other thing but the Church of Christ spred through the vvhole vvorld. And therefore vvheresoeuer the Church shal then be (vvchich shal be in all Nations euen then, for so much is insinuated by this latitude of the earth here specified) there shal the tents of saints be, and the beloued citie of God, and there shal she be beseged by al her enemies, vvchich shal be in euery countrie vvhere she is, in most cruel and forcible sort. So vvritech this profound holy Doctor. Vvhereby vve see, that, as novv the patticular Churches of England, Scotland, Flanders, and such like, be persecuted by their enemies in those countries, so in the time of Antichrist, the Churches of al Nations, as of Italie, Spaine, France, and al other vvchich novv be quiet, shal be assaulted as novv the foresaid are, and much more, for that the general persecution of the vvhole, shal be greater then the patticular persecution of any Churches in the vvorld.

The campe of Saints is the Catho. Church through the vvorld.

As novv Heretikes in patticular countries, so Antichrist shal periecute the Churches of al nations.

9. There came downe a fire.] It is not meant of the fire of Hel (saith S. Augustine ib. c. 12) into vvchich the vvicked shal be cast after the resurrection of their bodie, but of an extraordinarie helpe that God vvil send from heauen, to giue succour to the Saints of the Church that then shal fight against the vvicked: or, the very feruent and burning zeale of religion and Gods honour, vvchich God vvil kindle in the hartes of the faithfull, to be countant against al the forces of that great persecution.

Vvhat is meant by fire from heauen.

12. An other booke.] This is the booke of Gods knowledge or predestination, vvherein that vvchich before vvvas hid to the vvorld, shal be opened, and vvherein the true record of euery mans vvorkes shal be contained, and they haue their iudgemēt diuerly according to their vvorkes, and not according to faith only, or lacke of faith only. for, al infidels (as Turkes, obstinate lewes, and Heretikes) shal neuer come to that examination, being othervvise condemned.

The booke of euery mans Workes, opened in the day of iudgement.
